THE HEN'S RIGHTS MEETING.

At a farm-yard in Virginia there lived a family of domestic fowls, consisting of two cocks and about a dozen hens.—The cocks were game and of the best breed, and were remarkable for their pluck and gallantry, as well as for their devotion and attention to their wives.—When food was thrown to them they never partook of it before calling the hens and seeing that they were served first and whenever they chanced to find a savory bug or to scratch up a delicate worm, they always denied themselves the luxury and invited the hens to enjoy it in preference, thus showing that their chief gratification consisted in the comfort and happiness of their helpmeets. And the hens were not slow to avail themselves of the self-denial and politeness of their husbands but garbled up grain, worms and bugs without even saying "thank you," or "won't you join us." They seemed to look upon these delicate attentions of their lords, and the appropriation of all the best things to themselves, as their natural and inherit right.

On the other hand, the hens were loving, gentle and obedient, and attended their domestic duties notably, laying their eggs with regularity and dispatch, sitting on them carefully and patiently and raising their chickens in the most affectionate and devoted manner. Both men and women, if their pride permitted might draw instructive lessons from the social life of this family of domestic fowl. They might copy after cocks in courage, self-denial, and those pleasing little attentions which are so much appreciated by their wives; and the women might imitate the hens in their regularity, patience, dilligence and industry; in their devotion to their children, and in their respect for, aud submission to their husbands

One day this family of fowls was visited by two strange hens that had just arrived from Massachusetts. The strangers were tall, raw-boned, long-legged. long-necked, and big-footed, and had coarse, harsh voices. Without invitation, they strided in the barn-yard, and circulated amongst the hens, and conversed with them in as free and easy a style as if they had known them all their lives. Indeed, one would have supposed that the barn-yard belonged to them. After a few remarks upon the late war and the scarcity of cocks. they requested the hens to seperate themselves from the roosters, and to collect together in a corner of the yard, as they had matter of vast importance to communicate to them. The curiosity of the hens being thus excited, they filed off furtively to the appointed corner, and formed a circle around their new acquaintances, and in solemn and respectful silence listened to one of them, who thus addressed them:

"Ladies: I have called you together to address you on a subject of importance not only to your own comfort and happiness, but to the future success and progress of your posterity and of all civilized poultry. You are aware of the accepted idea that in the beginning of this world the male portion of creation were made first, and that the female was created as a sort of afterthought, or side issue, to relieve the male from the tedium of being alone, and to contribute to his comfort and pleasure.

There is no doubt that, acting upon this idea, the male has constituted himself the Lord of creation, and has set himself up as being the superior of the female, and taking a mean advantage of his greater size and strength, has imposed on the female all the cares and drudgery of this life.

Especially is this the case with the feathered tribe, and preeminently so with the portion of it that we represent. Up to the female portion of our tribe have been imposed all the inconvenience and labor of laying eggs and the responsibility and trouble of raising chickens, while the male has nothing else to do but to strut about and admire himself, and give an occasional scream when he sees a hawk hovering in the air, but taking good care to get out of the way when the hawk pounces down upon our unprotected brood. He will fly upon the top of a fence and flap his wings and crow as if the world belonged to him, and look down with the utmost complacency upon us hens while we are toiling to support our families.

"Now this sort of thing has been going on for so long a time without the protest, and seemingly with the consent and approval of the hens, that it has come to be regarded as the natural state of affairs, and I suppose it would have gone on forever if Plymouth Rock had never been visited by our ancestors.

"You have all heard of the mad-stone, that wonderful mineral which when applied to the parts bitten by a mad dog or snake, will instantly extract the venom and save the life of the sufferer. Well, Plymouth Rock is the great moral mad stone, which when applied to the moral sores and bites that afflict the world will produce an instant cure. My maternal ancestor, Biddy Hardshell, came over in the Mayflower. and was the first of the poultry tribe that ever sat foot upon Plymouth Rock, and the first hen that ever laid an egg in America. When Biddy Hardshell gave her first cackle up on that classic spot, there was uttered the warning note of disenthralment of the gentler sex.

