Recent Additions to Chrysler Art Collection

William and Mary's art collection has grown significantly with the recent addition of nineteenth and twentieth century paintings, sculpture and glass given by Mrs. Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., to the Jean Outland Chrysler collection of modern art at the College.

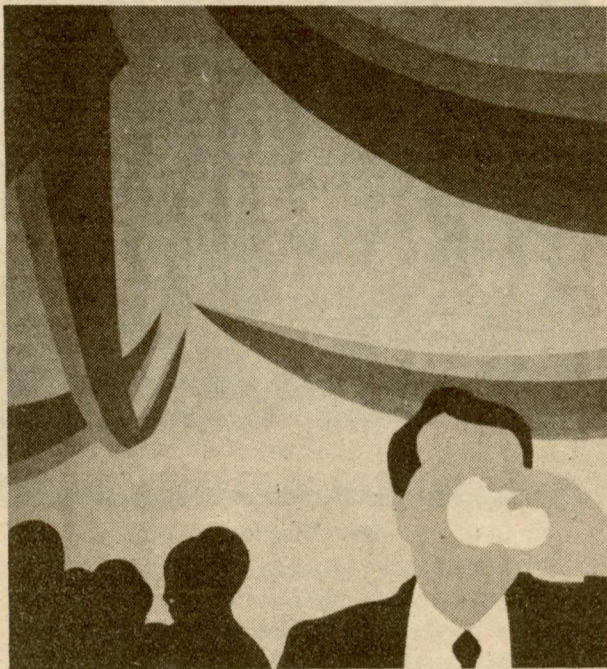

The gift of 49 paintings, six sculptures and five examples of Tiffany glass augments the collection of contemporary art established at the College in 1964 and expanded in 1967 through the generosity of Mrs. Chrysler, a member of the Class of '42.

The new acquisitions will be displayed in a formal showing early next year. Several of the paintings already have been hung in the President's House on campus.

Responding to the gift by Mrs. Chrysler to the College, President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., said that it will enable the College to continue its development of a collection of fine art of "substantial quality."

"The faculty of the Department of Fine Arts," said President Graves, "is very excited indeed to have so many excellent works that provide for such effective teaching and research. This gift, in combination with a collection which you gave us earlier, means that William and Mary probably has the best public collection of art of the 1950's and early 1960's of this kind in the country."

The emphasis of the new addition is on American abstract expressionist painting of the 1950's and 1960's and includes works by known and lesser known artists: among them, Milton Avery, Budd Hopkins and Barry Glickman. This gift complements the previous gifts of Mrs. Chrysler by providing additional works by artists already represented in the College's fine arts collection. Part of the collection consists of works by significant artists not previously represented, including a large landscape by the nineteenth-century French painter, Adolphe Charles Marais.

The new art works from the Chrysler collection are interesting as "facets of a moment in the history of modern art," said Miles Chappell, assistant professor of fine arts, who is currently cataloguing the College art collection.

Among the new sculptures are several nineteenth-century pieces including the bronze "Pan of Rohallion," one of the best known classicizing figures of the American sculptor Frederick MacMonnies.

At present the College's art works are being catalogued; the work is part of a project initiated by President Graves to give increased recognition to the various fine arts collections of the College and the part they should play in the life and heritage of the College.

"We owe the donors of our collections and the people of Virginia the opportunity to have the collections on display," said President Graves.

There have been catalogues in the past, explained Mr. Chappell, but they have not been as complete as the current one which is being undertaken to establish a definitive listing and accurate description of each item in the collection. All of the paintings, sculpture and glass in the new Chrysler donation are being catalogued according to subject, location, artist and donor, with a photograph and detailed information on each item.

At present the entire collection of College art works will continue to be stored and kept on display on various parts of the campus, including the Wren Building and the Earl Gregg Swem Library. There also are paintings currently on loan from the Collection in the Capitol Building of Colonial Williamsburg and The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

2 Student Escorts to Aid Campus Security

"Use E*S*C*O*R*T. It may save you the hassle of your life.

This is the newest sign on campus and it heralds a lively yet serious student approach to a problem that is the common concern of many campuses - security.

