

College States Position On Proposed New Law Building

The following position paper concerning William and Mary's proposed new law building has been presented to Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., to key members of the General Assembly, and to friends of the College for their background information.

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law is the source of much of Virginia's finest legal heritage. Part of the College of William and Mary, chartered in 1693, the Law School traces its history to the creation of a Professorship in Law and Police by resolution of the Board of Visitors of the College on December 4, 1779. The Professorship of Law and Police was part of a major revision curriculum attributed to the influence of Thomas Jefferson, then Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia and a member of the Board of Visitors. The first chair of law at the College, held by George Wythe, is the oldest in the United States.

In recent decades the Law School has passed through several successive phases: from a very small entity in the early part of the 20th century, it emerged into a school of moderate size and good repute; and from a school of moderate size and intermediate standing in the 1940's and early 1950's, it has now become a fine legal institution with a reputation of earned quality.

THRESHOLD

Since its re-incorporation as a School of Law in 1954, Marshall-Wythe's fundamental aim has been to provide high quality legal education for citizens of the Commonwealth. As the Law School has matured during this period, its obligations in providing legal education have expanded. These developments, however, have not gone hand in hand.

Free B-ball Tickets Again Being Given College Employees

William and Mary employees responded so enthusiastically to the offer of free basketball tickets for themselves and for one guest to two games played in December, that the College will repeat its offer on Monday, Jan. 20.

Complimentary tickets for the St. Mary's game, which begins at 7:30 p.m. at W&M Hall, may be obtained at the Personnel Office, James Blair 201.

Earlier this season the Dec. 21 and 30 basketball games were designated "Employees' Nights" by President Graves "as a token of the esteem and appreciation of the College community for our employees."

Over 500 complimentary tickets were issued for those games, the Personnel Office reported.

The Indians won both games, edging Wake Forest, 59-58, and defeating Columbia University, 75-63.

Post Focuses On Sports Policy

President Graves' athletic policy, unanimously approved in November by the Board of Visitors, may be the prototype plan for other colleges and universities to follow.

This is the view of Bob James, Commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference, quoted in an extensive article on athletic financing in the January 3 Washington Post. The article, while focusing on Dr. Graves' recommendations to the Board, included comments from other universities around the nation which face similar financing problems.

James said, of the William and Mary plan, that it "may be the prototype of future athletic programs. Eventually, all football programs may be told, 'you can exist on whatever level you can support with your own income. But we aren't going to give you any financial help.'"

The William and Mary plan establishes a four-year "grace period" for intercollegiate athletics to become completely self-supporting from revenues and contributions.

It will be recalled that the Law School crossed a threshold when its present facility was modified for occupancy in 1968. It is now at another threshold.

In 1968, the old William and Mary Library was remodeled for law. The accommodations were well suited for the modest size of the student body. In 1968-1969, the student body enrollment totalled 190 students; the entering class totalled 75 students.

Coincident with the move into the existing facility, however, there occurred a sudden, massive growth in law school student demand. This demand was nation-wide, and it was felt acutely throughout Virginia. Almost immediately applications doubled, then tripled. The Law School found itself in the position of turning away students whose qualifications were as good as those the Law School was accepting.

In an effort to be as responsive as possible to unforeseen changes in demand, the Law School made the decision in 1971 virtually to double its enrollment. Beginning in 1971, entering classes of 150 students have been admitted. Despite improvement in the quality of the Law School program, the expansion in enrollment since 1971 has produced severe and untimely strains on the Law School's continuing capacity to remain in its present facility.

Home of James Monroe Bequeathed to W&M

Ash Lawn, once the home of President James Monroe, has been left to his alma mater, the College of William and Mary, by the late Jay Winston Johns of Charlottesville, it was announced Saturday.

Mr. Johns, who died Dec. 23, had owned the 600 acre estate near Charlottesville since 1930. His will also provided that his collection of the papers of Monroe, his Charlottesville residence, and the bulk of his estate go to William and Mary.

In responding to the gift, President Graves said, in part: "Mr. Johns has uniquely honored the College of William and Mary by this act of great generosity and sense of his appreciation for the College's rich history and modern quality. On behalf of the William and Mary family, I want to express our gratitude for this honor..."

"The gift of his collection of the papers of James Monroe is a significant addition to the College's nationally recognized holdings of the papers and manuscripts of many of Monroe's contemporaries. We shall designate this gift 'The Jay Winston Johns Collection of James Monroe Papers' in perpetual memory of the College's benefactor."

Ash Lawn

James Monroe, who attended the College from 1774 until the outbreak of the Revolution in 1776, built Ash Lawn's original wing in 1796-99. It is believed that Thomas Jefferson designed Ash Lawn.

Monroe and his family occupied the home for 26 years. It is said that he rode on horseback from Ash Lawn to Washington for his inauguration as fifth president of the United States.

The early rear wing was supplemented by a new front section built in the 19th century by the family which purchased Ash Lawn in 1825 from President Monroe, who was then retired in Loudoun County.

A main feature of the estate is the oval boxwood garden, considered one of the most beautiful in the nation. It was planned and planted by Mr. Monroe, apparently designed after gardens he had seen during his term as Minister to France.

In bequeathing Ash Lawn to the College, Mr. Johns expressed the hope that it be kept open for public visitation as it had since he had been its owner.

President Graves stated that "the College will, in the weeks and months ahead, explore the most appropriate steps to take in order to try to be responsive to Mr. Johns' cherished dream that his beloved Ash Lawn would remain an

College Women's Club Schedules Lecture

Thomas E. Thorne, professor of fine arts, will give a lecture and slide presentation entitled "Old Williamsburg" for members of the College Women's Club on January 8.

Mr. Thorne's presentation, which will include many interesting and humorous stories about the College and the community, will be held in the second floor lecture room in Andrews Hall at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Richard Newman is the hostess.

Publishing Scholarship Applications Due

Applications for the William Cross Ferguson '16 Graduate Scholarship in Publishing are now being accepted.

The scholarship is intended to assist recent graduates who are seeking a career in publishing, with a grant to cover tuition and other costs for a current senior or a recent William and Mary graduate to attend the prestigious Publishing Procedures Course held at Radcliffe College each summer.

The scholarship is an outgrowth of a gift to the College from Walter F. C. Ferguson in honor of his brother, William Cross Ferguson, which in 1970 established the Ferguson Seminar in Publishing.

William Cross Ferguson, a William and Mary graduate, class of 1916, had a long career in book publishing and became president of the World Book Company.

