SENIOR RECITAL--Beulah Cox will present her senior violin recital on Tuesday, March 1, 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Miss Cox will play sonatas by Corelli, Hindemith, Bach, and Dvorak.

A student of Ronald Marshall, music lecturer, Beulah Cox is also a member of the William and Mary Orchestra and Delta Omicron International Music Fraternity.

Her accompanist is Thomas Marshall, harpsichordist at the Music Teacher's Shop in Colonial Williamsburg and associate organist at the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church.

CRIMINAL LAW SEMINAR--A federal court judge, Commonwealth attorney and a psychology professor will lead a panel discussion considering the jury selection process and bench versus jury trials in criminal litigation, Thursday, February 24, at 4 p.m. in the Moot Court Room at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

The public is invited to attend the discussion and ask questions of panelists Robert R. Merhige Jr., federal district court judge for the Eastern district of Virginia; Gammil Poindexter, Commonwealth attorney for Surry County; and Kelly Shaver, associate professor of psychology at the College.

Marshall-Wythe students in the law student division of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America are sponsoring the seminar, which organizers say should be of interest to anyone involved in litigation.

INCOME TAX ASSISTANCE--Need help preparing your income tax forms? Graduate students in law and business will provide free assistance under the national Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program developed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Assistance is available through April 15, with the exception of spring break, March 4-13. Interested persons should bring the 1040 and W-2 forms and any other relevant receipts to the Student Lounge on the third floor of the law school building, Tuesdays through Fridays between 2 and 5 p.m.; or to the Gold Room on the second floor of the Campus Center, Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 4 p.m. For further information, contact the Graduate Business Office at 253-4564.

Would Permit Multi-Residence Development of Land on Lake Matoaka

College Opposes Zoning Change

The College is voicing its opposition to a zoning change in James City County which would permit land development for multi-residence use on property contiguous to the College Woods and bordering on Lake Matoaka, and is encouraging campus support of its stand.

At a public meeting of the James City County Planning Commission, January 25, William J. Carter, vice president for Business Affairs, and the chairman of the campus environment committee Gerald H. Johnson made presentations in response to a proposal before the Commission to rezone 54 acres behind Berkeley School, backing on the College woods and Matoaka Lake, to permit multi-family residences.

Carter cited the importance of the adjacent college property for educational and research pursuits and the danger of damage to Lake Matoaka and the College Woods from construction and excavation on the Grinnan Property.

Carter also said that the multi-family residences would raise the problem of encroachment of the College Woods, the danger of fire by careless users and destruction of plant life of a unique character.

"Following the construction phase, continuous run-off from developed areas can be expected," said Carter. "The run-off will carry pollutants such as gasoline, grease and oil slick from the hard-surfaced parking areas and insecticide spray from landscaped areas."

In order to prevent these problems from occurring when this land is developed, Carter on behalf of the college, requested that the following be made conditions for the development of this property:

1. Provisions for insuring that people do not trespass on College land.
2. Continuing review by the College so that, in the event of rampant trespassing if the fence is broken down, corrective action will be required of the developer.
3. A broad buffer of natural area and a fence just inside their side of the property line.
4. Development of flat lands rather than the slopes to prevent erosion.
5. The U.S. Department of Agriculture be designated to review plans and to make necessary revisions to erosion and sediment control plans.
6. The developer grant the College the right of review of the Environmental Impact Statement which must be prepared.
7. Right of continuing review of development of plans for construction on this property.

Carter has also sent to William F. Brown, planning director for James City County, a copy of the Campus Environment Committee report which echoes many of Carter's concerns and concludes that the proposed R-5 use of the Grinnan Property will greatly increase the probability of encroachment of people and their pets into the College Woods. This will endanger wild life, plants, research activities and possibly the safety of authorized personnel in this area. High density development, said the committee, will have a much greater and prolonged effect on the water quality and longevity of Lake Matoaka.

The R-2 designation, explained Brown, was originally established to permit single family residences and allowed multi-use dwellings with receipt of a conditional use permit from the Board of Supervisors.

