Shakespearian Comedy Concludes Theatre Season, April 16-19

Shakespeare's comedy Much Ado About Nothing is the William and Mary Theatre's final production this season. It will be presented at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, April 16-19.

The Phi Beta Kappa box office will be open for season ticket patrons on Monday, April 14, from 3-5:30 p.m., and for the general public on Tuesday through Friday, 3-5:30 p.m. as well as on the evenings of the performances from 7-8:15 p.m. All tickets are reserved. General admission tickets are $2.

Hero-Claudio romance is the war of wits carried on between sharp-tongued Beatrice and the confirmed bachelor Benedick.

Witty and fast-paced, Much Ado About Nothing features Susan Blakeslee as Hero, Charles Matheny as Claudio, Barbara McCulloh as Beatrice and Jeffrey West in the role of Benedick.

Howard Scammon directs the production. Ted Hogan is in charge of lighting, and Stephanie Bennighof designed the Italian Renaissance costumes. The basic set, which was designed by Jerry Bledsoe and Albert Haak for an earlier production, has been tailored to fit Much Ado by theatre concentrator Douglas Minnerly.

The play revolves around the near tragic love affair between Claudio and Hero and the comic love affair between Benedick and Beatrice. Villainous Don Juan dupes Claudio into believing that Hero has been unfaithful to him, and Claudio consequently rejects her publicly moments before they are to be married. Contrasting the introduction to a book of essays on Auden will be issued this spring.

Spender has made numerous lecture and reading tours in the U.S., including a visit to William and Mary in 1966. His reading here is under the sponsorship of the Department of English.

S.A. Aids Refugees

The Student Association has sent more than $400 to the American Red Cross for the relief of Vietnam refugees. Those wishing to contribute to the fund may still do so and should send checks to the SA made payable to the Refugee Relief Fund.

The relief project is being co-sponsored on campus by the SA and the International Circle Organization. The money will be used in South Vietnam to purchase necessities for thousands of homeless refugees.

VACLD Conference Here

Over 300 persons are expected to attend the sixth annual conference of the Virginia Association for Children with Learning Disabilities (VACLD) which will be held at the College, April 11-12.

Speakers will include Dr. Rudolph F. Wagner, chief psychologist for the Richmond public schools; Dr. Herman K. Goldberg, associate professor at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Ophthalmology and Pediatrics; and Dr. Margaret C. Silberberg, lecturer for the Sister Kenny Institute and practicing psychologist.

A series of workshops will be held both days of the conference on various aspects of the conference theme, "Children with Social Needs: Reflections and Projections."

The conference is being sponsored by the School of Education.

Swem Prepares For National Library Week

"Biggs Plays Joplin on the Pede Harpsichord" is only one of many musical attractions Swem Library will offer in observance of National Library Week, April 13-19. Selections from the audio-visual department will be aired in the lobby from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., April 14-18. Though the emphasis will be primarily classical, there will also be a selection of pop recordings by such artists as Ellington, Brubeck and Biggs.

The theme of this year's National Library Week is "Information Power," and the musical selections are intended to increase awareness of the library's music-listening facility. Bulletin board and poster displays on each floor will inform students of lesser known materials and services which the library provides.

Serving on this year's National Library Week Committee are: Linda Friend, chairperson, Beth Blieler, Patty Bromiel and Del Moore.

British Poet To Give Reading

Stephen Spender, who holds the chair of poetry at the University of London, will read from his works on Monday, April 14, at 8:15 p.m. in Millington Auditorium.

Spender, whose career as a leading poet, critic, biographer, fiction writer and translator spans more than four decades, is the last living member of the influential Pylon Poets—including W. H. Auden, Louis MacNeice and C. Day Lewis—who came to prominence at Oxford University in the early 1930's.