Applications for the Ferguson scholarship may be obtained from the office of the Dean of Undergraduate Program, 217 James Blair Hall. Applications must be returned by February 17.

Virginia Intern Program Competition Begins

William and Mary undergraduate and graduate students are eligible to compete for one of the five positions in Virginia's Commonwealth Intern Program for 1975-76.

Participants in the program are provided an opportunity to view state government activities from an administrative intern's vantage point. Each intern selects two or more assignments of several months duration in central staff and line agencies, such as the Division of Personnel, the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, and the Division of State Planning and Community Affairs.

The year's training qualifies participants for mid-level administrative assignments in a variety of fields.

For additional information contact the Placement Office, Ext. 605.

Dispatcher Relocated

Mr. Alton Wynn, dispatcher for pool vehicles, has been relocated from the Post Office in Old Dominion Hall to the Purchasing Office, Room 203, James Blair Hall. His new telephone extensions are 215 and 279.

Paragraph E, "Utilization of State and Personal owned Automobiles," on pages one and two of the Administrative Procedures manual should be amended to reflect this change.

W&M Named Bicentennial Community

The College has become one of the first in the nation to be named a Bicentennial Community by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

Recognition of William and Mary as an official Bicentennial Community was extended by the ARBA after it reviewed the College's Bicentennial program with the theme "Alma Mater of a Nation," just after Christmas.

The ARBA first extended Bicentennial Community recognition to the University of Alabama early in November, and then began accepting applications from other colleges and universities. Along with Alabama and William and Mary, the University of Missouri at Columbia has been given ARBA recognition.

W&M Now Official Participant

The action makes William and Mary part of the official national Bicentennial commemoration and entitles the College to use the national Bicentennial symbol in its projects and programs. Plans are being made for presentation of a Bicentennial Flag and official certificate to the College at its February 8 Charter Day convocation, which recognizes the 282nd anniversary of the Royal Charter granted by King William III and Queen Mary II.

Application Submitted

Mr. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., College President, and Ross Weeks, Jr., College Bicentennial Committee chairman, submitted William and Mary's application for Bicentennial Community designation early in December. It was endorsed by the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission.

The William and Mary application noted that dozens of early American political leaders were educated at the College, leading the College to adopt "The Alma Mater of a Nation" as its Bicentennial theme.

Swem Announces Acquisitions

Approximately 85 recordings have been acquired by the audio-visual department of Swem Library. The majority of these recordings are of classical compositions and stage plays.

Included among the new additions to the record collection are the complete works of Rachmaninoff, complete symphonies of Tchaikovsky, and concertos and symphonies of Handel, Schubert, Bartok, Bizet, Dvorak, Franck, and Scarlatti. Stage plays include: Billy Budd, Anyone Can Whistle, Irene, and Flower Drum Song.

All of these recordings are available for use in the listening room on the ground floor of Swem Library.

Primary Source Materials

A collection of primary data, mostly ethnographic in nature and covering many of the world's cultures, has also been purchased. The collection will be available for use in the library spring semester.

The materials, on microfiche, are from the Outline of Cultural Materials and Outline of World Cultures, an annual series of primary source materials and research aids relating to human behavior, social life and culture. They cover the period 1958-63, and include such subject areas as geography, human biology, demography, sociology, anthropology, government and education.

A broadly representative Bicentennial Committee has worked since December, 1972 on planning and implementing a program of participation in the anniversary of the Revolutionary War era. Among major projects and activities are:

--Publication in 1976 of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge-William and Mary in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries," by Mr. J. E. Morpurgo, professor of English at the University of Leeds, England, which is the first full-length historical treatment of the College ever to be written and published. The volume is the first in a series of works intended to cover the College's overall history and development.

--Establishment in August of an Oral History Project, to be carried out over two years to record a contemporary archival history of the College and Virginia higher education.

--Completion and publication, in November, of the first volume of The Papers of John Marshall. The Papers of John Marshall is a research and publications project which will produce a total of ten volumes during the Bicentennial Era. Marshall took his legal studies at William and Mary, and the present project is the first full effort to publish all of his existing papers.

--Presentation of Bicentennial Medallions by the Society of the Alumni to individuals who have assisted the College, as well as to special guests during the Bicentennial era. The first were presented to Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Lieutenant Governor John Dalton and Virginia Chief Justice Lawrence I'Anson, all alumni, at Homecoming in October, as well as to President Graves.

--The convening in December, 1976 of the 200th anniversary meeting of Phi Beta Kappa, founded here by William and Mary students.

--Planning for an innovative, nationally important law center which would merge the Marshall-Wythe School of Law with the new National Center for State Courts in a number of common programs. The National Center will break ground during 1975 on its permanent headquarters on College-leased land, and the College is now preparing architectural plans for an adjacent new building for the law school, which will be 200 years old in 1979.

--Student attention is focusing on a proposed "Bicentennial Fortnight" of academic and social activities in 1976, in commemoration of the Revolution.

Layman's Guide to State Law Is Marshall-Wythe Project

Virginia is soon to become the second state in the nation with a comprehensive statement on the laws of the state, written for the non-lawyer by a special task force at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

The Layman's Guide to Virginia Law is being prepared to equip the citizen with a knowledge of the rights and remedies provided by Virginia law. It is slated to include analysis of the basic areas of state law, including property, taxes and estate planning.

The guide will also feature a special chapter on women's rights law compiled as a project of the Mary and William Society, the Marshall-Wythe Law School's female law association.

Janet Brown, a second-year law student from Williamsburg and director of the task force for the Layman's Guide, stated that the framework for the publication will consist of a statement of the law in Virginia, specific examples of the law in action, and a general discussion of the principles of the particular area of the law.

The project received its impetus from Mr. William F. Swindler, currently on leave at the University of Oklahoma Law School. A research group at Oklahoma undertaking the compilation of the first layman's guide to the laws of a state has received the encouragement and financial support of the American Bar Association.

In October, acting on the proposal of Swindler, the Marshall-Wythe Student Bar Association began to organize a research group for the study of Virginia law, seeking the assistance of those law students of second- and third-year standing who have developed an expertise in legal writing.

After studying the guide produced at Oklahoma, the Marshall-Wythe task force will attempt to present a descriptive and an analytical study that is both understandable and usable.

Association Approves W&M Business School

The School of Business Administration was recently named to the list of accredited business schools recognized by the Business Graduates Association Limited in the United Kingdom.

To receive approval from the Business Graduates Association, William and Mary's Business School satisfied five specific requirements. Accredited schools must be able to award degrees, must have been providing a master's course for at least three years, must have graduated at least 50 people, and must have a prominent faculty staff of at least eight.

