Anthropologist, Writer Is PBK Guest Speaker

Loren Eiseley, internationally known anthropologist and distinguished writer, Benjamin Franklin Professor of Anthropology and the History of Science at the University of Pennsylvania, will be guest speaker at the annual public meeting of Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the College, Dec. 5.

Eiseley will read from two of his books of poetry, "Notes of an Alchemist," and "The Innocent Assassins."

Because of a scheduling conflict, Phi Beta Kappa has moved from its regular meeting place, Phi Beta Kappa Hall, to the auditorium of Millington Hall. The program begins at 8:15 p.m. in Millington.

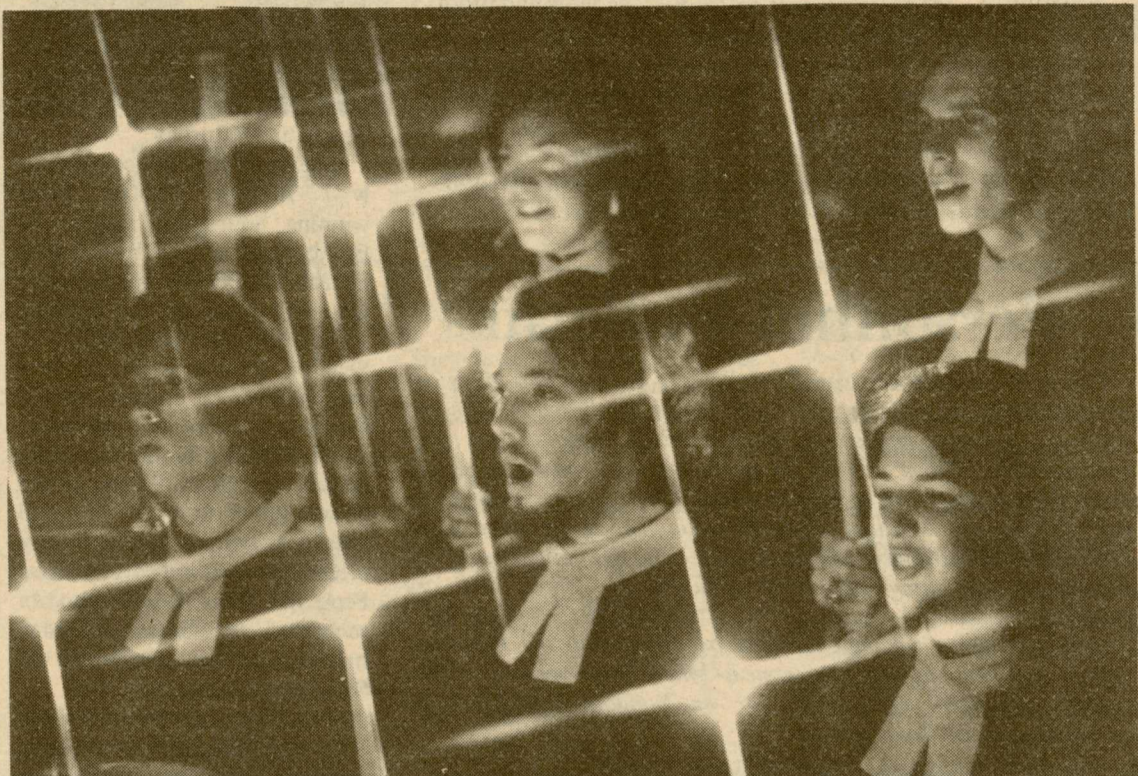

Members-in-course will be initiated earlier that day and introduced at the evening meeting, Dec. 5.

Mr. Eiseley maintains a dual interest in science and humanistic studies and has written extensively in both the literary and scientific fields. His historical study, "Darwin's Century," received the national Phi Beta Kappa science award for 1959 and the Literary Award of the Athenaeum Society of Philadelphia. "The Night Country" also received the Athenaeum Award for 1972. "The Unexpected Universe" was selected by the Book Council of the American Library Association as one of the Notable Books of 1969 and was one of the books nominated for the National Book awards that year. His most recent book is an autobiography, "All the Strange Hours."

