

Index

Interviewee: Satoshi Ito
 Interviewer: Amy Schindler
 Interview Date: June 30, 2009

0:00	Background information about Ito's Mother and Father and how they met
5:30	Moving to Rohwer, Arkansas Relocation Center for Japanese-Americans in 1942
7:25	Education and American Culture in the relocation center
9:20	Life after being released from the relocation center- housing, father's job as farm laborer
11:00	Assimilation into American Culture for Japanese-Americans
14:00	Educational background from high school to graduate school
15:22	How he decided to become a professor
17:20	Difficult language barrier between Ito and his parents about culture
19:30	Will go to Japan to find out about his relatives in October 2009
23:30	How Ito came to teach at William and Mary
27:30	Discusses his first days on campus – sociology department, faculty, administration
29:50	Ito's personal life and living situation when he first came to William and Mary
31:20	Williamsburg and William and Mary in the 1960s: mostly white
33:10	Work with the Anti-Racism Commission, Diocese of Southern Virginia
35:10	Administration and Faculty of Sociology Department in 1960s
38:00	Formation of the M.A. in Sociology development and its effects
	STOP AT 39:47
40:00	Ito's course load and his reputation as a tough professor
45:10	How he developed the "Blacks in American Societies" and "Population Studies" courses
46:10	Background of how the course "Becoming Americans" was developed and topics discussed in the course
49:50	Ito's involvement with Wayne Kernodle and the Christopher Wren Association
57:20	How Ito's course load changed from 1960s to late 1990s and 2000s.
1:03:51	Reasons why Ito retired in 2002
1:06:50	Comments about faculty/staff that made a particular impression on Ito at William and Mary
1:11:11	Ito's thoughts on marginalized groups at William and Mary – homosexuals, African-Americans, Asians, etc.
	STOP AT 1:12:55
1:13:00	Ito's involvement with the Personnel Policy Committee
1:17:30	Where Ito lived in Williamsburg while he was a professor at William and Mary
1:25:10	Ito's involvement with the Human Rights Committee of Eastern State Hospital
1:28:50	Ito's involvement with the Anti-Racism Commission, Diocese of Southern Virginia
1:36:00	Ito's strong work ethic and how he got involved with New Kent County

	Democratic Committee
	STOP AT 1:43:18
1:43:19	Ito's involvement with Habitat for Humanity Building of Faith, Williamsburg
1:47:50	Ito's involvement with New Ken County Social Services Advisory Board
1:52:35	Why Ito likes volunteering and what it takes to be a good volunteer in general
2:01:34	Ito's family role as a husband and father
2:05:25	Ito discusses his children and what they are doing now
2:09:00	Ito discusses the relationship between himself and his siblings
2:10:50	Ito talks about his reunion in March 2009 of all blood-related kin