

William and Mary News

VOLUME IV, NO. 2

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1975

Controversial trial lawyer William M. Kunstler will speak on campus Sept. 16. Sponsored by the Student Association, the lecture begins at 8 p.m. in William and Mary Hall. Admission is 25 cents for W&M students with I.D., and $1 general admission.

Please Help Spare the Grass

Members of the College community are asked to use the sidewalks on the new campus this fall rather than walking across the Barksdale athletic fields by Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

The fields were upgraded and resprigged this summer and use must be kept to a minimum until mid-October in order for the grass to survive.

Currently the varsity hockey teams and physical education classes are permitted limited use of the fields. Further use, however, will endanger the proper growth of the fields, according to Buildings and Grounds Director Ervin Farmer.

Baldwin Memorial Concert Set

The John T. Baldwin Jr. Memorial Committee will present a piano recital by Alexander Sung at the Campus Center Ballroom Sunday, Sept. 14, at 3 p.m.

Works by Beethoven, Chopin, Schubert and Liszt will be featured on the afternoon's program, which is open to the public at no charge.

Mr. Sung is a member of the music department faculty at Virginia Commonwealth University, where he teaches piano and harpsichord. A native of Tien-Tsin, China, he studied in Salzburg, Austria, and received his diploma in piano from the Mozarteum Academy of Music. He continued his studies in harpsichord and organ at the Hochschule fur Musik und Darstellende Kunst in Vienna, where he received a diploma

Four Join W&M Faculty Under Scholars Program

Four appointments to the William and Mary faculty have been made for the 1975-76 academic year under the Eminent Scholars Program.

The program provides for matching state support of endowment funds recently dedicated to support of faculty employed under the provisions of the program.

Arthur T. Andersen, associate director, Office of Special Programs, U.S. General Accounting Office, is visiting professor in the department of economics. He received a B.A. cum laude from the City College of New York in 1954 and a Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1961.

The music department will add two to its staff under the scholars program. H. Earle Johnson, a former music critic for the New Haven Register who has published widely in the musical field, is visiting professor of music. Dora R. Short of Virginia Beach, known locally for her performances as violinist with the Feldman String Quartet and concertmaster with the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra, is a lecturer in the music department this year and the new director of the College-Community Orchestra. She is also a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music.

Novelist Herbert Burkholz was announced earlier as writer-in-residence for the current academic year.

Forms Due For Student Grant Recipients

All students who have been designated recipients of the basic educational opportunity grant, a federally funded program, are reminded to complete all the paperwork at the Student Aid Office.

Leon Looney, director of student aid, asks all recipients to fill out the forms in his office, 310 James Blair Hall, as soon as possible in order to receive the grant award.

Looney also encourages students who have not applied for the federal grant to do so. The deadline for applications for grants for the current academic year extends to March 15, 1976. Any student who has not attended a post-secondary institution prior to April 1, 1973, is eligible.

Forms are available in the Student Aid Office.

