THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

[illegible] (Patrick Maurice de MacMahon, Duke de Magenta, a Marshal of France, and a Senator, was born in Sully, in 1808, and was the descendent of a noble Irish family. He entered the military service of France in 1825, at the school of St. Cyr; was sent to the Algerian wars in 1830; while acting as aid-de-camp to General Achard, took part in the expedition to Antwerp in 1832, attained to the rank of Captain in 1833, and after holding the posts of aids-de-camp to several Generals in Africa, and taking part in the assault of Constantine, was nominated major of foot chasseurs in 1840, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Foreign Legion in 1842, Colonel of the Forty-first of the line in 1845, and General of Brigade in 1848. When in 1855, Gen. Canrobert left the Crimea, Gen. MacMahon, then in France, was selected by the Emperor to succeed him in the command of a division, and when the chiefs of the allied armies resolved on assaulting Sebastopol, September 8, they assigned General MacMahon the perilous post of carrying the works of Malakoff. For his brilliant success on this occasion he was made Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, and in 1856 was nominated a Knight Grand Cross of the Bath. General MacMahon, who took a conspicuous part in the Italian campaign of 1859, received the baton of a Marshall, and was created Duke of Magenta in commemoration of that victory. He represented France at the coronation of William I. of Prussia, in November, 1861, and was nominated to the command of the third corps d'armee October 14, 1862, and appointed Governor General of Algeria in 1864. In the recent war between France and Prussia, Marshal MacMahon was the most popular and prominent of the French commanders, and his great reputation as a military leader survived even the crushing defeat of his forces. In his collision at Woerth, rushing on to retrieve the temporary overthrow of a brigade, he found himself confronted by a vastly superior force of the enemy, and despite of the terrible fighting of the best trained soldiers of Napoleon's armies he was overwhelmed with fearful slaughter.—Thence, by a masterly retreat through the Vosges mountains, he concentrated the remnant of his forces at Nancy, and formed the nucleus of the army which he subsequently led in the effort to raise the siege of Metz. The result of the fatal mistake of this movement along the Belgian frontier was the culminating disaster to the French arms at Sedan, where the fate of the Napoleonic dynasty was decided by the surrender of the Emperor. Marshal MacMahon was not, however, in command at the time of the surrender, having received a most dangerous wound during the previous battle. At the conclusion of the war with Prussia, Marshal MacMahon, having recovered from his wound, was appointed to a command by President Thiers, and took a most active and decisive part in the suppression of the Communist insurrection in Paris. Under his direction the second siege of that city was conducted to a successful termination, and the terrors of the Commune rule ended in the attempted destruction of the city by fire, for which, and for the bloody excesses perpetrated under it, sanguinary retribution was subsequently exacted. Since that time until the coup d' etat of Saturday he remained Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the French Republic.—Balt. Gazette.

The Washington correspondence of the New York Sun contains what purports to be a full development of an alleged scheme by a Ring to gobble up and annex to the United States the Mexican States of Chilihuahua, Sonora and Lower California. It connects General Grant, Tom Scott, Ben. Butler, and a number of politicians and capitalists with the scheme.

ONLY A CARELESS MOOD.

Two persons meet after an ordinary day's activity. Each unknown to the other, has met a series of annoyances, irritating circumstances, unkindnesses—and so coming home, can brook no rude approach, no ungentle touch—pent up constraint and self-control of the day seek to revenge themselves. A little careless, selfish word is uttered—with no unkind intent—but the over-sensitive listener misunderstanding it—it seems cruel and is inexcusable in its blunting—still it would not have been ordinarily noticed—but here was no health equinimity to meet it, only tired nerves and depression. The result is a painful division, an unaccountable coldness—each feels some apology or explanation due him. At length by struggling and by prayer it comes—but how sore have been the hearts of these true and tried friends!

The only sensible and right thing to do at such times, is to take rest before hardly trusting one's self to speak or to be spoken to—and with the rest of the body to open the heart, the thirsting and world weary heart to the great, ever-present, ever-pitying One. Thus shall we be calmed, and find it is possible to be patient.—Watchman and Reflector.

[FOR THE HERALD.]