In addition, qualified business schools must offer a general course which compares favourably with the leading business schools elsewhere throughout the world.

The track record of graduates is also an important factor in approval by the Business Graduates Association.

Schedules Given For January

Swem Library

Swem Library will observe the following hours during the semester examination period, Jan. 6-17:

Monday-Friday: 8 a.m. - 12 midnight
Saturday: 9 a.m. - 12 midnight
Sunday: 1 p.m. - 12 midnight

Through Jan. 11, the three seminar rooms located on the ground floor will remain open until midnight for group study.

The reserve room will remain open as a study hall until 1 a.m. through Jan. 11. All other areas of the library will close at midnight.

During the interim period, Jan. 18-26, library hours will be:

Monday-Friday: 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday: 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.
Sunday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.

Student Health Center

During the semester break, Jan. 18-23, the Student Health Center will maintain office hours in the afternoons only, from 2-5 p.m.

The Center will be open as usual during the rest of the month.

Campus Center

The Campus Center will close evenings at 11 during the exam period, Jan. 6-17. Otherwise, both the Campus Center and Wigwam will maintain their regular hours in January.

Adair Pool

The schedule for Adair Pool this month is as follows:

Jan. 6-17: Open daily, 3-5 p.m.
Jan. 18-23: Closed.
Jan. 24: Regular schedule resumes.

School of Business Administration Receives Gift

RB Presidential Search Underway

More than 170 persons have submitted their credentials to the search committee responsible for recommending a permanent president for Richard Bland College, Petersburg. Deadline for submissions was Dec. 21.

The applicants come from around the nation and as far away as Nairobi and Singapore, according to Miss Ann Dobie Peebles of Carson, chairman of the committee. She is a member of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary, which is Richard Bland College's parent institution.

Members of the committee reviewed the applications and credentials during the holiday season. Selected applicants will be invited to meet with the committee after Richard Bland reopens in mid-January.

Miss Peebles said the interview process will involve members of the Richard Bland faculty, administration, student body and alumni, as well as the larger community of which the college is a part.

She said the committee hopes to make its recommendation to the Board of Visitors by early spring. The search committee has been asked to submit three nominees for final consideration by the Board.

The search committee was established in September, after the Board reviewed Richard Bland's recent progress and had assurances that earlier uncertainties about its future had been largely removed. The college's first president, Colonel James M. Carson, retired in August, 1973; since then, Dr. Cornelis Laban has been acting president.

Evening College Registration Begins

Registration for Evening College classes is now in progress. During the spring semester 15 arts and sciences courses and the entire schedule of graduate education courses will be offered.

Paul Clem, director of the Evening College, recommends that all interested persons register by mail by January 24. Registration forms can be obtained by contacting the Evening College office, James Blair 112.

Late registration will be held Tuesday, Jan. 28, from 6:30 - 8 p.m. in James Blair Hall. Although several spring courses will be taught at the Virginia Associated Research Campus in Newport News, registration for all courses must be made through the Evening College office in Williamsburg.

Tuition is $33 per semester hour for undergraduate courses and $38 per semester hour for graduate courses. Classes begin on Thursday, Jan. 30, and continue for 15 weeks.

Course subjects in arts and sciences include economics, English, geology, government, history, mathematics, modern languages, psychology and sociology.

GED Tests Scheduled

General Educational Development (GED) tests will be given to interested Williamsburg and James City County residents on Jan. 17 and 18.

The tests are for those who have not graduated from high school. Persons successfully completing the tests are given a certificate by the State Department of Education. Most employers and colleges accept the certificate in place of a high school diploma.

Appointments for completing applications for the GED tests must be made with George C. Pitts, local administrator, at the Williamsburg-James City County School Board office, 112 Cary Street, or phone 229-6432.

All applicants must register by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 10.

Special Programs

Courses Offered

Courses on the Federal Income Tax for Individuals and on Computer Programming are being offered by the College's Office of Special Programs.

Designed to provide the layman with an elementary understanding of individual tax principles, the 8 week tax course will enable persons to prepare their own tax returns and to take advantage of legitimate tax-saving aspects of the tax law.

The computer course, for computer programmers, is an introduction to systems programming. Topics to be discussed in the one week course include the use and implementation of assemblers, macros, loaders, compilers and operating systems.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Office of Special Programs at the Virginia Associated Research Campus, 12070 Jefferson Avenue, Newport News, phone 877-9231, ext. 200.

Bicentennial Lecture Scheduled At Bland

The second lecture in a Bicentennial series sponsored by the department of history at Richard Bland College will be given at Richard Bland on January 14.

Mr. Henry Magaziner, A.I.A., Regional Historical Architect for the National Park Service, Mid-Atlantic Region, will speak on "Recycling the Downtown for Historical Usage" at 7:30 p.m. in Ernst Hall.

Mr. Magaziner, a noted leader in the field of restoration of historic buildings and urban planned redevelopment, is currently developing plans for the historic restoration of the central part of Gettysburg, Pa.

The Bicentennial series is aimed at bringing in speakers who can develop ideas and plans to be followed by local historical and governmental groups in organizing the Bicentennial in the Petersburg area. Ideas are presented that can lead to the development of plans for the preservation of historic buildings and sites in the area.

Campus Exhibits

Selections from the Alice Aberdeen Collection of Oriental Craftwork and Art - Botetourt Museum, Swem Library; Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.; ends February 28.

Security Log

- Dec./15/2:30 p.m. Two suspicious persons reported in DuPont Hall. Individuals identified by R.A., transported to Campus Security Office, issued trespass warnings and escorted off-campus.
- Dec./16/1:21 a.m. Man seen breaking and entering into Barrett Hall through bathroom window. Thorough search of Barrett failed to locate subject. Special watch stationed at Barrett for remainder of the night, and Barrett R.A. advised to fill out an immediate work order for a heavy window screen.
- Dec./16/7:25 a.m. Man arrested near Morton Hall and charged with theft of the Morton Hall R.C. Cola machine. City magistrate responded to Campus Security call, and trial date set.
- Dec./17/11 a.m. Stolen '67 Dodge recovered in Fraternity Complex parking lot and returned to owner.
- Dec./17/9:10 p.m. Cheatham Annex sailor detained on suspicion of being Peeping Tom. Witnesses from two earlier incidents failed to identify subject, who was then released. Naval Supply Military Police notified of subject's detention.
- Dec./19/11:50 p.m. Coed reported attempted indecent exposure in Swem Library. Incident under further investigation.
- Jan./3/7 a.m. Fire reported in the Circle K cottage. Williamsburg Fire Department extinguished the blaze by 7:45 a.m. No one was hurt.
- The following items have been reported stolen and are under further investigation:
- Dec./11/1:20 p.m. Beige coat valued at $200 from Commons.
- Dec./13/4:15 p.m. One Texas Instruments Calculator from Millington Hall; serial number, SR500070668.
- Dec./13/10:45 p.m. Two Chevy hub caps from car while parked in the Williamsburg Shopping Center or by Bryan-Complex.
- Dec./15/8:05 p.m. Sears console radio-tape player combination from the Colonial Echo Office.
- Dec./16/3:25 p.m. Sears 10-speed bike from outside Pi Lambda Phi House; Williamsburg Tag No. 3333.
- Dec./16/4 p.m. Four chrome hub caps from '69 Chevy Impala parked in W&M Hall parking lot.
- Dec./17/4:30 p.m. Raleigh Grand Prix 10-speed bicycle from outside stairwell of Sigma Alpha Epsilon House.