"Since then the female at the North has been at work, and its activity is immense far beyond anything that you luxurious daughters of the sunny South could ever imagine. Ideas distilled through the alembie of our minds are crystallized into gems of thought that are destined to dazzle the world. You will not therefore be surprised when I tell you that we have discovered that the laws and customs by which our social, domestic, and political life have heretofore been governed, are unnatural, unjust, and degrading to the female sex

"To a hen of an inquiring mind the question naturally arises, Why are things as they are? For example, why is it that hens lay [illegible] roosters do not? Why is [illegible] the inconvenience of incubation, sitting like a fool, staring at vacancy for three mortal weeks, in a very confined and cramped position, in order that a dozen or more hungry chickens may be brought into the world, while her self-styled lord, who has been the cause of all the mischief struts about and amuses himself paying gallant attentions to other deluded females? Again, why is it that roosters crow and hens only cackle? The first question is rather hard to answer, and I am afraid that in your present uneducated state it would be difficult of satisfactory explanation, but the second question has been very clearly answered by Professor Greeley in a small essay entitled "What I know about Crowing," in which it is stated that when the first rooster crowed the hen immediately clapped her wings and crowed also, whereupon the rooster, indignant at being imitated and no doubt fearful of being excelled, immediately bounced upon her and gave her such a wring of the neck as to cause a stricture of the laryax from which she never recovered; so that ever afterwards whenever she attempted to crow the sound degenerated into a contemptible cackle, and that all her descendants were afflicted in the same way, and consequently could never crow. The learned professor has moreover shown that the stricture was accidental and not natural: by proper culture it could be entirely removed, and hens could regain their lost powers of voice, and soon learn to crow as well as the roosters of which I will give you abundant evidence by and by.

"There are now at the North two schools of Philosophy. One is called the Positive School, which looks to the culture and training of the males, so as to enable and induce them to perform all the functions and duties of the female As far as the sitting, hatching. feeding, and nursing of the chickens are concerned, this school is a decided success, and the day is not far distant when these labors will be performed almost entirely by the roosters, and then we poor, down-trodden females will have some time to look around and enjoy ourselves. But the grand object of this school is to make the roosters lay eggs, and here, I regret to say that our success has not been quite so decided. Our plan is to surround the pupil and henpeck him to such a degree as to deprive him of all of his tailfeathers and the larger portion of his comb, and then to feed him liberally upon parched corn and pulverized oyster-shells, and drive him briskly up hill The result, as I have informed you, has not been entirely satisfactory, but Mrs Dr. Cackle of Boston. the eminent hen-chemist, after a profound study of the subject, has addition to the diet of a proper proportion of sulphur and glycerine, and predicts that our success will then be assured. This school looks also to the cultivation of the female voice up to the strength and coarseness of the males Crowing schools have been established all over New England, and now it is a common thing there for hens to crow as fiercely and as lustily as roosters.

"The other school is called the Negative School, or the Suppression of Eggs and here also we have met with the most marked success; so much so that the production of eggs by the native New England hens has been reduced from what it was formely in the ratio of eight to three: that is to say, that where an uncultivated hen in old times used to lay eight eggs a well-educated hen of the present day only lays three, and she doesn't lay them then unless she chooses. Ladies that is what I call the march of intellect. It is Plymouth Rock sucking the poison from the greats ocial snakebite. If we go on improving at that rate. we shall soon stop laying altogether and then the roosters will have to take it up, or depend upon the Brama Pootras, Cochin Chinas Shangheis, and other foreign breeds to keep up the stock.

"And now, ladies allow me to give you your first lesson in crowing. Stand up straight and turn your toes out, heads up and necks out to their full extent: now all clap your wings and crow as I do." And there arose such an unearthly and unhenly screech and yell that the roosters [illegible] the barn and [illegible] some of his hens, rushed frantically to the spot, and there he beheld the long-legged intruders clapping their wings and crowing at the top of their bents. He made one spring at the orator of the day, caught her by the comb and dug his spurs into her sides, pitched her over and toseled her to such a degree that she hardly had enough feathers left to cover her nakedness. As soon as she could recover her breath and her tongue she cried out, "Hold! hold! Mr. Rooster, arn't you ashamed of yourself to beat a lady in that way; I thought you Southern cocks were famous for your gallantry and attentions to the fair sex, and here you are actually beating a lady almost to death." "Lady indeed!" cried the rooster, "didn't I hear you crowing. How was I to know that you were a lady? I am sure you don't look like one, you look to me more like a capon; now get you gone, and if I ever catch any more of you long, yellow-legged Boston she males coming down here preaching hens' rights and setting up crowing schools I'll beat you within an inch of your lives, clear out!"

The long-legged descendant of the illustrious Biddy Hardshell, of Plymouth Rock and her companion then scampered off screaming at the top of their voices "Ku Klux! Ku-Klux, Klux, Klux!!!"

