PRESIDENT'S HOUSE PROJECT LAUNCHED

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., announced at commencement exercises May 15 that Clement E. Conger, who was honored by the College with an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree, has agreed to chair a committee seeking Queen Anne and Chippendale furniture to refurbish the President's House at the College with authentic pieces.

Gifts of furniture will be sought primarily from parents, friends and alumni of the College. No time limit has been set for the project.

The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation has agreed to serve in a consulting capacity to Mr. Conger and members of his committee, who will be named at a later date.

Conger is curator of the diplomatic reception rooms at the State Department and has been Curator of the White House since 1970.

SENIOR PLEDGE SETS NEW RECORD

This year's graduating class has pledged the largest senior class gift in the history of the College.

More than 350 seniors have pledged $17,716 to the Campaign for the College to support a new wild flower refuge and to boost the emergency student loan fund. The amount raised easily surpasses the students' goal of $14,000, as well as the $10,250 collected from 242 students in 1976.

Seventy-five volunteers from the senior class contacted 10 friends each with a "personal pitch" for funds. Then mail and telephone solicitations conducted under the guidance of the Office of Development filled in the gaps. Students were asked to make annual pledges over a five year period, with the first payment not due until a year after graduation.

The senior gift project was coordinated by committee chairman Karen Murphy of Ringwood, N.J., and senior class president Margaret Rollins of Rockville.

Most of the funds donated by seniors will pay for construction of pine bark paths through the wooded area located in a ravine across from Millington Hall and adjacent to Crim Dell pond.

A smaller portion of the senior class fund will be used to provide students with interest free, short-term emergency loans administered by the director of the student aid office.

Fiscal Matters Top Board Agenda

Budgets and funding were prime topics of discussion at the May 12-14 meeting of the Board of Visitors on campus.

The Board approved the 1977-78 budgets for State and Private Auxiliary Enterprises and for the Athletic and Recreational activities, the Men's Athletic Association, the Women's Athletic Association and the Men's and Women's Intramural and Recreational Sports.

(See Board Actions, Pages 8-10.)

The Board also endorsed the state-wide November bond referendum and offered its support to the effort to acquaint the Commonwealth's voters with the importance of its passage.

The referendum proposes that the State borrow, through bonds, $125,000,000 to finance a variety of important capital outlay projects. The referendum, which will be voted upon in the November 8 elections, segregates these projects into separate proposals for public college and universities, for penal and correctional facilities, parks and recreational facilities, for mental health and training center facilities, and for port facilities at Hampton Roads.

Of the $86,475,000 designated for higher education, some $5,100,000 would be allocated to complete the construction of the new building for the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

The board resolution pointed out that "virtually all of the projects in all of the separate parts of the referendum are critically needed in Virginia. . . . To delay them would add further inflationary pressure to their estimated costs and thus to the State's future biennial budgets."

Archaeologist To Join Faculty As Eminent Scholar

One of the country's most prominent historical archaeologists will join the William and Mary faculty next year under the Eminent Scholars program.

James J. F. Deetz, who will be visiting professor of anthropology, currently teaches at Brown University and is assistant director of Plimoth Plantation, Plymouth, Mass.

Funds to support the Eminent Scholars each year on campus are provided by the State through the Eminent Scholars program and are augmented through the Endowment Association.

In addition to teaching anthropology courses, Deetz will give a series of four public lectures. Deetz has gained a highly respected reputation in his field for his innovative approaches in applying anthropological principles to interpret archaeological materials.

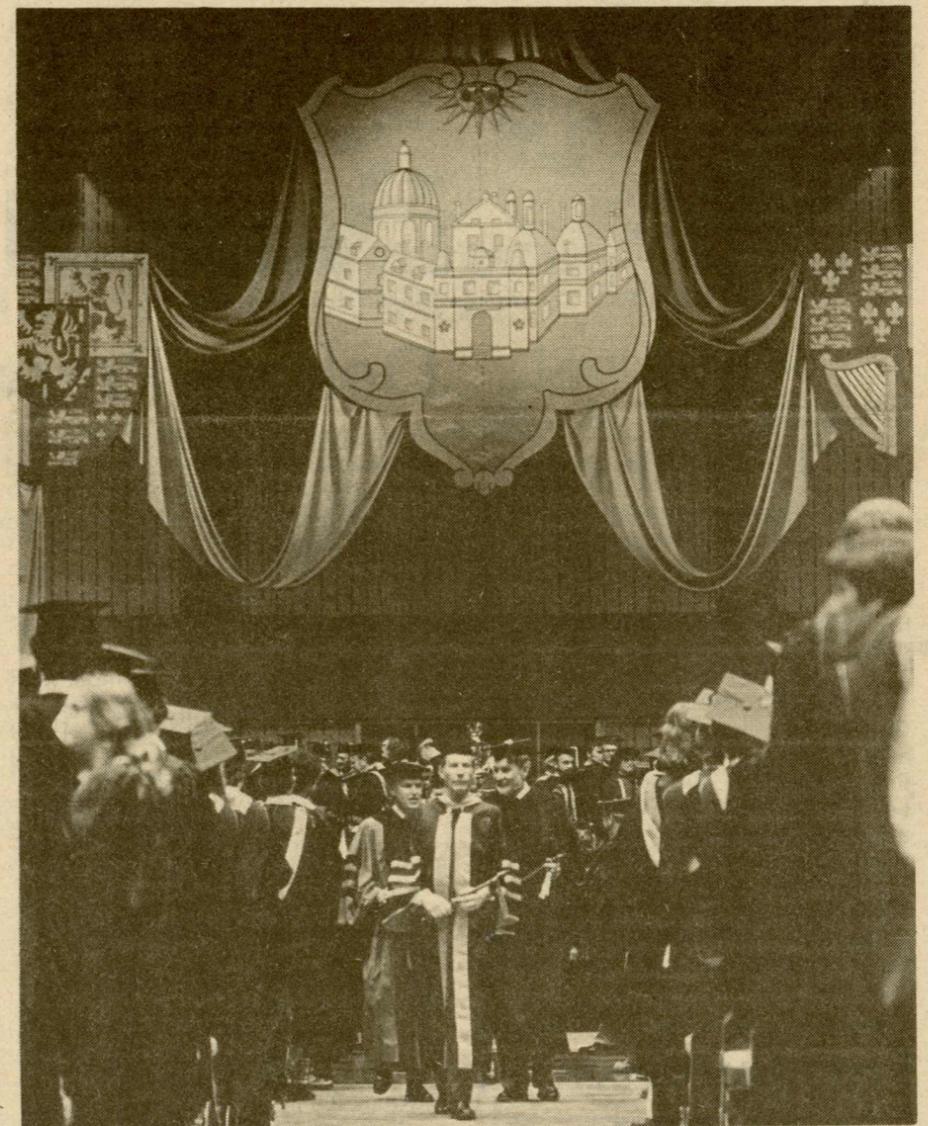

He has also written several key books for the student and the layman that have contributed to public understanding of archaeology, including "Invitation to Archaeology" (Doubleday, 1967) and his recently completed "Invitation to Historical Archaeology," which is forthcoming.