Dartmouth Professor Next Speaker in Series

Dennis L. Meadows, an authority recognized for his work on the long term consequences of economic and population growth, world food shortages, pollution and natural resources, will be the next speaker in the "Our Future in the Cosmos" series jointly sponsored by the College and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Mr. Meadows, who is currently serving as professor of business and engineering at Thayer School of Engineering, Dartmouth College, will speak Monday, January 13, at 8 p.m. in Hampton High School.

The lecture, "Preparing for Life on a Steady State Earth," is part of an "everyman" approach of the series and is for the lay public. There is no admission charge. Due to the limited capacity of the auditorium, however, admission will be by ticket only. These will be distributed on a first come, first served basis and may be obtained by calling the College's Office of Special Programs at the Virginia Associated Research Campus in Newport News, phone 877-9231.

Mr. Meadows' talk will reflect on some of the findings and conclusions which have resulted from his studies of models of world dynamics.

The results of these studies have been published in a number of books, the most well known being The Limits to Growth. Mr. Meadows will address some of the issues which were raised in that book, and also in his other works, Towards Global Equilibrium; Collected Papers and The Dynamics of Growth in a Finite World.

Mr. Meadows

Service Club Commended

The Circle K Club has received national recognition for their outstanding service with the Chickahominy project.

A resolution citing the club for its work was passed at the meeting of the Board of Officers of Circle K International, Oct. 20, in St. Louis.

The project involves a large number of William and Mary student volunteers working on a one-to-one basis with the residents of the Chickahominy area. Students operate a preschool, tutoring programs for elementary school children and a senior citizens program. The service club has sponsored the Chickahominy project during the past five years.

Students interested in participating in Circle K projects should contact the Circle K office, ext. 578.

W&M Physicists Given NSF Grant

A team of William and Mary physicists have been awarded a grant for $155,000 from the National Science Foundation to continue research on "exotic atoms" and muon physics.

College physics professors Morton Eckhause, John R. Kane, Robert T. Siegel and Robert E. Welsh will direct a research project to study interactions of antiproton with proton, a relationship which could have cosmological importance in the theories of the universe's beginning. A repulsive interaction between the two particles might help explain the separation of matter and anti-matter in a "big bang" origin of the universe.

Entitled "Experiments on the Interactions of Muons, Kaons, Antiprotons and Sigma Hyperons," the research project will be partially conducted at the William and Mary Space Radiation Effects Laboratory (SREL) operated for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Newport News. SREL also receives financial support from the National Science Foundation.

The Kaon-proton and antiproton-proton reactions will be studied at the Brookhaven National Laboratory Synchrotron.

The grant will enable the William and Mary team to continue research which has already received grants from the National Science Foundation totaling $180,000 over the last two years.

Colin R. Cox and A. Minick Rushton, two research associates at the College, and William and Mary electronics engineer William Vulcan will also conduct research supported by the grant. National Science Foundation funds will pay for five graduate assistants and scientific equipment needed for the project.

Development Office

National Science Foundation - Faculty Fellowships in Science Applied to Societal Problems

Deadline reminder: February 7; one application set is available in the Sponsored Programs Office.

NATO Advanced Study Institutes - summer 1975

NSF will award travel grants to about 90 young U.S. scientists to attend some 40 Institutes in Europe during the summer of 1975. The Institutes, of two-three weeks duration, provide highly advanced instruction on scientific topics in the physical, life and social sciences, and in mathematics. Junior faculty and advanced graduate students are eligible.

A list of NATO Institutes will be available in February in the Sponsored Programs Office.

Smithsonian Institution - Postdoctoral and Predoctoral Fellowships

Awards are offered for research, training and study at the Smithsonian in consultation with the Institution's professional staff in the following areas: American art, American history and material culture, biological sciences, physical sciences, anthropology, and the history of science and technology.

Stipends: $5000 for dissertation fellowships; $10,000 for postdoctoral scholars.

Deadlines: postdoctoral: Jan. 15; predoctoral: March 15.

Application forms are available in the Sponsored Programs office.

The Mitchell Prize

A new biennial awards program "to encourage international research and debate on problems inherent in the transition from growth to equilibrium of population, material consumption, and energy use" has recently been announced.

Authors of winning papers will receive the awards at a conference next October sponsored by the Club of Rome, the University of Houston, and the Mitchell Energy and Development Corporation. 1975 awards will be: $10,000, first prize; $6000, second; $3000, third; and $1000, fourth.

Deadline: Jan. 31.

Applications from: Limits to Growth '75, 5645 South Woodlawn Ave., Chicago, Ill., 60637.

National Science Foundation - Ethical and Human Values Implications of Science and Technology Programs

The manager of this program has announced the following activities as eligible for support consideration:

- research
- conferences and seminars
- course and curriculum development
- activities involving both education and research

Proposals should focus on value systems inherent in science and/or technology and/or the impact of external value systems on science and/or technology.

Pre-proposals are encouraged. No deadlines; processing takes four to six months.

National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences - Research Grants

This is a new program designed to elucidate and predict the health effects of pollutants and other potentially hazardous by-products of combustions. Six priority areas of investigation have been developed.

Deadlines: Feb. 1, June 1, Oct. 1.

For further information contact: Dr. Robert G. Owens, Extramural Programs, National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, NIH, P.O. Box 12233, Research Triangle Park, North Carolina, 27709. Tel: (919) 549 - 8411, Ext., 3358.

Personnel Bulletin

Tax Forms/Information

A limited number of Federal and State Income Tax Forms are available at the College Personnel Office.

