Harrison Professor of History Discusses Landscapes of England

Maurice W. Beresford, James Pinckney Harrison Visiting Professor of History, will give the first of three public lectures on the landscapes of England as an historical document, Tuesday, March 23.

Beresford will speak at 8 p.m. in Andrews 101. The other two lectures in the current series will be given March 30 and April 6, also at 8 p.m. in Andrews Hall.

Professor of Economic History at the University of Leeds, England, Beresford is an authority on Medieval archaeology as well as economic history. He has published widely in both fields and is currently preparing a book entitled "East End: West End; the Townscape of Leeds in the Industrial Revolution."

In the first lecture in the series, Beresford will take a look back at the Middle Ages. The second lecture will deal with the 17th and 18th centuries. The 19th century will be covered in the third lecture.

Since Beresford has used aerial photographs, in fact pioneered their use as a research tool in medieval archaeology in the British Isles, his first two lectures will be illustrated, largely with aerial photographs. The third lecture will be illustrated by photographs taken by Beresford and others depicting the Victorian period in the city of Leeds.

"A romantic views the landscape as the so-called creation of nature," said Beresford. "The ecologist views it as a consequence of botanical and biological forces. The economic historian views it as the consequence of human beings making a living of it."

"The appearance of the green countryside," he explained, "was created unconsciously, not to be ornate, but by ways of living and working which makes it economic history."

"The technique of studying economic history through landscapes is not widely used in this country, probably because of the vast expanse and variety of the countryside. However, there has been a study of an area in Maryland recently published using this technique," said Beresford.

"Studies have been made in this country of major cities including Boston and Philadelphia which are not unlike the work being done in England. Rural areas in England have proved the best research areas but a lot is either still inexplicable or has only become explicable in the last few years. The same is likely to be true in the United States. In England we have to explain 3,000 years of farming and industry and the characteristic remains of each. In the United States, Indian sites apart, it is a rather shorter period."

Beresford said he suspects one of the reasons he was elected to fill the Harrison Chair this year was because of his interest in the common ground of history and archaeology, and the interdisciplinary graduate program in the College.

Beresford said he was very impressed by the work in archaeology which has been going on in this area as well as the rest of Virginia, more actively, he says, than for the Colonial period in England itself.

His lectures follow a list of speaking engagements which have taken him to the campuses of Yale, the Universities of Pennsylvania, Harvard, Columbia, Rochester, N.Y., Chicago, Vanderbilt, Emory, South Carolina and Virginia as well as Madison, Wisconsin. He was also a Project Plus speaker on campus earlier this year. He will return to the University of Leeds at the end of the current school year.

Yale's Russian Chorus Sets Concert in Wren

Yale University's renowned Russian Chorus will perform in the Great Hall of the Wren Building on Saturday, March 20, at 8 p.m.

President Approves Report On Judicial Systems

A. College Discipline Committees

This will confirm that I have carefully reviewed the report of the Committee on the Judicial Systems of the College and that this report and its recommendations have my full support and approval. I think that the Committee has done a very careful and comprehensive job in studying the several aspects of our systems of student discipline and relating them to each other. I was pleased to find that the Committee has concluded that the College's present systems of student discipline are basically sound and that it does not recommend fundamental revisions in them. At the same time, specific recommendations relating to the College Discipline Committees, the Honor System, and the Residence Hall Councils will, I believe, be helpful in achieving an integration among these systems.

As far as I can determine, the recommendations are fully in accordance with the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities.

Let me ask you to take such steps as are necessary to have the recommendations contained in the report implemented in all areas except where the Honor Councils have jurisdiction. In these latter instances, would you please ask the Honor Councils to give serious consideration to the adoption and implementation of the recommendations that fall within their purview.

I understand that Dean Sadler may be under some time pressures to reach final agreement on such modifications that will require appropriate revisions in the Student Handbook and other applicable College policies and procedures. These revisions that will become part of College regulations should receive the approval of the Attorney General's office in accordance with standard practice. I hope, therefore, that this process can be expedited as rapidly as possible.

Now that we have had an opportunity to review the report of the Committee on Judicial Systems and to reach the conclusions outlined above, it is entirely appropriate that the report be made fully public to the college community and outside.

Report of the Committee On the Judicial Systems Of the College

This committee was appointed by President Graves on October 7, 1975, "to evaluate the student judicial systems of the College and how to improve them." In his charge the president cited the many changes in social attitudes during recent years affecting "the role of the student as an individual in his or her relationship to the College," and noted similar inquiries into codes of student conduct at other institutions of higher learning across the nation. He asked this committee to consider "the value of honor and judicial systems in their present forms" and, if they are to continue, how "to relate the honor and judicial systems of the College more successfully to each other."

