Plans Initiated for Interim Semester

According to the Committee on Honors and Experimental Programs, a good number of students in Project PLUS have initiated plans for an Interim Semester to last from January 16 through January 28. With plans to remain here on campus, they are organizing this living-learning program as an innovative use of the holiday period. The courses and workshops will be designed to do the kind of things that students have neither the opportunity nor the time to do during the regular terms.

The workshops will be taught on a variety of subjects either by students in Project PLUS or by individuals whom they are seeking out from the student body, college staff, community, or faculty. These subjects include auto mechanics, cooking, guitar, poetry/prose workshops, first aid, survival, etc.

The resident administrator, Sue Carron, and her husband, in support of the idea, will be in residence during the entire interim period.

The Committee on Honors and Experimental Programs wishes to apprise the College Community of this enterprise of Project PLUS with the hope that interested individuals, if approached, will lend it their support.

Anyone interested in the Interim Semester should get in touch with student Terry Regan (Ext. 536) or with the Project PLUS Office (Ext. 549 or 417).

The Committee is also soliciting ideas for next year's theme for Project PLUS from members of the faculty of the Arts and Sciences and the Schools.

Faculty members have been asked to make known their preference - either to continue, build upon the present theme, or select a new one.

Project PLUS was originally designed to have a new theme each year. This year it is "The Future of Technological Society."

Faculty members were asked to make known their preference by today to Hans C. von Baeyer, Physics Department.

The Thanksgiving recess on campus officially begins at 1 p.m. tomorrow. Classes will begin again Monday, November 27.

The Wigwam in the Campus Center will close after lunch tomorrow at 2 p.m. and reopen Monday at 7 a.m.

The Campus Center will close tomorrow at 2 p.m. and reopen Sunday from 4-11 p.m. Monday it will resume its regular schedule.

Holiday hours for Swem Library are noted on page 3 of The News.

Most dorms will close over the holiday. For men students, James Blair Terrace #42, Old Dominion and Ludwell 400, 402 and 404 will be open. Other men's residence halls will close tomorrow at 6 p.m. and reopen at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Chandler will be the only residence hall for women open over the holiday. Women's halls will close at 6 p.m. tomorrow and reopen at noon on Sunday.

All administrative offices will be closed Thursday.

The annual Williamsburg Community Thanksgiving service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Williamsburg United Methodist Church on Jamestown Road.

The Rev. Anthony Warner of St. Bede's Catholic Church will speak at the service, which is planned each year through the cooperative efforts of Williamsburg area churches, and is sponsored by the Williamsburg Clergy Fellowship.

Music for the service will be provided by the combined choir from participating churches, directed by Charles R. Varner of the Music Department at the College. The choir will sing "Praise, Oh Praise Our God and King," by S. Drummond Wolff.

Governor Linwood Holton delivered the main address at the ceremonies marking the 353rd anniversary of the first Thanksgiving in America, held at Berkeley Plantation in Charles City.

These traditional ceremonies attest to the fact that the first Thanksgiving in the New World was held in Virginia, contrary to the popular belief that it was begun by the Pilgrims in New England.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Funds Sought to Improve Residence Halls

A comprehensive renovation and maintenance program for residence halls at William and Mary has been developed and its major provisions will be submitted to the Virginia General Assembly for approval.

The program was announced by William J. Carter, Vice President of Business Affairs.

Its major focus will be on a $2,150,000 renovation program in five older residence buildings beginning next June, if the General Assembly approves. Legislative action is required in order to issue $1,750,000 in revenue bonds to finance the largest share of the renovation. The remaining $400,000 will come from existing resources.

The program was approved by the Board of Visitors at its November 10 meeting. The Board's Buildings and Grounds Committee, headed by Mrs. Nancy Falck, had urged the College to develop such a program, and improvement of residential hall conditions has been a top priority of President Graves.