TRUCKING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

There was a story going the rounds just after the late "unpleasantness," that there was a small piece of land on the road-side near the city of Richmond which had become so rich by the drovers resting their droves upon it at night, on their way to the city that the first crop of corn raised on it after the war grow so tall that it takes a boy three weeks to climb up to the ears, resting at night in the hollow formed by the junction of the stalk and blades, and that when the ears were reached and detached from the stalks, one of them in its descent came in contract with an old farmer's dwelling, knocking it into a cocked hat, and scaring the whole family into a series of chicken fits, and thus the old folks are now living in the big end of the cob, and the young ones in the small end, and subsisting on the grains one of which they carry to mill at a time. This in itself is, almost if not quite equal to the famous story of Jack and the Bean stalk but Snipkin's pea story, I think equal either. Here it is in his own words, as nearly as I can remember. Says he, I have always raised a few peas in my garden for family use, though I never thought that they paid one for his trouble, but about two years ago, old aunt Sarah, my wife's aunt come to pay us a visit, and while there, told my wife, Almira, that the folks up her way were making fortunes raising peas for market, and straightway Almira got into a fever to go into the business too. Says she—we had as well get rich as other folks, and besides, aunt Sarah has a half bushel of peas, more than she will plant, which I can get for five dollars, which is less than they generally sell for, and besides, they are the regular Tom Thumb's, and don't grow tall at all, and bear peas so thick that you can't see the vines. Of course I had to let Almira have her way, or quit home entirely, so I gave her a V, and she got the half bushel of peas. Aunt Sarah throwing in a dozen or two for good measure, and I picked out the richest piece of ground I had right behind the garden.

I soon had the peas planted a little advance aunt Sarah said, of anybody else's (as they continued to keep in advance of every body else's, as the sequel will show), and it wasn't long before they began to pop up, and really looked so beautiful that I began to think there was really something in planting peas for market, but in a day or two the fowls found out and made for them like vengeance, and had to hire Tim Dogerty's four boys to keep the fowls away. I placed one at each corner of the patch with a two bushel hamper of corn cobs, and in a few days the fowls gave in, the boys having killed sixteen of the best, and in four days more finished clearing the cobs from the vines. After this the peas took a fresh start—and in about a week, I found that unless they had something to run on, they would run clear off the land entirely. Almira said it was astonishing, and had lain awake several nights trying to calculate how much we would make. I saw plainly enough now that they would have to be stuck, and so I hired some hands, and in a week's time had a nice double row of twelve foot sticks to each row. 'Now,' says I, 'you can go it,' and go it they said.

They went up the sticks and down again, and then up again, then cross from one row to the other, and then they made for the garden fence, and round the garden they went about twelve times, then they got in the house and all over it. They went up and down the chimney, and from that to the corn house and all over that, and finally they struck a bee a line for the woods going around every stump, corn stalk and bush they could find, and over the trees and down the line of fence, they still went until they reached Tim Dogerty's cornfield and into that they went, and covered his young corn all over, and hugged it to death—and if you believe me I don't know where they have got to by this time, but this I do know, I have not seen the first bloom yet, but Almira is hoping to see one every day, and aunt Sarah says they surely will bloom after awhile if the ground was not two poor that they were planted in. She says we must send up to her home and get a mess for Whitsunday dinner, but I dont want anything to do with aunt Sarah's pease any more I am a disheartened man, but if Almira ever gets into her tantrums now all I have got to do is to say peas and she goes quiet as a mouse and that is the only benefit I ever got from planting peas for market. That is worth something though I can tell you. The last I heard of Snipkins, he had quit everything else, and gone to experimenting in order to find out a process by which pea vines can be turned into wire thinking that if it could be done, he will make a fortune yet, as he can furnish enough to build all the bridges, and lay on the submarine and other telegraphs that the world will need in a century or two to come. SNIPKINS.

LEE AND JACKSON AT THE BATTLE OF THE CHICAHOMINY.