His scholarly works have focused on American Indian culture and interpreting archaeological evidence. Deetz's numerous articles have been published in such journals as American Antiquity, Natural History, Historic Preservation, the Saturday Review of Science, and the Bulletin of the American Anthropological Association.

Deetz is past president of the Society for Historical Archaeology and currently serves on the society's executive committee.

A member of the Brown University faculty since 1967, Deetz has also taught at the University of California at Santa Barbara and Harvard University.

Deetz received his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from Harvard University.

Retiring English Professor and Chief Marshall of the Faculty Frank Evans leads the recession following commencement exercises, May 15 in William and Mary Hall.

Rehnquist Brings Bad News And Good News To Graduates

"Do not set your own personal sights so high that your prospects for a happy and useful life depend solely on the realization of long-term career goals," Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist told some 1,300 William and Mary graduates at Commencement ceremonies, May 15.

"Only a few can succeed in realizing their ambitions fully," he said, "and even realization of goals such as these is no guarantee of a happy and useful life."

(See text of Rehnquist address, pp. 6-7)

The College awarded approximately 930 undergraduate degrees and some 370 graduate degrees, as well as 25 Certificates of Advanced Study in Education.

During the ceremonies in William and Mary Hall, honorary degrees were presented to Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., Ind.-Va.; Clement E. Conger, curator of the diplomatic reception rooms at the State Department; Dumas Malone, Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation biographer-in-residence and professor emeritus of history at the University of Virginia; Catherine F. Shouse, who was instrumental in

Working For 12 Keeps Her Busy

Being the only secretary for 12 people would be nerve-racking for many, but Carol Roe enjoys it.

Roe, who has been departmental secretary for William and Mary's government department for the past two years, is also good at her job. So good, in fact, that she was one of two College employees to receive a $25 savings bond award this year for her outstanding work.

Roe and Chris Boll, staff technician in PBK Hall, received the savings bond awards in a brief ceremony May 9 in the President's Office. They were the first employees to receive the award, which recognizes outstanding contributions to the College by staff members, said Personnel Director I. H. Robitshek. Roe was nominated by Government Department Chairman Margaret Hamilton for her consistently excellent work for the department.

Roe's office on the ground floor of Morton Hall is the clearinghouse for much of the paperwork of the government department. She handles all correspondence for the department chairman, Margaret Hamilton, and types everything from course outlines to examinations for the eleven other faculty members.

The department also offers a master's degree program, and Roe answers many of the graduate inquiries about financial aid, admissions and other routine questions.

Does she find it difficult working for twelve different people? "I'm always very busy," she laughs. "But I get along well with the faculty and students, and I enjoy it."

"Government is such a current thing that it's always interesting," she said. Since she began working for the department, she says she has found herself following both American politics and developments in international relations more closely.

In her work for the College, she has had ample opportunity to view both from close quarters. Within the past year, CBS News correspondent Roger Mudd has been on campus and spoken with government students, as has former presidential candidate George Romney.

The department kept a close watch on election politics during the closely contested presidential race last fall and this year is just as interested in the upcoming state elections, Roe said. Government professors and students, she said, frequently take opinion polls on the candidates and the election issues.

Election politics took on special significance for government classes in the fall, when the October 22 Presidential Debate was held on campus and students met with journalists accompanying the candidates, Roe said.

Grounds Worker Otis Jackson Dies

Grounds worker Otis L. Jackson Sr., 60, died May 6 at Williamsburg Community Hospital following an accident on campus earlier that day.

Jackson, of 119 Church Road in Grove, was killed when a tree limb on which he had been working fell on him in the yard of the Alumni House.

Jackson was a native of York County and a member of Mt. Gilead Baptist Church.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Rosetta Jackson of New York City; two sons, Morris Jackson of Williamsburg and Otis L. Jackson Jr. of New York; two sisters, Mrs. Della Crump and Miss Catherine Jackson of New York; his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary S. Jones of Williamsburg, and three grandchildren.

17 Commissioned During May 14 ROTC Ceremony

Thirteen second lieutenants were commissioned in the United States Army and four second lieutenants in the United States Marine Corps, during the military science department's spring commissioning ceremony May 14 in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

For the first time in the history of the College women received commissions as a result of participation in the ROTC Program and the Marine Platoon Leaders Class. Stacey Morse received an Army commission, and Karen Heck received a Marine Corps Commission.

Major General Alton G. Post, the commanding general of the United States Army Transportation Center and Fort Eustis, delivered the main address.

Debate Preparations Kept 'Frantic Pace'

Chris Boll was only a stage whisper's distance away from Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter when the October 22 Presidential Debate was broadcast from Phi Beta Kappa Hall. But while audiences across the country listened to the candidates' arguments, Boll was among dozens of technicians working to insure that the staging of the event and the broadcasting went smoothly.

Boll and Government Department secretary Carol Roe were selected recipients this month of $25 employee savings bond awards. Boll was nominated by Theatre and Speech Department chairman for his work preparing PBK for the third Presidential Debate.

Boll, who is staff technician for events at Phi Beta Kappa, was given special security clearance to be on stage and operate the house lights during the debate.

That evening capped what Boll considers one of the most hectic periods of his career. He estimates he put in close to 100 hours working that week.

"It was an interesting and unusual week," he said. "Lighting for television is much different from lighting for theatre performances. NBC [which broadcast the debate] brought most of their own equipment, so we didn't have to use our own." The technical crews, however, constantly called on Boll for everything from information about the location of electrical outlets to supplying tables and pitchers of water.

Didn't he find it distracting trying to work with so many internationally known newscasters and with the candidates themselves around?

"Not really," he said. "We've had some top notch people in here [Phi Beta Kappa Hall], and I've found it helps to detach oneself. I'm here to provide them with all the comforts they need, and I can do that best if I don't let their notoriety affect the way I handle them," he said.

Boll is used to a frantic pace in his job. "I'm here about 14 to 16 hours a day during the busiest time of the year," he estimates.

His title as "staff technician" encompasses a variety of responsibilities.

