— Charter Day 1974 —

The College will officially begin its observance of the bicentennial celebration at its 1974 Charter Day, February 9.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., announced that Edgar F. Shannon, president of the University of Virginia, will be the speaker for the occasion. The College will award an honorary degree to President Shannon in recognition of his leadership to higher education in Virginia over the past fifteen years.

Charter Day exercises will mark the 281st anniversary of the receipt of the College's charter from King William and Queen Mary of England in 1693.

Mr. Shannon has been president of the University of Virginia since 1959. A member of the board of directors of the American Council on Education, he has served as president of the Council of Southern Universities and the State Universities Association and as member and chairman of the executive committee and president of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

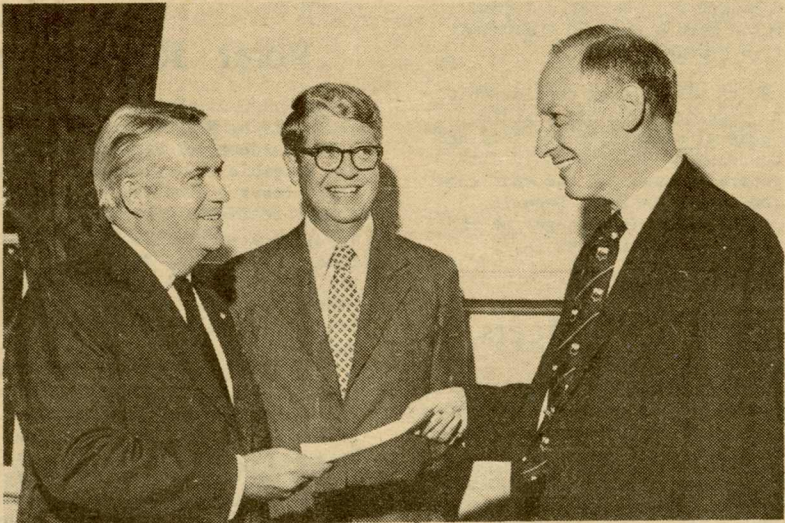

The Bicentennial Committee of the College, appointed by President Graves, has as its objective the identification in the public mind of the significant role of the College in early American history as the "Alma Mater of a Nation." The committee plans to emphasize both internally and externally the role of the College in continued service to the State and Nation.

The committee has made recommendations to President Graves for scholarly publications, a lecture series, conferences and special events and exhibits in the fields of theatre, art and music, as part of the College's participation in the Bicentennial celebration.

Members of the committee are Ross L. Weeks, Jr., Director of Information Services, chairman; Bruce K. Goodwin, chairman, department of geology; Warren P. Heemann, director of the Office of College Development; James S. Kelly, Assistant to the President; David Holmes, department of religion; Richard K. Newman, Jr., chairman, department of fine arts; Tim Sullivan, associate dean, Marshall-Wythe School of Law; Thaddeus Tate, director, Institute of Early American History and Culture; Gordon C. Vliet, executive secretary, Society of the Alumni; and Nancy Lee Hadlock, a sophomore from Alexandria.

Grants Aid State Courts Center

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., receives a check from Robert C. Walker (l), president of the United Virginia Bank in Williamsburg, and Vernon M. Geddy, Jr., member of the Board of Directors of the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg and United Virginia Bankshares, Inc.

With the help of two private grants, preliminary architectural planning has been started for the National Center for State Courts complex to be located in Williamsburg.

The grants were made by the Seay Memorial Trust of Richmond and the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg, according to Warren Heemann, Vice President for College Development.

The Richmond architectural firm of Wright, Jones and Wilkerson has begun preliminary design work under contract to the National Center. The two grants, totaling $15,000, will fund the first phase of preliminary planning and efforts are underway to obtain an equal amount of money to complete preliminary designs.

The National Center for State Courts was proposed by President Nixon and Chief Justice Burger when they appeared at a National Conference on the Judiciary held in 1971 in Williamsburg. Since then, a committee of jurists and attorneys has worked to select a location from among two dozen around the country which had been proposed. Williamsburg was chosen in August.

The Center will conduct studies with the aim of fostering improvements in the administration of justice at the state level. A staff and temporary office for the Center have already been established in Washington.

The specific site for the Center is a 10-acre tract owned by the College as part of the former Eastern State Hospital grounds. The Virginia General Assembly earlier this year authorized a long-term lease of the site to the National Center.

The Center building is expected to cost $1.5 million, and efforts are underway within the state to secure funds for its construction.

Once Wright, Jones and Wilkerson complete preliminary planning, the Center will make a decision on what architectural firm will complete the design to the working drawing stage.