In the article of greatest interest to American readers in the Edinburgh Review for April is the following description of the interview between General Lee and Stonewall Jackson, during the battle of the Chickahominy: "A few minutes more, and the gallant soldier himself appeared on the scene and rode up to greet Lee, cheered by Longstreet's men, already veterans enough in war to understand what his coming meant. Nothing, it has been said, of this first meeting of these great soldiers on the battle-field could be in more striking contrast than the appearance and manner of the two. Handsome in face and figure, finely mounted, a graceful rider, calm-visaged and carefully dressed, Lee presented the beau ideal of the commander whose outward bearing captivated the soldier's eye. His famous lieutenant rode apparently by choice, an ill-groomed, rawboned horse, and sat so short-stirruped as to give his figure the most awkward appearance. An old cadet's cap, evidently a relic of the college-professorship he had not long since left, was drawn down over his eyes. His coat was not only thread-bare but ill-brushed, and his words were jerked out in short, abrupt sentences, between which he sucked the lemon which was, as usual, his whole refreshment during his day's work. Yet each already understood the other, and valued him at his true worth. 'That is a heavy fire down yonder,' said Lee, as the Federal guns opened in reply to Jackson's. 'Can your men stand it?' 'They can stand almost anything. They can stand that,' was the emphatic reply; and after a few words of order and explanation he left his chief to lead on the attack. This was a decisive, aided as it was by a fresh advance of the troops before engaged. The Federals were turned, overmatched, and driven from their position, and before dark the shattered remains of Porter's force were crossing the Chickahominy in hasty retreat. Lee's first battle, in fact was a striking success, and as well earned as any of the more famous victories in after days, which have been so widely studied and so often extolled. No word henceforward from his Government of any want of confidence in his powers, or fear of his over-caution. From that hour he became the most trusted as well as the most noted General of the Confederacy. As to his soldiery, his hardy bearing, free self-exposure, and constant presence near their ranks, completed the influence gained by that power of combining their force to advantage, which they instinctively felt without fully understanding. From man to man flew the story of the hour. The subtle influence of sympathy, which wins many hearts for one, was never more rapidly exercised.

GERMAN NOTABLES AT THE VIENNA EXHIBITION.—One of Bayard Taylor's letters says: Frederick William of Prussia, improves on a nearer view. In his photographs there is a half sullen gathering of the eye-brow, and a hard vacancy in the gaze, which do not belong to the real man. His eyes are an unusually light blue, which accounts for their photographic dullness, but they are, in reality, bright, frank and winning. His face expresses a good deal of Mathew Arnold's "sweetness and light." I should name as its two prominent characteristics, virility and honesty. The Crown Princes Victoria clung to his arm with a very evident fondness. I might state, for the edification of many ladies, that her dress was a green variety of the new bronze color with two (or was it three?) richly embroided flounces. It did not sweep the floor behind her.

A gentleman asked a friend, in a very knowing manner, 'Pray, did you ever see a CAT-FISH?'—'No,' was the responce, 'but I've seen a ROPE-WALK.'

Patrick saw a bull pawing in a field and thought what fun it would be to catch him by the horns and rub his nose in the dirt. The idea was so funny that he laid down and laughed to think of it. The more he thought of it the funnier it seemed, and he determined to do it. Taurus quickly tossed him over the fence. Pat leisurely picked himself up with the consolatory remark: 'Well it's a mighty foine thing I had my laugh foorst."

POETRY.

What are Newspapers! What do they Contain.

"Organs that gentlemen play my boy,
To answer the taste of the day,
Whatever it be,
They hit on the key.
And pipe in full concert away.

"News from all countries and climes, my boy,
Advertisements, essays and rhymes,
Mixed up with all sorts
Of (?)lying reports,
And published at regular times.

"Articles able and wise, my boy,
At least in the editor's eyes,
With logic so grand
That few understand
To what in the world it applies.

"List of all physical ills, my boy,
Cured by somebodys' pills,
Till you ask with surprise
Why any one dies,
And what's the disorder that kills.

"Prices of cattle and grain, my boy,
Directions to dig and to drain,
But 'twould take me too long
To tell you in song,
A quarter of all they contain."

CHANGED.

My love she wore a simple dress,
Her hair in waving curls;
They call'd her lovely black-eyed Bess,
Queen rose among the girls.
I left her, far away to roam;
She vowed she'd ne'er forget
But everything, alas! had changed
Before again we met.

My love she had become a "blonde"
When next I saw her face;
And where the curls once graced her head,
Rats, frizzes, chignons, lace.
She was the belle of skating rinks,
The joy of a fast set:
I sigh'd, "Do you remember me?"
She winked and cried, "Yeu bet!"

