Artmobile Features 'Art Nouveau' Here Jan. 8-11

The Virginia Museum's Artmobile carrying the exhibition "Art Nouveau," which offers an interesting and fascinating look into the important turn-of-the-century art movement, will be on campus this week.

The Department of Fine Arts will sponsor the "gallery on wheels" for its visit January 8-11. The gallery will be open to the public 9 a.m.-12 noon and 1-5 p.m. daily with one exception. On January 11 the gallery will be open from 9 a.m. to noon only. The artmobile will be parked beside the Andrews-Phi Beta Kappa Hall facility on Jamestown Road.

The Museum's headquarters building in Richmond was the scene of a major Art Nouveau exhibition during the 1971-72 season - an exhibition that proved to be one of the most popular and successful in recent memory. One of the results of that display was the gift of $500,000 from Richmond art patrons, Frances and Sydney Lewis, for the Museum to acquire an extensive permanent Art Nouveau collection. Many of the first purchases made with that fund have been included in the Artmobile exhibition.

Although smaller in size than the Museum display, the Artmobile assemblage is similarly designed to represent the entire scope of this art movement, including furniture, glassware, graphics, silver and jewelry. In addition to the items from the Museum's newly-acquired collection, the exhibition features objects loaned by the Lewises and by William B. O'Neal of Charlottesville.

Director of Safety and Security Arrives

The College's first director of safety and security - Harvey P. Gunson, is on the job.

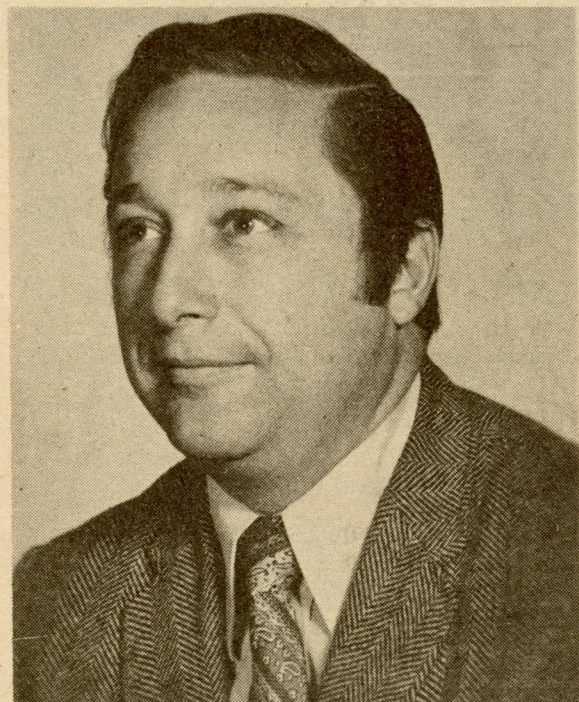

Mr. Gunson, 39, an eighteen year veteran of the New York City Police Department, is the College's representative on safety and security matters who is heading an expanded program aimed at providing the campus with "an extremely flexible but definite safety and security program."

Mr. Gunson feels he has a dual role to fill on campus - that of a law enforcement officer for the protection of the students and campus buildings - and a public relations agent who will act for the College as a liaison with members of the community and law enforcement agencies.

To finger the pulse of the College community to ascertain its needs, Mr. Gunson feels he must first gain the trust and confidence of the College community and establish a rapport with all constituencies.

Stressing the public relations aspect of his job, Mr. Gunson said, "No department is effective without the cooperation and participation of the people it serves." Among his future plans are on-campus programs to alert the community to the work of his department and the existing problems of security on campus.

One of the first steps Mr. Gunson has taken to increase the effectiveness of the force has been to adjust the hours of campus patrols and have more coverage during the critical hours. He would not say what he termed "critical hours" or how many men were involved. That kind of information, he said, was confidential and added, "It is important that we set no patterns in our security patrols of the campus."