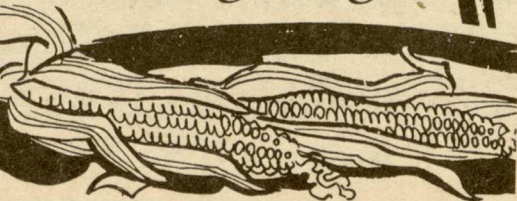

This past summer, Barrett Hall was renovated at a cost of $250,000. The schedule approved by the Board of Visitors for other major projects, subject to legislative approval, is as follows:

- Old Dominion--June, 10, 1973-
January 10, 1974
- Monroe--January 20, 1974-
August 10, 1974
- Jefferson--June 10, 1974-
January 10, 1975
- Chandler--January 20, 1975-
August 10, 1975
- Taliaferro--June 10, 1975-
January 10, 1976

Mr. Carter said each of the projects includes provision for a heating system which can later be adapted for air-conditioning if the residences are used year-round.

Since work on the five buildings will dislocate students during academic sessions between next fall and the spring of 1976, Mr. Carter has begun negotiations for the use of additional off-campus space on a temporary basis. He said it was not financially possible to temporarily reduce enrollment while the work was going on.

Other residences requiring less substantial work will also get new attention under the program, he said. Methods for financing such work, to be undertaken during summer months, are being explored and additional efforts are foreseen to recover the costs of building damage from those responsible.

CAMPUS PROFILE/Edward McManus

MR. McMANUS

Edward McManus, an August, 1972, graduate of William and Mary, is a history major who likes archaeology and has a job tailor-made to his wishes. He's a conservator working on artifacts found at the Flowerdew Hundred site project which is under the direction of Nathan Altshuler, chairman of the Department of Anthropology, and Norman S. Barka.

Mr. McManus is currently helping renovate the old biology greenhouse in back of Washington Hall, which the Anthropology Department is turning into a workshop laboratory for its many artifacts. One of the pieces of equipment that will go into the new facility is a recently acquired airbrasive unit which cuts down on the time required for cleaning the artifacts by half.

At the end of this month, Mr. McManus will be featured in an educational film on careers in anthropology to be made by an educational TV channel. He will show the type of training needed for the anthropologist in the field of archaeology. He will be shown working both in the laboratory and in the field. The film is geared to grade school children and will be shown on a career program which will include police work and dance.

Carmella Maurizi, a sophomore theatre concentrator from North Versailles, Pa., plays Will's wife, Anne, an earthy and warm woman who is eight years his senior and who attempts to guide Will toward less reckless behavior.

Susanna, daughter of Will and Anne Shakespeare, is played by Anne Catherine Teresa Squires, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Squires of Williamsburg, and a fifth grade student at Bruton Heights Elementary School.

Will's father, Old John, is played by David Ballard, a junior theatre concentrator from Williamsburg; and Will's brother, Gilbert, is performed by David Hopkins, a freshman from Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. McManus is the creator of the skeleton plantation house which has been featured widely in articles about Flowerdew Hundred. The picture of the house has appeared from coast to coast and many foreign newspapers have carried the story. Mr. Barka recently received a note from friends in Thailand and Turkey who are reading about the story in their daily papers. In addition, a clipping was received this week from a Parisian newspaper.

Mr. McManus is a native of Phelps, N.Y., and has been in Williamsburg since 1968. He was formerly employed both as a brass founder and pewterer by Colonial Williamsburg.

Official Memoranda

The following is the text of the speech delivered by President Graves at Parents' Day, Nov. 12.

PARENTS' DAY, 1972

Saturday, November 11, 1972

Let me welcome all of you who are parents, on behalf of the College, to Parents' Day, 1972. I want to share with you for a few minutes this morning my views about the College of William and Mary, as an institution to which you have entrusted your sons and daughters, as our students.

First of all, this is an institution which emphasizes quality and excellence in all we try to do and in all that we expect from each other, in our commitment to a broad and deep undergraduate educational experience. We try to focus on the individual student and the quality of his or her learning. Hopefully, this experience is a liberating one for all of our students, in the great tradition of a liberal education. Emphasis is on excellence in teaching and learning, and your sons and daughters, as undergraduates, are taught by our most experienced and skilled faculty members.