The Seay Trust is a private foundation established by George J. and Effie L. Seay for support of a broad variety of activities. The Trust had earlier supported a fellowship program at William and Mary.

Making the contribution on behalf of the United Virginia Banks were Robert C. Walker, president of the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg, and Vernon M. Geddy, Jr., Mayor of Williamsburg and a member of the boards of both UVB and United Virginia Bankshares, Inc., Richmond. Mayor Geddy was instrumental in influencing the decision of the National Center to locate in Williamsburg.

Mr. Walker said, in making the presentation, that "the United Virginia Banks, realizing the statewide impact of the National Center, welcome the opportunity to contribute to Williamsburg's economy as well as to demonstrate interest in the growth of our community. The decision to establish the Center in Williamsburg has been received with great enthusiasm and the United Virginia Banks throughout the state have demonstrated their desire for the establishment of this organization and the opportunity of assisting in the initiation of the preliminary design work."

President's Annual Report

Higher education is possibly entering a new environment which is more open, with more legal dimensions, and with greater governmental influence, in the view of President Thomas A. Graves, Jr.

Mr. Graves, in his second annual report just issued, said he is neither optimistic nor pessimistic about this new environment, but that tough decisions will be necessary on the campuses in order to continue the tradition of quality education.

His report reviewed his second year in office and outlined programs already underway, and those which are planned to fulfill the College's role as part of the system of higher education in Virginia.

"We are entering," he said of the College, "a period of increasing tension for an educational institution that has both great traditions and great expectations, a tension based on the apparent discrepancy between the promise and reality of higher education. Our task will be to maintain at the same time a vibrant tension between vitality and form at William and Mary, out of which our special character and style as a state university of superior quality may be enhanced."

Addressing himself to the tight money situation which he predicts will become just as serious for public higher education as for private higher education, Mr. Graves states that the College will "need to speak with a realistic view of its own limitations and boundaries in terms of the educational needs and values of its constituencies ... in the final analysis the funds will flow primarily, I believe, to the institutions that not only state their academic competencies but deliver them."

In reviewing his second year in office, Mr. Graves touched on major changes on campus during the past year.

The College, he states, is moving toward master planning. "We shall need especially to be in tune in our institutional planning with the master planning underway at the state level so that always we may be responsive to and where possible acting in anticipation of the educational needs and priorities of the Commonwealth."

His review of the past year also includes the Self Study Program nearing completion, the reorganization of the Student Affairs Program under James C. Livingston, Dean of the Undergraduate Program; passage of the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities for faculty, staff and students; rejection of the College Assembly proposal; expansion of the Student Health Services Program and opening of the new Student Health Services Center; and study of the College's security system.

The College also moved last year to broaden its service to the Tidewater community with the establishment of the Office of Special Programs under Carson H. Barnes. This office has inaugurated more than two dozen non-credit courses, developed from a survey of the community.

Mr. Graves announced in his report the appointment of his new assistant, Jerry A. Van Voorhis, as coordinator for affirmative action, and the appointment of Carol Sherman to the chairmanship of the College-wide Affirmative Action Committee.

Among his proposals for the future, Mr. Graves would like to see a "careful review of the place of graduate work in Arts and Sciences and the establishment of educational priorities."

"I believe," he states, "that it is desirable for there to be a reasonable range of high quality graduate programs at the master's and Ph.D. levels in Arts and Sciences, compatible with our undergraduate program, responsible to the needs and priorities of the Commonwealth, and financially well supported by State funds without diminution of support at the undergraduate level."

"At the end of the year 1972-73 it is easy to feel some frustrations and disappointment at what was not accomplished and what progress was not made," states Mr. Graves candidly.

"For example, despite improvement, especially for classified personnel, certainly our salaries and fringe benefits in all categories remain too low. Despite some successes such as Project Plus and the start of the new Language Houses, because of lack of time and money, we have not done all we should in fostering more creative and innovative academic programs in response to the educational needs of the students.

"The environment in which we work and live is not yet of the quality it should be. There are still some inequities and imbalances at the College ..."

Mr. Graves concludes his report on a note of optimism and confidence that "it is a significant and exciting time for higher education and we at William and Mary have in this ancient institution the vitality and strength to play an important role."

A Word of Thanks to Buildings and Grounds Employees

Many students and faculty members have commented to me most enthusiastically about the general condition and appearance of the campus and its grounds and buildings at the start of this academic year. You have done a great deal to enhance the quality of the environment in which we work and live. I want you to know that your effort and work are sincerely appreciated by all of us in the College community.

