

SHUT UP AND DRIVE

Kappa Delta's popular annual philanthropy putts for good cause

Campus Golf was an annual event that both Greek and non-affiliated students looked forward to every year. However, Campus Golf involved more than just showing up and hitting a tennis ball with a golf club. For both the Kappa Deltas, who hosted this event to raise money for Avalon and Prevent Child Abuse America, and the many teams involved, Campus Golf required much preparation.

Although the event typically ran very smoothly, the members of Kappa Delta had to do much more than simply show up to caddy. "I served on the Logistics Committee, which is in charge of setting up and striking, [meaning] I was up at 5 a.m. to set everything up for the day's festivities!" sophomore Brittany Fallon said. However, the preparations went much further than that. "We prepare for Campus Golf all year, from looking for sponsors to keeping in touch with Avalon, the women's shelter that receives a large majority of the proceeds" Fallon said.

The members of Kappa Delta were not the only ones putting a great deal of effort into the final product. Campus Golf participants went to great lengths to produce memorable costumes. A member of the Willy Wonka-themed team, "Team Popcorn," shared details on the creation of their unique costumes. "When one of my teammates found an awesome purple jacket at the thrift store which made him look exactly like Willy Wonka, we knew we had to get it," sophomore Isabelle Thibau said. "For the other costumes, we bought basically all of our stuff at the thrift store, including a Veruca Salt dress, Violet Beauregarde's "blueberry suit," and, of course, oompa-loompa pants!"

With a turnout of about 450 teams, and almost $12,000 raised for the two causes, all the hard work culminated in a colorful yet charitable day.

>Jessica Johnson

Photo courtesy of Jessica Segal

Several girls from Team Ballerina demonstrate the flexibility given to them from years of dance practice. Many teams used their Campus Golf costumes to advertise and exaggerate certain aspects of their everyday lives.

»getthelook

Photo courtesy of Hannah Fuerhoff

Photo courtesy of Katie Peng

Photo courtesy of Hannah Fuerhoff

Hannah Fuerhoff, Sarah Son, Kelsey Robusto, and three robots model their costumes in the Sunken Garden. Even though teams could only have a maximum of five participants, the popularity of the event led to much inter-team mixing.

Dressed in the "Shut Up and Drive" shirt for this year's Campus Golf, Shiri Ahronovich, Laura Elton, Katie Peng, and Meredith Deeley take a brief hiatus from caddying to pose for a picture in. Members of Kappa Delta made sure Campus Golf ran smoothly and thus undertook such tasks as fishing tennis balls out of hedges.

Team Village People shows off the extreme accuracy of their costumes. Many teams went to great lengths in order to model their costumes after famous figures, such as members of musical groups and fictional characters.

Photo courtesy of Lydia Higgs

Photo courtesy of Hannah Fuerhoff

The victors of the coveted costume contest, Team Mime, take a moment to snap a picture with their adoring fans. The costume contest encouraged teams to dress outlandishly in an attempt to increase participation.

Team Superhero and several other women from Phi Mu take a brief break to pose in front of the Wren Building. Many women from other sororities made teams in order to foster Pan-Hellenic love.