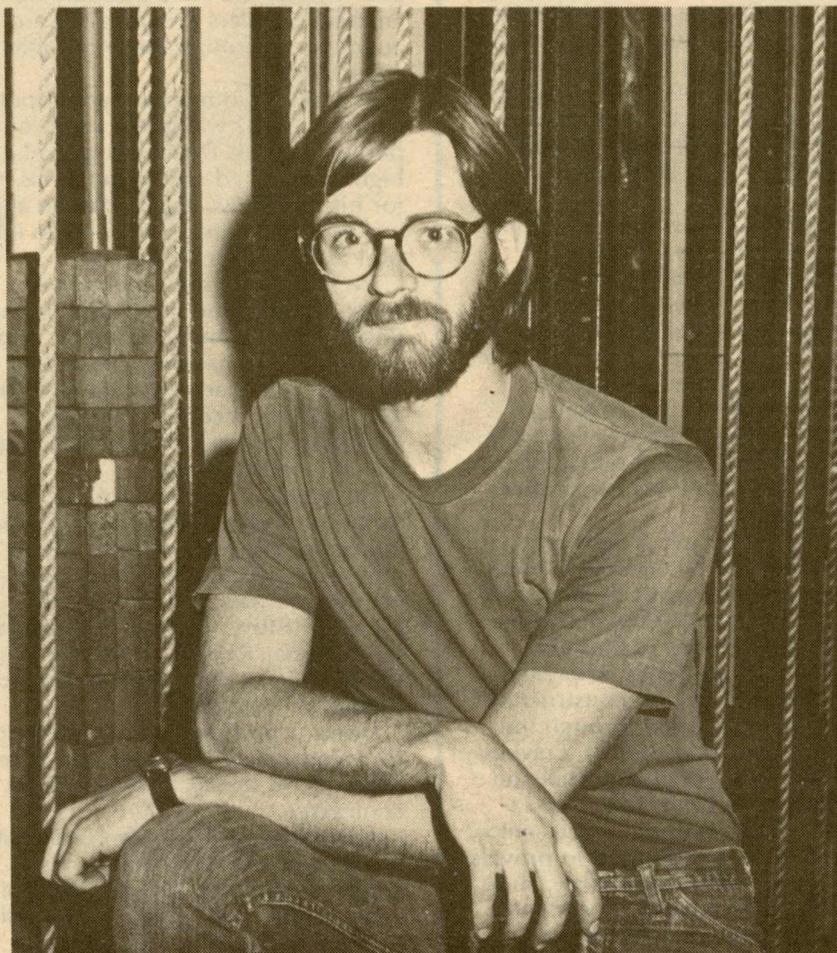

"I'm the house technician, carpenter, electrician, resident stage manager, and the person in the building responsible for giving technical assistance to any group using Phi Beta Kappa, except the William and Mary Theatre," he said. Various members of the theatre department provide technical direction for the College's own theatre productions, he explained.

"I'm in charge of minding the store," he said.

Boll sees to it that technical arrangements are complete for such events as the Charter Day convocation, Concert Series performances, lectures, senior music recitals, and choir and orchestra concerts.

Boll enjoys the constant variety in his work. "It's never the same," he said.

Brush Awarded NSF Grant To Study Peruvian Farmers

Anthropology professor Stephen Brush will spend the next 14 months in Peru researching one aspect of a global problem--feeding the world's growing population.

Brush has received a two-year $34,700 grant from the National Science Foundation to study the Peruvian potato farmer who is being asked to forsake a tradition of primitive agriculture for modernization in an attempt to boost food supplies.

Brush has also received a faculty research assignment from the College to further his work in Peru. A $6,200 grant from the International Potato Center in Lima, Peru, will support Heath Carney, a senior from McLean, Va., who will accompany Brush as a research assistant. He is majoring in anthropology and biology.

For centuries, Brush explained, peasants in the Andean mountains have carefully tilled the soil so as not to disturb the delicate ecological balance of the mountain terrain.

Since no chemicals are used to prime the soil, fields are traditionally left fallow for ten to 15 years. No pesticides or fungicides are used on crops, and farmers plant many varieties of potatoes to insure against a total crop failure. Peasants plant enough to meet their local needs, rather than selling to a distant market.

Soccer Players Chosen For Olympic Tryouts

Kip Germain and Chris Davin, two of William and Mary's top soccer players, have been selected to try out for the U.S. Olympic Team.

The top 50 college and high school players in the United States have been invited to the Squaw Valley, Cal., training camp. Of that group, 18 will be chosen to represent the U.S. on a tour and compete in Yugoslavia in late June.

Germain and Davin led the William and Mary soccer team to the Southern Conference title last season.

Williams To Exchange With British Professor

Under an exchange program conducted by the University of Exeter and the College of William and Mary, British law Professor John William Bridge will exchange his teaching assignment, office, home and car with Walter L. Williams, Jr., of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Bridge will teach courses on public international law and law in the European Economic Community (E.E.C.) during his year-long tenure in Williamsburg. He'll also be used as a "special resource person" who will hold seminars and guest lectures for other academic departments that include courses concerned with international relations.

A professor at Exeter since 1961, Bridge received his advanced degrees from the University of Bristol, England. He has collaborated with Dominic Lasok, a Tazewell Taylor Professor of Law at the College during 1976-77, on a book entitled "Introduction to European Common Law."

Williams will teach two courses, deliver special lectures and conduct major research at the British university. In particular, he will study the environmental law of the EEC and its efforts to maintain a system of coastal zone management.

The growing demand for food in many nations of the world, however, is causing drastic changes in that centuries-old lifestyle, Brush points out.

"There is a hungry world, and Peru herself needs to produce more food," Brush said. Peasant farmers are being asked to introduce less crop variety, to plant new, more disease resistant strains, to grow larger amounts and to use chemicals to bolster crop yields.

The use of chemicals, modern farming equipment and irrigation apparatus, however, also means a more intricate economic system than the peasant is used to, says Brush. Under the traditional style of life, the Andean peasant had no need for much money. His ignorance of modern economic practices may leave him open to exploitation, Brush fears.

"It is a moral dilemma," says Brush. "The peasant is being asked to give up a fairly stable livelihood using traditional, but well adapted agricultural policies for the uncertainty of producing more. The Green Revolution is asking them not only to disrupt their lifestyle but also to disrupt nature. Ecological and aesthetic arguments, though, are very difficult to weigh against the hunger of millions."

A graduate of the University of California and the University of Wisconsin, Brush has been a member of the faculty at William and Mary since 1973.

Faculty Appointments Made For 77-78

A number of faculty appointments have been made in the School of Education, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and in several departments.

Clifton Forbes Conrad has been named associate professor and James Wheelock Beers assistant professor, both in the School of Education. Conrad is assistant professor of higher education at the University of Denver. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Kansas and doctoral degree from the University of Michigan.

Beers is assistant professor, reading, at Oakland University, Rochester, Mich. A graduate of the Johns Hopkins University, he holds both graduate degrees from the University of Virginia.

J. Rodney Johnson, professor at the T.C. Williams School of Law at the University of Richmond, has been appointed visiting professor of law from 1977-78. A William and Mary graduate, Johnson received his J.D. from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and LL.M. from New York University School. He was a member of the William and Mary law faculty from 1967-70.