Here lies John Spynx
Who never did flinch,
Here lies John Spynx,
Who never did fear

A Plea for Printers.

A writer in Our Monthly has evidently been inside a composing room. if he has not dug a living out of a case. He thus sums up the result of his experience.

"Working for forty editors and scorces of authors every one of whom is as sensative as a sore thumb, and as lively and interesting as a hornet no wonder that printers die young and only pachydermatous grizzly, mulish specimens get heir share of life:

Happy infants, early blest!
Rest in peaceful slumber rest,
Rescued from the thumps and jeers
Which increase with growing years.'

The writer wishes he could offer himself as an awful example of the 'perils which environ the man who meddles with cold'—type. A thoroughly trained printer should have had a stepmother and then a step father and then have been bound out to a tanner and then have married a scolding wife and lived in a smoky house and have had a family of babies who were afflicted with the colic. He should have had hearing damaged with the measles, and to have added to all this discipline a thorough knowledge of science, art law languages. theology, history and biography. If in addition he has a vacious-looking countenance and an amiable disposition he may stand some chance with those authors and editors but the robabilities are after all that they will worry him to death.

A SINGULAR CASE.—The Radicals of Nebraska have immortalized themselves They impeached their Governor, Butler of ominous fame of having appropriated $17,000 of the school fund to his own use and of bartering his official influence and taking presents from public contractors. They convicted him of the first charge and deposed him. Of the last, they acquitted him, probably because of his an imperial infirmity, and might have been considered personal at the White House.

A young lady of Cleaveland, Ohio, received a letter on the eve of her wedding saying that her lover had a wife and two children in a neighboring town.—The poor girl read the letter through, turned her face toward her mother, who was in the room, and exclaiming "Oh, ma!" dropped dead on the floor.

A gentleman of color arrested in Philadelphia had four chickens in his carpet bag. He said, 'de man dat put em dar was no frend ob mine.'

PRESIDENT DAVIS AGAIN.

We expressed in our last issue our regret that this distinguished gentleman should have been betrayed by the excitement of the moment, into any allusion to politics, or the utterance of any language, which could be tortured into a desire to revive any of the dead issues of the past. The calm dignity which has marked his condnct, and the reticence which has characterized his conversation on political subjects, have excited the commendation and admiration of his friends in this country and in Europe, and have heretofore sealed the mouths of those who have looked in vain for some excuse to assail and vilify him. We regret, therefore, that he should have let fall any expression calculated to produce any solicitude, not to say regret on the part of his friends. But we can not and will not unite with Southern or Northern papers in the unworthy effort to vindicate our fidelity to the government of the United States, or to strengthen the Democratic party, or any other party, by denouncing views he may have expressed, or language he may have used, upon the false interpretation of those who repeat them distorted and interpolated to suit their own improper purposes. The name of JEFFERSON DAVIS is dear to the Southern people. However much, many of them have criticized his administration of the Confederate Government, none doubted the lofty integrity of his character, and his devoted patriotism; and since his fall, with the fall of that "Cause," held by them to be so sacred and so just, the mantle of Christian charity and forgiveness has been thrown over errors and mistakes, which it was ever the quality of human nature to commit--and it must be a sad and painful spectacle to our people to see him now assailed in the household of his friends.

But what terrible treason did Mr. Davis utter after all? Was it treason to advise the people to bide their time, and look to the restoration of their lost rights in the future? Did that point to war, to recover any lost rights? Did that declare the abolition of slavery unconstitutional, and point to a restoration of that institution? Did Mr. DAVIS say more, did he say the tithe of what is said every day by Democratic and Republican politicians at the North? Do they not declare that many of the rights of the States have been lost and must be restored; That many of their powers absorbed into the Federal Government must be restored? Did not more than two thirds of the House of Representatives vote to restore the individual right to hold office. which was lost by the Fourteenth Amendment, and not yet restored? Has not the whole Press of the North, friendly to the South, denounced the arbitrary and unconstitutional Acts of Congress, since the war? and urged the Southern people to bide their time with patience, for a healthy reaction to restore them to the lost rights of States and individuals? Did Mr. DAVIS say more, or mean more than this?

THE EYE AND THE TAIL.