Since his works were published in "New Signatures" in 1933, Spender has published more than a dozen volumes of verse and two collected editions of his poetry, in addition to several volumes of short stories, criticism and memoirs. His latest work, "Love-Hate Relations: English and American Sensibilities," contains his observations from wide experience of the cultural ties and antagonisms of the Anglo-American community. His biography of T.S. Eliot and

Archivist To Lecture Friday On Folk Song Collecting

Joseph C. Hickerson, folk artist and scholar, will lecture here Friday, April 11, under the sponsorship of the Botetourt Bibliographical Society.

Mr. Hickerson, head of the Library of Congress Archive of Folk Song, will talk on American folk song collecting and the Library collection at 8:15 p.m. in the Project Plus residence. There is no admission charge.

Hickerson, a graduate of Oberlin College and Indiana University, has done extensive bibliographic work in North American Indian music. He has served as a councilor and bibliographer for the Society for Ethnomusicology, and since 1967 has supplied over a thousand entries a year to the "Current Bibliography" section of its journal, "Ethnomusicology." Since 1969 he has been chairman of the Committee on Archiving for the American Folklore Society.

He has compiled a general bibliography on American folksong, as well as several directories of folklore festivals, organizations and publications.

In addition to his work as a bibliographer, Hickerson is a recording artist and has performed at numerous folklore festivals and programs.

The Library of Congress Archive of Folk Song was established in 1928 as the national repository for raw materials (manuscripts, field recordings etc.) pertaining to American folksong and music. Every region and every state of the U.S. is now represented in the Archive's holdings, which include over 26,000 recordings—cylinders, discs, wire spools and tapes—containing over 150,000 items of folksong, folk music, folk tale and oral history.

W&M Biologists To Study Herons

Hérons along the coastlines of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware will be studied this summer by William and Mary biologists as part of a comprehensive assessment of wading birds along the eastern coast of the United States being undertaken by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior.

Mitchell A. Byrd, professor and chairman of the department of biology, will direct the three-state study under a contract of approximately $13,700 from the Fish and Wildlife Service. He will seek to locate and characterize all heronries in the Atlantic Coast Estuarine System from the southern entrance of Delaware Bay to the northern border of North Carolina and to supervise the collection of detailed data on species composition, reproduction and fledgling success of all species.

The initial surveys will be made by plane, since the area covered by Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries and the tidal marshes and islands of the eastern side of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware constitute a rather vast potential nesting habitat for herons.

Byrd has a head start on his summer project from his work with herons over the past several years. He has studied how the birds use "spoil islands" - land created from the debris of dredging - and has color marked approximately 14,000 herons and ibis, many of which have now returned as breeding birds and some of which have entered new heronries as breeders. A total of 16 known mixed species heronries have been located in Virginia. According to Mr. Byrd there are at least as many in Maryland. A large number of heron are also located along the Delaware River below Wilmington.

Field headquarters for the studies this summer will be the Eastern Shore Laboratory of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science at Wachapreague, Va.

Lighting Improvements Underway

Construction work to completely revamp the campus lighting system is now well under way. The project, which was begun last November, is scheduled for completion by late May.

Financed by over $126,000 in capital outlay funds, the lighting system is being upgraded primarily for security reasons.

Improvements are being made on the existing system by converting incandescent campus lights to mercury vapor lights, since the mercury vapor lights provide more than twice the luminescence without using any additional power.

Lights will also be installed in areas where there previously were none, such as the Sunken Garden, New Campus Drive in the vicinity of the bridge and DuPont Hall, and in the area between the Sunken Garden and the residence halls on Old Campus Road.

Richard Bland Named Bicentennial Community

Following the pattern set by its parent institution, Richard Bland College has been named a Bicentennial Community by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA), the college has announced.

William and Mary was designated a Bicentennial Community late in 1974 after the ARBA had reviewed its Bicentennial program.

The naming of Richard Bland College makes it a part of the official bicentennial commemoration and entitles the institution to use the national symbol in its projects and activities.

Richard Bland College's application, submitted in February, emphasized the role played in the pre-Revolutionary period by Richard Bland, whose writings are the recognized basis for many of Patrick Henry's orations.

