To Increase Total Financial Support

Advisory Unit To Study Funding

A special advisory committee of alumni, parents, and other friends of the College, chosen to represent both national and Virginia interests, has been formed to explore ways in which the College can increase its total program of financial support.

Warren Heemann, vice president for college development, announced the new committee at a meeting of the President's Council held as part of the weekend Charter Day program earlier this month.

Heemann told the Council that the group has been formed to "study funding options for William and Mary in a period of financial exigency and to assist in developing new non-state sources of support."

The committee, which was formed with the concurrence of the Board of Visitors, is currently being chaired by President Thomas A. Graves, Jr.

In commenting on the formation of the committee, President Graves said that the College has taken steps during the 70's to further strengthen the partnership of legislators, alumni, and other friends of the College to sustain the momentum of excellence of recent decades. He said he felt very encouraged that individuals of such stature would come together in support of the College as it moves toward an intensified effort to increase its financial resources.

Members of the Advisory Committee on Special Resources are:

J. Bruce Bredin, President, Bredin Realty Company, Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. John Bruce, Jr., Director, Tidewater Assembly on Family Life, Norfolk; D. Tennant Bryan, Chairman of the Board, Richmond Newspapers, Inc., Richmond; R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., Attorney, Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent and Chappell, Richmond; Roy R. ## Ford Executive Initiates Busch Lecture Series

The School of Business Administration has announced that the first Anheuser Busch Lecture will be given Monday, Feb. 23 by William P. Benton, a vice president of Ford Motor Company and general manager of the Ford Division.

Benton will speak at 8 p.m. in Millington Auditorium.

The lectures were established last March by a gift of $5,000 from Anheuser-Busch, Inc., to the School of Business Administration for talks on the subject of the free enterprise system and its significance for American business and the national economy. At that time Anheuser-Busch also made a gift of $5,000 to the School for its unrestricted use. The grant is being used for faculty development and research programs.

Benton will speak on "the impact and consequences of government regulation of the automobile business."

The lecture is open to the public. Special guests will include invited business and civic leaders from the Williamsburg community. Benton will participate in an informal question and answer session following his talk.

A native of Laurinburg, N.C., Mr. Benton attended the University of North Carolina and joined Ford Motor Company as a sales trainee in 1947. After holding a variety of positions at Ford Division's Charlotte district sales office and serving as executive assistant in the Southeastern regional sales office in Philadelphia, he was named manager of the car sales promotion and training department at the General Office in Dearborn, Mich., in 1961.

During the next eight years he served as district manager in the Indianapolis and Detroit district sales offices and as merchandising manager, general merchandising manager and executive assistant - dealer affairs in the General Office.

In 1970, after serving as executive assistant to the executive vice president of North American Automotive Operations, he joined Lincoln-Mercury as general marketing manager. He was named general sales manager of the division in December, 1970, and five months later was elected vice president - Marketing.

A committee of faculty and Anheuser-Busch executives has been engaged in planning for the lectures. Donald J. Messmer, assistant professor of Business Administration, is the faculty representative to the committee.

Dean Charles L. Quittmeyer of the School of Business Administration, commenting on the opening lecture, said he was "most grateful to August A. Busch, III and his colleagues at Anheuser Busch, Inc., for this very tangible additional evidence of support for the School of Business Administration." Mr. August A. Busch III is president and chief executive officer of Anheuser Busch Inc., and has been active for some time as a director of the School of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc.

She also serves as a reading and curriculum consultant to schools in many states and is internationally recognized as an authority for the individualized learning centers and comprehensive reading programs she has established in Europe, Japan and the Philippines.

The conference is open to teachers, administrators, guidance counselors, and other professionals with special concerns for students with learning disabilities.

During Antiques Forum

Visitors Tour President's House

More than 1,000 participants of the Williamsburg Antiques Forum this year had an opportunity to visit the President's House as the guests of Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr.

The House was one of five homes which were open especially for Forum members. In addition, Colonial Williamsburg Resident Architect, Roy Graham, included the President's House in a lecture, which was presented during each week of the two-week forum sessions.

Graham's talk described some of the homes which were standing in the town in 1776. He noted that the Rev. James Madison, president of William and Mary after October 1777, was forced to leave his home twice during the Revolution.

The first time occurred when Charles Lord Cornwallis, the British General, occupied the town and used the house as his headquarters. Later, after the battle of Yorktown, French Troops occupied the three story house.

Graham, in discussing the architectural aspects of the building, said the three buildings of the old college yard--the Wren, the Brafferton and the President's House--"feature a distinctively steep roof and possess a large number of small glass panes in exceptionally large windows, therefore making them more Queen

At National Meetings of College Athletic Associations

W&M Votes On Athletic Issues

In response to a number of inquiries about how the College was represented at the recent national meetings of the women's and men's athletic associations, Lawrence Beckhouse, chairman of William and Mary's Athletic Policy Committee, has prepared the following report outlining the major issues.

In January, representatives of the Athletic Policy Committee, as well as President Graves, attended the annual meetings of the men's and women's athletic associations.

JOY ARCHER AND Millie West represented the College at the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Delegate Assembly in Phoenix, Arizona, from Jan. 11-15. The AIAW, in its fifth year of existence, consists of 713 member institutions and conducts 16 national championships for women in 10 different sports.

Discussions at the Assembly centered on the restructuring of some organizational aspects of the Association, and on the inclusion of students on governing committee. A resolution, recommending that all sports governance bodies (AIAW, NCAA, NAIA, NJCAA) and institutions consider limiting athletic scholarships to the value of tuition and fees at each institution, was passed unanimously.

AT THE SPECIAL and Annual meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association in St. Louis, the College was represented by President Graves, Lawrence Beckhouse, chairman of the Athletic Policy Committee, and by Ben Carnevale, director of athletics.

The Special Convention was a continuation of the meeting called the past summer to consider cost-saving measures in college athletics. Much of the spirit of "economizing" that had been present in the summer was gone, and resolutions were passed that eliminated squad sizes for athletic teams as well as other legislation designed to reduce the increasing cost of athletic programs.

At the Annual meeting of the NCAA, considerable time was spent in discussing the determination of financial need for student-athletes. A resolution calling for the elimination of complete financial support and the institution of a program of support based upon financial need was narrowly defeated. An initial vote of 119-119 led to a roll-call vote on the resolution. The final result was a 120-112 vote, defeating the resolution. William and Mary delegates voted in favor of basing financial aid upon need.

Other important resolutions considered included the so-called "Robin Hood Amendments" sponsored by President Stephen Horn of Long Beach State University. These amendments called for the revenues from major football events such as bowl games to be distributed over all football playing members of the NCAA. The William and Mary delegation favored this resolution, but it was soundly defeated.

Finally, the issue of the relationship between the AIAW and the NCAA was considered. The NCAA Council had proposed several resolutions calling for the NCAA to apply its rules to all athletes, men as well as women. William and Mary delegates voted against this resolution, arguing that the NCAA has no right to bring women under its jurisdiction. The resolution was referred to the NCAA Council for further study. A resolution proposed by the Council to establish a committee on women's intercollegiate athletics with priority being given to an analysis of the governing legislation of the respective organizations and recommendations as to the steps each organization might take to bring the rules of the AIAW and NCAA more closely together, was supported and passed by the convention.