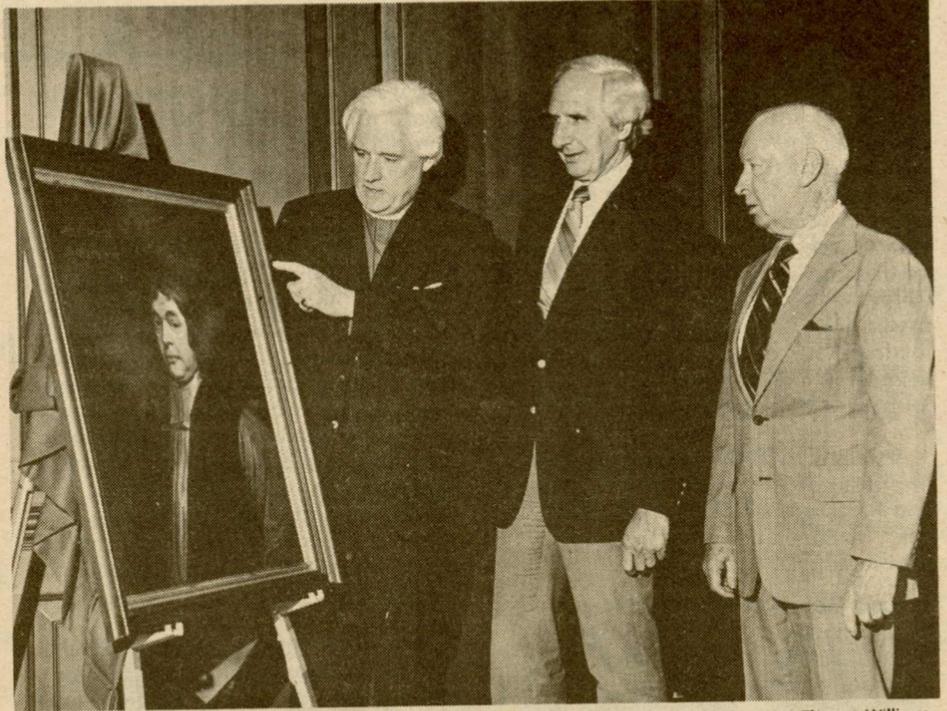

In the department of Government, Morris A. McCain Jr. has been ap-

Campaign Progress On Target

Progress in the three year, $19 million Campaign for the College "is precisely on target," Vice President for Development Warren Heemann reported to the Board of Visitors last week.

"As of April 30, we had 32 per cent of our Campaign goal committed," Heemann said. Major commitments, he said, total some $6,025,300 for the first year of the campaign.

"We have obtained the two largest corporate gifts ever made to William and Mary--the Anheuser Busch $150,000 gift for tennis courts and the International Business Machines Corporation gift of $100,000 for the School of Business Administration for a program to develop women manage-

Thomas Williams

Earlier this month the College received a portrait of its first Chancellor, Henry Compton, Bishop of London, as a Bicentennial gift from the fifty-six livery companies of the City of London which subscribed to the Virginia Company in 1609. The portrait, a copy by London artist Jeremy Courtney of one in the collection of previous bishops belonging to the See of London, was presented to the College by the Right Reverend and Right Honorable Lord Bishop of London, Gerald Ellison (left) 21st successor to Bishop Compton.

The portrait was received for the College by George R. Healy, vice president for academic affairs (center), and John R. Lee Johnson, rector of the Board of Visitors (at right). Compton, Bishop of London from 1675-1714, was Chancellor of the College during 1693-1700 and 1707-13. The presentation ceremony was held May 10 in the Great Hall of the Wren Building following a luncheon in honor of Bishop Ellison and Mrs. Ellison.

In a resolution of appreciation to the livery companies and to the Bishop, the Board of Visitors, noted that, "as part of the College's art collection, the Compton portrait will become another visible link of friendship that we here in Williamsburg share with England. It will be enjoyed not only by the students and faculties of the College, but also by the thousands of visitors who visit this historic campus."

pointed assistant professor. The recipient of a Rhodes Scholarship and Woodrow Wilson Honorary Fellowship, McCain has been adjunct instructor at the University of New Haven for five years. He graduated summa cum laude from Carleton College, holds master's degrees from both Oxford and Yale Universities, and is a candidate for the doctoral degree from Yale University.

Virginia Kerns will join the anthropology department next year as visiting assistant professor. A William and Mary graduate, Kerns holds a master's degree from Case Western Reserve University and is a doctoral degree candidate at the University of Illinois. She is a Woodrow Wilson Honorary Fellow and has received a National Institute of Mental Health pre-doctoral fellowship and a Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad Fellowship.

Four appointments have been announced in the English department. Michael Meyer, assistant professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, will be visiting assistant professor. Meyer graduated from William Paterson College and holds both advanced degrees from the University of Connecticut.

Julia L. Epstein, Katherine C. Hill and Marjorie Lee Westerman have been named to three-year rotating instructorships in English.

Epstein has studied at the Universite de Strasbourg, France, graduated summa cum laude from Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and received a master's degree from Cornell University, where she is currently a candidate for the doctoral degree.

Hill graduated summa cum laude from Fordham University, N.Y. She holds the M.A. and M. Phil. degrees from Columbia University, where she is a doctoral degree candidate.

An English instructor at Louisiana State University, New Orleans, La., Westerman received her B.A. degree from Bryn Mawr College. She was a Fulbright Scholar at Oxford University and holds M. Phil. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale University.

First Graduates Of Richard Bland Are Honored

The first graduates of Richard Bland College, members of the class of 1963, were honored at May 22 commencement exercises in Petersburg.

"There is nothing more satisfying to an educator than finding that an institution's efforts are justified by the results, and the work done at Richard Bland College is certainly evident in its first graduates," Richard Bland President Clarence Maze said.

All but one graduate from the class of 1963 now holds an undergraduate degree from a four-year institution. One alumnus is completing work toward a baccalaureate degree from the University of Maryland.

Richard Bland, the two-year branch college of William and Mary, is currently the only two-year branch institution in the state system of higher education. All other state-supported schools are four-year institutions or part of the Community College system.

W&M Theatre Is 'Thriving Enterprise', Says Sherman

Roger D. Sherman, who closes out three decades with the William and Mary Theatre with his retirement in June, has watched it grow in stature as a college theatre and is optimistic that it will continue to prosper.