Richard Bland, a man who served 42 years as a representative of Prince George County, was described by Thomas Jefferson as "the most learned and logical man of those who took prominent lead in public affairs."

Memo from the Dean of Students

Roofs Designated Off Limits

In the past few weeks there have been several occasions when students have ventured onto the roofs of residence halls at great risk to themselves. Each year we have asked that students voluntarily stay off the roofs (except those specifically designated as sun decks). Since the practice of going on the roofs continues to occur, the President has approved my request that the following regulation be made a part of the College's disciplinary code:

RESTRICTED AREA: For reasons of safety, the roofs (except for those buildings with specifically designated sun decks) and mechanical equipment rooms of all residence halls are restricted areas and may not be entered without the express written consent of the Graduate Resident Advisor or Area Coordinator responsible for the building. Willful violation of this regulation will result in a penalty ranging from reprimand to suspension.

We regret the necessity of this regulation and ask your cooperation with it.

UVa Offers Fellowships

Faculty members who have not yet earned the highest graduate degree appropriate to their fields may apply for one of four $2,500 fellowships being offered by the University of Virginia for graduate studies there.

To be eligible, a faculty member must be a resident of Virginia, have the support of William and Mary for the fellowship, and have been admitted to a graduate degree program at UVa. Applicants should first seek admission to the appropriate UVa graduate school and, after being admitted, should then write to Mr. David A. Shannon, Vice President and Provost, to apply for the fellowship. A curriculum vita and supporting letters from W&M administrators should accompany the letter. All data should be in Mr. Shannon's hands by May 19.

Variety of Research Materials Offered by Microform Department

If you are interested in comparing British and American attitudes during the First World War, the place to search is the microform department on the first floor of Swem Library, which contains, among other publications, the London Times back to 1785 and the New York Times back to 1851.

Currently the microform library contains some 16,000 reels of microfilm, 130,000 sheets of micro-fiche and 160,000 micro-cards. According to Robert C. Stevick of the microform department, the advantage of microform lies in its space-saving qualities. A single microfilm reel can hold as many as two weeks' editions of the New York Times. In the long run, microform proves less expensive than books, with the single disadvantage that microform does not permit the leisurely browsing which books offer.

Stevick explained that one of the main difficulties in trying to systematize new acquisitions is that frequently no index accompanies the incoming material. For example, the library receives between 100 and 200 new microform reports each week for its education collection alone. That collection presently holds about 125,000 such reports and reportedly is one of only 75 colleges in the nation containing so complete a collection. Until they are correctly indexed, however, these new acquisitions are virtually useless.

Besides the New York Times, there is an impressive collection of other early American newspapers, including Boston's American Herald, and newspapers from other Northeastern cities such as Philadelphia, Cambridge, and Salem. The South is represented by Williamsburg's own Virginia Gazette back to 1736, and by a press series dealing mostly with Southern topics from 1640. This series is called the "Lost Cause" series after its Kentucky publishing firm.

Of particular interest to students of American history is the "Evans" index of American publications from 1639 to 1800. Due to the early dates, many portions of the "Evans" list are still incomplete, as compilers search out extant copies of these early publications.

Collections of special pride to the microform department are a series of American census figures from 1790, a sizeable collection of Presidential papers, and reports from the Continental Congress.

At the moment the library is developing a Human Relations Area file which, while of major interest to anthropology students, also promises to be useful in other areas, especially for those pursuing interdisciplinary studies. This file will be ready for use as soon as some additional material arrives at the library.

Stevick hopes that a permanent advisor will soon be available to assist researchers in matters of cross-reference and location, and to insure proper use of the microform collection. He recalled an incident when he offered assistance to a student who appeared lost in the card catalogue. The student thanked him and mentioned that he had been searching for two weeks for some information but had never asked anyone for help. For reasons such as these, Stevick hopes that an advisor will soon be stationed in the department.