In conducting its investigation the committee sought information from other institutions, such as The Johns Hopkins University and Wesleyan University, which have recently reassessed their disciplinary systems, especially their honor systems. The committee also interviewed members of the College community who have first-hand knowledge of the strength and weaknesses of the College's present system: members of the graduate and undergraduate honor and discipline committees, and of residence hall councils; members of the graduate and undergraduate student governments; and representatives of the campus security force, resident advisors, and the staff of the office of student affairs. In addition, the committee distributed questionnaires to students and faculty to ascertain their attitudes on relevant issues. Responses from approximately 40 percent of both students and faculty provide a reliable index of campus opinion as well as reveal an active and widespread interest on campus in the health of the College's judicial systems.

The committee finds that the College's present systems of student discipline are basically sound and does not recommend fundamental revision. Certainly there are areas for improvement as our detailed recommendations below will demonstrate, but on the basis of the evidence before us, the present honor and discipline systems appear to function adequately and, despite rumors to the contrary, enjoy the overwhelming confidence of the College community. Seventy-five percent of the faculty and 72 percent of the students responding to the questionnaires, for example, favor continuing the honor system without change. Only 7 and 5 percent respectively call for abolition. To no question implying significant alteration of the College's current practices in the area of campus discipline did a majority of either faculty or students respond affirmatively.

Overall the committee applauds the trend of the 1970s to replace the College's former policy of standing "in loco parentis" with respect to its students with recognition of the individual student as a mature person enjoying rights and bearing responsibilities along with other citizens before the law. It also endorses as an amplification of this trend the philosophy of the Office of the Dean of the Undergraduate Program that regulation of student life should be part of the educational process under a policy of self-determination. In fact, the committee believes that the solution to many problems in the judicial systems lies in the realization of students that their support of College regulations, in the formulation of which they have a right to participate, is essential not only for the corporate good of the institution, but for the fullest enjoyment of their own careers at William and Mary.

In addition to these general conclusions, the committee proposes specific recommendations which are set forth in subsequent sections of this report under the headings: College discipline committees, the honor system, and residence hall councils. The thrust of these recommendations is in the main to achieve integration of the three judicial systems of the College, which previously have developed relatively independently of each other.

1. The jurisdiction of College graduate and undergraduate discipline committees extends to all violations of College regulations that are not specifically defined as honor offenses and reserved to the honor councils. The purview of discipline committees is limited with respect to dual jurisdiction in cases involving violation of local, state, or federal law by Section 1.C.3 of the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities. This restriction, the committee finds, has left a gray area regarding College authority over conduct that is technically in violation of local, state, or federal law, but which, for whatever reason, civil authorities elect not to prosecute. If also ignored by the College, such conduct may be detrimental to the quality of life on campus.

The committee recommends that the College's jurisdiction over conduct that violates local, state, or federal law be defined as follows, and that this statement be published in a new section entitled "General Policy" immediately following the "General Statement" on page 41 of the Student Handbook.

Violations of local, state, or federal law

Violations of local, state, or federal law also constitute violation of College regulations. Conduct leading to arrest, indictment, or conviction for violation of local, state, or federal law will result in disciplinary action by the College only if the President or his designee determines that such disciplinary action is necessary for the protection of other members of the College community or to prevent the disruption of any lawful activity carried on by the College, or conducted under the auspices of, or with the permission of, the College on property under the control of the College. Such activities include, but are not restricted to, the conduct of classes, laboratories, cultural events, and recreational, extracurricular, and athletic programs; the maintenance and protection of College property and of the property of members of the College community and their guests; the maintenance of vehicular and pedestrian traffic on campus; and the performance of assigned duties by members of the faculty and staff.

In the event that public authorities do not prosecute alleged violations of local, state, or federal law, or the President or his designee determines that disciplinary action is necessary for the reasons stated above, he or she may refer the case to a College Discipline Committee, which may impose penalties ranging from reprimand to dismissal.

2. There also is conduct which is not in violation of public law but which must be subject to College regulation because of its possibly deleterious effect on campus life. The committee recommends as a second paragraph of the section on "General Policy" the following definition of College authority with regard to this category of conduct.

Failure to comply with directions of College authorities

Failure to comply with a request to vacate an area on campus or to desist in a particular course of conduct on campus made by an appropriate College official who identifies him or herself and acts in the reasonable and good faith belief that compliance with the request is necessary for the safety and welfare of the person or persons requested or others, or to prevent the disruption of any lawful activity carried on by the College, or conducted under the auspices of, or with the permission of, the College on property under the control of the College, constitutes a violation of College regulations for which a College Discipline Committee may impose penalties ranging from reprimand to dismissal. Such lawful activities include, but are not restricted to, the conduct of classes, laboratories, cultural events, and recreational, extracurricular, and athletic programs; the maintenance and protection of College property and of the property of members of the College community and their guests; the maintenance of vehicular and pedestrian traffic on campus; and the performance of assigned duties by members of the faculty and staff.