ODDS AND ENDS.

An editor is always frankest when asking for money. This is a gentle hint:

"Money is close, but not close enough to reach. Nobody gets what is due them. We doubt if even the devil gets his dues."

It is said that the poet Moore, one night, while stopping at an inn in Scotland, was continually troubled by the landlady with the request that he should write her epitaph. According, at night, he gave an impromptu, as follows:—

'Good Susan Blake, in a royal state.
Arrived at last at heaven's gate——' and stopped, promising to finish it in the morning. The good lady was in a transport at this inscription, and treated Mr. Moore with every possible attention. In the morning he was about leaving, when the lady reminded him that he had not finished the epitaph 'That is so,' said he, and immediately added:

'But Peter met her with a club,
And knocked her back to Beelzebub.'

It is said that Mr. Moore's horses were in motion just as he had finished the last line.

Thomas Jefferson is known to have solaced his leisure hours by playing the violin, on which he was a proficient. His fondness for the instrument may be inferred from the following anecdote, quoted from his 'Domestic Life,' recently published by Harper & Brothers.

In the year 1770 the house at Shadwell was destroyed by fire, and Jefferson moved to Monticello, where his preparations for a residence were sufficiently advanced to enable him to make it his permanent abode. He was from home when the fire took place at Shadwell, and the first inquiry he made of the negro who carried him the news was after his books.

'Oh, my young master,' he replied, carelessly, 'they were all burned—but ah! we saved your fiddle.'

A jury in North Carolina, after being charged in the usual way by the judge, retired to their room. When a white juror ventured to ask a colored associate if he understood the charge of the judge. 'Golly,' exclaimed the astonished juror, 'he don't charge us nuffin for dat, does he?—Why, I thought we was gwine to git pay.'

A little Boston girl told her mother that she had found out where they made horses. 'She had seen a man just finishing one of them, for he was nailing on his last foot."

A hack-driver in Chicago, who was arrested for cruelty to a miserable-looking horse, was asked if he ever fed him. 'that's a good 'un, was the reply. He's got a bushel and a half of oats at home now, only he ain't got time to eat 'em.

The biggest bore in the world—the Mont Cenis tunnel.

A Missouri newspaper claims that the hogs of that State are so fat that in order to find our where their heads are, it is necessary to make them squeal, and then judge by the sound.

We can remember poetry first rate, but we can't always fasten the right poet to the right verses. Is it Montgomery who says:

Leaves have their time to fall,
And likewise so've I:
The reason, too, 's the same—
It comes o' gettin' dry,
But here's th' diff'rence 'twixt th' leaves and me,
I falls more harder an' more frequentlee."

'Papa, didn't you whip me once for biting Tommy?'

'Yes, my child—and you hurt him very much.'

'Well, then, Papa, you ought to whip sister's music teacher too—he bit sister yesterday afternoon right on the mouth, and I know it hurt her, because she put her arms around his neck and tried to choke him.

A Scotch minister recently told his neighbor that he spoke for two hours and a half the Sunday previous. 'Why, minister, were you not tired to death?' asked the neighbor. 'Aw, nae,' said he, 'I was as fresh as a rose; but it would have done your heart good to see how tired the congregation was.'

An exchange has an acquaintance who remarks that he has often heard the proverb, 'A friend in need is a friend indeed,' but he says he can't see where the laugh comes in. He has a friend in need who is always borrowing money of him.

WHITE OR BLACK SUPREMACY ?

Experience has shown that the only practical way to disorganize the negro party in Virginia is to beat them. Undertake to compromise with them and they immediately think that you are afraid of them, and that they have you in their power. No matter how we shift our political situation, no matter what side issues we drag into politics, this question which the disjunctive opens as a broad and fathomless chasm before us whether the State of Virginia is to remain under the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race, or whether she shall pass under the ruthless sway of the ignorant sons of Ham. It is a question of life and death—a question that every honest man should ponder well. Are we, with a clear majority of over twenty-five thousand white voters, to sit idly by and see our homes made the scenes of civil war as this same party has done in Louisiana and is about to do in Arkansas? Will the people of Virginia allow, while they have power to prevent it, their State already heavily burdened with an ante bellum debt, to be plunged into the abyss of bankruptcy, as this same party has done the Carolinas and Florida?

