National Park Service Contract Goes to Archeologists

$300,000 Contract Awarded

ologists working with a private founda-tion have been selected by the National Park Service to begin $300,000 in historical investigations in Virginia over the next three years, it was announced

The Park Service announced the contract as part of its preparation for the nation's bicentennial effort.

"The new program will put William and Mary in the forefront of American historical archeologic activity," President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., said of the announcement, which was made by the office of Rep. Thomas N. Downing. The Park Service's contract was made with the Southside Historical Sites Foundation and the Anthropology Department. The corporation is a foundation established by Mr. and Mrs. David Harrison III of New York to develop and carry out, in cooperation with the College, the work now underway at Flowerdew Hundred in Prince George County, the site of an important 17th century settlement. The foundation also works to conduct an educational program in archeology for the benefit of students, teachers and scholars and a program for disseminating results of archeological research to both specialists and the general public.

The specific projects to be undertaken at first under the National Park Service contract are ones in the York-town area and at the birthplace of George Washington in Wakefield.

According to the Planning Office of the National Park Service in Denver, the first work directive under the new contract is for $98,000 and will be used for work in Yorktown and on the battlefield there. The work will be directed by Norman Barka, associate professor of anthropology, and Leverette Gregory of the Foundation.

The next directive, according to the Park Service office, is expected to include funds to complete work at the kiln of the "Poor Potter of Yorktown," believed to have been the earliest stoneware potter in America.

Building Construction Bid

Cochran Construction Company, Inc., of Hampton, was apparent low bidder on the new Chemistry building with a base bid of $1,870,000.

Leon H. Perlin Company, Inc., of Newport News, entered a bid of $1,990,000; and Endebrock-White Company, Inc., also of Newport News, a bid of $1,893,000. The apparent low bidder for laboratory equipment for the building was Kewaunee Technical Furniture Company of Statesville, N.C., with a bid of $259,375. The other bidder was Roanoke Engineering Sales Company of Richmond with a bid of $281,989.

All bids are being reviewed by the Governor's Office, which will make a decision on awarding a contract.

Englishman Works at Flowerdew

A millwright from England visited Williamsburg last week to meet with archeologists from the Southside Historical Sites Foundation and the College who are working at Flowerdew Hundred Plantation to locate the site of the first windmill in America.

Derek Ogden of Great Alne, who has reconstructed numerous windmills in England, was invited by Mr. and Mrs. David A. Harrison, III, of Southside Historical Sites, Inc., to consult on the windmill at Flowerdew. The Southside Historical Sites Foundation was established by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison to carry out archeological work at Flowerdew Hundred in cooperation with the College.

Details have not yet been announced but plans now are to reconstruct the first windmill in America built at Flowerdew Hundred in 1621. Full scale excavations began at professor of anthropology, are codirectors of the project.

Since work began, numerous early seventeenth century sites and artifacts have been found: traces of a palisade that may have stretched thousands of feet to protect the early plantation; the complete stone foundation of an early seventeenth century house, possibly the earliest example of cruck architecture in the New World; the remains of a fort or armory area in which were found many important military artifacts made in the late six-

The plantation, established in 1618 by Sir George Yeardley, Governor and Captain of Virginia, covered over 1,000 acres. He called it Flowerdew Hundred as a compliment to his wife, Temperance Flowerdew of Norfolk, England.

In 1621 on a point of land now known as Windmill Point, Yeardley erected the first windmill in America. In 1624, at least twelve buildings, three storehouses, four tobacco houses, and one windmill were on the plantation.

CAMPUS PROFILE / James M. Pennell

"I traveled so much in earlier years that I am happy staying in one place now," says James M. Pennell, chief of security police on campus and formerly a member of the U.S. Army military nolice corps.

A resident of Williamsburg for ten years, the most recent move he has made is to a new location on campus, where he is beginning to feel settled.

he is beginning to feel settled.

The security office is now located in Lodge 6. Mr. Pennell would like members of the College community to make a note of the new telephone extensions for the campus police. "Our two extensions are 596 and 597. We may also be reached from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. by calling 229-0366, and at anytime by calling 229-3000," he said.

by calling 229-0366, and at anytime by calling 229-0366, and at anytime by calling 229-3000," he said.

The change in location means a slightly better parking and driving situation for the institutional policemen, who are able to reach the main roads with more facility and who are themselves able to be reached more quickly. The policemen formerly shared the maintenance office space in the area behind the College laundry and discovered that there was some confusion regarding their location.

Having worked in the security office for ten years, Mr. Pennell has seen a gradual increase in the strength of the security force, which has expanded from four to 13 policemen. "Within the past month, we have added two 'firsts'--our first secretary, whose duties include vehicle registration, and our first policewoman, who will primarily be working with the coed residence halls,"

The office recently added the services of an assistant chief for night supervision and six student auxiliary policemen, who assist the security officers in the performance of their duties.

Tennis Courts Solution

An unprecedented interest in tennis among members of the College community and an acute lack of facilities has caused a multitude of problems concerning the use of the College tennis courts.

The College administration and the Women's Physical Education Department are currently devising a solution that will give the largest number of persons an opportunity to use the courts. As soon as the procedures have been finalized, a copy of the new system will appear in the William and Mary Associate librarian Alva W. Stewart has submitted a report containing his findings based upon a survey of sixteen urban research centers in the United States to the Council on Library Resources, which awarded him a fellowship to conduct this survey in the fall of 1972. Much of the data in the report is based upon interviews with directors and librarians of the centers, which include the Institute of Government, University of Virginia.

Leah Rae Miron and Katherine Blue, assistant catalogers, attended the annual fall meeting of Junior Members Round Table, a section of the Vifginia Library Association, at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond Saturday, September 29. A panel of seven librarians discussed the professional climate of librarians. Those present toured the James B. Cabell Library at VCU.

The security force maintains a 24-hour-a-day security watch and is responsible for campus traffic control, he said.

A native of Boone, N.C., and graduate of Cove Creek High School, Mr. Pennell served in the Army military police corps for 21 years. He is a member of the Association of Regular Army Sergeants and traveled extensively in Europe during 12-1/2 years of duty abroad.

A member of the military police corps in Verdun, France, from 1944-48, he returned to Fort Meade, Md., for two years, took a short tour of duty in Tokyo and then worked for the Army Security Agency in Washington, D.C. from 1951-52. From there he went to Heidelberg, Germany, for four years. After serving at Fort Eustis from 1956-58, he returned to Verdun, where he served as a U.S. Customs agent for military families entering and leaving the country. He joined the William and Mary staff in 1963.

Mr. Pennell owns a 14' runabout and likes boating and fishing. He and his family enjoy camping in the Skyline Drive area, despite the bears which occasionally visit their campsite.