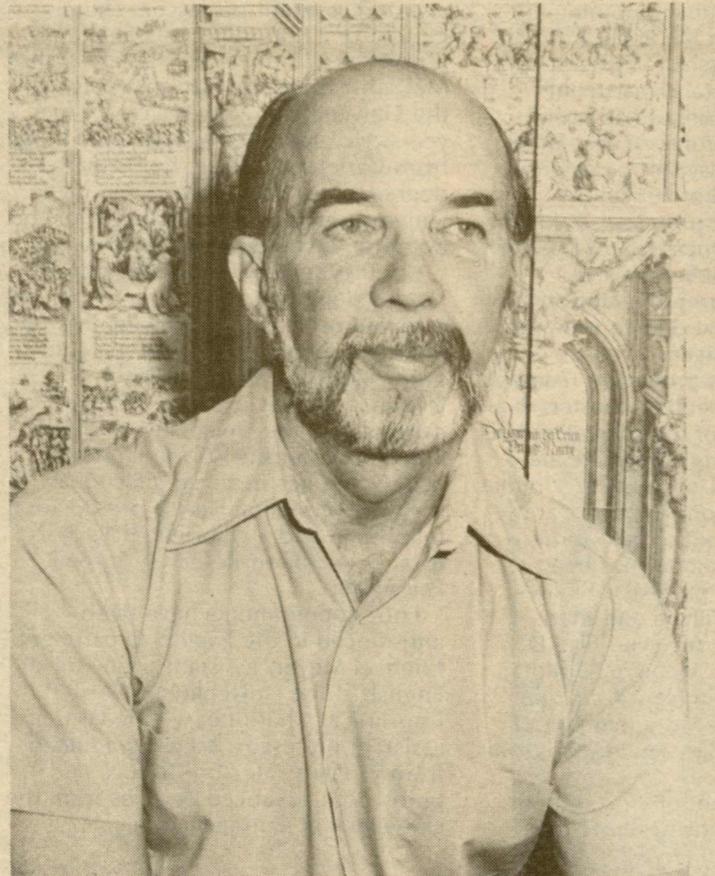

Of the future Sherman says, "The William and Mary Theatre is a thriving enterprise--it's been growing in so many ways and will continue to grow. I think it's in good hands."

Sherman, who steps down as chairman of the Theatre and Speech Department and concludes 31 years of teaching upon retirement, has been lighting designer for The Theatre since 1946. He has been responsible for the evocative lighting that has often set the mood for William and Mary Theatre productions in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

In addition to teaching students about the creative elements of lighting and design for theatre, Sherman has also taught them about the administrative side. Having been associated with "The Common Glory" during its 28 seasons as lighting designer, general manager and most recently as executive vice president of the Jamestown Corporation, Sherman has had extensive experience to draw on in his courses on theatre management.

Sherman's interests have been exceptionally broad outside of theatre, including painting, graphics, drawing and photography. Because he also enjoys white water canoeing, students and faculty members this spring gave him a new outboard motor to use when crossing tidal waters.

After attending the Vesper George School of Art in Boston, Mass., Sherman received a Bachelor of Arts degree from William and Mary. He was the recipient of a Rockefeller Scholarship in Photography, and did graduate work at Yale University. He is a member of the American National Theatre and Academy, the American National Theatre Association, and has served on the board of directors of the Williamsburg-James City County Chamber of Commerce.

Al Haak: Inventor, Engineer, Technician

Albert E. Haak, professor of theatre and speech, is retiring this June after making locations from "Brigadoon" to Elizabethan England come to life on stage in William and Mary Theatre productions for three decades.

As technical director of William and Mary Theatre since 1947, Haak has had the challenge of being a construction engineer, inventor and problem solver all in one, able to meet production deadlines and technical demands, then strike the set to get ready for the next show.

Since William and Mary Theatre has a regular schedule of 4 major productions each year, Haak has often worked at a hectic pace to have sets, props and sound effects ready for each opening night.

To show their appreciation to Al Haak, theatre students and faculty members recently presented him with a special memento - a bound album of pictures and programs of every show from 1947 to 1977.

Haak received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Lawrence College, and a Master of Arts degree from William and Mary. He did graduate work at Columbia University.

In addition to his work with William and Mary Theatre, Haak was technical director for "The Common Glory" during its 28 seasons. Currently, he is the treasurer of the "Scotch Tom" Nelson Corporation, which produces a theatrical presentation about patriot Thomas Nelson Jr., called "Where Two Chimneys Rise" at the historic Nelson House in Yorktown. Haak is also technical director of the production.

Law School Is A Family Affair

The biggest problem facing law school professors today is the same problem legal educators faced 40 years ago--bridging the gap between theory and practice.

So says C. Harper Anderson, who is retiring this spring after teaching 31 years at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. "Today law schools have recognized that this problem does exist, and they are trying very hard to bridge the gap by creating more legal research courses and additional moot court programs," says Anderson.

Through the years, law schools have established at least one more practice that has brought experiences in the classroom closer to those in the actual courtroom. They've hired lecturers like Anderson--successful practicing lawyers who can speak first-hand about an endless variety of cases.

"Teaching and practicing law complement each other," says Anderson. "I try to use my experiences to show students the practical side of law. The civil procedure course I teach fits in directly with the cases I handle in my practice."

Anderson comes from a family of loyal--and successful--William and Mary graduates. His father, though he "didn't have a nickel to his name," hitched a free ride on a train and headed for the College in 1896. He borrowed $90 for tuition and two years later received a two-year teaching certificate. The experience was a difficult but enriching one--so valuable, in fact, that he decided to send four sons to the College.

C. Harper Anderson was born in Kentucky and raised in North Carolina, where his father was a Presbyterian minister and his mother a school teacher. Marshall-Wythe students say the mild-mannered teacher reflects the quality of "a true southern gentleman."

Anderson entered the College in a combined six year undergraduate and law program in 1936. After a brief war-time stint in the Navy, he returned to Williamsburg to accept a position on the law school faculty in 1946. He taught full-time for 10 years before setting up his own practice in Williamsburg.

Anderson admits that when he went to school things were different. Very few students elected to study law. It was relatively expensive, says Anderson, and "we didn't need nearly as many lawyers back then. Things were by no means as complex."

"I'm sorry to go, but after 31 years I think it's time for someone else to teach," says Anderson. Nevertheless, there will still be an Anderson at Marshall-Wythe next fall--C. Harper's oldest son will be a first-year student.

English Professor Frank Evans

After Two Retirements Riley Is As Busy As Ever

Edward M. Riley says he "hasn't learned to say no yet" when someone asks him to do something.

That may be part of the reason why, even though he has retired twice in the last six months, he still has lots of work ahead of him. Riley retired from his duties as director of research for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in December, and he will retire as lecturer in history at the College in June.

Riley was instrumental in founding an apprenticeship program sponsored by the Institute of Early American History and Culture, the College and Colonial Williamsburg, to prepare students to work in the field of preservation and interpretation of historical sites.

Under the program, students work editing historical manuscripts to "get acquainted with the tools of the trade," Riley said.

"I really enjoy working with students and getting them interested in colonial Virginia history," he said. During retirement he hopes to continue advising several master's and doctoral degree candidates in the William and Mary history program, he said.