Harvey P. Gunson

Prior to coming to Williamsburg, Mr. Gunson served as supervisor of police in the criminal courts of his native Brooklyn. He spent a great deal of his time in liaison work between the courts and district attorneys, judges and legal aide people. He received the associate degree in criminal law from Brooklyn College and the B.S. degree from John Jay College of Criminal Justice of the City University of New York.

Mr. Gunson and his wife, Patricia, and their three children reside at Colonial Townhouse Apartments. Dennis, 13, Christopher, 10, and Patricia, 7, attend Walsingham Academy.

Morpurgo to Give History Of Paperback Movement

Jack Morpurgo, professor of American Literature at the University of Leeds in Great Britain, will give a public lecture on Tuesday, January 8.

He will speak on "Penguin Books: The Birth and Growth of the Modern Paperback Movement" at 8:15 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library. His talk is sponsored by the Botetourt Bibliographical Society.

Mr. Morpurgo has served as non-fiction editor of Penguin Books, editor of Penguin Parade, general editor of the Pelican Histories and educational advisor to the firm. He is currently collaborating on the first authoritative history of William and Mary, along with W. Melville Jones, former vice president for academic affairs at the College, and Edward M. Riley, director of research at Colonial Williamsburg.

The first British graduate of William and Mary in modern history, Mr. Morpurgo has served as director general of the National Book League, the central book organization of Britain, and advisor of publishing to several Asian governments. He is the author of some 20 books, the most recent being Barnes Wallis: A Biography. He has recently been commissioned to write the authorized biography of Sir Allen Lane, the founder of Penguin Books and of the modern paperback movement.

President of the United Kingdom Chapter of the William and Mary alumni, Mr. Morpurgo is the recipient of an Alumni Medallion, a member of the Alpha of Virginia chapter of Phi Beta Kappa and recipient of an honorary doctorate from William and Mary.

Business Administration

Wagih Dafashy and James E. Smith, associate professors, participated in the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants annual "Meeting With the Educators" held Dec. 7, in Richmond.

Chemistry

Randolph A. Coleman, assistant professor, recently attended the Robert A. Welch Foundation Conference on Chemical Research in Houston, Tex. This year's conference topic was "Organic-Inorganic Reagents in Synthetic Chemistry."

Education

John W. Sykes, associate professor and director of teacher placement and scholarships, has been appointed to the editorship of the MAASCUS Report of the Mid-Atlantic Association of School, College, and University Staffing. This association is the placement and personnel professional organization for the states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia and the District of Columbia. The organization is primarily concerned with assisting college graduates with finding jobs in the public schools and institutions of higher education.

New Energy Institute

S. Y. Tyree, Jr., professor of chemistry and chairman of the Council of Oak Ridge Associated Universities (ORAU) of which William and Mary is a member, was in Oak Ridge recently to approve plans for the new Institute for Energy Analysis which will be housed in the library building of ORAU.

The new "think tank for energy" will be headed by Alvin M. Weinberg, former director of Oak Ridge National Laboratory and a member of the White House's Energy Research and Development Advisory Council.

According to Mr. Weinberg, "The Institute will be concerned with analysis of a variety of energy problems, both in energy policy and energy research and development."

The Institute, Mr. Weinberg added, will look at the energy problem as "problematique," - a French word meaning a "complex of interwoven problems."

In his present office with ORAU, Mr. Tyree also serves as a member of the executive committee of the Board of Directors.

Kevin E. Geoffroy, associate professor, was appointed to the Executive Board of the Association for Specialists in Group Work in Washington, D.C. on December 5. The Association is a new affiliate of the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

Government

George W. Grayson, associate professor, published an essay on the recent Venezuelan presidential campaign entitled "The Sweet Smell of Oil," which appeared in the December 3 issue of Newsday.

Law School

Four members of the law faculty--Tom Collins, John Donaldson, Emeric Fischer and Tim Sullivan--attended the annual convention of the Association of American Law Schools in New Orleans during the holidays.