The new service will provide escorts for students traveling alone across campus at night and is staffed by student volunteers working out of a headquarters which has been set up in the Security Police Office.

E*S*C*O*R*T is sponsored by the Student Association and is headed by Glen Evans, a junior from Gettysburg, Pa.

The service has been set up, Mr. Evans explained, because there have been incidents of attacks on students, both men and women, and there is a need to combat this danger.

The student-initiated program expands the scope of the College's recent moves to strengthen its program of campus security. A new position of director of safety and security has been established; mercury vapor lights and floodlights will be placed at strategic locations; the Security Office's radio communications system is being upgraded and the College has made budgetary requests to enlarge its security force and revamp the campus' outdoor lighting system.

The Student Association is also sponsoring a training program aimed at teaching students the techniques of self-defense and several students are being employed as "plainclothes" security members at night to augment the regular force.

Mr. Evans sees his first task as one of education - educating students to using the service and educating them to volunteer their time to the project.

Fliers have been put under the doors in residence halls and advertisements over the radio station are being used to convince students that it's the "cool" thing to do to use E*S*C*O*R*T.

Mr. Evans explained that he got the idea for the mod spelling of the program's title from the movie M*A*S*H. The individual letters, however, do not have any special significance. It is an attempt, said Mr. Evans, to give the program appeal for students and entice them to use it.

Headquartered in a building used by the Security Police, E*S*C*O*R*T volunteers maintain a schedule from 7 p.m. to 4 a.m. in three-hour shifts to receive calls from students.

Mr. Evans says he knows the service cannot at this point anticipate all the needs of students; the schedule is flexible so that changes can be made as the program develops.

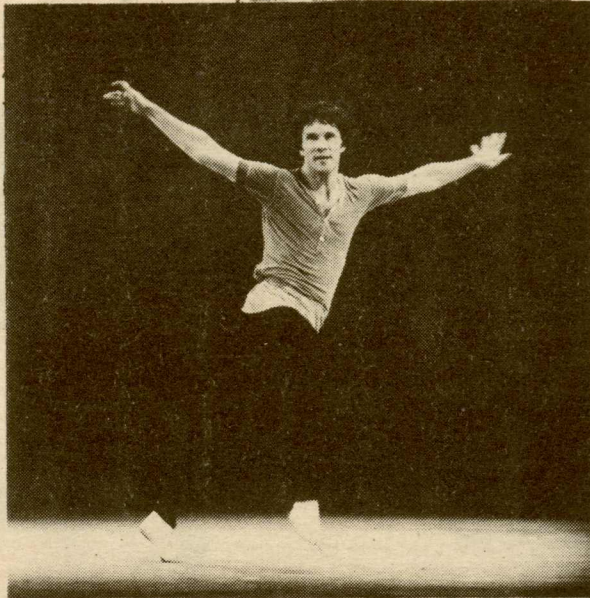

Mr. Evans isn't sure how many calls his service will get from men but he emphasizes the fact that E*S*C*O*R*T is not strictly for coeds.

"We hope we can sell students on the idea of the program. We are telling them to use the service - it may save you the hassle of your life."

When a call comes in, the service will send out two students to escort the caller either to his residence hall or to another building on campus. The plan of having students work in pairs, forestalls, says Mr. Evans, any danger to either the escort or the student.

Mr. Evans said he hopes students will use the service. "I know of several incidents in which students have been attacked at night on campus and I am sure there are more that are never reported. There is a need for our service and we hope students will use it."

Conducts Dance Class

Dan Wagoner

Dan Wagoner, choreographer and dancer, taught a master class in Adair Studio on Saturday, November 3, under the sponsorship of the Committee on Lectures and Orchesis. Members of Orchesis and the advanced dance class were given the opportunity to work directly in technique and improvisation with this outstanding performer in a challenging two hour session.

Mr. Wagoner has danced with Doris Humphrey, Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham and has toured throughout the world as a leading soloist with Paul Taylor's Company. His own company, Dan Wagoner and Dancers, began to emerge during 1968, and has received animated critical comment on its performances since then.