STATUS OF WOMEN COMMITTEE REPORT

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Status of Women in its May 1st report to the President has recommended that the College draft immediately an Affirmative Action Program based on its findings in an extensive report on the status of women on campus.

The College has been slow, the committee report contends, in taking "real affirmative action" in the areas affecting women and minorities employed by the College in faculty, staff and classified positions. Early in its research the Committee found it was virtually impossible to separate the question of discriminatory practices affecting women from those affecting minorities.

Prepared by a committee headed by Mrs. Carol Sherman, Associate Professor of Modern Dance, the report lists 27 recommendations to the President for the implementation of a more vigorous interpretation of the Equal Opportunity Program which has been in effect at the College since August 4, 1970.

"Discriminatory practices do rather generally exist, to the disadvantage of women," the report states. Tabulated findings on the number of women holding instructional positions, average salaries of men and women in faculty rankings, average salaries for personnel including women with faculty status and average salaries by sex and race of classified employees are all part of this extensive report.

Members of Mrs. Sherman's committee were: Joanne Basso, William Cobb, Peg Furman, Leigh Holyer, Esther Moyler, Chris Owens, Richard Sherman and Juanita Wallace.

An extensive follow-up of the Committee's prime recommendation that the College draft immediately an Affirmative Action Program was contained in a memorandum to President Graves on June 26. Specifically emphasizing this need, the follow-up contended that maintaining a written affirmative action plan has been a contractual obligation since January 19, 1973. The May 1 report was also preceded by interim recommendations and memoranda on February 28, March 10 and April 9.

Major recommendations of the Committee include the following:

"... that an affirmation action officer be appointed with appropriate legal and secretarial staff to immediately draft an affirmative action program for the College and monitor its implementation.

"... that the Vice President for Academic Affairs undertake a study by departments (including physical education for men and for women) of the salaries by rank for female faculty relative to those for men, and that, where inequities exist, make salary adjustments for the 1973-74 contract year.

"... that special efforts be made to hire qualified women in departments and schools where there is underrepresentation of women relative to their availability in the field.

"... that the classified staff be addressed by the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities, or by a parallel written statement regarding their status in the College community.

"... that a thorough review of the content of job classifications be made, and where the content of the job is found to be sufficiently similar, regardless of the title given to the position, salary adjustments and reclassifications should take place.

"... that active, on-the-job training programs be developed to upgrade the skills of women and minority employees.

"... that an effective, impartial internal grievance board be established.

"... that a study be made of internal hiring and promotion policies affecting the classified staff with a view toward hiring and promoting more women and minority candidates.

"... that an in-depth study be made of the differences in developing the facilities, staffing and funding of the programs in physical education and athletics for men and for women with a view toward correcting inequities.

"... that the new Associate Dean of Residential Life undertake a thorough study of all policy differentials within the structures of men's and women's residential staffs in order to eliminate inequities, and that differentials in housing and the organization of residential life for men and for women be the immediate concern of the new Associate Dean of Residential Life.

Other recommendations cover the areas of maternity leave for women faculty and classified personnel; inclusion of at least one woman on all appointed committees of the College; a review of part-time faculty status; an equalization of the men-women ratio in admissions policies for undergraduates; more flexibility regarding appeals to the Degrees Committee for part-time loads; and financial aid for married students.

The committee also makes recommendations for counseling programs for women returning to college; a day care center for the entire college community; programs to encourage a broader consideration of fields for graduate study by women; recruitment of women and minorities in graduate schools and departments; and expansion of the Student Health Services program.

The following books and pamphlets, relative to the Affirmative Action Program, will be on Desk Reserve in the Library Reserve Room for all interested members of the College community:

Food Services Director Appointed

William J. Smith

The appointment of William J. Smith as food service director, effective September 4, has been announced by William J. Carter, Vice President for Business Affairs.

Mr. Smith replaces Frank Gerry, who will continue with Crotty Brothers as food service director at the College of St. Teresa in Winona, Minnesota.

Mr. Carter expressed the appreciation of the entire College community for Mr. Gerry's contribution to William and Mary. Mr. Gerry joined the College staff in January, 1971. He also welcomed Mr. Smith and expressed enthusiasm on some of the changes that Mr. Smith and Crotty Brothers have promised.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Smith received his bachelor's degree in commerce and finance from Pennsylvania State University.

Immediately following his graduation, Mr. Smith entered Army food service, serving as a mess sergeant, mess officer, club officer and general staff officer. Most of his military career was spent as a food service officer on the general staff of large Army headquarters. He retired from the service with a rank of lieutenant colonel in February, 1971.