Persons desiring specific information on Federal Income Tax matters may do so by calling the following toll-free number: 800-552-9500.

Information on State Income Tax matters may be obtained by calling 229-1626 or 229-2911.

Rule on Secondary Jobs

Rule 9.4 for the Administration of the Virginia Personnel Act is quoted for the information of all permanent classified employees:

"9.4 EMPLOYMENT OUTSIDE OF THE SERVICE

No employee shall engage in any other employment, nor in any private business, nor in the conduct of a profession, during the hours for which he is employed to work for the State, nor outside such hours in a manner or to an extent that affects or is deemed likely to affect his usefulness as an employee of the Commonwealth. It is incumbent on the appointing authority to see that employees are advised of this requirement and to take appropriate action to insure compliance with this rule."

Classified employees who wish to engage in employment in addition to their State jobs may do so, provided that it will not interfere with their State employment, and such employment is with the written approval of their supervisor. A copy of the supervisor's approval must be forwarded to the College Personnel Office for review, and it will be filed with the employee's personnel records.

Benefits Statements

In January, 1974, more than 60,000 permanent full-time employees of the State were given personalized statements of their 1973 benefits. Since employee response was quite favorable, the Governor authorized that the program be continued and that reports be issued to employees covering their 1974 benefits.

Provided they are received in time, the 1974 benefits statements will be distributed with employee paychecks on Jan. 16. If not, they will be distributed on the next regular payday.

FACULTY NEWS

ANTHROPOLOGY

Mario D. Zamora, visiting professor, is co-author with E. Redmount of "Rural Peoples' Responses to Change" to appear in Reviews in Anthropology. His review of Dapen Liang's book Philippine Parties and Politics was published in Asian Forum. He is co-organizer/co-editor with M. Onorato, California State U., of bicentennial papers on American Contributions to the Third World: The Philippines to be discussed in the Association for Asian Studies annual meeting in San Francisco in March. His paper and abstract on "The Department Chairman: A Cross-Cultural Role Definition" was included in the program of the American Anthropological Association in Mexico City, Nov. 19-25.

CHEMISTRY

Melvyn D. Schiavelli, associate professor, has been awarded an $11,000 grant from the Petroleum Research Fund, administered by the American Chemical Society, to continue his research on the chemical reactivity of allenes.

David W. Thompson, associate professor, recently presented a research seminar at the department of chemistry, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The title of the talk was "Metal Complexes of Cyanoacetylacetone with Unusual Structures."

ENGLISH

Professor Carl Dolmetsch's review of Serpent in Eden: H. L. Mencken and the South, by Fred C. Hobson, Jr. (North Carolina, 1974) appeared in the December, 1974 issue of The Journal of American History, pp. 823-25.

GOVERNMENT

A meeting of the Virginia Political Science Association held Dec. 7 at Virginia Commonwealth University was attended by ten members of the department of government and a number of graduate students.

Richard Damon, assistant professor; Chonghan Kim, professor, and Alan Ward, associate professor, read papers at panel meetings and George Grayson, associate professor, and Jack Edwards, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, were among the discussants.

Associate Professor Donald J. Baxter's review of Indonesia after the 1971 Elections, Oey Hong Lee, Ed., a collection of essays published by the Oxford University Press, appears in the November issue of Perspective.

HISTORY

On Dec. 5, Richard Maxwell Brown, professor, delivered a guest lecture on "Violence in the 1960's" at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., in a history course on "Turbulence and Change in American History."

Professor Carlyle Beyer served as a member of the Virginia Committee of Selection for the Rhodes Scholarship meeting in Richmond, Dec. 17 and 18.

MODERN LANGUAGES

Vickie A. Babenko, assistant professor, attended the meeting of the American Association for Teachers of Slavic and Eastern European Languages in New York, Dec. 27-30.

Mark G. Littlefield, assistant professor, has published A Bibliographical Index of Romance Philology, Volume I-XXV, University of California Press, November 1974, with a foreword by Yakov Malkiel.

PHYSICS

Several members of the physics department attended the American Physical Society meeting in Atlanta, Dec. 5-7.

Arden Sher, professor, chaired a session at the meeting entitled "Optical Techniques, Properties, and Band Theory."

Roy Champion, associate professor, also chaired a session at the meeting entitled "Atomic Collisions."

The following papers were presented at the meeting:

"Nuclear Pseudo-Dipolar and Exchange Interactions in Semiconductors," A. Sher and R. A. Breckenridge, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1119 (1974).

"Effect of Electron Correlations on the Bond-Orbital Model," Chuping Huang and Arden Sher, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1119 (1974).

"Electronic Density of States of Liquid Alloys," K. S. Chang, A. Sher, and G. Weisz, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1134 (1974).

"Strain Effect on the Electronic Density of States and dc Electrical Conductivity of Disordered Binary Alloys," H. C. Hwang, A. Sher, and C. Gross, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1134 (1974).

" $\mu^+$  Precession in Solids," W. J. Kossler, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1123 (1974).

"Density of States of Metal Alloys - ATA and IATA Scheme," H. C. Hwang and A. Sher, Bull. Am. Phys. Soc. 19, 1134 (1974).

PSYCHOLOGY

Ellen F. Rosen, associate professor, Linda C. Petty and Kathleen C. Westlake presented a paper, "Effects of Sex Hormones and Cervical Probing on Response to Nociceptive Stimulation," at the 15th annual meeting of the Psychonomic Society in Boston, Nov. 21-23. Ms. Petty, who received her M.A. in psychology at William and Mary, is now a doctoral candidate in Virginia Commonwealth University and a member of the psychology department at Hampton Institute. Ms. Westlake is a graduate student in psychology. On the way to the Psychonomic meeting, Ms. Rosen toured the laboratories of Dr. David Pfaff at Rockefeller University, New York.

Virgil V. McKenna, professor, and Willafay H. McKenna, law student, attended a planning meeting Nov. 15-16 in Blacksburg, in preparation for the 1975 regional conference of Danforth Associates. They have been selected as 1975-76 co-chairpersons for the region which encompasses Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D. C.

Barbara B. Keller, graduate student, and Jay L. Chambers, professor, have had the paper, "Motivation factors in organized student group participation" accepted for publication in the Journal of College Student Personnel. Ms. Keller presented this paper, which is derived from her senior honors thesis at the College, at the annual conference of the Virginia Association of Student Personnel Administrators in Williamsburg, Dec. 6.

SOCIOLOGY

Wayne Kernodle, professor, delivered a lecture on "Sexuality and the Mental Patient" to the medical staff of Eastern State Hospital at its regular monthly meeting on Nov. 27.