In March a Board of Supervisors ordinance struck the multi-dwelling

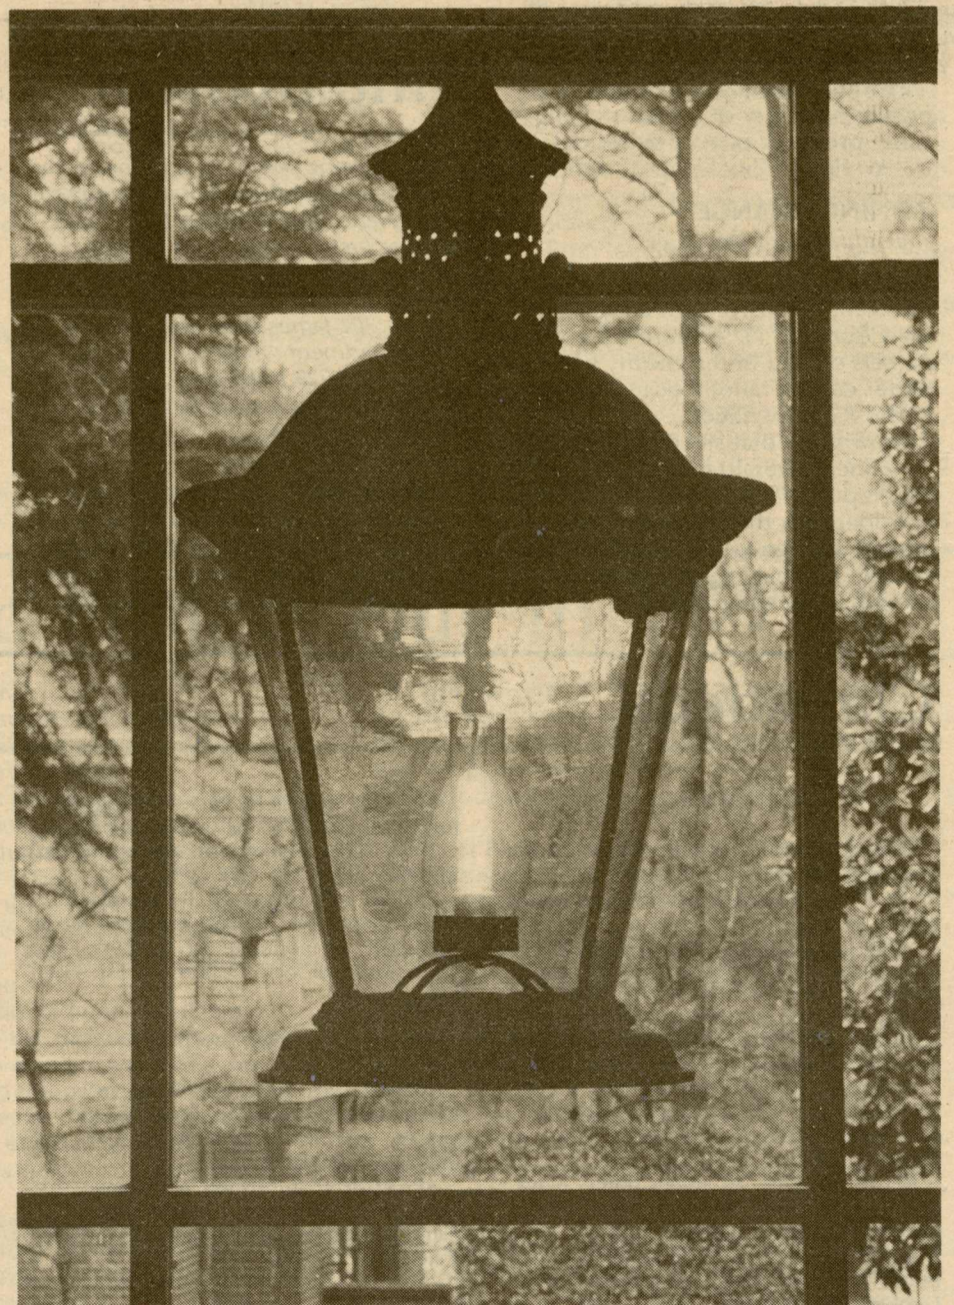

At a work session, February 1, the Commission tentatively planned to recommend approval of the zone change on the Grinnan property to the Board of Supervisors. At a meeting February 22 in the Council Chambers of the Court House, the Commission will make its final recommendation of the board. Public hearing on the question is considered concluded by the Commission although another public hearing will be scheduled by the Board of Supervisors before this body takes action on the question.

William F. Brown, Planning Director for James City County said he expected the recommendation to go to the Board of Supervisors in March, with an April date being set for a public hearing. The public will be advised through the newspapers of the public hearing date.