Recent publications by the law faculty include a review of Iowa criminal law, by Kermit Dunahoo, in the current issue of the Drake Law Review, and an article by Doug Rendleman in the winter issue of the Georgia Law Review, "On Void Orders," a study of the procedural rule barring collateral attacks in injunction issues.

Members of the William and Mary law faculty who will teach in the eighth annual Summer School of Law in England in 1974 include Michael Madison, Bolling R. Powell, Richard Walck and Scott C. Whitney. Among the University of Exeter faculty on the summer staff will be Dominik Lasok, who was visiting professor in Williamsburg 1968-69.

Modern Languages

Associate professor Merritt Cox, assistant professor Elizabeth Backhaus and instructors Joanne Basso and Robert Welch recently attended the Modern Languages Association convention in Chicago. Mr. Cox presented a paper entitled "Juan Melendez Valdes: A Visionary Rebel," which will be published in a forthcoming issue of Romance Notes.

Physics

R.E. Welsh, professor, recently presented a colloquium to the Physics Department of the University of Pennsylvania entitled "Antiprotonic, Kaonic and Sigma Atoms."

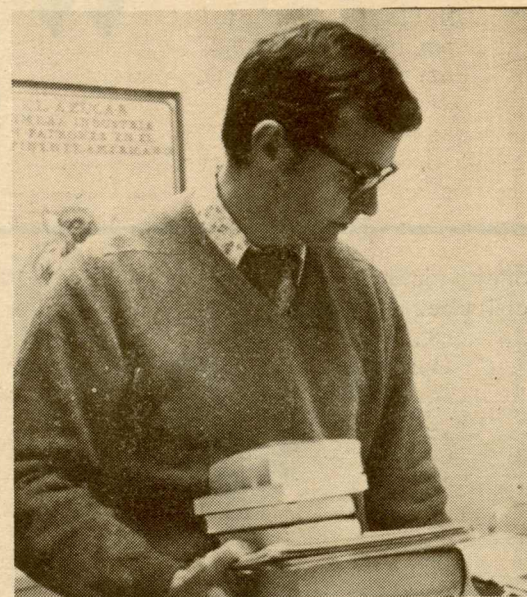

Burr Publishes Article in 'Libri'

Robert L. Burr, circulation librarian, is the author of the article "Librarians, Libraries and Librarianship--A Model" which appeared in the November issue of LIBRI, the journal of the International Federation of Library Associations. The article proposes a theoretical model of library relationships and reports on preliminary testing of the model through research conducted at Canisius College, Buffalo, New York, early in 1973.

Watch That Comma!

We pass along this "Ad" from the current issue of the Institute of Early American History and Culture Newsletter which may be of interest to scholars in history who are busy writing papers or hope to publish in the future. Ed.

WATCH THAT COMMA!

The Institute editors have compiled a revised, enlarged, and (naturally) improved edition of Style Sheet for Authors, our house guide for citation, capitalization, hyphenation, etc., and the preparation of manuscripts for publication. Last redone in 1968, the Style Sheet is designed to adapt such standard guides as the University of Chicago Press's Manual of Style to the particular problems of form and documentation in early American studies. Hence many of the rules and examples that it contains are intended to provide writers of historical articles, books, theses, and term papers with explicit guidance at the very point where the more general manuals end. The Style Sheet may be ordered, at $.50 a copy, from the Publications Department of the Institute.

CAMPUS PROFILE / James J. Connolly

The energy crisis presents a two-fold problem for James J. Connolly. He is not only concerned with energy conservation at home but also at William and Mary. Like everyone else, the College is finding ways to cut the consumption of energy and as superintendent of buildings and grounds, Mr. Connolly is particularly involved in this conservation program.