Riley also hopes to find time during retirement for several research projects he would like to complete. Finding that time, however, may not be easy.

Riley heads the Virginia Colonial Records Project, which William and Mary librarian Earl Greg Swem started in the mid-fifties and, Riley says, "I still don't see any end to it." With support from the Virginia legislature, the committee is locating and microfilming colonial Virginia records in Great Britain.

Riley is chairman of the Publications Committee and the Committee of Historians for the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission. Since 1974 he has also been editor for the VIBC of a series of 23 booklets on Virginia and The War of Independence.

A native of Oxford, Miss., Riley holds an A.B. degree from Washington and Lee University, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Southern California.

Education Is Returning To Basics

In recent months, several colleges and universities have announced plans to re-examine their programs and the kinds of courses students are required to take.

English professor Frank Evans views the studies as an emerging trend "back to basics" in liberal education and hopes to see the trend continue.

"There's always a swinging back and forth between specialization and generalization [in college curricula]," says Evans, "but I hope we're coming back to a basic core in liberal education. Writing and reading, some amount of mathematics, and logical thinking are fundamental to all disciplines and are at the heart of a liberal education," he said. Professors, he said, have a common responsibility to communicate these basic skills and knowledges to students through the courses they teach.

Evans had a hand in shaping the current curriculum at William and Mary as chairman of the committee on the revision of the curriculum in 1968-70. The trend at that time, he said, was to liberalize the curriculum, giving students greater freedom of choice in their course selection. "Now we're moving back in the other direction," he said, although he hopes it will not return to the rigidity of curricula in the 50's and 60's.

Evans is retiring from the College this spring after 30 years as a member of the faculty.

He has taken a strong interest in faculty affairs, chairing committees on revising the faculty bylaws, on faculty research and on evaluating the College's educational aims and means in a self-study survey.

When Evans led the academic procession at the commencement ceremony May 15, it was his last as chief marshal. He became a faculty marshal in 1962 and has been chief marshal since 1968, coordinating arrangements with the faculty for convocations at Charter Day and Commencement.

Evans' retirement will not bring an end to his activities at the College. Currently he is in the midst of a search for an original copy of the 1693 charter that officially established the College.

His search, Evans says, has probably raised as many questions as it has answered. He is now working through officials at the U.S. National Archives to learn if one story he has uncovered is true--that late in the 18th century a Russian merchant took the charter to the library in Leningrad [then called St. Petersburg].

Professor Evans has combined his teaching and scholarly responsibilities with administrative activities many times during his years at the College.

In 1955-58 and again in 1960-62 he chaired the division of the humanities.

Evans was instrumental in establishing the honors program in the English department and served as its director from 1958-60. He also helped to shape the graduate program in English into one of the stronger master's programs on campus. He has been director of graduate study in English three times, from 1958-59, 1962-63 and again from 1970 to 1976.

founding the Wolf Trap Foundation for the Performing Arts; and Justice Rehnquist.

The Lord Botetourt Medal for academic excellence was awarded to Janis M. Horne of Williamsburg.

Jeffrey A. Hosmer, Pittsburgh, Pa., received the James Frederick Carr Memorial Cup, which is presented on the basis of character, scholarship and leadership. Hosmer has been president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, captain of the football team, a member of Omicron Delta Kappa leadership fraternity and an Aide to the President of the College.

Algernon Sydney Sullivan awards were presented to Karen A. Yanity and Jeffrey W. Leppo for showing the "characteristics of heart, mind and conduct as evince a spirit of love for and helpfulness to other men and women."

Yanity has been president of Mortar Board, a member of the residence hall staff, vice-president of Interhall, an active participant in Circle K and a member of ODK.

Leppo has served as chairman of the Board of Student Affairs and as student liaison to the Board of Visitors. He has been a member of the residence hall staff and was selected for membership in both ODK and Mortar Board.

The third Sullivan Award, given annually to a person who has a close relation to the College, was awarded to Marguerite Wynne-Roberts, Williamsburg. Miss Roberts joined the William and Mary faculty in 1925 as an instructor in physical education for women. She was promoted to assistant professor in 1928, and in 1934 was appointed Assistant Dean of Women, a position she held for 20 years.

In making the award, President Thomas A. Graves Jr. said "The loyalty and devotion she has given this College and its students, the contribution she has made to life in the Williamsburg community, and the ideal of service to others her life so conspicuously demonstrates, have endeared her to all of us who have been privileged to know her."

President Graves also inducted members of the Class of 1927 into the Old Guard of the College.

Senior class president Margaret L. Rollins, who gave valedictory remarks, announced that the senior class—in addition to pledging the largest amount ever by a graduating class—would award $1,000 to the Campus Center for equipment to furnish a craft center.

Four awards were presented by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at ceremonies for graduating law students May 15 in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Richard Siegel, Williamsburg, received the Weber Diploma, which is presented by the law school faculty to the graduating student who, because of outstanding scholarship, character and leadership, shows the greatest professional promise.

The Faculty Award for Outstanding Student Service was presented to Michael Crookshank of Abingdon, and James Hanagan of Alexandria.

Former Rector of the Board of Visitors R. Harvey Chappell Jr., Richmond, was selected for the St. George Tucker Society Barrister Member Award.

The Marshall-Wythe Medallion was awarded to Judge Shirley M. Hufstedler of the U.S. Court of Appeals, ninth district. Judge Hufstedler also gave the main address at the ceremonies.

In a School of Business Administration award ceremony May 15 in the Great Hall of the Wren Building, the School honored one undergraduate and three graduate students.

The Wayne Gibbs Accounting Award was presented to graduating senior Kathleen Diane Durdin of Lakeland, Fla.

Masters of Business Administration degree recipients Stephen C. Bryan, Newport News, and James T. Warns Jr., Arlington, tied for the School's Sponsors' Award.

The Dean's Award was given to MBA student Kenneth E. Grebenstein of Montville, N.J.

desire for a large and ever-growing bank account. Wordly hopes in this sense may stem quite as much from altruism as from selfishness, and they embrace ambition to save lives through medical skills and to reform the system of justice through legal skills quite as much as they do through the amassing of wealth.

One of the most delightful events associated with my high school graduation many years ago was the senior class play. And the play, which we put on thirty odd years ago, was the then-popular "You Can't Take It With You," written by Moss Hart and George Kaufman. One of the principle characters of the play was Grandpa Vanderhoff, an eccentric, but lovable, old man, who presided over a household of equally eccentric people. One of his lines in that play has stuck with me all of these years. In the last act he says, "How many of us would be willing to settle when we're young for what we eventually get? All those plans we made . . . Whatever happens to them? It's only a handful of the lucky ones that can look back and say they even came close."