Dr. M. H. Qureshi, Eastern State Hospital psychiatric staff, gave a lecture on "Cultural Aspects of Mental Illness in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh" to Professor Kernodle's Seminar on the Sociology of Mental Illness on Nov. 25.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

A recent issue of the C.F.A. Digest includes an abridgement of "The Role of Assumptions in Financial Forecasts," co-authored by Pieter T. Elgers. The original article appeared in the July, 1974, issue of the Journal of Accountancy.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

Eugene Edelman, assistant professor, presented a paper entitled "Teacher Knowledge of Phonics and Pupil Achievement in Reading," at the annual meeting of the National Reading Conference held in Kansas City, Dec. 2.

Donald R. Lashinger, associate professor, co-authored a study entitled "A Summary of Research Studies Related to Language Arts in Elementary Education: 1973," which is included in the November-December, 1974 issue of Elementary English.

Armand Galfo, professor, attended the sixth World-Wide Armed Forces Education Conference at the University of Maryland, Dec. 10-11. He served on a panel which discussed the role of education programs in career motivation.

Robert B. Bloom, assistant professor, has been appointed to a two-year term on the editorial board of the newly constituted Virginia Educational Research Journal.

MARSHALL-WYTHE SCHOOL OF LAW

William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law at the College, will speak in London January 8 on "America's Independence Bicentennial: A Constitutional Comment." He will then deliver a series of three lectures the following week to law students and faculty of the University of Exeter on the subject of "American Law: Principles and Issues."

The London lecture, to be given in Lincoln's Inn, will be under the auspices of the British Institute of International and Comparative Law, and will be open to members of the Inns of Court as well as the Royal Historical Society.

The Exeter lectures will be part of a series of special events during the current year in which the Exeter law faculty is commemorating the completion of its new facilities on the main university campus.

Stephen Paledes, Music Prof., Dies

Stephen P. Paledes, 54, associate professor of music, died Dec. 28 in Williamsburg Community Hospital after a long illness.

A member of the faculty since 1954, Mr. Paledes attended the Julliard School of Music, receiving B.A. and M.A. degrees from American University, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Paledes worked with the student group Backdrop Club in its productions and with the Williamsburg Players in several musicals. He also contributed original music for some theater department productions and was concert committee manager from 1964 to 1970.

He directed the "Common Glory" orchestra and was later musical director of the Common Glory from 1968 to 1973.

METROPOLITAN CRIMINAL JUSTICE CENTER

Malcolm Klein, professor and chairman of the department of sociology at the University of Southern California, and Harwin L. Voss, professor of sociology at the University of Kentucky, reviewed various aspects of their present research efforts at a seminar Dec. 9 arranged jointly by the Metropolitan Criminal Justice Center (MCJC) and the Marshall-Wythe Institute.

Professors Klein and Voss, nationally prominent for their work in the field of juvenile delinquency, were on campus to consult with MCJC staff on the design of the research to be conducted with a grant recently awarded the Center by the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice.

Charles W. Thomas, research director and adjunct associate professor of sociology, was in Atlanta Dec. 2-4 to consult with members of the staff at Georgia State University on a research project to be conducted at the Federal Penitentiary in Atlanta in conjunction with a National Institute of Mental Health grant that has been awarded to that university.

An article by Michael J. Miller, a research associate at VCU's Survey Research Center, and Mr. Thomas entitled "The Bureaucratization Process and Its Effects: A Simulation" has been published in Teaching Sociology 2 (October): 43-56.

College States Position On Proposed New Law Building

PRESENT NEEDS

The problems of the Law School include those of submarginal facilities, major library deficiencies, and an inadequate operating budget. Library space is a particularly severe problem. The Law School library collection is housed in three separate College buildings at the present time. All usable space is exhausted. The library collection, now at 80,000 volumes, and accumulating at a normal growth of 5,000 per year, will have to be at around 112,000 volumes by 1980. In terms of the library growth curve and also the number of sections of bookshelves required over a longer period of time, the picture is perhaps more graphic:

Library Growth		Year	Volumes (Est.)	Bookshelving Sections (Est.)*
Short Term		1974	80,000	452
		1980	112,000	2,252
Long Term		1987	152,000	3,050
		2002	258,000	5,160

The library problem is not one dimensional. The law library has grown to the extent that bookshelf space now competes for, and badly crowds, student study space. Four years ago, with an enrollment of 190 students in the Law School, approximately 90% of our students had library space available to them. Now, with a student enrollment of 450 students, only 38% of all law students can use the library at a given time.

If not solved, these problems will involve further consequences with Law School accreditation. On August 17, 1973, following a routine reinspection by the American Bar Association, the accrediting agency for American Law Schools, undertaken in cooperation with the Association of American Law Schools, a report was issued which identified problems caused by budgetary deficiencies and the lack of adequate study stations in the law library. Although it was recognized that Marshall-Wythe was attempting, as best it could within the limitations of its resources, to meet the increased and justified demands of increased enrollments, it was nonetheless given notice that improvements in the identified areas would have to be made in order to escape an accreditation default hearing.

While it may be expected that the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools will be reasonable in allowing Marshall-Wythe time to rectify its problems, it remains obvious that the deficiencies identified relate to the quality of legal education. Association of American Law School standards, for example, require that 65 percent of the student body be provided seats in the library at any given time. While attempts are being made to rectify temporarily our space problems, and while the 1974 session of the General Assembly provided significant relief in efforts to upgrade faculty salaries and increase staffing, it appears that student enrollment will have to be reduced in order to maintain the quality of our educational program unless an adequate facility is provided soon.

Since the needs of legal education at the Law School and the College cannot be divorced from the legal needs of the Commonwealth, the Law School and the College believe there exists a responsibility to the Commonwealth to bring to your attention, and to the attention of members of the General Assembly and others, a great new opportunity for legal education in Virginia.

*Ample expansion space is projected

PRESENT OPPORTUNITY

The decision of the National Center for State Courts to move its national headquarters to Williamsburg provides the Commonwealth of Virginia with a unique opportunity to enhance legal education in the State--if it is combined with a decision to house the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in a new building on the same tract of property.

The decision of the National Center to locate here is a fact of lasting importance to Virginia. In combination with the construction of a new law building at the appropriate time, it provides the Commonwealth with a way both to support the obligations it has undertaken for the National Center and to resolve the urgent educational needs of the Law School. It also provides the Law School and the College with a lifetime opportunity. A new center and a new building would help the Law School fulfill its obligations to quality legal education; provide a cohesive sense of how to go about solving pressures of accreditation; and provide the means for the Marshall-Wythe School of Law to bring about its full historical re-enfranchisement as a superior center of legal learning in Virginia and the Nation.