The request for rezoning of the property known as the St. George Grinnan Property came to the Commission from the Estate Trust Officer at the F&M Bank in Richmond.

Development Office Grant Opportunities

OFFICE OF EDUCATION

National Diffusion Network Program - Programs to promote widespread installation in local school systems of already developed, exemplary educational programs at the early childhood, elementary, secondary, and adult education levels. Funds will be provided for:

- a.) Developer-demonstrator projects by agencies or groups which have already developed, with Federal funds, an exemplary program, product, or practice approved for dissemination by the Joint Dissemination Review Panel.
- b.) Facilitator projects, to (1) Engage in wide-spread dissemination of information to local school systems to acquaint them with the exemplary programs; (2) Provide technical assistance to interested local educational agencies and schools considering the programs; and (3) Provide for necessary arrangements between local educational agencies and schools which decide to install a network program and the appropriate developer-demonstrator.

Program guidelines may be seen in the Grants Office (Julia Leverenz, Ext. 4391). No deadline.

AMERICAN COUNCIL OF LEARNED SOCIETIES

Travel Grants - For humanists to attend international meetings abroad in July-Oct. 1977. Contact J. Leverenz, ext. 391, or write Office of Fellowships and Grants, American Council of Learned Societies, 345 E. 46th Street, New York 10017.

ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

University Projects in Coal Research - ERDA is actively seeking researchers to investigate novel approaches in coal research. Program announcement is available in Grants Office (ext. 391), or call Ms. Finotti at 202/376-9119. Deadline: April 8.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

Research in Science Education - Projects to identify and develop innovative and practical technologies, methods and instructional materials that promise to improve science education, both formal and informal, at all levels. Activities include: 1.) Development, testing and evaluation of new instructional materials. 2.) Design, testing and evaluation of innovative instructional delivery modes. 3.) Design, testing and evaluation of experimental courses, curricula and degree programs. 4.) Identification of technologies that promise enhanced effectiveness of science education; experimentation with and improvement of these technologies. 5.) Needs assessments for specific development activities. 6.) Evaluation of impact and cost-effectiveness of innovative development projects or educational systems.

Further information and program guidelines are available in the Grants Office (Julia Leverenz, Ext. 4391). Application deadline April 22.

ORAU ENERGY INSTITUTES

Oak Ridge Associated Universities will present six energy-related institutes for college faculty members this summer. Sponsored by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration, the institutes are designed for faculty who teach, or plan to teach energy-related courses. A limited number of stipends are available.

The institutes to be presented are: Radiation Techniques for Quality Assurance in Energy Production, June 20-July 8; Nuclear Power Safety, June 27-July 1; Energy Production and the Environment, July 11-22; Biological and Ecological Applications of Radiation, July 11-29; Energy Options for the Future, August 1-12; and Energy Conservation: Theory and Practice, August 1-12.

The deadline for applications is April 29, 1977.

Full information and application material may be obtained from: Registrar, Special Training Division, Oak Ridge Associated Universities, P.O. Box 117, Oak Ridge, TN 37830.

"Metropolis" To Be Shown In March 2 Forum

The film "Metropolis," an expressionistic vision of a struggle between management and labor in a city of the future, will be shown in the March 2 Project Plus Forum at 7:30 p.m. in Millington Hall.

Elsa Diduk, associate professor of modern languages, will serve as commentator for the film.

Produced in 1927, the film still presages the city of the future. Fritz Lang, producer of such other classics as "While the City Sleeps," is director.

that were considered consistent with the comprehensive plan adopted by the County in 1975. There were several parcels of land in the county which are under consideration because of change in the R-2 designation.

Brown said that since the property contained several ravines, development would have to take into consideration the risk of environmental damage to the woods or lake. He said no development plan has been submitted for the site.

Notices

Students in the Jamestown Road Area residence halls will hold a reception Sunday, Feb. 27, at 3 p.m. in Barrett lobby for invited members of the faculty. Organizers said the reception is an opportunity for students and professors to get acquainted on an informal basis. Refreshments will be served.