Grandpa Vanderhoff's observation is a little on the gloomy side, compared to the inspirational tone of many commencement addresses. But there is a lot of truth within it. There are only a few in any generation who can be president of General Motors, United States senators, top calibre professional athletes and the like. For every one who achieves fame and distinction of this sort, countless others who wanted it just as much will fail. This probably comes as no news to you. But even in the realm of less ambitious plans for the future, most of you will have to learn to live with disappointment at one time or another. Some of you graduating this year from the College of William and Mary will fulfill your ambition to become top-notch doctors, social scientists or business men. Others, for one reason or other, will fall short of fulfilling even these more modest ambitions.

Nor will the mere failure to succeed in your ambition be the only cause to have disappointment. You will notice that in the lines of Grandpa Vanderhoff that I mentioned earlier, when he is describing those who actually do achieve their ambitions, he does not refer to them as a handful of the hard-working people, or as a handful of the brilliant people. Instead, he refers to them as a handful of the lucky few. As you go forward in life, you will quickly come to realize that, while a hardworking, dedicated man or woman will generally be more successful than one who lacks these qualities, if other things are equal, frequently those other things are not equal. Particularly in the area of public life, by which I mean both elective and appointed public office. There is a large element of luck or blind chance. Sometimes it's called being in the right place at the right time, or the wrong place at the wrong time, that seems to attend those who achieve their ambitions.

I do not for a moment want to over-emphasize this factor. It can be a very convenient crutch for those who never try; or for those who, having tried, have not kept their shoulders to the wheel, who excuse their own failures which have in no way been attributable to bad luck. And I surely don't want to leave you with the feeling that hard work and willingness to make an effort are not essential ingredients of a happy and productive life.

The thought I do wish to leave with you is that, in the area of material success, where the worldly hope men set their hearts upon—broadly defined to include challenging work, financial reward and opportunity to be of social service—there are inevitably more qualified aspirants for the positions at the summit of the mountain and on its shoulders, than there is space to accommodate them. It is seldom that the process of natural selection—whether it be in the business world, the professional world, or the political world—will elevate the totally unqualified incompetent over the qualified and competent candidate. But no one who has lived to middle age can doubt that, when this same selection process is choosing between a broad range of reasonably diligent, reasonably qualified candidates for success, a significant element of luck and of chance enters into it.

If I may indulge in a personal reminiscence for a moment, I am particularly aware of this fact because of my own appointment to the Supreme Court, which was no doubt at least as surprising to everybody else in the country as it was to me. While I like to think that I was a qualified and competent candidate, I was surely no more qualified and competent, and undoubtedly was less well-known, than many other lawyers and judges in the country at the time of my appointment. No doubt some of these others feel perhaps more poignantly than I do that success is more the product of lucky chance. And I think that I am right in saying that almost all of my colleagues on the Supreme Court share this view of their own selection for their appointment to high judicial office.

You will, therefore, if you have not already learned to, at some time in your life have to learn to live with disappointment. Few, if any, of you will realize all of your aspirations in the career field, and many people will have to modify their goal substantially as they grow older.

If I am right in this, and I believe I am, it makes only good sense that you not set your own personal sights so high that your prospects for a happy and useful life depend solely on the realization of long-term career goals. It is not just that only a few can succeed in realizing their ambitions fully, but that even realization of goals such as these is no guarantee of a happy and useful life. Whether you succeed or fail in your ambitions to make a million dollars, your ambition to govern the state of Virginia, or your ambition to

This is the time in the lives of those of you who are graduating, when you are traditionally assembled to hear words of wisdom about your future from middle-aged speakers like me. Certainly unnumbered groups have gathered here at commencement ceremonies at the College of William and Mary for this purpose.

A number of years ago, the common thread of graduation or baccalaureate addresses was the notion that with the necessary education and hard work, each member of the graduation class would in due time, achieve the goals that he or she set. It was perhaps a guarded way of saying that those of you that tried hard and followed the rules could succeed, at least as society measured success.

In more recent years, during the late 1960's and early 1970's, graduation speeches took a turn of almost 180 degrees from this earlier theme. The newer idea was for the middle-aged speaker to beat his breast, abjectly confess the failure of his own generation and announce that the only hope for the nation lay in the current crop of college graduates.

I hope to avoid both of these themes. Not because there is not a clear amount of truth in each of them. Things have not changed so radically that hard work is not a purer guide to advancement than laziness. Education remains a necessary requirement for entry into a large number of useful occupations. And certainly the current state of knowledge about recent events in Washington suggests that some members of the older generation did indeed fall short in their obligations.

So I depart from these themes, not because I disagree with them, but because I would like to emphasize to you some observations of a little different nature. In the best tradition of contemporary metaphor I'll endeavor to bring you some good news and some bad news.

First the bad news. Many, if not all, of you are doomed to suffer some degree of disappointment in life, disappointment in the extent to which you are able to achieve what Edward Fitzgerald, in the Rubaiyat referred to as the worldly hopes men set their hearts upon. By this I do not merely mean that all of you will not in due time become millionaires. For I use the poet's phrase "worldly hopes" as embracing a good deal more than the reform the nation's legal system may have very little to do with whether your life is successful in a more personal sense of that word.

The last part of the bad news which I thus bring you is that disappointment is a companion not only to failure in achieving one's worldly hopes, but also to success in achieving them. This may come as something of a surprise to many, though I am sure not to all, of the audience. How could it be a disappointment to achieve one's ambitions--to be a successful and well-known lawyer, to be successful in the field of social services whose job involves much person-to-person contact, or an ambition to be a successful executive in a corporation on "Fortune's" list of five hundred? Disappointment does not inevitably accompany the attainment of such ambitions, of course.

But the passage from youth to age is marked not only by physical decline, but by a change in life's routine. For the young, life is full of change. This is not as true when one reaches middle age.

Take, for example, a seventh grader who attends junior high school. Within a year or two, he or she will move on to high school with all the changes in physical and mental environment that such a change betokens. After high school there will be college, probably in a different city than where one went to high school, or else a job which will be completely different from the academic routine. In the near future, there will very likely be marriage and after that, for many, the arrival of children. All of these are certainly perceived at the time by those who undergo them as major events in one's life.

Most of you are now in what might be called "mid-passage" of this voyage of change. But after these metamorphoses have taken place, what is there left to look forward to? Certainly the person who set out to be the successful lawyer and achieved that ambition is likely to have a major enjoyable life than the person who set out to achieve it and failed; but the successful lawyer, the unsuccessful lawyer, and almost everyone else who goes about doing the work of the world eventually ends up doing work which by its nature involves a good deal of routine, in which it appears he will continue to perform for an indefinite period of time. There are no startling developments or changes in his life on the immediate horizon.

I think that this fact is quite significant and that it may explain a good deal of the difference between the attitude of many young people towards life, and the more resigned approach of their middle-aged counterparts. It may explain George Bernard Shaw's famous comment that youth is such a wonderful thing, it's a shame to waste it on the young.