Secondly, William and Mary is an institution that tries to relate academic and student affairs into a total, integrated educational experience, emphasizing the development of the whole student, as individual and citizen, as well as in the classroom. There is currently under way a major reorganization of student affairs and academic affairs, to help us to serve your sons and daughters better.

Thirdly, we want William and Mary to be at the forward cutting edge of the best institutions in higher education--in testing, in innovating, in experimenting, where appropriate. Let me just mention the example of Project PLUS in which 100 sophomores, working with seniors and faculty in a close student-teacher relationship, are merging the in-class, out of class experience--in seminars, in tutorials, and in new ways of teaching and learning. If this project is as successful as we hope it will be, we shall hope to apply the ideas we have learned this year across the campus and across the curriculum in the years ahead.

In addition, we have under way a calendar review whose object is to search for an increase in academic options and to provide for more responsiveness to the educational needs and aspirations of our students. We hope the review will provide the opportunity for more flexibility in teaching and learning, which may have major significance for curriculum and educational policy.

A new grading system instituted this year puts emphasis where we believe it should be--on evaluation of individual performance, progress and achievement, rather than on hurdles, failures or grades.

Striving to be at the forefront of higher education is risky. It is possible to fall into the traps of lowering standards or responding to current fads. Let me assure you that the decisions we make are being carefully thought through by experienced and skilled faculty members, whose only objective is to provide your sons and daughters with the highest quality educational experience.

William and Mary is an institution that believes students should share responsibility for decisions that affect their lives. This belief is based on the assumption if we treat students as mature and responsible individuals, they will act accordingly. Our experience is that this assumption works well.

We have student self-determination at William and Mary, in matters of curfew and visitation, but with careful and responsible guidelines. These guidelines are that the privacy of individual students must be protected, that the College has a responsibility for the security of all of its citizens, and that any policy or actions within self-determination must enhance or improve the educational environment.

We encourage freedom, not license. We say that with freedom goes responsibility, and our students are acting responsibly. Finally, all of us at the College understand that the Administration has final responsibility to the Board of Visitors for student affairs.

William and Mary is a state institution, and takes pride in this fact. We are proud to be a part of this state's great system of higher education. We are also a national institution, by tradition, by history, by the contributions of our alumni, and by the very nature of our character and personality at William and Mary. Seventy per cent of our students come from Virginia, which is as it should be; but fifty per cent of our alumni live outside of Virginia.

William and Mary is also an institution that cares about its alumni. Your sons and daughters will be part of the College the rest of their lives. The contributions of our alumni and the quality of their lives mean everything to us, because this is what all that we do educationally here is all about.

We also believe that there is a relationship between the quality of education and the quality of living. We are now in the process at the College of raising standards of living and working on this campus. We believe this is important and essential to your sons and daughters as students here at William and Mary.

I view William and Mary also as an institution that tries to be as efficient, productive and as careful as possible with its scarce resources, in providing your sons and daughters with a quality educational experience. Your taxes, your tuition, are our resources, and we owe it to you to manage these resources well.

At the same time we are now in the process of seeking new, outside resources to do a better educational job for you. Striving toward excellence will require new sources of support from a broad base, and we shall be seeking your support in the future--and shall offer in return the best education we can provide.

It is undoubtedly obvious to you that I am proud of this College, of the faculty and students who are the core of its quality. It is an institution of special quality, with a special mission. As such, I hope that it is an institution with integrity, that also is responsive to changing educational needs in a changing environment.

Finally, William and Mary is people, many different people in different groups--people who belong here, who are involved in the College, who care about it, and about whom the College cares. The parents, as individuals, and as members of the new Association of Parents, are included among these people. We want you to feel part of this ancient and modern institution to which you have entrusted your sons and daughters. We want your ideas, your suggestions, your help. This is why we have the Association of Parents and why we are grateful to you for forming this Association. This is why we have Parents' Day here today.

Mrs. Graves and I are delighted you are here. We hope you and your sons and daughters will come to our open house at the President's House after the football game, so that we may meet you and know you personally.

Thomas A. Graves, Jr.