Will they learn what Radical supremacy means? It means a disorganization of the judiciary. On outing of the present judges and elevating into their places either ignorant negroes, vicious carpet-baggers or thieving scalawags, whose acts would disgrace our judicial ermine, and go down to posterity in company with the knightly exploits of Jeffries, Impey and Underwood. It means an elevation of ignorance over knowledge, of vice over virtue, and of tyranny over freedom. Will the people of Gloucester, for the sake of some private whim, or objectionable side issue allow the prestige of their county to be thrown on the side of Radicalism? These are questions which the people and the people alone are to answer.

WORDS OF CHEER FROM ABROAD.—The coming canvass in this State is attracting much attention abroad already. The eyes of the whole country are again upon Virginia, and our friends everywhere send us words of encouragement. The Louisville Courier-Journal, the leading paper of the West, devotes a column of editorial matter in giving its readers an intelligent and correct review of the situation, closing the article in the following hopeful vein:

But in any event there is reason to believe the Conservatives will triumph. With Extra Billy Smith or with Ran Tucker, or with any one of those named above as the Conservative nominee, it seems to us both the carpet-baggers, and their Hunker allies might be put to the sword. Col. Hughes, the leader of the Radical party in the State, who is an adroit organizer as well as an able speaker, has been indulging in some over-exultant boasting, but such assurance is not an infallible promise of victory. As a minister remarked to the King of Epirus, we think he had better take his bottle of wine before the fight. The chivalry of the Old Dominion are going to make it lively for him. From every stump there will be heard the voices of young orators and old orators. The culture and the genius will be on the side of the Conservatives. Baker P. Lee and Colonel Cameron will make the Richmond Enquirer hum. The young Democracy of the city will scatter to the rural districts and

——"cleave the general ear
With words of learned length and thundering sounds."

Montague and Douglas will attend the 'fish-fry' gatherings in Eastern Virginia, and Withers and Staples will sweep through the South and Southwest. Altogether they will make the canvass interesting, and we shall expect good news from "the great and unterrified colony."
—Enquirer.

A CORRECTION.—We were in error in regard to the per cent. allowed the collector by the Auditor. Five per cent. in addition to the five per cent. paid by the tax-payer was allowed. It is also due to the Board of Supervisors to state that they addressed an inquiry to the Judge as to whether he intended the ten per additional as the order read, and was paid by the Treasurer, or the five per cent. as allowed by the Auditor. The deficiency of $600 for the expenses of the past year is occasioned by the fact of having to appoint collectors, and paying them the additional per cent. not anticipated, and provided for in the levy.

We have received the first number of Parson's Weekly Herald, Parsons, Kansas. It is a neatly printed sheet of eight columns to the page. Price $2 per year.

Messrs. Editors,—We finished shipping our first crop of peas yesterday, 765 barrels, raised upon less than 30 acres of land, which have sold in the Baltimore market for over $3,069, averaging me $4.33, rather more than my neighbors. The freight we paid the boat the last four trips amount to $229 50. I sowed one barrel and have sold 91 barrels. Now I am taking up the vines, which were large, and will make more hay than I can raise fodder from the same lot, and just as good--when I have finished selling my potatoes, I will make an account of sales, have the land accurately surveyed and give an account of sales. The best of all is I have hired no labor, except to pick some I sowed, then I paid $10 for getting out my manure and sowing. If our people who expect to live from working land would just take off twenty acres and manure that well and work some themselves, we would be better off.