A GOOD CASE FOR LEGAL EDUCATION

The construction of a new building for the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, in conjunction with the building of the National Center for State Courts, amounts to a rare opportunity for legal education:

1. The decision of the National Center to locate in Williamsburg was in significant measure based on the existence here of a respected law school.

2. There are important interrelationships between students, faculty and judges that are expected to take place if the National Center and the Law School buildings are planned and built together. For example, jurists attracted to conferences can be expected to enrich the educational experiences of law students by lecturing to law classes. Faculty can be involved in conferences of the Center. Visiting judges, in need of local assistants, can use law student manpower thus enhancing placement and career contacts of law graduates of the College. Conversely, the Law School library will be of great value to the research activities of the National Center.

These relationships will be magnified because of the outstanding conference facilities in Williamsburg.

3. A new law building makes excellent sense for the Law School and the Commonwealth. It would enable the Law School to solve its needs without more educational patchwork. It would also enable the Law School to expand enrollment selectively from 450 to 600 students. This expansion should meet any demand that is anticipated. If an unexpected wave of student demand in law school admissions were to occur again at some point, the new building would be planned to deal with it. (In terms of library demand, the planned building accommodates forty years of growth.)
4. In view of the growing needs for continuing legal education in the State, a new building and a modestly expanded law program are important to the Law School's ability to increase its legal and public service to Virginia lawyers, particularly those in the Tidewater and Richmond areas. An example of continuing legal education is the well-known William and Mary Tax Conference, which annually provides lawyers with timely and factual information on current state and federal tax law, regulations, and procedures.
5. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Warren Burger, expressing a view shared by many, believes that the combination of the structures of the National Center for State Courts and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law will be--put simply--exceptional.

A GOOD ECONOMIC CASE

If a new law building for Marshall-Wythe makes excellent legal sense, it seems to make very sound economic sense also.

The College is deeply cognizant of the economic conditions, including falling revenues and fiscal uncertainties, that are now the primary business of the Governor and the General Assembly. Without discounting the financial problems bearing on the lack of building capital in the Commonwealth and elsewhere, we believe we have an obligation, in view of the need to continue to accommodate numbers of qualified Virginians wanting a legal education, to suggest that this need can be met most economically, in terms of both capital outlay and maintenance operations appropriations, through the expansion of existing facilities for law. We also believe we have a special obligation at this time to indicate some of the extraordinary factors that make the construction of a new law building, alongside of the National Center, an unusually sound economic move once resources permit it:

1. Because Marshall-Wythe is an established Law School, a new building for William and Mary that will accommodate 150 more students will involve significantly reduced costs in comparison to alternate ways of producing increased opportunities for legal education. More generally, it is believed that an investment in a new law building for Marshall-Wythe is small in comparison to the benefit to be derived by the citizens of the Commonwealth.
2. Any extensive renovation program, as opposed to a new building, would require the absorption of an adjacent classroom building at the College--probably Rogers Hall--and the additional renovation of the present Marshall-Wythe facility to accommodate extensive library growth over a number of years. This does not make maximum sense compared to the option of a new building on National Center grounds: it would be very expensive for relatively poor results; it would make the present facility no more than an immense stack tower, and again, within 6 to 10 years, inadequate; it would not put law in one building; and enrollment would continue to be pretty much fixed.
3. By the action of the General Assembly in 1974, planning money was voted for a law school building. This has been advantageous. As the National Center for State Courts has moved ahead with its plans, it has been possible to plan the proposed law building in conjunction with the Center. Concurrent planning has made it possible to promote concepts of architectural harmony and to produce net cost savings through the joint planning process.
4. Plans for the National Center for State Courts are sufficiently advanced, and funding is so close to being assured, that the Center may be considered a fact. It would be unfortunate, given the State's commitment to raise funds for the National Center, and the Center's anticipation that planning for the Law School building will soon involve construction of it, if concurrent planning and concurrent construction advantages, insofar as possible, could not continue.
5. With all construction projects, longer delays involve higher costs. Because the National Center and the proposed law building have been closely integrated to date, longer than necessary delays for this particular project may involve higher than average costs.

Continued

6. The possibility of a law school building has put new life into the Law School Association. The Law School Association has pledged $500,000 in private, supplementary operating support over the next decade. Arrangements made to provide faculty salary supplements from endowment funds are nearing completion. Law alumni Annual Giving, now totalling $45,000 yearly from 50% of the School's approximately 1,000 former students, has underwritten student loan opportunities and faculty research activities, and accelerated the development of a first-rate law library collection.

A COLLEGE PRIORITY

A new law building is the highest College priority. This fact has made it possible for the College to articulate, for the first time, a plan for the overall wise use of its space--both on an interim and long-term basis. Marshall-Wythe and Rogers Hall are the key spaces involved in relationship to the Law School. The contemplated space moves, which are dependent on the move of the Law School into its new building, will allow the College to use its space more productively than in the past and are consistent with and maximally responsive to the space guidelines of the State Council for Higher Education. (See Appendix.)

A COMMONWEALTH PRIORITY

The College hopes that the logic of a new law building, as a well-articulated College priority, makes good sense as a State priority, and that it will have as a State construction project the same priority it has had as a State planning project. We want to express the appreciation of the College, once again, for the 1974 action of the General Assembly in making a special appropriation for increased support of the Law School; and also, for the recent recommendation by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia, stating that "further progress should be made" (A State Council of Higher Education Report, December 3, 1974):

"The College of William and Mary is one of the outstanding undergraduate institutions in the United States. It has an old and respected law school. The Council recommends that the Commonwealth would do well to increase its support from a marginal level to one which will enable it to maintain its reputation as a strong law school of national stature. With this support, especially in constructing its new building, the law school at The College of William and Mary will be able to expand to almost double its present size should any unforeseen need for lawyers develop."

The Council concludes:

"... that the problems now facing the Marshall-Wythe School of Law can be remedied. ... In a time of financial exigency and increasing competition on the State's purse, it is clearly preferable to maintain and improve existing services in higher education and to increase where possible the entry-level access to higher education which clearly benefits far greater numbers of Virginians..."

The attitude of the State Council and the recent generousities of the General Assembly have been and are very welcome.

