Conservation Being Taught

Twenty-five teachers, educational administrators and interested individuals from all parts of Virginia are participating in three weeks of conservation education sponsored by the Virginia Resource Use Education Council.

Conducted by Edward W. Mundie, nationally recognized advocate for conservation from Virginia, the program is structured around lectures, laboratories, guest speakers and field trips. Topics studied in the course include geology, marine life, soil and water, forests and wildlife.

According to Mr. Mundie, the stated purpose of the program is "to provide additional training for teachers in the subject of conservation, thereby increasing the effectiveness of resource use teaching in the schools of Virginia."

One of the founders of the Council, Mr. Mundie originated the course at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in 1956 in the belief that conservation education in the schools is an important part of teaching good citizenship. Today the summer program to "teach the teachers" is presented at four state colleges and universities: Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Madison College, Virginia State College and William and Mary.

Mr. Mundie emphasized that the course is geared towards teachers of first through twelfth grade, as well as principals and other administrative personnel of the Virginia elementary and secondary school systems. Three semester hours credit (or five quarter hours credit) is recognized by the State for satisfactory completion of the course. These hours may be counted towards either a graduate or undergraduate degree or towards renewal of the State teaching certificate.

Two different sources of aid finance the program. Though required to pay 30% of the total cost themselves, Virginia teachers are eligible for a limited number of State scholarships which cover tuition, meals and lodging. In addition, the Resource Council receives funds from several organizations, a substantial number of which are located in major soil and water conservation districts.

This is the eighteenth summer that the course, which began July 22 and will continue through August 9, has been presented at the College. Class time is scheduled from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

REMINDER

The Bloodmobile will be at the Williamsburg United Methodist Church, Friday, August 16, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

IFYE on Campus

The International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE) is meeting on campus through August 9.

Several hundred members of the 4-H youth exchange program are expected to attend.

Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates John Warren Cooke gave the keynote address at the opening session this morning.

Samuel D. Proctor of Rutgers University will speak at a special international banquet which will begin with a reception in the Commons Thursday at 6:15 p.m.

President Graves welcomed the conference members this morning in Millington Hall.

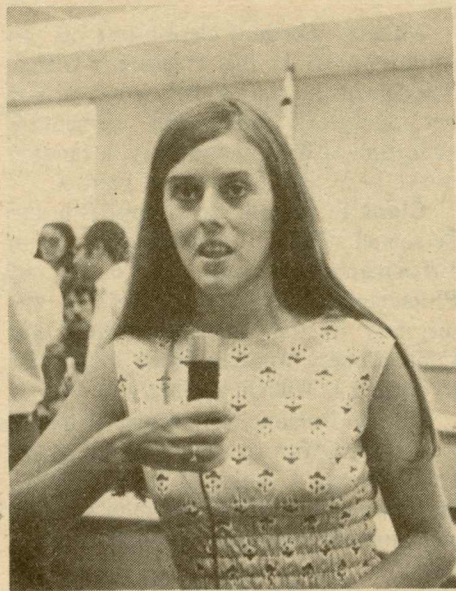

The conference theme, "The Past as Prologue," has been developed to incorporate most of the special features of Williamsburg.

The program will focus on the individual's responsibility in community, state, country and world government.

There will also be a lighter side to the program with several tours, including an afternoon excursion to Virginia Beach for a seafood fest on the shores of the Chesapeake Bay, and a performance of the Colonial Williamsburg Drum and Fife Corps.

Chairman of the 1974-conference is Beth Hurdle of Richmond, feature editor for the Virginia Journal of Education. Arrangements for the conference have been coordinated on campus by John Randolph, associate director of summer school.

Class Interviews Virginia Gentlemen

Becky Kovey '75 shows her surprise in learning that Robert E. Lee, IV, a native of New York, fails to speak with a Southern accent.

New School of Education Dean Summer Commencement Speaker

J. M. Yankovich

The College will hold its summer commencement exercises in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, Saturday, August 24, at 1:30 p.m.

James M. Yankovich, recently appointed dean of the School of Education, is principal speaker for the occasion, during which time approximately 119 undergraduate and 155 graduate degrees will be awarded.

Mr. Yankovich, who succeeds retiring dean Richard B. Brooks, has served as dean for academic affairs at the University of Michigan at Flint since 1972. His appointment began July 1, and he will assume the dean's position September 1.

A native of Richmond, Mr. Yankovich attended public schools there and earned a bachelor's degree in political science at the University of Richmond in 1957. He received the M.Ed. degree in school administration at the University of Virginia and the Ed.D. degree in educational administration at the University of Michigan.

Mr. Yankovich's career in the field of education began in the Henrico County schools as a teacher. He was appointed assistant superintendent of schools in Charlottesville in 1965.

He was awarded a fellowship in 1967 from the Mott Foundation in Educational Leadership and was appointed administrative intern in the Flint, Mich., school system.