T. C. BAYTOP.

Messrs. Editors,—Perhaps my communication of the 15th ult. placed the Trustees and Superintendents of the Public School in Gloucester in rather an unenvitable position and lead some to believe that the Public School System was a failure, sure enough. Well, in discussing any subject, it is honest and it is best to present both sides; neither to magnify nor to extenuate. Justice to there officers requires that I say what I can in their favor. During the past year the county superintendent performed really a vast amount of labor. He was engaged about 100 days, totally or in part besides night work; travelled about 1000 miles, visited schools 32 times, made 30 addresses to the children, giving them the best advices he could, and endeavoring to encourage them in their efforts to acquire an education, made 5 public addresses, urging upon the people in various parts of the county the importance of aiding and promoting the cause of education, wrote 48 official letters licensed 30 teachers and rejected several applicants, attended many meetings of the Board of Trustees, read many pamphlets and journals containing educational matter, and answered hundreds of enquiries from almost every source. In addition to the above he examined and corrected 252 monthly reports and 30 term reports of teachers, 3 reports of Trustees, and himself made out in duplicate 10 (most of these very long and tedious) reports colsolidating all of the teachers and Trustees, reports. The Trustees, during the same period, held their meetings regularly (generally once a month, sometimes oftener), employed 30 teachers for the 30 schools, visited a good many of the schools, examined 252 receipts given the teachers by me and passed upon them, and in a private way transacted much business. And let it be remembered that none of these officers (except the clerks of the Boards, who perform much labor extra,) receives one cent of pay for their services—I have thought it unjust and still think so, that these gentlemen should be required to take a solemn oath to perform their duties faithfully, and should devote so much of their time, gratuitously (with the exception of being exempt from jury and road duty), and have time and again, urged the Legislature, through the General Superintendent, to compensate them for their loss of time, use of team and labor, but one impracticable Legislature seems disposed to do as little as possible to promote the cause of general education in the State of Virginia. It is most marvelous that an Assembly, which is supposed to contain the wisdom and much of the morality of the State (for without these two qualifications no set of men can be competent to make laws,) should ignore, should endeavor to destroy so mighty a means of elevating and fitting for enlarged usefulness future citizens of Virginia. Let the Legislature give us the money, or let the people of Gloucester furnish us the money, and we will let them see that the Public School System is a grand institution here as well as in Germany, that it will succeed here as well as in other parts of this country, and that our beloved old Commonwealth will ever maintain her standing among her sister State. I verily believe that the present action of our people upon the subject of general education will fix the destiny of Virginia for weal or for woe.

But, Messrs. Editors, my pen and my warmth of feeling and the truth, have nearly filled this sheet, and I must beg you to allow me space for another communication next week.

WM. E. WIATT,
County Superintendent, &c.

The following communication was handed us for publication by our Superintendent of Schools. Cannot some young man in Gloucester avail himself of this offer:

UNIVERSITY OF VA.,
May 26, 1873.

Dear Sir,—The University State Scholarship of the district consisting of New Kent, Gloucester, Mathews and Middlesex is vacant, and I will be much obliged to you to make it known to the teachers in the public and private schools of your county, and thus aid us in making appointments which will best promote the cause of sound education in the State. The claims of young men who are preparing themselves to be teachers will be made on the 4th of July.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. S. VENABLE,
Chairman of the Faculty.

Supt. W. E. WIATT,
Gloucester C. H., Va.

At a convention of citizens of the counties of Mathews, Gloucester, Middlesex, York, James City and King & Queen, interested in planting and selling oysters, held at Gloucester Courthouse, on Monday, the 2d day of June, John W. C. Catlett, Esq., was called to the chair, and John B. Donovan appointed secretary.

On motion, John T. Seawell, John B. Donovan, Robert McCandlish, Peter Van Name, Thomas Machen, Barney Jones and George Crittenden, were appointed a committee to collect material facts and statistics, showing the inexpediency, hardship and oppression of the oyster law enacted by the last Legislature, and lay the same in pamphlet form before that body at its next session.

On motion, the chairman was added to the committee.

The convention then adjourned.

JOHN W. C. CATLETT,
Chairman.

JOHN B. DONOVAN, Sec'y.

HAPPY OCCASION.—The beautiful residence of Mr. Richard Lloyd, Belmont, in this county, was last evening the scene of a happy reunion of the friends of the family upon the marriage of his daughter, Miss Mary to Cassius F. Lee, jr. The house was brilliantly illuminated from the terret to the basement and decorated with flowers and evergreens, and the guests most hospitably entertained. The happy couple received the sincere congratulations of all who were present, and the kindest wishes for their future happiness. A more joyous and interesting occasion was rarely witnessed.—Alexandria Gazette.

Mr. Lee and bride are now in this county on a visit to Major Thomas S. Taliaferro and lady. Mrs. Taliaferro is a sister of Mr. Lee.