Failure to comply with directions or prohibitions published in the Student Handbook or the William and Mary News, or by the authorized posting of signs constitutes violation of this regulation.

The committee believes that the two statements on General Policy, together with the Honor Code, encompass all categories of student conduct over which the College may properly exercise jurisdiction.

3. The committee recommends that the section entitled "Policies and Regulations" on pages 41-45 of the Student Handbook be retained to publish specific applications of the statements of General Policy and to call attention of students to state and federal statutes of particular relevance to the campus and that it be prefaced as follows:

The following policies and regulations are specific applications of College General Policy and of public statutes with particular relevance for students and are not an exhaustive list either of College regulations or of applicable local, state, and federal law.

4. The present requirement is that the undergraduate Discipline Committee be composed of seven faculty members and three students. The committee understands that originally one reason for the larger number of faculty was to permit the appointment of at least one representative each from the Schools of Business Administration, Education, and Law. Not all the schools have felt it necessary to be routinely represented, however, and for some time the practice has been for the Discipline Committee to consist of six faculty and four students. This committee finds that this ad hoc arrangement has been effective, and in view of the fact that earlier concern about representation among faculties has become less pressing, the committee favors a further increase in the ratio of students in line with the College's policy of regarding the administration of student affairs as a component of the educational process.

The committee recommends that the first sentence of the paragraph entitled "Composition of the Discipline Committee" on p. 53 of the Student Handbook be amended to read: "The Discipline Committee consists of five members of the faculty at large and five undergraduate students appointed by the President of the College."

Report of the Committee on the

5. Among the graduate schools the disciplinary board of the law school is presently composed of even numbers of faculty and student members. The committee recommends that the principle of equal faculty and student representation on discipline committees be extended to the other graduate schools by adoption of the following amendments to graduate student regulations. In each case the committee recommends that student members be nominated by the appropriate graduate student association.

[For graduate discipline committees of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, and the Schools of Education and Marine Science] Amend the second sentence in the paragraph entitled "Composition of a Discipline Committee" on p. 70 of the Student Handbook to read: "A discipline committee shall consist of the Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences or the Dean of the School of Education or of Marine Science as is appropriate as chairperson, three members of the faculty of the department or school in which the student is pursuing his or her major work, and three graduate students who have been admitted to a degree program under that faculty or school, selected from at least five nominees presented by the graduate student association of that faculty or school." (The committee calls attention to the fact that under the regulations of this faculty and these schools the presiding dean does not vote in the proceedings.)

[For the graduate disciplinary board of the School of Business Administration] Either amend the first sentence of paragraph 7 entitled "Disciplinary Board" on pages 73-74 of the Student Handbook to read: "The disciplinary board of the School of Business Administration shall consist of the Associate Dean for Graduate Studies as chairman, who shall not vote in the proceedings; two of the School's faculty members, appointed for one-year terms by the dean of the School of Business Administration; and two students in the M.B.A. degree program, at least one of whom shall be a full-time student, appointed by the Dean of the School from at least four nominees presented by the M.B.A. Student Association;" or amend the first sentence in that paragraph to read: "The disciplinary board of the School of Business Administration shall consist of the Associate Dean for Graduate Studies; two of the School's faculty members, appointed for one-year terms by the Dean of the School of Business Administration; and three students in the M.B.A. degree program, at least one of whom shall be a full-time student, appointed by the Dean of the School from at least five nominees presented by the M.B.A. Student Association."

6. Members of a discipline committee act as impartial judges without prior knowledge of the case before them. Experience has shown that they need a person familiar with the case to present the evidence to them, a role that for the undergraduate committee is sometimes but not always played under the current procedure for conducting a hearing set forth on page 53 of the Student Handbook by the Associate Dean of Students for Student Development. One problem is that the Associate Dean is often cast in the dual role of counsellor to the accused before the case is brought to the discipline committee. This committee believes, however, that in the interest of effective justice the need for a presenter of evidence is paramount. At the same time, it is reluctant to recommend the establishment of an office of prosecutor, whether student or administrator, as some institutions have done. The experience on this campus in cases in which the Associate Dean has functioned as presenter indicates that it is both possible and effective for the presenter to lay out evidence in a judicious rather than prosecutorial manner and thus not unduly compromise the role of counsellor. This alternative to the appointment of an official prosecutor the committee prefers to encourage.