Mr. Yankovich and his wife, Ann, are the parents of three children.

A reception for the graduates and their friends will be held in the Dodge Room immediately following commencement. No tickets will be necessary for either the commencement exercises or the reception.

Session at Exeter Sponsored by Law School

For the eighth year in a row, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law is sponsoring a summer session abroad at the University of Exeter in Exeter, England.

Eighty-seven second-year and third-year students from law schools all over the country, including five from Marshall-Wythe, are participating in the program. Four professors from the College have joined four English professors at the University of Exeter to comprise the faculty of eight for the session overseas.

Students are able to choose from electives and full credit is granted for each course chosen. Highlights of the program include planned excursions to various English courts and jails.

For the first time, students are being housed on the new part of Exeter's campus in LaFrowda Hall. Special arrangements in the dorm have allowed twenty wives to accompany their husbands during their studies in England; moreover, two families with children have also taken residence in LaFrowda Hall—another first in the history of the summer session.

Scheduled for six weeks, the program began July 3 and will end August 15.

Hazard Near the Hole

On the night of June 24, near a water hazard on the 12th hole of the Newport News Municipal Golf Course, a city ranger discovered the largest cottonmouth snake ever found in this area.

Because of its unusual size--10 pounds in weight, 53 inches in length and 4 inches in diameter--the poisonous snake was sent to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science for tests and observation. When the tests are complete, the snake will be shipped to Washington, D.C., for exhibition at the Smithsonian Institute.

Swem Staffer
Does Good Deed

Jeannie Barbrow at the Circulation Desk at Swem Library is finding that it is sometimes hard to be a good samaritan.

A senior biology major from Saltville, Va., Jeannie befriended a young robin that had fallen from the nest. About two days old, the tiny bird had to be fed constantly a diet of dog food, raisins and blackberries. There is an acute shortage of earthworms in the area, Jeannie reports. The constant diet was not only to build up the youngster's strength but also to keep him a quiet and reasonable companion. Mitchell Byrd, chairman of the Biology Department, helped Jeannie monitor his progress.

Force feeding with tweezers and an eyedropper have developed a lively "Christopher Robin," who "eats like a horse" and is becoming a "pesky nuisance."

Christopher is flying now and should be on his way in about another week - Jeannie hopes.

Students Innovate Thesis Project

Rosalie Perry

Three graduate students recently completed their master's degree requirements in special education in an unusual manner - they directed a five-week summer camp for children at Fort Eustis.

Rosalie Perry, who lives on base with her husband, and Ann Coker and Oma Gail Simmons, both of Newport News, will receive their master's degrees this month. Last spring they approached the Child Care and Readiness Council at Ft. Eustis, a group of officers and NCO's, with the idea of holding a camp for base children. "They were very amenable to the idea and were most helpful to us," said Mrs. Perry. The Council, which sponsors the day care center and pre-kindergarten on base, provided funds, a bus, and the use of the base nursery facility for the camp. Louis P. Messier, associate professor of education, served as faculty advisor for the camp.

The camp was composed of 11 children, both boys and girls, ages 8-11. They were referred to the William and Mary students by an area school principal who suggested children he thought might benefit from such an experience.

The camp was designed to help children having social adjustment problems in school. Army children often have difficulties unique to many youngsters, explained Mrs. Perry. Their families move around a lot and many of the children have trouble adjusting to new schools and situations. Some are shy and have trouble making friends; others who may have come into a new classroom in the middle of the year may have adjustment problems too.

The camp was mainly field-trip oriented. Bus trips were taken to Williamsburg, Jamestown, the Mariners and Peninsula Museums, as well as a tour of the base at Ft. Eustis. Other activities were aimed at developing physical and educational skills. Arts and crafts sessions were held; children were instructed in painting, sandcasting, paper-mache, macrame, and even learned a little cooking.

Participants were asked to keep a daily journal. They would write about what they had seen or done that day. Sometimes a child would read his journal or diary out loud. Some found the writing very laborious, but others really seemed to enjoy keeping a record of their activities, said Mrs. Perry.

The idea behind the journal, she explained, stems from the Language Experience Approach, now widely used as an alternative approach to teaching reading to elementary school children. The belief is that a child can be taught to read by first talking about his experiences, and then learning to write them down, rather than picking up a book and trying to decipher the words. Using this approach, the child sees and learns that what he says can be written down.

Teaching cookery to children is a good example of how the Language Experience Approach can be implemented, observed Mrs. Perry. In addition to being able to create something, the child develops reading skills from learning to read the recipe; mathematical skills by learning about measurements; responsibility by learning that he must clean up when he is through; and the idea of sharing by offering what he has made to others. "The cooking sessions were among our most successful activities," she said.

"On the whole we were quite pleased with the camp," she stated. "It proved successful for many of the children, and we saw improvement in most of them in the areas of making friends, accepting responsibility, taking initiative, and becoming more self-assertive."