Heathen mythology tells us that when Thetis, the goddess-mother of Achilles, the greatest warrior in the Grecian army, dipped him into the river Styx, that he became invulnerable at every point, except his heels, by which he was held, and which the waters of the celebrated river did not touch. Achilles encountered the boldest and mightest warriors of his day and overcome them. He slew Hector, the bulwark of Troy. At last, however, and about the close of the ten years' struggle, he was himself killed by the effeminate Paris, who shot a poisoned arrow and struck this vulnerable heel.

There is a practical lesson to be derived from the above. Every man, however great he may be, has one weak point, if no more, and is liable to be overcome just at that point. The wisest has been overcome in this way—even Solomon himself, the strongest has been conquered, even Sampson—and the best, the most virtuous have yielded to temptation in an ungarded moment. How necessary, then, that we be watchful and careful, lest we be overcome in the trying hour—how necessary that we stand aloof from danger so that our strength may not be put to the test. The Greeks have given us a good motto for every day life, one that the wisest and best may study to advantage, 'know thyself.' And He, 'who spake as never man spake,' has advised us to watch and pray lest we enter into temptation.

W. E. W.

One of the most remarkable illustrations of the mysterious line that separates the deadly and the wholesome in nature is given in the English Medical Press, which states that the poison of the cobra, the most venomous of the East India surpents, has been chemically analyzed, giving the following results; carbon, 46; nitrogen, 13; oxygen, 6; sulphur, 25; the rest hydrogen. This is exactly the composition of beer yeast. The latter is used in manufacturing the staff of life, bread; the former is so deadly in its nature that even when taken from the snake and preserved, and afterward injected under the skin of animals, it is immediately fatal. The laboratory of nature is far more wonderful than that of the human chemist.—(N. Y Observer.

A laughable incident took place in the parlor of the Union Hotel, at Saratoga, a day or two ago. Two countrymen were gaping around the room, when a lady approached wearing a fashionable trail. One of the party dodged it, but the other walked straight across it, and finding out his error apologised with—"I beg your pardon, madam· I thought you had passed some time ago."

Home Affairs.

We are sorry to learn that the house of Mr. Albert Yeatman, the former residence of the late Dr. Wilmer Nelson Berkeley, was destroyed by fire on Saturday last, about 4 o'clock P. M. Mr. Yeatman lost a good deal of furniture. The house was insured for twelve hundred dollars.

We owe thanks to Mr. Guest for a lot of nice strawberries. We hope many of our readers may obey the biblical injunction, and 'go and do likewise.' We advise all lovers of this lucious fruit to call on Mr. Guest, who is selling large quantities of it.

On Monday last (court day) Mr. D. C Hopper was struck on the head with a stick by —— Stafford. Mr. Hopper had turned off, declining any quarrel which Stafford seemed inclined to force upon him, when he Stafford struck Mr. Hopper on the head, inflicting quite a severe, but we hope temporary injury. Stafford was taken before Justice Wright on the next day, and bound over to keep the peace for twelve months. Mr. Janvier becoming his surety, Stafford being in Mr. Janvier's employ.

We have been pained to hear of the death of Elder Isaac Diggs, who died at his residence in Stevensville, King & Queen county, on Sunday the 25th ult.

Mr. Diggs had been a Minister of the Gospel for about twenty years, and was an earnest and efficient laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. He preached frequently in this county, and was at one time pastor of one of the Gloucester (Baptist) churches. He was a man who lived above reproach, and his death is is regretted by hundreds. He is the third Baptist Minister who has died in the county of King & Queen in less than six months.

An Irishman, being annoyed by a howling dog in the night, jumped out of bed to dislodge the offender. It was in the month of January, when the snow was three feet deep. He not returning, his wife ran out to see what was the matter. There she found her husband in his night suit, his teeth chattering and his whole body almost paralyzed with cold, holding the struggling dog by the tail. 'Holy mother, Pat,' said she, 'what wud ye be after doin?' 'Hush,' said he, 'Don't you see? I'm trying to froze the nasty baste!'

MARRIED,

On Tuesday 3d, inst., by the Reverend James C. Martin, at the residence of the bride's father, Miss HETTIE H. KERNS, to Mr. Cassius. W. ENOS.