Ohio has long been known as the "Buckeye" State, from the fact that the buckeye tree flourishes there more extensively than in any other part of the Union, and in the memorable campaign of 1840, the young Whigs carried canes made of the branches of the tree decorated with the fruit, which resembles the eye of the deer, while the Democrats sported hickory canes and hickory nuts in honor of Old Hickory Jackson. Pennsylvania has hitherto been known as the Keystone, the Quaker, or the Dutch State, but the late war it seems is likely to give her another soubriquet—the "Bucktail"—growing out of the fact that one of her regiments adopted the stumpy brush of that animal as a distinctive military mark, to be worn in the hat. The two States now stand politically somewhat in the position of a buck at bay with a pack of mongrel hounds yelping around, but afraid to attack. Ohio is the head and front, with eyes flashing and nostrils distended—the image of a buck on his muscle—and looking to the great West for relief, while Pennsylvania, with feet firmly fixed in the soil, shakes her erect bucktail defiantly and threateningly at the cowardly pack which long to fasten upon her sleek haunches but fearful of the sharp hoofs, stand off and harmlessly bark. Let the Buckeye State push boldly to the front, and the Bucktails guard well the rear, and the victory is sure for the Democracy in '72.—Richmond Enquirer.

LETTER FROM MATHEWS.

MATHEWS C. H. VA,
June 20th 1871.

MR. EDITOR.

Everything is very dull here; Mrs. Grundy and her numerous family about Westville can find but little to gossip about. Our court is over, a session by no means as protracted as that in Gloucester our very worthy and amiable Judge certainly deserves credit for coming down as early as he did, while Jupiter Pluvious was pouring down his libations by the bucketful, while my old friend General Taliaferro, the bronzed veteran of two wars, who has so often marched and bivouacked in hail, sleet and snow, was detered from coming early in the morning. The Judge notwithstanding the fact that he has been seriously indisposed recently was here, and proceeded to the discharge of his duties, though but little of public interest was transacted.

The many friends of the Rev. T. M. Hunley will be pained to learn that in consequence of the decline of his health and the partial loss of his sight, he resigned his position of commissioner in Chancery, which he has held many years He has been a Justice of the Peace in the county more than thirty years, and was for some time the Presiding Justice of the County Court, besides holding many other positions of public trust, of a civil as well as ecclesiastical character.

After lying dormant on the shelf for some time Mr, John Dick'sin, who was elected by the negroes and scalawag Supervisor for Piankitank Township, qualified at our last Court, and Richard is now himself again. While supervising things around his country, it is to be hoped that he will keep his confrere Winder who also qualified as Justice of the Peace, straight and in order. Matters will now no doubt be put to rights in our little county. and retrenchment and reform be the order of the day. So an earnest of his economical administration of the public funds, entrusted to his keeping, the fact is noticeable that while such political thinkers as Watkins Leigh, Tazwell, Giles, Madison &c, who composed the convention of 1829, in their greed of public plunder, charged the state of Virginia empovished as she then was, each, the sum of four dollars a day for their services, Mr. Dick'sin, in the plenitude of his self sacrificing patriotism for his valuable services in the convention of 1867, charged the state in her then prosperous condition only eight dollars per day. For all his invaluable legislative wisdom expended in constitution making, he has only received out of the pletoric treasury of the Commonwealth $832, as "I knows on," should not such moderation be suitably rewarded, and should not the Supervisor of Piankitank Township, now levy a tax upon the heads of those who so cordially supported him in the recent election, for the purpose of paying the balance so justly due? My Dear Richard, 'Repulics are ungrateful.' Will you not remove from them the hearts of stone when next you sit in a convention? Who but, must admire your telf-sacrificing spirit, in serving so perverse and untoward a consciticancy for 104 days at only $8 per day, when you might have been dealing out scanty half-pints to thirsty customers at 'Hookem-fair,' or gathering small greenbacks in waterbuckets from the colored brethren, to support the bureau or bear the expences of the party? But now Richard that you are Supervisor, we shall have 'justis.' Oh Richard, whether at 'publiken' poltics, or public pap, none but they self can be thy parallel.