Mr. Smith also brings considerable civilian experience to his position. He was general manager of all food and other concessions at Friendship Airport, general manager of the vast food operation at the National Security Agency, and restaurant manager at the Sheraton and Watergate Inns in Washington.

Season Tickets are priced at $12 for the six productions of the 1973-74 season including two productions by visiting professional companies, or $7 for the four William and Mary Theatre productions.

Prior to joining the William and Mary staff, Mr. Smith was assistant to the president of Auger Enterprises, Washington, D.C., a recently established multi-unit restaurant operations firm.

Mr. Smith plans to improve food service in the three establishments under his supervision: the Commons, which serves about 50,000 meals weekly; the Wigwam, and the Hoi Polloi. Mr. Smith supervises a staff of 137.

Mr. Smith's wife, Gabrielle, is an engineer with the Washington (D.C.) Navy Yard.

The Smiths' 22 year old daughter, Dagmar, manages a natural foods shop at the University of Maryland. Their son, Douglas, a 1973 high school graduate, is an apprentice with the General Motors Training Center in Fairfax.

OFFICIAL MEMORANDA

To: Members of the Administrative Council, Department Chairmen, Arts and Sciences, Mr. Hooker, Mr. Carnevale, Dr. Cilley and Dr. Siegel

Subject: Affirmative Action Plan

I wish to bring a subject, one requiring urgent action, to your attention by this memorandum. As you know, and as we discussed at the Administrative Council meeting on September 12, last year the College began developing lines of support for progress in the field of Affirmative Action. In my annual report, which has just been released, I have made an effort to delineate in some detail the status at this time of Affirmative Action planning at the College. The preparatory steps that the College has already taken in Affirmative Action, and the manner in which these steps are now supported by an extensive series of recommendations for further progress for greater minority and female representation on campus on many levels this year, have together brought us to the point where Affirmative Action needs to become, for the current year, an area of both affirmation and action--real affirmation and substantial action.

The College must be responsive to its own sense of obligation in Affirmative Action planning on an institutional basis. Our early obligations in this field, however, are supported by the dictates of the law and directions from the Commonwealth, and the need to make compensatory progress where the College has lagged in regard to some recent developments with the law. This is particularly so in faculty recruitment. In the area of faculty recruitment, for example, the College and all other state institutions of higher education have been asked by the State Council of Higher Education in Virginia to prepare a comprehensive and detailed Affirmative Action Plan, by October 17, 1973.

The development of an Affirmative Action Plan with emphasis on faculty recruitment is not a substitute for our own Affirmative Action planning; but it will lend direction to that planning and increase the speed with which we carry it out, by being in step with it. Since the details of the report we must give to the State Council will overlap in some areas with our own Affirmative Action planning and thus go beyond those just of faculty recruitment, I am asking that our Affirmative Action Plan, as much as possible, be a total Affirmative Action Plan for the College of William and Mary. In carrying out a total Affirmative Action Plan, I am asking that each of you take note of the following:

1. Affirmative Action is a priority goal. Our immediate aim is the preparation of an Affirmative Action Plan, focusing primarily on but not limited to faculty recruitment. This Plan must concentrate both on the status of minorities and women. The Plan must integrate, as much as possible, with College Affirmative Action planning. The Plan must have specific sets of detailed goals and timetables in every area that is reported.
2. The structure for Affirmative Action at the College involves a division of responsibility. The Affirmative Action Advisory Committee has been established as a college-wide advisory committee on Affirmative Action policy. The chairman is Mrs. Carol Sherman, who chaired last year an Ad Hoc Committee on the Status of Women which committee submitted to me an excellent report last May. Because Affirmative Action must take place in every department of college life, it is necessary to have a coordinator for Affirmative Action, whose assistance and support can extend across department lines with central administrative backing. Mr. Jerry Van Voorhis, Assistant to the President, will be coordinator. However, the operational responsibility for Affirmative Action will rest at the administratively operational level, with vice presidents, deans, directors and faculty chairmen.
3. To the extent that your cooperation is required in College Affirmative Action planning, and in the preparation of the specific Affirmative Action Plan, now called for by the Commonwealth, I hope and trust that it may be given 100 percent on a priority basis. You will be receiving more direct communications on this, from Dr. Healy, Mr. Van Voorhis and others.
4. An intensive effort will be made to bring about an awareness, on everyone's part, of the meaning of Affirmative Action as a structuring element in our environment at the College in the future. For this to be effective, it is important that all of us know about the efforts being made in this educational process, in successive issues of the William and Mary News. I urge you to follow closely any developments that may be carried there.