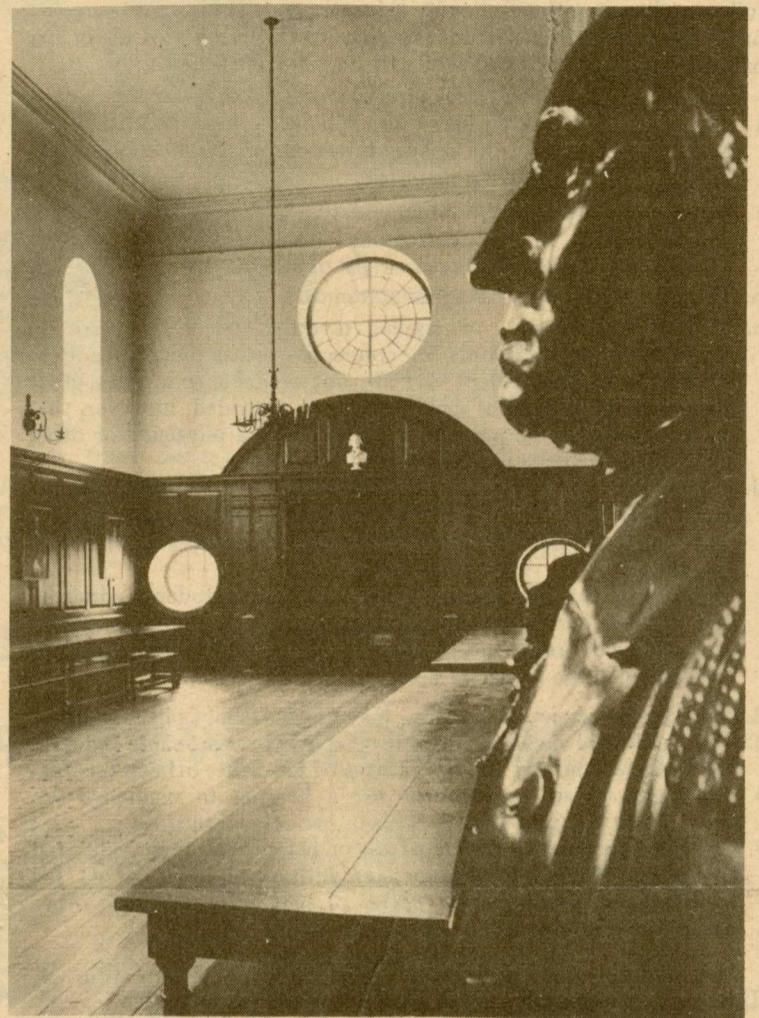

Medieval Law Is Project Plus Lecture Topic

The opening lecture of the Project Plus Forum, which this year is focusing on "Medieval and Renaissance Man," begins at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in Millington Auditorium.

Joseph R. Strayer, professor of history at Princeton University, will discuss "Medieval Concepts of Law."

The public is invited to attend.

Professor Strayer, a member of the Princeton faculty since 1936, has been Dayton-Stockton Professor of History there since 1949. Active in professional societies, he was president of the Medieval Academy of America, 1966-69, and president of the American Historical Association, 1971.

College of Presidents

A bronze bust of George Washington in the Great Hall of the Wren Building calls attention to the famous men who were associated with the College in the early years of the nation. Washington received his commission from the President and Masters of the College in 1749 appointing him surveyor of Culpeper county. In 1788 he accepted office as the first American Chancellor of William and Mary, serving until his death in 1799. Washington, Jefferson, John Tyler, James Monroe and many others brought renown to the College.

Parking Decal Deadline Extended

Security Chief Harvey Gunson has extended the deadline for registering motor vehicles operated or parked on campus by members of the College community.

The 1974-75 parking decals will be honored, he said, until September 15 but not past that date.

All motorists, said Gunson, will be expected to have new decals once the grace period has ended.

Cultural Events Magazine Now Available

"1975-76 Cultural Events at William and Mary"--a magazine describing the many cultural programs the College offers--has recently been produced by the Office of Publications.

Copies of the magazine, which contains a calendar of the year's cultural events, were mailed last week to the homes of all College employees. Copies have also been distributed to key locations around campus for students.

Students may obtain copies at the following locations: Campus Center, Swem Library, Commons, Student Health Center, Campus Post Office, College Bookstore, James Blair Switchboard and the library of the law school. Copies are also available at the Information Services Office in the old Western Union Building on Richmond Road.

A series of paintings depicting various events in America's war for independence will be shown until October 31. The collection consists of 12 naive paintings in acrylic on masonite by Oscar De Mejo, an American artist of Italian origin.

The exhibit is a Bicentennial tribute from the Interpublic Group of Companies of New York.

Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The directory lists the offices where official student records are maintained and the name of the official responsible for the maintenance and release of each type of record, and to whom requests for access should be made.

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act is a complex law and new guidelines and interpretations are still forthcoming. Students wishing to consult the College's current statement of policies and procedures with regard to this law will find copies of the statement available to them in the Registrar's office.

Subject: Moratorium on the purchase, lease, or rental of specified equipment

In a memorandum dated August 18, 1975, and signed by Maurice B. Rowe, Secretary of Administration for the Commonwealth of Virginia, we are advised as follows:

In line with the Governor's statement requesting action to implement reductions in State expenditures, I am requesting an immediate moratorium on the purchase, lease, or rental of printing and bindery equipment, copiers, duplicators, sorters, collators, and word processing equipment for copy preparation, effective this date, for a period of ninety (90) days.

Exceptions to this moratorium will be cleared through the Department of Purchases and Supply. All exceptions must show cost figures illustrating immediate appreciable savings from the installation.

I have directed the Department of Purchases and Supply, after a period of ninety days to establish a guide to be utilized for future lease, rental, or purchase of the above equipment.

You should govern your plans for such items accordingly.

The first segment of 20 tapes concerns inorganic chemistry required by artifact conservators. Subsequent segments deal with the conservation of wood and paper, organic chemistry, and the conservation of metals.

The anthropology department at the College, in conjunction with Southside Historical Sites Foundation, is offering the training program primarily for local museum conservators. Within the limits of class size, however, the program is open to all interested persons. Registration and fees are not required.

"Education to us means not only learning but the development of the whole individual."

President Graves Welcomes New Students

Saturday, August 30, 1975, 1:00 p.m.
William and Mary Hall

On behalf of the College, I want to welcome all of you in the Freshman Class and all of you who are entering William and Mary as transfer students, to what I hope you will find to be a wonderful educational adventure. I was a freshman here myself only four years ago, and I think I know something of the anticipation, the hopes, the questions, the apprehensions and the expectations which you may have this afternoon, for yourself and for the College.