We had a horrible Ku-Klux outrage in our town on last Friday. Our highly esteemed fellow citizen Dr. George Cotullion while quietly enjoying his afternoon siesta, after the arduous duties of the morning, had his office forcibly entered by a party of desperate men, who after laying violent hands on the Doctor, proceeded to entertain themselves with a grand display of fireworks. The Doctor did not however admire the grand pyrotechnic display, and it is thought that but for the timely arrival of a number of our peaceful citizens, who drove off the marauders and plied buckets of water in quick succession, that the Doctor's spacious and magnificent office, with his fine library, stock of medicines, dental and surgical instrments, and furniture would have been entirely consumed and even the valuable life of the Doctor might have been lost. Plunder seems to have been the object of the parties, as I have heard it stated that the Doctor lost no less than forty-two pairs of half-hose, and but for the timely arrival of the citizens, the mayor being absent from town at the time of the occurance the Doctor's whole wardrobe would have been pilaged. He is now doing all in his power to ferret out the evil doers. He was yesterday out on all the principal streets making enquiries, taking down the names of witnesses &c and says that the keen edge of the law shall be strenously applied even if he has to go to 'Governer C. Walker' in person, such havoc had been made in the Doctor's wardrobe, that he had on a hat, that one as imaginative Don Quixote might mistake for Mambino's helmnt. Today the happy intelligence reaches the Doctor that his wife and their children from whom he has been long seperated by the cruel fate of war, will soon be returned to him

We entertain lively hopes that the public square will soon be enclosed. sturdy oak posts have been planted a week or too, and the work progr so rapidly that already four rails been temporarily tacked up. When work is completed the public groun Westville if not equal te the ce Park in New York or the Gardin Plantes in Paris, will at least equal public square in the ancient town of tout, the sublime silence of whic a summer afternoon is occasionly b by lowing kind and tinkling bells.

Respectfully yours.
JOSHUA JOSE

SUICIDE—A Sad Case.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Alexa[illegible] Atkins of King & Queen, committed [illegible]icide, under the most inexplicable circ[illegible]stances: She dined wtth her husban[illegible] and family, about 1 o'clock, as usual, p[illegible]her baby to sleep; washed and dressed her other children for the evening, took them into the parlour, where her husband was sleeping on a lounge, and shut the door: in the mean time, she sent her maid, the only [illegible] about the house, [illegible] the store at Plainview [illegible] pair of stockings and other [illegible] when the girl returned, she looked through the house and not finding Mrs. Atkins, went in the parlour to ask Mr. Atkins, where she was, and on being told that she could not be found on the prem isis, Mr. Atkinson and instituted a search and finding that the dairy was locked on the inside, broke the door open and found that the unfortunate lady had hung herself. A part of the dairy projected into the garden, and two white laborers were working in the same square into which the dairy extended: but heard no noise. After Mrs. Atkins' death, it was discovered that she had arranged her burial attire, except the stockings, and it is supposed that she intended those sent for, to be and for that purpose.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr Atkins,

Botetout Lodge—A. F: & A. Masons,

At the the last meeting, the following gentlemen were elected officers of the Lodge for the ensuing twelve months:

R. W. Wm. B. Taliaferro, W. Master,
Bro. Thos. B. Armistead, Sr. Warden,
Bro. Wm. ap W. Jones, Jr. Warden,
R. W. Wm. E. Wiatt, Sect'y and Chpl'n
Bro. Jeff W. Stubbs, Treasurer.

We understand that the remaining officers will be appointed by the Worshipful Master elect, at the semi anual communication to-day.

St. John's Day Celebration.

The members of the Masonic fraternity of our county design celebrating the holiday of the patron saint of their order, St. John. to-day by a festival, to which they have invited their bretheren of Oriental Lodge no. 20, located at Mathews C. H., of which our former countyman, John B. Donovan is Master and another former resident among us, Peter G. Foster is jr. warden.

We understand Judge B. R. Wellford grand jr. deacon of the Grand Lodge is also expected to attend. Our masonic friends will doubtless wonderfully enjoy this pleasant reunion and the good cheer which will be provided for them by mine host of Field's Hotel.

At an election of officers of Oriental Lodge no 20, Ancient, Free and Respected Masons at Mathews C. H. on Saturday the 3rd day of June, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

R. W. J. B. Donovan, Master.
Bro Peter G. Foster Sr. warden,
Bro Wm. H. Brown, Jr. warden,
Bro John L. Burke, Treasurer,
Bro B. T. Blake, Sec'ty.

The other officers will be appointed by the Master at the next stated communication.

Religious.

We learn from a notice in the Southern Churchman that Bishop Johns will officiate in Abingdon church on Sunday next the 25th inst. We believe there will be a confirmation, added to the usual services of the church.

The rain having prevented the congregation from assembling on the day appointed for his regular visitation; the Bishop has kindly decided to add this church to the regular visitation he is making on the south side of York River.

The Rev. Chas. Mann gave notice on Sunday last, that Ware Church would be closed on Sunday next, that he might attend and aid, if necessary, in the services the Bishop will hold in Abingdon.