Eiseley served as host for the 1966-68 award-winning educational television series, "Animal Secrets," presented by NBC.

Educated at the University of Nebraska and the University of Pennsylvania (Ph.D. 1937), Eiseley has served as chairman of the department of anthropology and Provost at the University of Pennsylvania and has taught at the University of Kansas and Oberlin. He has been a visiting professor at a number of universities including Harvard, Columbia and the University of California and is the recipient of over thirty honorary degrees.

Scientists Prepare 18th C Lecture As Bicentennial Project

The place of science in the era of the Revolution is being researched by two William and Mary scientists who are working on a unique Bicentennial project.

Hans C. von Baeyer and John L. McKnight of the physics faculty have received a grant of $23,300 from the National Science Foundation to re-create an 18th century lecture of the type widely delivered to general audiences in the late 1760's by traveling speakers.

McKnight and von Baeyer are also planning to purchase and restore or where necessary, reconstruct, a selection of physics demonstration apparatus that might have been included in the college's collection during the 18th century. The College's earliest collection was destroyed by fire in 1859.

Using books published by the best known of the popular lecturers of the late 18th century, the two physicists plan to write a re-created lecture and stage it with appropriately costumed personnel.

The lecture will initially be presented at the College which has been designated as a "Bicentennial Community" by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

In compiling the equipment of the Revolutionary period, the two scientists will take as one of their guides, the hand written equipment list made by Dr. William Small, Thomas Jefferson's favorite teacher, who went to England in 1764 with a commission to purchase a large and comprehensive collection of physical science apparatus for William and Mary. Restoration and reconstruction of equipment will be done in the physics department's instrument shop.

Offers of advice on the project have been given by the Institute of Early American History and Culture, the Smithsonian Institution, the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and WHRO educational television.

"During the 18th century, traveling lecturers went around in England and America as well as on the continent," explained McKnight, "giving illustrated lectures of the new philosophy, the physics of the Newtonian tradition. They demonstrated and explained the physical principles of electricity, of mechanical devices, of optics, hydraulics and of the vacuum as well as topics from terrestrial magnetism and astronomy. These lectures were preoccupied with phenomena rather than theories and included many experiments to illustrate the speaker's presentation."

The proposed lectures, said von Baeyer "will give the modern audience an accurate view of the role of science in the lives of the educated populace of 18th century America. At the same time it will introduce people to experiments which, since they are governed by the laws of nature, are as fresh and exciting now as they were 200 years ago."

Try-outs for the re-created lecture are scheduled for early in 1976 with the program fully operational by Fall, 1976. The equipment collection for use by the lectures will be fitted into boxes, as was the custom, so it can be easily transported.

Biological Timekeeping Lecture Set

Eric Pengelley, Professor of Biology at the University of California, Riverside, will present a lecture on "Biological Timekeeping" at 4 p.m. Dec. 5 in Millington 117.

The public is invited to attend.

A widely known lecturer and author, Pengelley has published three books and more than 50 scientific papers. During 1961-62 he was assistant professor at William and Mary and a research associate of the Virginia Fisheries Research Laboratory.

He has been a member of the University of California at Riverside faculty since 1962.

Pengelley received his B.A. in biology in 1954 and his Ph.D. in physiology in 1959, both from the University of Toronto.

His primary research interests are the physiology of hibernation in mammals, biological rhythms, and cardiac physiology.

Right in Your Own Backyard

It isn't often archaeologists find a site so handy. Workmen putting in the drainage system on campus uncovered the site of an 18th century structure adjacent to the law school. Staff members of the Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission and the Department of Anthropology have studied the area but do not plan any major project at the site at this time. They got unwelcomed assistance over the Thanksgiving break from someone who gouged a big hole into one side of the trench site. Studying the find are (l-r) Dave Hazzard, William M. Kelso, Norman Barka and Fraser D. Neiman. In the background Ben McCary (r) retired faculty member and enthusiastic archaeologist, looks over the site with another spectator.