THE

Gloucester Herald!

A FIRST-CLASS

FAMILY NEWSPAPER

Devoted to the material interests of Tidewater Virginia, and the cause of Conservative Reform in the politics of the Country.

THE HERALD,

after an experience of two years as a newspaper, is now, it may be hoped, an institution of this section of the State, and, profiting by that experience, it bids fair to be even more efficient in the future than in the past.

ITS EDITORIALS,

while breathing the spirit of courtesy toward all, will be uncompromisingly Conservative and thoroughly Virginian, and will deal unsparingly with all offenders against its tenets of political truth.

ITS LOCAL NEWS

we hope to make a most interesting feature of the paper. With efficient correspondents at every important point in this section, we expect to more than rival the city papers in giving those items which are of special interest to our people.

ITS LITERARY DEPARTMENT

will be carefully guarded from the intrusion of anything that is not of first-class literary merit, and we hope the articles in this department will always be found worthy of the most attentive perusal.

ITS NEWS SUMMARY,

we shall endeavor to make in the future a special recommendation of he Herald. Whils the numerous Weeklies, made up from the city Dailies, contain only certain articles culled from a large mass of material, we hope, by careful editing, to give the cream of all the news of the week—giving "much in little," instead of little in much.

AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM

our paper offers decided advantages. To give the city merchants some idea of the advantages of advertising in the Herald, we will state that in the county of Gloucester alone there are about 60 stores, which average annually the sale of about $160,000 worth of dry goods, $60,000 worth of hardware and farming utensils, $68,000 worth of liquors, and other goods in proportion. This is in Gloucester only—how much more can be done in adjoining counties. The Herald goes regularly to more than 100 stores.

In all cases of irritation of the mucous membrane these Tablets should be freely used, their cleansing and healing properties are astonishing.

Be warned, never neglect a cold, it is easily cured in its incipient state, when it becomes chronic the cure is exceedingly difficult use Well's Carbolic Tablets as a specific.

Gloucester Herald!

A FIRST-CLASS

FAMILY NEWSPAPER

Devoted to the material interests of Tidewater Virginia, and the cause of Conservative Reform in the politics of the Country.

THE HERALD,

after an experience of two years as a newspaper, is now, it may be hoped, an institution of this section of the State, and, profiting by that experience, it bids fair to be even more efficient in the future than in the past.

ITS EDITORIALS,

while breathing the spirit of courtesy toward all, will be uncompromisingly Conservative and thoroughly Virginian, and will deal unsparingly with all offenders against its tenets of political truth.

ITS LOCAL NEWS

we hope to make a most interesting feature of the paper. With efficient correspondents at every important point in this section, we expect to more than rival the city papers in giving those items which are of special interest to our people.

ITS LITERARY DEPARTMENT

will be carefully guarded from the intrusion of anything that is not of first-class literary merit, and we hope the articles in this department will always be found worthy of the most attentive perusal.

ITS NEWS SUMMARY,

we shall endeavor to make in the future a special recommendation of he Herald. Whils the numerous Weeklies, made up from the city Dailies, contain only certain articles culled from a large mass of material, we hope, by careful editing, to give the cream of all the news of the week—giving "much in little," instead of little in much.

AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM

our paper offers decided advantages. To give the city merchants some idea of the advantages of advertising in the Herald, we will state that in the county of Gloucester alone there are about 60 stores, which average annually the sale of about $160,000 worth of dry goods, $60,000 worth of hardware and farming utensils, $68,000 worth of liquors, and other goods in proportion. This is in Gloucester only—how much more can be done in adjoining counties. The Herald goes regularly to more than 100 stores.

DON'T

Be deceived, but for coughs, colds, sore throat, hoarseness and bronchial difficulties, use only

WELL'S CARBOLIC TABLETS.

Worthless Imitations are on the market but the only scientific preparation of Carbolic Acid for Lungs diseases is when chemically combined with other well known remedies, as in these tables, and all parties are cautioned again using any other.

In all cases of irritation of the mucous membrane these Tablets should be freely used, their cleansing and healing properties are astonishing.

Be warned, never neglect a cold, it is easily cured in its incipient state, when it becomes chronic the cure is exceedingly difficult use Well's Carbolic Tablets as a specific.
