

Photo courtesy of Alexa Hoyne.

The Black and White Desert located in Egypt along the Western Sahara provides the perfect backdrop for a Study Abroad picture for senior Alexa Hoyne. Hoyne studied abroad in Fall of 2008.

Cheering during the news broadcast of the Presidential Election results, Barack Obama supporters show their excitement. Students gathered together in dorm rooms and lounges, Lodge 1, the Sadler Center lobby, and the delis to watch the results shows.

SEEK THE SPIRIT

The experience of students at the College was whatever they made of it. Whether it was studying abroad in a new and exotic location or actively supporting the College's local activities, the life of the Tribe was vibrant and full of memories.

Big changes marked the year as construction dramatically renovated the face of the campus, movements for environmental sustainability gained support among the students, and a historic new president promised new student voters a different future.

Yet despite the change, students chose to enjoy the unchanging beauty of the College and took part in every aspect of student life. They chose to live these formative four years to the fullest.

→Meredith Howard