The committee recommends that the fifth sentence in the paragraph entitled "Composition of the Discipline Committee" on page 53 of the Student Handbook be amended to read: "The Associate Dean of Students for Student Development shall present the evidence on the basis of which the accused is being heard and shall direct the questioning of witnesses."

7. The committee recognizes the need for adequate appeal procedures to prevent miscarriage of justice in the administration of College regulations. It is also aware that appeal procedures can be extended beyond the point necessary to insure justice for all. It therefore recommends that the appeal from a hearing board in every case be directly to the President of the College or his designated representative and that the following statement of this policy be included after the recommended section of "General Policy" in the Student Handbook. The committee assumes that, as is the case in most instances now, the President will delegate final authority to hear appeals emanating from the various judicial systems to an appropriate subordinate.

Appeal Procedure

Any student found guilty of a violation of College or residence hall regulations by a College discipline committee or residence hall council, or of violation of the Honor Code, has the right to appeal the finding and the propriety of the penalty imposed to the President of the College or his designated representative. The persons, if any, whom the President may have designated as his representatives with final authority to hear particular categories of appeals are indicated in the appropriate sections of this handbook. Appeals must be submitted in writing to the President or his representative within five (5) calendar days of official notification to the student of the finding of the hearing board and must clearly state the reasons advanced for reversal or modification of the board's decision. The President or his designee may extend the period within which to file an appeal for an additional five (5) calendar days for good cause.

8. The committee recommends that the last phrase of the first sentence in the section entitled "Right of Appeal" on p. 55 of the Student Handbook be amended to read: "to the Dean of the Undergraduate Program, whom the President has designated as his representative with final authority to hear such appeals"; and that after the third sentence the following be inserted: "The Dean of the Undergraduate Program may extend the period within which to file an appeal for an additional five (5) calendar days for good cause."

9. To resolve two specific problems relating to campus security, the committee recommends that the College adopt the following regulations to be published in the section on "Policies and Regulations:"

No student shall remove College property from the place, or divert it from the use, to which it is assigned by the President or his designee without permission of that official. Violation of this regulation is punishable by penalties ranging from reprimand to dismissal.

Failure on the part of a student to show his or her student identification card upon the request of a campus security officer or other College official who identifies him or herself is a violation of College regulations punishable by penalties ranging from reprimand to probation.

B. The Honor System

1. Honor systems under which academic offenses (defined at William and Mary as cheating, plagiarism with intent to deceive, lying, and stealing) are prosecuted and judged by elected representatives of the student body are under serious criticism throughout the country. Some institutions have abandoned them entirely. The principal complaint against them is that students are unwilling to accept the premise that it is an honor offense not to report breaches of honor on the part of others. For several years this has not been a requirement of the honor code at William and Mary, and in response to the committee's questionnaire 82 percent of the students indicated that they opposed its reintroduction, maintaining this position even when it was pointed out that cheating by others devalued their own grades. Moreover, only 7 percent said that they "certainly" would report another's offense while 60 percent said "perhaps." Interestingly the faculty divided about evenly on the issue, 43 percent to 46, while a solid majority rejected the idea of resorting to proctoring even for objective examinations.

The committee recommends that the College not reintroduce at this time the provision defining failure to report an honor violation by another as a breach of the honor code. The overwhelming opposition of the student body, and the ambivalence of the faculty, which render it manifestly impossible to administer such a requirement in an equitable manner, leave only the alternative of either retaining the code without the provision or abolishing the system entirely. The committee recommends the former choice at this time because the available evidence does not reveal cheating at the College to be extensive enough at present to constitute a threat to the integrity of the grading system. Out of 2091 students responding to the committee's questionnaire, 162 admitted that they had cheated "once," 158 "a few times," and only 9 that they offended "often." As 16 percent of the student body this proportion of students who cheat is indeed alarming, but as a percentage of the thousands of opportunities for cheating presented over the course of the respondents' combined careers at the College -- note the limited implications of the adjectives selected as replies -- the effect is less frightening. Moreover, 42 percent of the faculty and nearly 60 percent of the students report that they have not observed an instance of cheating in up to five years, suggesting that the major incidence may be restricted to certain areas. More careful preparation of examination material by faculty may be equally or more effective in curbing the problem than abolition of the entire system.

2. The committee recommends continuation of the present practice by which the honor system is administered by separate councils for the undergraduates and for each of the graduate student bodies (the School of Marine Science has chosen to be represented with the Faculty of Arts and Sciences). Although the University of Virginia has for years successfully administered its honor code through a single council representing students from all graduate and undergraduate programs, the committee believes that the traditions at William and Mary, where graduate programs are relatively new, are so different that whatever advantages might accrue from a unified system will be offset by the severe disruption likely to occur in altering the present arrangement. For similar reasons the committee does not recommend that the graduate honor councils alone be united in a single body inasmuch as the several programs, particularly that of the law school, have a strong preference for autonomy.