CONCLUSION

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the second oldest law school in the English-speaking world, is at a threshold. This threshold can be defined as the combination of an existing need and an existing opportunity, both of which happen to be present at the same time. The existing need, that of providing better facilities for the Law School, involves the removal of submarginal accreditation status and the lifting of the School's support to a point where it can continue to fulfill its mission of quality legal education. The existing opportunity, that of constructing a new law building to adjoin the National Center for State Courts as part of a new legal complex, involves a major thrust toward excellence in law in Virginia.

The Law School believes that its mission is to serve the Commonwealth of Virginia in legal education. The attempts in recent years to render this service have been effectively realized; but they have not been undertaken without large costs. Because of the costs, the conditions within the Law School have made the need for solutions to the problems of the Law School, in effect, an educational emergency. The solution, a new building, is both an educational opportunity and a fiscal opportunity.

APPENDIX

Presuming that little renovation will be needed for Marshall-Wythe Hall if Law moves to a new structure, it is planned that part of the faculty of the Department of English can be moved from the old fraternity lodges into Marshall-Wythe. This will put the English Department adjacent to its parent home, the Wren Building, and it will release presently residence space for badly needed student housing. Additionally, Marshall-Wythe is planned to contain the offices and library of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, and the Audio-Visual Center for the College. Both of these units are now housed in the Swem Library, which has serious space needs now, thus postponing a major capital outlay expenditure for the Library of the College.

Presuming that Rogers Hall will undergo complete renovation as planned, just as soon as possible after the Chemistry Department vacates Rogers in 1975 to occupy its new building, it is anticipated that the School of Business Administration, which is growing rapidly in its MBA Program, will occupy Rogers Hall. The occupation of Rogers by the School of Business Administration will allow for substantially more effective and efficient use of academic space in seriously crowded Jones Hall, where the Business School is now located. (In the event that there should be an unreasonable lapse of time between the point at which Rogers is vacated and the point at which it is finally renovated, the Psychological Service staff, the English Department faculty in the Lodges, laboratory space for Archaeology and the Southside Historical Sites Foundation, may be expected to relieve various points of pressure in the space inventory of the College.

Ad-Hoc Committee To Study Summer School, Evening College

The Report of Self-Study (pages 322-333, 476-477) contains a number of recommendations concerning both the Summer School and the Evening College at William and Mary. Many of these recommendations, as the Self-Study recognized, require further consideration and elaboration before implementing decisions can or should be made. Moreover, there are several important financial questions concerning both Summer School and Evening College which were addressed only tangentially in the Self-Study, but which must seriously be studied if both academic activities are to remain viable in a time of somewhat unpredictable enrollments and certain fiscal austerity.

To consider and make recommendations upon such concerns as were expressed in the Self-Study, and upon other matters related to the continued effectiveness of the Summer School and Evening College, at the request of the President I have appointed an ad-hoc committee, consisting of the following members of the Faculties:

Cecil M. McCulley, Professor of English, Chairman
 Robert C. Jones, Associate Professor and Associate Dean of the School of Education
 James N. McCord, Associate Professor of History
 Melvyn D. Schiavelli, Associate Professor of Chemistry
 Timothy J. Sullivan, Associate Professor and Associate Dean of the School of Law
 John B. Thomas, Assistant Professor of Geology
 William H. Warren, Associate Professor of Business Administration

The Committee has been asked to complete its work and submit its report by the end of the present academic year. It has been directed to concentrate its attention upon the following three broad areas of inquiry, but with the understanding that no aspect of the Summer School or Evening College is to be considered irrelevant to its study:

(1) Academic Program. A partial list of relevant concerns in this area would include the question of whether we are providing programs and courses adequate to the need and consistent with the broader educational mission of the College; whether different calendric arrangements might be made for both the Summer School and Evening College, so as to increase flexibility and to enhance educational programs; and whether present admissions policies and standards should be maintained or altered.

(2) Administration. A separate administration for the Evening College has been questioned by the Self-Study, as has its separate registration schedules. The role of the Department Chairman in relation to the operation of the Summer School evidently needs some clarification. The Self-Study also recommends that the relationship of the various College standing committees to the Summer School is somewhat unclear. The recommendation has also been made that there be a closer coordination between the Summer School administration and the Office of Student Affairs.

(3) Finance. Significant readjustment of salary schedules for instructors in the Summer School and Evening College was recommended by the Self-Study. Our recent policy of making firm contractual commitments to Summer School instructors, regardless of the enrollment in courses so contracted, has also been questioned. Such questions clearly need to be studied in the widest possible financial context, so that the best accommodations between individual compensation and institutional budget requirements can be made.

A study of this size and importance, if it is to be done fully and well, will require that the knowledge, experience, and opinions of many persons be sought and carefully considered. I am sure that the Committee members can count on everyone's cooperation, as they seek from many of us in the Faculty, the student body, and the administration the facts and ideas needed to determine how we might sustain and improve our Summer and Evening academic programs.

Memo from Dean Livingston

Status Of Buckley Amendment

The November 26 issue of the William and Mary News carried the text of Public Law 93-380, better known as the Buckley Amendment. The law, concerning student access to personal records, became effective November 19, 1974. The law's current provisions allow for a considerable variety of interpretations. This ambiguity has resulted in numerous objections to the law, and recently Congress passed and sent to President Ford several amendments, attached to a bill for a White House Conference on Library and Information Sciences.

At this writing it is uncertain whether President Ford will sign or veto the bill. Whichever action the President takes will require new, but in either case, very different policies and procedures. Since it would be unwise at this time for the College to formulate new policy on this matter, we will continue to follow the present Statement of Rights and Responsibilities with regard to access to official records. The fate of the amendments and further guidelines should be determined within a few weeks, at which time the College can consider any necessary changes in its own policy and procedures.

historic shrine for public educational benefits for posterity. Members of the College staff have already begun this exploration."

Mr. Johns

Mr. Johns had long been recognized for his support of historical preservation activities and his numerous benefactions to organizations having historic importance. He founded, and directed for many years the Stonewall Jackson Memorial, Inc.

He was also active in preserving and restoring Derwent, the home to which Robert E. Lee retired after commanding the Army of the Confederacy, and the house at 607 Oronoco Street in Alexandria where Lee spent the formative years of his boyhood.

His activities earned for him a special resolution adopted by the 1956 session of the Virginia General Assembly. In 1967, William and Mary conferred on him the honorary Doctor of Laws degree. He had, in the years before his death, deposited several valuable historical documents and papers with the College and also established a $300,000 endowment to assist in continued development of the College's library holdings in the field of early American history.

Prior to his death, Mr. Johns was a member of the President's Council at William and Mary and was also on the Advisory Board to the Associates of Swem Library.