PULLIAM JOURNALISM FELLOWSHIP--Eight $1,575 post-graduate awards will be given by the Pulliam Fellowship Program to provide journalism majors (and liberal arts graduates with part-time or summer newspaper experience) with 9 weeks of intensive work and study in a metropolitan news-editorial operation. Qualifications for applicants include proven potential in reporting, writing and editing. The seminar will follow a schedule of lectures and discussions, along with work assignments on the two Indianapolis newspapers. For complete information regarding qualifications, contact the Career Counseling Office. For applications, write Harvey C. Jacobs, Editor, The Indianapolis News, Indianapolis, Indiana, 46206.

SURPLUS PROPERTY SALE--Nearly 100 miscellaneous vehicles and equipment items are listed on the latest surplus property sale notice from the State Department of Purchases and Supply. The sale is "as is and where is" without warranty. Bids will be opened March 3 at 2 p.m. Successful bidders will be required to remit within ten calendar days and remove property within 20 calendar days from date of notice of award.

The 1970 Virginia Conflict of Interest Act prohibits any employee, spouse or relative residing in the employee's household, from purchasing property belonging to the agency by which that person is employed.

A schedule of items on sale, including several from the College, is available in the Purchasing Office, College News Office, and the Plant Office.

CLASSICS LECTURE--On Wednesday, March 2, the Classics Club will present Minor Markle, junior fellow at the Center for Hellenic Studies, Washington, D.C., in Morton 39 at 7:30 p.m. Markle's topic will be "The Sarissa-Armed Macedonian Infantry."

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS DISCUSSION--On Monday, February 28 at 9 p.m. in Adair 202 there will be an open meeting of women student athletes to discuss athletic policies and scholarship in the women's athletic program.

LIBRARY HOURS--Swem Library will observe the following schedule for the Spring recess March 4 - 13, 1977:

|-------------|---------------|
| March 4: | 8 a.m.-5 p.m. |
| March 5: | 9 a.m.-6 p.m. |

NASA Awards $50,000 Grant To Applied Science Program

A grant of $50,000 has been made to the College by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration through its Langley Research Center in Hampton in support of the College's Applied Science Program.

The award, which provides research funds for members of the mathematics, chemistry and physics departments, supplements a grant originally made to William and Mary scientists in 1972. Total funding now amounts to $398,400.

Faculty Member Slates Recital

"Night Piece" by the late British composer Benjamin Britten will be featured in a faculty piano recital by F. Donald Truesdell, Sunday, February 27, at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

The work, says Truesdell, is a quiet and lyrical nocturne with a highly unusual ending. The final discordant tone that is struck emerges as concordant, Truesdell explained, by the performer's manipulation of pedal and piano key. "I don't know of anything quite like it in piano literature," said Truesdell.

Sonatas by Scarlatti and Liszt and the "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin are also included on Sunday's program.

Truesdell has been a member of the music faculty since 1960.

Architect To Give Illustrated Lecture

Prize-winning architect Jean-Francois Gabriel will give an illustrated lecture on Le Corbusier's Church of Notre Dame at Ronchamp, France, on Thursday, February 24, at 8 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library. The public is invited to attend.

In addition to the slides, music will accompany portions of the lecture, which is sponsored by the fine arts department.

Gabriel has been a member of the faculty at Syracuse University's School of Architecture since 1970.

As a student at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris, Gabriel distinguished himself with several awards, including one for the best integration of environmental controls with architectural design and structure, one for the history of architecture and five for architectural design.

Projects undertaken by mathematics faculty researchers have been in the areas of graph theory and the theory of automatic control. Physicists have been concerned with nuclear magnetic resonance, upper atmosphere molecular reactions and plasma physics. Chemistry projects have centered around liquid crystals, iodine isotope production, catalysis in polymer production and in the study of exchange rates for hydrogen and deuterium in certain hydrocarbons.

According to George Rublein, associate professor of mathematics and director of the program, the grant has been an important source of support for graduate students in the Applied Science Program as well as for faculty members. Students, he said, are typically employed as assistants either for work done under the grant at the College or at the Langley Research Center.

The Applied Science Program offers master's degrees in computer science and in interdisciplinary areas of the physical sciences. Courses are given on the Williamsburg campus and at the Langley Research Center. About 50 full- and part-time students are currently enrolled.

DRAWINGS by Mary Barnes will continue on exhibit in Andrews Gallery through February 25.

Adult Skills Funding Ends This Month

Present funding for the Adult Skills Program will end on February 28, and it is "extremely unlikely" that more funding will be found, program directors told students last week.