For a few minutes I would like to share with you some of my views about you and the College, in the hope that they may help you as you embark upon this adventure. I hope that this may help you to understand and perhaps appreciate the opportunities which lie before you.

For those of us who work and live here--students, faculty, and administration--William and Mary is a unique institution. Not only is it an integral part of the great State system of education in Virginia of which we are very proud, but it is a small, tightly knit community in which there are close relationships between students and faculty.

Our mission at William and Mary is an education--liberal education. We recognize that many of you are concerned about what jobs you will obtain on graduation in a tight job market. How will William and Mary prepare you to make a living? This is an important question, but remember that you are here to get a full education, not just to get a job. As Robert A. Goldwin wrote in Change Magazine in May, 1975, "There is more to living than earning a living, but many earn good livings by the liberal skills of analysis, experimenting, discussing, reading and writing. Skills that are always in demand are those of a mind trained to think and imagine and express itself." We place emphasis upon learning and educational development of the whole individual, both as a student and citizen, in and out of class. That is the essence of a liberal education, what William and Mary is all about.

There are many other things that go on at an institution such as ours, all of which are important and desirable, but you are here, and we are here, because education is our business. I trust that this is the primary and essential motivation for your having selected William and Mary, and for your being here this afternoon.

When we talk about education here, we place emphasis upon the whole individual, as both student and citizen. Living and learning are as one in our view of education. Education to us means not only learning but the development of the whole individual. We have placed the responsibility for the undergraduate program, in class and out of class, in the hands of the Dean of the Undergraduate Program, in order to emphasize that point, and to help make it come true. Dean Livingston has that responsibility and exciting opportunity. He is also a Professor of Religion, so at least you know he has a lot of support in his endeavors.

In the days and weeks immediately ahead we shall do everything we can to help you, as quickly as possible, to become part of this institution in every way. We want you to contribute to it fully and benefit from it fully. This, of course, is a question of motivation--ours and yours. I urge you to become fully involved in this educational adventure.

At William and Mary the emphasis is upon excellence. By this we mean high quality and high standards in teaching and in learning. We do not equate high standards with a high failure rate or tough grading. Instead, high standards at this College mean high expectations in performance and achievement--yours and ours. The honor system at William and Mary is an example of our high expectations.

We assume that the students at William and Mary are mature and responsible citizens and individuals. We try to treat them that way and we expect them to respond equally. I am confident that you will.

Students at the College have a great deal of freedom, which we call self-determination, in the conduct of their own lives. Actually I prefer the term, self-governance. Freedom here does not mean license. With freedom must go responsibility. With freedom goes the obligation to protect the individual's right to privacy and freedom of movement and expression. Of critical importance, with freedom goes a responsibility, both individually and as a group of individuals, to protect and enhance the essential educational environment and mission of the College. Education is why you are here and why all of us are here. Dean Sadler, tomorrow, will be speaking in more detail about self-determination or self-governance, which you have to a substantial degree, for how well we conduct ourselves is the measure of our commitment to education.

The final responsibility for academic policies and for student affairs, such as residential housing policies, however, rests with the faculty and administration, not with the students. At the same time, we encourage our students to share, as much as is possible and appropriate, in a broad range of decisions which affect their lives, socially and academically. William and Mary students are responsible in large measure for their own self-governance, within the parameters set by the Board of Visitors and the administration. We want your views, we respect your judgments and ideas, and we want you to be actively involved in every aspect of the College.

Most of us believe that there is, or at least should be, a close relationship between quality of living and quality of education. I am personally not satisfied fully with the quality of living on campus; I imagine that some of you after a day or two here, will share my concern. We know very well the inconvenience, the unsightliness and the dirt which you are confronting around the campus and in the living halls this week. We ask your patience and understanding in this matter, for we are in the middle of a major renovation program for your benefit. Each year that you are here, the quality of living will improve. It has improved each year that I have been here.

William and Mary is committed to be on the forefront of higher education. You will find while you are here that there are a number of new, innovative, and experimental approaches to teaching and learning that will become part of your educational experience. Project PLUS is a good example. The Language Houses, the Asia House, the opportunities for Foreign Studies, the Washington Experience, are but a few other examples. These approaches will not be based upon fads, but will be undertaken after careful study and with the thoughtful control of the faculty. We want you to involve yourselves, with the faculty, in the development of some of these innovations, for they are on behalf of your education.

Mrs. Graves and I are inviting all freshmen and transfer students to a reception in their honor at the President's House on Sunday, September 14th from 4 to 6 p.m. We hope you can come for we want to get to know you personally.

In closing, let me say that we have high expectations for you, great confidence in you, as you enter William and Mary as freshmen. We hope that you do, too.

President and Mrs. Graves were hosts to over 800 members of the faculty and administration at a brunch held Sunday in the Sir Christopher Wren Building. The Graves will be hosts next Sunday to a reception for new students.