3. The committee, however, does recommend the establishment of a Judicial Advisory Committee, composed of the chairpersons of each honor council, and the Dean of Students, the Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences, and the Deans of the Schools of Business Administration, Education, and Law, or their designees, to facilitate communication among the honor councils and between the councils and the student body. The committee feels that such an advisory committee will afford the advantages of a single honor system without the disadvantages. It will contribute to continuity of standards from year to year and across campus by providing undergraduates an opportunity to benefit from the experience of older students, particularly law students with greater familiarity with legal procedures, as well as a means for orienting graduate students new to the customs of this campus.

4. The committee further recommends that the Judicial Advisory Committee undertake responsibility for a continuing educational program reminding students and faculty alike of the existence and meaning of the honor system. At present the distribution of information regarding the system is confined largely to an orientation session at the beginning of a student's career on campus, the Student Handbook, and occasional cryptic and anonymous reports of honor council trials in the Flat Hat and on campus news broadcasts. The committee observes in this connection that honor council trials are front-page news at some institutions where, whatever the implication for individual rights to privacy, they serve a comparable educational function. For this campus, however, the committee has in mind a less sensational approach exemplified by the excellent paper on the definition of plagiarism which an ad hoc committee of the honor councils published during the fall semester.

Judicial Systems of the College

5. The committee recommends amendment of the Honor Code to confine the definition of stealing as a breach of honor to stealing the ideas of another (plagiarism), or stealing examinations or other sources of information to achieve an unfair advantage in academic competition. This is to bring the Code into conformity with the guarantee to students against dual jurisdiction in cases involving violation of local, state, or federal law in Section I.C.3. of the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities.

6. The committee recommends that the first two sentences of paragraph 7 of the procedures of the undergraduate honor council (Student Handbook, page 66) be amended to read: "The questioning of the accused and all witnesses shall be initiated by the chairperson of the investigating committee. When the chairperson of the investigating committee is through questioning, each member of the council shall have the privilege of asking additional questions." Present practise requires the chairperson of the investigating committee to withdraw after testifying as an expert witness at the beginning of a trial, leaving the council without the person best able to assemble the evidence in a meaningful way. It is the feeling of present members of the Honor Council that this amendment will result in greater efficiency.

7. One of the most serious weaknesses of the honor system is that, although there is little sentiment among the faculty for abolition or fundamental revision of the system, approximately half the faculty indicated that they probably would not have recourse to it if they uncovered evidence of cheating in their courses. A clue to the cause of this ambivalence in faculty opinion is that 57 percent of those responding to the committee's questionnaire disclosed that they feared possible humiliation if they placed a charge before the honor council. The committee has no direct evidence that this fear is well grounded, but clearly the existence of such a perception on the part of the faculty menaces the health of the system. Moreover, because of the secrecy enveloping honor trials, even faculty who do present cases to the honor council are left mystified as to the reasons for the outcome and often question the fairness of the verdict. The committee concludes that an important step toward resolving this problem is to allow the accuser as well as the accused to attend the trial during the presentation of evidence. The committee recommends amendment of the section entitled "Conduct of Trial" on pages 65-67 of the Student Handbook by the addition of the following paragraph:

The person who charges another with violation of the Honor Code has the right to be present at the trial during presentation of the evidence and the questioning of witnesses in order to be satisfied that his or her complaint is properly heard, and to be informed by the Dean of Students of the council's finding and the penalty imposed, if any.

8. The committee also recommends the amendment of the section entitled "Conduct of Trial" on page 65-67 of the Student Handbook by the addition of the following paragraph.

No one except the seven members of the council hearing the case shall be present while the council deliberates its finding and the penalty to be imposed, if any.

9. The committee has discussed the question of appeal procedure in Recommendation 7 in Section A of this report. The committee recommends that the first three sentences of Section 17 under "Rights of the Accused" of the undergraduate honor code on page 64 and 65 of the Student Handbook be amended to read: "A right to appeal a finding of guilt and the propriety of the penalty to the Dean of the Undergraduate Program, whom the President of the College has designated as his representative with final authority to hear such appeals. This right must be exercised within five (5) calendar days after notification of the penalty to the accused by the Dean of Students or his or her designated representative. The Dean of the Undergraduate Program may extend the period within which to file an appeal for an additional five (5) calendar days for good cause. An appeal must be in writing and must clearly state the reasons advanced for reversal or modification of the decision."

10. On the principle that the same honor code, modified to accomodate variations in the academic practices of the several faculties, should be applicable to all students of the College, graduate as well as undergraduate, the committee recommends its extension to include graduate students at the School of Business Administration. At present the code of graduate student discipline at the school incorporates the main provisions of the College honor code but does not provide for administration of the system by a council composed solely of graduate student representatives. The committee recommends that the school adopt this procedure in conformity with the general policy of the College.