Women's Basketball

Tryouts for women's varsity and junior varsity basketball will be held in Adair Gym, Monday-Wednesday, November 12-14, at 4:30 p.m.

Veterans Day Ceremony

A Veterans Day ceremony will be held at the State Capitol at noon Monday, November 12. Governor Linwood Holton will preside.

Brigadier General (Ret.) Harry Disston is serving as chairman of the Governor's Committee for Observance of Veterans Day, 1973.

DAC Sponsors Dancers

The Drug Action Center will hold its second Community Awareness Session of the year, Wednesday, November 7, in the Campus Center Ballroom at 8 p.m.

Featured guests will be an international folk dancing group who specialize in clogging and big circle mountain dancing.

The entire College community is invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

REMINDER

Veterans Day, November 11, is a legal holiday for permanent classified employees. Since this date falls on Sunday in 1973, the holiday will be observed on Monday, November 12, 1973.

Early Registration for Spring Semester Classes

An official early registration for the spring semester of 1973-74 for juniors and seniors will be held between November 9 and 18. During this period all juniors and seniors should make an appointment with their departmental advisors and fill out registration cards. Copies of the class schedule for the spring semester will be available in James Blair Hall in the office of the Associate Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences beginning November 9. Any senior or junior who fails to participate in the early registration will be required to register during the Add/Drop period January 28-February 11.

Financial Aid

Virginians who are first-year, full-time students at William and Mary during the 1973-74 session may be eligible for a financial award. Applications for the recently announced program are available in the Student Aid Office, Blair Hall 310.

Deadline for filing is November 15.

For further information, contact the Student Aid Office.

Utley to Speak Monday

The Department of English, in cooperation with the Committee on Lectures, will sponsor a public lecture by Francis Lee Utley, professor of English at Ohio State University, on the topic of "Chaucer, Boccaccio and the International Popular Tale" at 8 p.m. on Monday, November 12, in the Little Theatre of the Campus Center.

Law Work Published

William F. Swindler, professor, has been advised that the third and final volume of his Court and Constitution in the 20th Century will be published by Bobbs-Merrill in New York in December. Like the first two volumes, the third, subtitled The Modern Interpretation, has been adopted by the Lawyers' Literary Club. Another manuscript for the Bobbs-Merrill law school division in Indianapolis, entitled, Principles of Constitutional Law, is to be delivered to the printers next month. Mr. Swindler is also continuing the editing of his ten-volume collection, Sources and Documents of United States Constitutions, published by Oceana Publications of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y. Volumes I and II, covering the states in alphabetical order from Alabama through Georgia, have already been published, and Volume III (Hawaii through Iowa) is to go to press this month.

STAFF NOTES

Appointment

The appointment of Richard W. Croot as assistant manager of the College Bookstore effective December 1 has been announced by William J. Carter, vice-president for business affairs.

Mr. Croot replaces Elton R. Bomberger, who left to open his own bookstore in Corning, N.Y.

Since Mr. Croot's graduation from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in 1969, he has been employed as manager of a book and supply store in Blacksburg.

His appointment as assistant to Bruce W. Locke, the bookstore manager, will provide additional managerial experience to the bookstore operation and better service for the College community.

Mr. Croot is a native of London, England, and he and his wife, Patricia, have two children, Kristen and Amy.

Promotion

Geraldine W. Knight, clerk-typist B in the Cataloguing Department, has been promoted to clerk-typist C.

Training Course

Security officers Linda C. Moore and Elijah W. Grizzel are attending a five-week training course conducted by the Thomas Nelson Academy of Criminal Justice which began November 1 and ends November 30.

All security officers at the College will complete this or comparable training as space becomes available. This training is intended to enhance the quality of the campus security program at the College.

'Affirmation' No Error

Quite by accident, the Affirmative Action Program got tagged with a new moniker.

When Jerry Van Voorhis, director of "AA" was composing the detailed memorandum for the campus community he attempted to save time and muscle by abbreviating Affirmative Action to Affirm-Action. Dutifully, Shirley Harper translated her boss' notes and Affirmation slipped into print.