As superintendent of the Department, which is responsible for providing heat, hot water and electricity to the entire College community, Mr. Connolly must complete tasks compounded by spiraling fuel costs and limited budgetary allotments. Despite the current problems, Mr. Connolly says he welcomes the challenge of helping William and Mary maintain its buildings and grounds. The beauty of the campus - particularly the designs of the buildings which impressed him when he first visited the campus - made a deep, lasting impression.

A native of Astoria, New York, Mr. Connolly was awarded the B.S. degree in engineering at the U.S. Naval Academy in 1953 and was commissioned in the U.S. Marine Corps immediately following his graduation. He earned a master's degree in financial management at the U.S. Naval Post Graduate School in Monterey, Calif., in 1968.

During his military career, Mr. Connolly served as a battalion commander and as an engineer officer of the Force Logistics Command in two tours of Vietnam. His final military assignment was at Quantico (Va.) Marine Base where he was a maintenance officer in the Development and Education Command and a controller in the Management Department. A member of the College staff since last July, Mr. Connolly retired with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Mr. Connolly and his wife, the former Claire Smith of Jamaica, N.Y., are the parents of four children - Barbara, 16, a student at Lafayette High School; James, 14, and Kathleen, 12, both at James Blair; and Marion, 9, a fourth grader at Berkeley Elementary.

Johnson Elected President Of Legal History Society

Herbert A. Johnson

Herbert A. Johnson, editor of The Papers of John Marshall at the Institute of Early American History and Culture here, has been elected to a two year term as president of the American Society for Legal History.

The Institute is a center for historical publication and study, sponsored jointly by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Mr. Johnson has been vice president of the Society since January 1972, and succeeds George L. Haskins of the University of Pennsylvania Law School who has served as president since January 1970.

The American Society for Legal History is the national learned society for those interested in the study of legal history. Established in 1956, the Society encourages scholarship in all fields of the history of law, ranging from ancient law to modern jurisprudence, and covering all national legal systems, both Anglo-American and foreign. In conjunction with the Temple University School of Law it publishes the American Journal of Legal History, and it is associated with Harvard University Press in the publication of Studies in Legal History, a series of book-length monographs. The November 1972 annual meeting of the Society was held at the Williamsburg Lodge and Conference Center; the November 1973 meeting was held in Chicago.

A specialist in American colonial legal history, the newly elected president joined the staff of the Papers of John Marshall as an associate editor in July 1967. He was appointed to his present position in July 1971. The Papers of John Marshall are co-sponsored by the Institute and William and Mary under grants made by the National Historical Publications Commission, the Virginia General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Humanities. The first volume of Chief Justice John Marshall's papers will be published in the fall of 1974 by the University of North Carolina Press, and subsequent volumes are expected to follow at yearly intervals for the next ten years.

In addition to his work with the Society and the Papers of John Marshall, Mr. Johnson has been lecturing on legal and constitutional history at the College. He is a member of the John Marshall House Committee of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, and a national trustee of The John Marshall House Fund. He received his undergraduate and graduate education at Columbia University, where he was awarded the Ph.D. degree in 1965. Earlier he had received his LL.B. degree from New York Law School, and was admitted to practice in New York State in November 1960.

Year-End Roundup for 1973

The location of the National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg on land owned by the College heightened hopes for a new law school building.

The National Park Service awarded a contract for $300,000 to the Southside Historical Sites Foundation and the College for archeological work in Virginia over the next three years as part of its commitment to the Bicentennial Celebration, putting the College in the forefront of American historical archeology.

A new Statement of Rights and Responsibilities for faculty, students and administrators was approved.

Work was started on a new chemistry building on the new campus complex adjacent to John Millington Hall of Life Sciences.

The new $750,000 Student Health Services Center opened with a staff of two full-time physicians and seven registered nurses.

Campus Security came under close scrutiny late in the year as the result of several incidents on campus. The security program expansion already underway was bolstered by the addition of city policemen on campus patrols. E*S*C*O*R*T, sponsored by the Student Association in cooperation with the security police, was initiated. Top priority was given to security oriented maintenance; a budget request of $126,000 was made to complete conversion of the campus lighting to mercury vapor. Floodlights at dorms were installed.