C. Residence Hall Councils

1. Under the College's policy of self-determination, residence hall councils, elected by the residents of each hall, are responsible for providing social and cultural leadership of the hall and for adopting and enforcing regulations governing life within the hall. Overall the committee finds that residence hall councils are the least effective of the College's judicial systems, but observes that students nonetheless prefer the present system of governance of residence hall life to any alternative proposed. Sixty-one percent of the students responding to the committee's questionnaire endorsed continuation of the councils. Only 9 percent suggested that the Dean of Students resume direct supervision of life in the residence halls.

The most serious reason for the council's relative ineffectiveness, the committee believes, is that neither residents nor council members fully appreciate how important is the cooperation of everyone if each resident is to realize the maximum enjoyment and cultural reward of his or her life in the hall and at the College. To impress upon students the significance of the policy of self-determination in attaining this end, the committee recommends that the Office of Residence Hall Life place greater emphasis on the positive function of leadership that residence hall councils perform than on their negative disciplinary role and, accordingly, that the following statement be adopted as an introduction to, and guideline for, revision of section C, "Residence Hall Councils and Self-Determination," on pages 47-51 of the Student Handbook.

The residence hall council is a means of self-government by persons living in residence hall. Its members are elected annually by the residents of a hall in accordance with the procedures set forth below. The council enacts regulations governing life in the hall, and in cases of violations, conducts hearings and imposes penalties as described below. In cooperation with the residence hall staff, the council is responsible for the enrichment of the social and cultural life of residents of the hall. It provides leadership for the residents and represents them in all matters within the College affecting them as a body. In this capacity, it provides another channel, in addition to the resident advisor, for bringing to the attention of the Office of Student Affairs any matter, whether in violation of College regulations or not, that it deems detrimental to the quality of life within the hall.

2. The committee finds from experience on this campus that the assignment of men and women to the same residence hall markedly increases civility within the hall. The committee recommends that the policy of assigning men and women to the same residence hall be extended to as many residences as is practical, providing always that as many students as wish have the option of residing in halls not under this policy as well.

3. Another reason in the committee's opinion for the relative ineffectiveness of residence hall councils is that they have not been given authority commensurate with their responsibilities. The committee recommends as additional penalties for violation of College or residence hall regulations, or of provisions of room contracts, requirement of financial reimbursement to the College or other residents of the hall for damages, recommendation to the Associate Dean of Students for Residence Hall Life that a resident's room contract be immediately terminated or not renewed at a subsequent time, or that he or she suffer a reduction in priority of a specified number of places in the room lottery of a subsequent year, or be denied exempt status in the lottery if such a penalty is applicable. The committee also recommends that, if after a reasonable time this additional range of penalties does not sufficiently support the council's authority, the Office of Residence Hall Life consider establishing a schedule of fines or work assignments as penalties for infractions described above.

4. The committee has discussed the question of appeal procedures under Recommendation 7 in Section A of this report. The committee recommends that sub-paragraph 3d of section C, "Residence Hall Councils and Self-Determination," on page 50 of the Student Handbook be amended to read:

A student found guilty by a residence hall council of violating residence hall regulations may appeal the finding and the propriety of the penalty imposed to the Associate Dean of Students for Student Development, whom the President of the College has designated as his representative with final authority to hear such appeals. Appeals must be submitted within five (5) calendar days of official notification of the finding of the residence hall council. The Associate Dean of Students for Student Development may extend the period within which to file an appeal for an additional five (5) calendar days for good cause. Appeals must be in writing and must clearly state the reasons advanced for reversal or modification of a decision.

5. The committee has discussed the need for a presenter of evidence in a hearing under Recommendation 6 in Section A of this report. The committee recommends that sub-paragraph 3b of section C, "Residence Hall Councils and Self-Determination," on page 50 of the Student Handbook be amended by the addition of the following sentence: "The chairperson of the residence hall council shall appoint one member of the council to act as investigator who shall present the evidence to the council at the hearing and shall direct questioning of witnesses, but who shall not be present while the members of the council hearing the case deliberate their finding and the penalty to be imposed, if any."

View From the Other Side

Michael Binyon, a Washington-based reporter for the London Times, was on campus last month for the College's Charter Day ceremonies. In the February 20 issue of the Times Higher Education Supplement, Binyon reviewed the address by Sir Peter Ramsbotham, British Ambassador to the U.S., and commented as follows on the ceremonies:

The charter day ceremonies, dominated this year by the British and by British tradition, exuded a sincere, patriotic and almost naive pride in the college and its academic tradition.

