

July 4, 1803

Sir!

I have the honour, by the direction of the Royal Jennerian Society for the extermination of the Small pox, to request your acceptance of the Society's Address and its other publications.

The ardour already manifested in the United States in promoting the Vaccine Inoculation, and the progress which it has made there under Your auspices, sufficiently evince Sir, that no inducements are wanting to engage You in this great cause of benevolence.

It cannot however but be satisfactory

The President of the United States

July 4, 1803

to you to be informed of the origin and Success of an Establishment which has received the most august Patronage in this Country, and from which, as it tends to systematize, and by every possible means encourage the diffusion of the new Practice, the greatest advantages may be expected.

With Sentiments of the highest Respect,
I have the honour to be

Sir!

Your most devoted, and most humble servant

Charles Murray
Secretary.

London 4th July 1803.