Buildings on campus were buttoned down and temperatures lowered to 40 degrees when students left for Christmas vacation as the College responded to the energy crisis. Earlier thermostats in all buildings were lowered to 68 in the daytime and 64 at night.

The Student Affairs Office was expanded and James C. Livingston assumed the new duties of Dean of the Undergraduate Program.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., in his second annual report, said he thought that higher education "is possibly entering a new environment which is more open with more legal dimension and with greater governmental influence."

Affirmative Action on campus was outlined by program coordinator Jerry Van Voorhis, named assistant to President Graves.

The College looked for ways to tighten its belt as Governor Holton called for emergency budget cuts. The athletic program looked for new sources of income.

A new living-learning concept was introduced with the opening of the French, German and Spanish Language Houses.

Concerts and lectures throughout the year brought a kaleidoscope of speakers and artists from many fields.

Recently released POWs got a chance to challenge former Attorney General Ramsey Clark on his anti-war sentiments following a debate in William and Mary Hall on the American system of justice with columnist William F. Buckley, Jr.

Later in the year another topical question, the implications of the recent Supreme Court decision on pornography, was argued in a conference in William and Mary Hall. Sponsored by the Student Association, it brought such luminaries as Judith Crist, film critic and movie star Greg Morris.

Highlights of the campus year included the following:

Mr. McCary is professor emeritus of modern languages at the College.

Under the general interest category, a beginning astronomy course starting February 26 will be taught by George Crawford, professor emeritus of chemistry. "Genesis in the Space Age," scheduled to begin February 25, and "The I in Me," beginning April 4, are two new courses which will be taught by Rabbi Sidney D. Levine of Newport News. Another new offering will be a class in "Techniques of Self Defense" taught by Hiroshi Hamada, director of the Eastern Collegiate Karate Association. The course is open to both men and women and begins February 22.

A class in plant propagation, beginning February 28, under the category of the environment, will be offered for the first time this semester. It will be taught by Robert B. McCartney, a biologist in the Landscape Department of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, a well known lecturer and consultant in horticulture and plant life.

Official Memoranda

From: President Thomas A. Graves, Jr.
 To: Members of the Faculty and Staff
 Subject: Conflict of Interest

The following communication has been received from the Attorney General of Virginia and is presented for the information and guidance of any personnel to whom the reminder is applicable:

Re: Disclosure of Material Financial Interest

Dear Dr. Graves:

Pursuant to the Virginia Conflict of Interests Act, all officers or employees of state agencies are required to file with this office during the month of January, written disclosure of material financial interests which they have and which they believe, or have reason to believe, may be substantially affected by actions of the agency of which they are officers or employees.

The following statutory definitions are pertinent with respect to that Act:

§ 2.1-348. Definitions.--As used in this chapter:

"(d) 'Officer' shall include any person appointed or elected to any governmental or advisory agency, and who shall be deemed an officer of such agency, whether or not such person receives compensation or other emolument of office, but as to §§ 2.1-351, 2.1-352 and 2.1-353 shall not include any member of the General Assembly of Virginia.

"(e) 'Employee' shall include all persons employed by any governmental or advisory agency."

Karate Club Gives Scholarship Aid

The William and Mary Karate Club recently donated $100 for scholarship aid "to be used to provide assistance which could not otherwise be offered to a student from overseas who wishes to attend William and Mary." The Club also made a $50 contribution to the United Fund.

In thanking the organization for the contributions, President Graves praised Hiro Hamada, president and founder of the Club, "for the excellent progress which karate has made under your leadership over the last two years.... You have brought great skill and enthusiasm to this activity."

Mr. Hamada is a candidate for the master's degree in sociology.