At first glance, many readers may have headed for their Webster - it isn't there - but it isn't a mistake either - so with the accent on the first and third syllables - it's Affirmáction.

Student Guides Conduct Wren Tours

The following article was written by Maureen Wiggins, a member of the Colonial Williamsburg Press Bureau. Mrs. Wiggins is the wife of Peter D. Wiggins, assistant professor of English at the College.

Traditional academic robes once again sweep through the halls of the Wren Building as student guides interpret the building for visitors.

The impetus behind the change was a joint feeling on the part of William and Mary and Colonial Williamsburg officials that the use of student guides affirms that the Wren Building--a stronghold of student activity on the William and Mary campus for nearly three centuries--continues to be an active college building.

Despite the fact that the English Department maintains offices on the third floor and daily classes are held in the building, some William and Mary students as well as other people in the community don't realize that the building is owned by the College, and that it is the oldest continuously used college building in the country.

The Wren Building was one of the first buildings to be restored in Williamsburg. A further restoration of the building took place during 1967-68, with the refurbishing of the Grammar School Room, Philosophy Room, Great Hall, Chapel, Blue Room and Common Room.

In 1963, President Davis Y. Paschall invited Colonial Williamsburg to conduct visitors through the building, but it wasn't until 1968 that the guides were put on daily duty. Prior to 1963, arrangements for tours were informal. If visitors stopped at the Brafferton, a guide was provided. If not--they were free to tour on their own.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., has stressed the importance to William and Mary of interpretation of the Wren Building and its preeminent role in education in this country. He has also expressed his appreciation of CW's interpretive efforts of the building in recent years. Mr. Graves said the new student interpretation should be even more effective for visitors to the old campus.

The new tours put a different perspective on the Wren. Even for a veteran CW tour-taker the 40 minute walk through the Wren building with a student guide is fun. On the first day of the new system, Barbara Ivey--a graduate psychology student from Minnesota--was considered a "pro" by her jittery fellow guides after having completed the first two tours of the day.

She made an unqualified hit with her audience. "This is called the Blue Room," she said as she entered the second-floor convocation room. "I know you're going to tell me it's green," she continued, "nevertheless it's called the Blue Room." An informal discussion on the blue/green aspect of the room followed between visitors and hostess.

Then Miss Ivey imparted a little-known bit of information about the portraits of Commissary James Blair, the College's first president, and his wife, hanging above the fireplace in the misnamed room. "Mrs. Blair," she said by way of introduction, "was a very fine lady. It is recorded that she was Williamsburg's first women's libber. On her wedding day, she refused to include "obey" in her wedding vows and thus pre-dated the whole women's movement by about two hundred years." Interspersed throughout the tour were questions by visitors to Miss Ivey about where she was from, what she was majoring in, how many students are on campus, etc.

When asked what she thought of the new student guide system, Mrs. Robert Ferry, a visitor from Ardmore, Pa., described it as "terrific." "It really links the past with the present; whoever came up with the idea had a good one," she added.

The 17 student guides who work in the Wren Building operate on four-hour shifts and clock about 28 hours every two weeks. The hosts and hostesses are recruited through the College's student aid office and the CW employment office, and are trained by CW.

PERSONNEL BULLETIN

Review of Classified Job Descriptions

As part of affirmative personnel action, deans of schools and department heads have been requested to furnish the Personnel Office with current job descriptions for all permanent classified positions under their supervision.

Upon receipt of the up-dated job description, Irving H. Robitshek, director of personnel, will review the duties and responsibilities of the incumbent, and recommend whether or not the position should be reallocated to a higher or lower classification or remain the same. Appropriate action will then be taken.

If a position is reallocated, and it is processed and approved by the Division of Personnel in Richmond, salaries of incumbents may be adjusted accordingly as appropriate.

Mr. Robitshek stated that it is proposed that permanent classified job descriptions be reviewed on an annual basis by the appropriate deans and department heads.

Job Openings

The following positions at the College are or will be vacant. Qualified employees who wish to be transferred to these positions may receive additional information at the College Personnel Office. The College of William and Mary is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Accordingly, women and minority employees are encouraged to apply for those positions for which they feel they are qualified.