More than $50,000 in federal funds has been provided for the program through the local Community Action Agency since the program was established in March 1975.

The present money, said Rita Welsh, project co-director with Associate Professor of Education Donald R. Lashinger, is running out, because federal regulations require 80 percent upward mobility. Program participants who are unemployed must find employment, and those employed must find better jobs to demonstrate the program's success, she said. "With the job freeze and current economic constraints," she said, "that's almost impossible."

Lashinger, College administrators and Community Action Agency head Larry Trumbo have sought additional funding from a variety of state, federal and local sources, but no money has become available. "I think we've exhausted all the money possibilities," said Lashinger.

Although funding will end, the program will continue on a limited basis through June. Mrs. Welsh will continue teaching on a volunteer basis until that time, but without the assistance of full-time teacher Mary Beth Ryan. Secretary Glenda Teer has also volunteered to serve through June without pay.

Coordinated jointly by the Community Action Agency and William and Mary's School of Education and Affirmative Action Office, the program is designed to improve the reading and learning skills of area residents who do not have a high school diploma or the General Educational Development (GED) equivalency.

Forty-six students, ranging in age from 16 to 63 years and in education levels from no formal education through completion of high school, are currently taking classes in the Morton

Hall program headquarters. The majority are William and Mary employees, with employees from Colonial Williamsburg and Camp Peary and other area residents also participating. Many of the students receive released time from their jobs in order to attend classes.

Since its inception two years ago, the program has seen four of its students pass their GED examinations. Other gains, not as easily measured but just as important as passing the GED tests, said Welsh, have been a "real growth in the reading and math abilities of the students."

Both Welsh and Lashinger are hopeful that the program can someday be resumed. "There's enough evidence to indicate the worth of this program," said Lashinger. "I feel that someday it might be continued. It might be five years away. It might mean expanded legislation for programs to eradicate illiteracy. But it's important work, and we'll try to take it up again."

'Revolution' Coming To Project Plus In 1977-78

Revolution is. . . . ?

In common parlance, the word Revolution has been devalued through overuse to refer to everything from hair spray to space exploration. Even when directed more narrowly to political, social, economic or religious upheavals, most people are hard-pressed to state exactly what is meant by "Revolution."

"Revolution" is one of those terms that demands to be defined--and then resists the attempt.

Students in the Project Plus program on campus will take on that challenge in September.

Approximately 80 students--sophomores, juniors and seniors--will join the academic-residential program for an interdisciplinary study of the overall theme "Revolution."

What direction students will take in pursuing the theme and what conclusions they will reach at the end of the year will depend upon the discoveries they make in the reading, forums and tutorials that make up the program. They may consider theories of political Revolution or do a comparative study to determine what instructive distinctions can be drawn between the Glorious Revolution in England, and the American, French and Russian Revolutions.

It is possible that students will explore the origins of the industrial revolution, racial revolutions or the women's revolution.

This is the sixth year for Project Plus, which has continued to enjoy good response from the campus community. Students in the freshman, sophomore and junior class may sign up for Project Plus as part of their schedule for the following year. Students must write a 300-500 word statement on why they want to join Project Plus as part of their application.

Carlyle Beyer, director of honors and experimental programs, said the program appeals not only to those students who are sure they can make a contribution to the program, but also to those who have not decided on a particular field of study and want the experience of an interdisciplinary program to help them make that decision.

Beyer likes the self selection aspect of the program. "If we tried to pick students," he said, "we would miss students who want this kind of social and academic experience."

The residence hall of Project Plus provides a "house" in which students live, study and relax in an informal setting. There are areas for classes, an extensive library of paperback books, a lounge for recreation and some eating facilities. There are two kitchens where students prepare meals either through dinner groups or on an independent basis.

Project Plus, consistent with the spirit in which it was conceived, assumes that participants will achieve reasonable and responsible self-government. As a group and in consultation with the resident administrator, participants set their own regulations, consistent with established College policy.

Applications each year have numbered between 130 and 140. There are always requests for a second year from satisfied participants, but few requests can be accommodated.

Project Plus students are currently studying various aspects of a general theme entitled "The Cities in History and Contemporary Life."

Established in 1972, the program has taken such themes as "The State of the American Dream," "The Future of Technological Society," "Medieval and Renaissance Man," and "Conflict and Revolution,"--as challenging as the one they will tackle in September.