Free University Program Planned

The Student Association is now in the process of planning next semester's Free University program. Any student, staff or faculty member who would like to request a specific course or who would be willing to teach should contact the SA Office, Ext. 350; Peter Garland, Ext. 248 or Jeff Leppo, Ext. 249.

The Free University, which was revived this year, offered first semester courses on subjects ranging from photography and dance to human sexuality.

At Christopher Newport

A community forum on Soil, Water and Development Problems in the Virginia Southern Coastal Plains will be held at Christopher Newport College on Thurs., January 10 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The session, which is free to the public, is designed to acquaint elected and appointed officials, planners, landowners and developers with the environmental aspects of urbanization.

Jointly sponsored by Christopher Newport College and the Virginia Tech Extension Division, the forum will emphasize both the problems and available control mechanisms to insure quality development.

Troubadors Perform at Reception

The Denbigh High School Troubadors, a group of 17 singers in eighteenth century costume, directed by Barbara Crane, provided a lively musical touch to the reception for artist Thomas Thorne held December 7 in Andrews Hall. Mr. Thorne's exhibition of paintings will continue on exhibit until February 3. The hours are 1-5 p.m. Wed. thru Sun.

Flowerdew Well Yields Many Treasures

The promise of one of the most exciting archeological projects in the country is being realized at Flowerdew Hundred Plantation on the South Side of the James River, originally established by Sir George Yeardley, Governor and Captain General of Virginia from 1618-1627.

Treasures from a well dug in the first quarter of the 17th century - a rare find in itself - will provide archeologists with valuable clues to the lifestyle of that period.

A small silver coin from the time of Elizabeth I of England, dated 1567, a black leather tankard in excellent state of preservation, and wooden articles such as a bucket with spinning wheel fragments and seeds are some of the major finds from the well.

"It opens our eyes to aspects of a culture that we know very little about," said Norman Barka of the Anthropology Department of the College. Mr. Barka, along with Nathan Altshuler, chairman of the Anthropology Department, and Leverette Gregory are directing the archeological work for the Southside Historical Sites Foundation.

"We knew it was a valuable site," added Mr. Gregory, "now we are convinced."

The well was found in the southwest quarter of a fort area near the river. The well was made of cobblestones, probably native boulders, and was approximately 4 feet in diameter and dug to a depth of 7 feet. At the bottom of the well was a curved wooden footing placed just under the stones. Searchers found that the well had been repaired or stabilized with brickwork on one side.

Each step of the work at the well was monitored by a photographer and plans are now to produce an educational film of the dig.

Because so little is known of the early Colonial period and sites of this period, such as Jamestown, have suffered heavily from erosion, the well-preserved sites at Flowerdew are of particular value to the archeologist.

Work will continue at the large fort site until spring or summer after which the work will be concentrated in the area of the foundations of a possible cruck-style house.

"There is so little known about life in this country during this time that everything we find is new," said Mr. Barka.

"Archeology is not going to make any radical changes in history but does tell us about the general trends of an era and details about the life of the time, how people lived and survived and changed. We can trace settlement patterns from the artifacts we find, and find out what people were doing here then."

Flowerdew Plantation covered 1,000 acres. At 1621 on a point now known as Windmill Point, Yeardley erected the first windmill in America. A millwright from England visited the site earlier this year to consult with archeologists on the possible reconstruction of the Flowerdew Windmill.

Historical documents reveal that in 1624, at least twelve dwellings, three storehouses, four tobacco houses, and one windmill were on the plantation. Archeological survey work to date has located forty seventeenth-century sites on the plantation site.

"Flowerdew Hundred," said Mr. Barka, "presents many challenges and opportunities. It is a chance to add all sorts of archeological information as well as being a great opportunity to train students in conjunction with the projects. Many have been working at the sites."

The project is supported by the Southside Historical Sites Foundation, which is closely allied with the College. A permanent exhibit of Flowerdew Hundred artifacts is being readied in the anthropology building on campus.