The rows of professors in academic dress, the robed choir of the college, the special presentation of good teaching awards--all this was a far cry from the cynicism that has settled over most of America's campuses. It was a piece of Oxbridge ceremony unthinkable even, perhaps, in Oxford or Cambridge.

Covey Joins Business Office As Assistant Budget Director

Rebecca Covey, a graduate of William and Mary's School of Business Administration, has been named Assistant Director of the Budget.

She replaces David Healy, who was recently promoted to the position of Director of Auxiliary Enterprises.

Mrs. Covey will assist Budget Director Dennis Cogle in preparing, analyzing and monitoring the College's more than 70 departmental budgets. Her position also involves some responsibility in preparing state budget requests. She administers the photocopying account and will be active in systems analysis and development work with the College's computer-based accounting system.

A native of Hopkinsville, Ky., Mrs. Covey has studied at Hopkinsville Community College, at Austin Peay University in Clarksville, Tenn., and at William and Mary, where she received her B.B.A. in 1974. She completed the requirements for her masters in Business Administration from the College last December and will receive her degree in May.

She is married to Craig Covey, chief planner in James City County.

Mrs. Covey may be contacted at 101 James Blair Hall, Ext. 203.

On March 9, Thomas E. Cayton successfully defended his doctoral dissertation in physics on "Stability and Spectra of the Bumpy Theta Pinch."

German University Scholarship Offer

Applications are invited for the exchange scholarship offered by the University of Munster in Germany to a William and Mary student for the academic year 1976-77. The scholarship provides a maintenance allowance of 650 German Marks a month, which should adequately cover expenses for room, board and university fees for the year. A specific travel allowance is not included in the scholarship.

The scholarship competition is open to rising juniors who will have completed at least German 205 or the equivalent by the end of this semester. It is not limited to concentrators in German, and students in other concentrations who possess the above qualifications are encouraged to apply.

Application forms may be obtained in the Modern Languages office, Washington 205, and in the German House lobby. The deadline for submission of completed applications is 5 p.m., Monday, April 5.

Faculty Participate In Hunger Conference

Former U.S. Senator William B. Spong, Jr., dean designate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, is one of several members of the college community who are assisting with a two-day conference on hunger and malnutrition March 22-23 in Norfolk, which is expected to attract about 5,000 people.

The conference at Scope will deal with the existence and effects of hunger and malnutrition in the Tidewater area and beyond under the title "Hunger: The Obvious Malnutrition: The Invisible."

Spong is serving as honorary chairman for the conference. Conference coordinator is a William and Mary alumna, Mrs. Constance Laws of the Health-Welfare-Recreation Planning Council in Norfolk.

Vinson H. Sutlive, chairman of the department of anthropology, and several members of his department, including Stephen Brush, Nathan Altshuler and Mario Zamora, will participate in the workshop sessions which are designed to demonstrate the effects of inadequate nutrition on the mental, physical, emotional and social development of individuals. The conference also hopes to evaluate existing local, state, national and world systems which profess to lessen hunger and malnutrition and to determine possible mechanisms and systems toward eradication.

Frank A. MacDonald, professor of philosophy, is a member of the board of the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy which is partially funding the conference. Professional registration fees and other contributions make possible free admission for the general public. CROP, the community hunger appeal of Church World Service, initiated conference planning over one and a half years ago. Planning committees are composed of area business, professional, educational, military, governmental, labor and religious leaders.

Odum Slates Senior Recital In Voice

Marsha Odom will present her senior recital in voice on Thursday, March 18, at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Mrs. Odom, a resident of Grafton, Va., is a student at the College of Robin Roark. Her program includes works by Brahms, Samuel Barber, Bizet and Scarlatti. She will be accompanied at the piano by Jane Tylus.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Bicentennial and other commemorative medallions from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ellenson are currently on exhibit at the Botetourt Museum of Swem Library.

Ellenson is an alumnus of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and is a member of the Newport News law firm of Ellenson, Fox and Wittan. He and his wife, Goldye, are residents of Newport News.

Among the collections of bicentennial medallions on exhibit are a set in gold of all the United States Presidents and one in silver of the First Ladies. Another set in silver depicts the flags which have flown over the area now encompassed by the United States--flags from Britain, France, Spain, the Netherlands, Sweden and the Russian empire, as well as the Continental colors and the official U.S.

flags. The 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence, including the seven from Virginia, are commemorated in yet another collection.

The Ellenson's exhibit is not limited, however, to medallions. Thirteen figures in pewter, ranging from "The Printer" to "The Butter Churner", comprise the colonial people collection issued by the Franklin Mint. Another collection, also issued by the Franklin Mint, portrays "The American People, 1776-1976" and includes such figurines as the first citizen, a prospector, a homesteader, a Gibson girl and an immigrant.

A set of pewter plates with scenes from the American Revolution is also on display, as is a Virginia Independence Bicentennial Medallion.

Other medallions not related to the Bicentennial include Norman Rockwell's "Spirit of Scouting" and silver ingots from one bank in each of the 50 states.

The Botetourt Museum is located on the ground level of Swem Library. It is open to the public Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. There is no admission charge.

The Ellenson exhibit will be shown through April 12.

Notice on Telephone Use

The Business Office reminds all faculty and staff to notify the College Switchboard in either of the following instances when the charge is being made to the College:

- when sending a telegram, or
- when placing a long-distance call from a home phone or any other phone away from the College system.

When the College operators do not receive such notification, they must spend a great deal of time tracing down the items on the College telephone bill in order to charge them properly.

Student Teacher Registration

All students who plan to student teach in the Fall or the Spring of next year should register in the Office of Educational Placement, Jones Hall, Room 215, between now and April 1.

Students in the area of Science should plan to student teach in the Fall semester.

Students in the area of Foreign Languages or Mathematics should plan to student teach in the Spring semester.

Students in these areas who will have difficulty or conflicts should make an appointment to see Mr. John Sykes, director of Educational Placement, Jones 215, to discuss their particular situation.

Scammon Retiring After 3 Decades In W&M Theatre

The dean of college theatre in Virginia is planning an "un-retirement."

Howard Scammon will step down as director of the William and Mary theatre after almost 40 years on campus, both as an actor and director, but he's not giving up his love affair with the stage.

Scammon will continue to direct Paul Green's epic outdoor drama "The Common Glory" during the summer months in Williamsburg, and he's helped form a new corporation that will give Bicentennial visitors to Yorktown their first look at "living history."

Scammon has just finished directing his last play at the College and will teach his last class this May. But he won't have long to rest. "The Common Glory," which Scammon hopes to make "quite a bit different this year," opens June 21 in the Lake Matoaka amphitheatre.

"I'm going to experiment a little," says Scammon, "and change things around if I can."

"The Common Glory" has always been a special event for Scammon. It was the prime reason he returned to Williamsburg and his alma mater after receiving a master's degree at Northwestern. He attended William and Mary in the thirties and studied under the founder of the College's theatre, Althea Hunt.

"It was in 1947 that I heard they were going to do 'The Common Glory,'" recalled Scammon. "I wrote Miss Hunt and asked if there were any spear-carrying jobs. She wrote back and said she wanted me as one of her assistant directors."

In 1948 Scammon took a job in the College's speech department, and he's been at the College ever since.

Over his three decades as an integral part of the College's theatre, Scammon has noticed considerable changes in the attitudes of theatre students as well as in the physical resources the College has to offer its theatre concentrators.

When Scammon was a student at the College, the theatre students had what he describes as their own "social fraternity." All the members knew how to do all the things it took to produce a show, whether it be putting on pancake make-up, playing a walk-on role or just hammering nails into a set.

Today the student learns almost all the facets of theatre in the classroom, says Scammon, so producing the play itself is not so much a learn-as-you-work experience.

"Glory" Director

He took over most of the directorial duties of "The Common Glory" in 1951, three years after joining the College faculty. Since then he's molded the historic drama into one of the most popular theatrical events on the east coast. As part of the area's Bicentennial celebration, this summer's show is expected to draw record-breaking numbers of tourists.

Scammon will again be working with a good number of budding young actors and actresses who know that "The Common Glory" can be good experience for an unknown performer planning to head for New York. Scammon can list a number of movie and television personalities among his "Glory" graduates, including Goldie Hawn, an academy award-winner most recently seen in "Shampoo," and Linda Lavin, a regular guest star on the popular television comedy "Barney Miller."

Each year "The Common Glory" is really a different show, with different performers and slight variations in setting and movement, explained Scammon. "We've been through a number of changes over the years trying to reach the most efficient, practical and artistic way of doing the show."

Yorktown Vignettes

Part of Scammon's "retirement" will be spent creating a "living history program" at the restored Thomas Nelson House in Yorktown.

This spring, the "Scotch Tom" Nelson Corporation will produce a new, fully-staged series of vignettes at the Nelson House aimed at reflecting life as it was in Yorktown in the 18th century. The theatrical group, which was named for the member of the Nelson clan that constructed the Yorktown home, will attempt to create a new brand of historic interpretation at one of Virginia's colonial homes.

Scammon has selected a cast for the vignettes and will stage the dramatic segments at several points throughout the tour of the house. The history of the times will unfold through the lives of the Nelson family members and their guests, who were active personalities in the Revolutionary era.