And now for the good news, which is really a corollary of the bad news. Just as the lessons of experience require that one accommodate to disappointment in the fulfillment of worldly hopes, the same lessons of experience seem to me to teach that the issue of a well lived life need not turn on whether one has succeeded or failed in this area. Age may not bring wisdom, but it does bring perspective. To many of you, life is still a process of becoming, a question of what the future holds for you. This is an exciting prospect, pre-eminently the prerogative of graduating seniors.

But there comes a time in one's life where one realizes that the past is more spacious than the future, and that what once was becoming is now become. Middle-aged people, overtaken by this realization, not infrequently look back and find some of their most cherished moments to have been those which were not fully appreciated at the time they were experienced. Do not overlook the beauties of the landscape around you now, because you constantly have your eye on the far horizon, of where you will be five, ten, or twenty years from now. Do not voluntarily and prematurely shed your youth, and the opportunities afforded only to the young, before time herself takes them away from you.

Those of you who are twenty-one years old today, will, on the average, have the next fifty years in which to amass a fortune, write a book, climb the political ladder or do whatever else you set your mind to. You'll have the next fifty years to attend public meetings, to vote at elections, and to participate in other activities of this nature.

I would like to suggest today that you not ignore opportunities to do other things which will probably not be open to you for nearly as long as those which I have mentioned.

The first of these is the opportunity to make friends. This may sound a little bit like grade-school pablum, at first glance, but I don't think that it is at all. If you lump friends with family you have pretty well included every human being who is going to help make your life worthwhile. For surely, far more pitiable than the middle-aged man or woman surrounded by family and friends who has not achieved his career goal is the middle-aged man or woman who has achieved their goals, but who is utterly bereft of family or friends. If there is no one but you who really enjoys your moments of worldly success, you have failed in the personal sense of that word, however much you may have succeeded on the worldly stage. Your parents are given to you. The husband chooses his wife, the wife chooses her husband, put it how you will; children are born to the union of husband and wife; books can and have been written on the subject of how parents should treat children, how children should treat parents and so forth. I will not digress even for a moment into these thorny thickets.

But I do know that the making of friends takes time. You graduating seniors are now at a stage in your life where you are pretty well emancipated from your parents, and yet many of you have not yet married and begun a new family unit. You have the time now, in a way that one simply doesn't seem to have after he has begun raising or supporting a family, to get to know people well. It seems to me that one of the ironies of life is that in many fields of endeavor, as one succeeds, he becomes more and more isolated from his peers. One reason for this, obviously, is that, as one climbs the ladder of success, with each succeeding rung he mounts, he will have fewer peers.

But there is another reason too, I think. As one becomes more successful, he acquires more and more responsibility, and the discharge of that responsibility frequently requires that he or she instruct one group of subordinates as to how to carry out a particular plan, receive a report from another group, and so on. The successful executive has so many responsibilities that he must necessarily compress the amount of time he can spend with any one individual or group of individuals. The result of this is that success in worldly endeavors frequently means that the making of friends, which, as I have said, takes above all else, time for its' accomplishment, is made more difficult. So, cherish the opportunity to make friends while you have time to do so.

There are many other accomplishments, either non-competitive by definition, or competitive undertakings which may be indulged in more for their own enjoyment than for the sake of winning. The beauty about these sort of accomplishments is that all of the participants can come away with almost everything for which they hoped. Painting, singing, individual or team sports played for the joy of playing them are among the things that I have in mind.

If you don't make too many unreasonable demands of life, and if you learn to profit from experience, I think that you will find that for all of your disappointed hopes on the worldly stage, you'll find compensating satisfactions on the level of personal relationships and events which may not have seemed all that important at one time.

Emerson, in his essay entitled "Compensation," suggests that there is virtually a law of nature which ensures that the man who appears to attain worldly success will thereby suffer private misfortune or unhappiness. I wouldn't rest my case on any such strong doctrine as this. All I mean to suggest is that some goals which you have set for yourself, and which appear very important to you now, may recede in importance with the passage of time, so that achieving them or failing to achieve them will not loom as large as it once did. And satisfaction and enjoyment from which there is no competition, which may be attained by all who seek them will come to have a larger importance. Again, just as in the case of the observation that luck plays a large part in success, the observation that ambition for worldly goals should not be an all-consuming thing, can easily be distorted into a crutch. Without ambition for goals which are both selfish and disinterested, the world would pretty much come to a halt, and progress to a stop. Ambition for worthy achievements over the course of one's life, is something that is a fine and useful virtue. All that I am saying is that it must be held in balance with other equally valuable and useful virtues. For disappointment in life may surely come, not only from failure to achieve one's worldly ambitions, but from success in achieving them. The nature of the duties of the top position in the career goal which you set for yourself and success in attaining, may prove more routine and less interesting than you thought.

"Do not voluntarily and prematurely shed your youth, and the opportunities afforded only to the young. . . ."

On your way to success in attaining that top position, don't forsake the modest pleasures of home, hearth, and family, which are available to almost all of us on a non-competitive basis. Pleasure in life may come from unexpected as well as from expected sources. I would not for a moment mock or disparage the expected sources. Set your hearts on worldly hopes, have long-range plans and ambitions for your future, accept responsibility, which society has given you, to participate in the electoral process, in determining how our country will be governed. But in doing all of these things, remember that you will have countless years in which to do them and not as many years as you think to take the time to make and enjoy friends and to devote Saturday afternoons to playing softball. I would like, in closing, to leave you with a verse from the English poet, Clou, who has said what I am trying to say both more briefly and more lyrically. He said, "And not by eastern windows only, when daylight comes, come in the light. In front, the sun climbs slow, how slowly, but westward look, the land is bright." Thank you and congratulations to you all.

annual meeting of the Association of Southeastern Biologists in Raleigh, N.C. Ware presented an invited paper that he co-authored with two 1976 William and Mary graduates, Ridge DeWitt and Susan Glascock, entitled, "Hardwood Forests of Virginia's Central Coastal Plain."

As part of his participation in the 1976-77 National Humanities Institute program, Philosophy professor Alan E. Fuchs has given a series of lectures throughout the New England region. In April he gave the following addresses: Wheaton College, on "How Ethical Are Legal Ethics?"; Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute; Southern Connecticut College, on "Moral Philosophy: The Philosophical Justification of Principles of Justice;" and Yale University, on "A Crisis in the Humanities?" On May 4, Fuchs spoke on "Freedom of Expression and the First Amendment" at Amherst College.

A review entitled "Locus of Control: Whatever It Is, It's Important" by Psychology professor Kelly G. Shaver and Daniel J. Ozer, a graduate student completing his M.A. in psychology, was just published in Contemporary Psychology. The review compares two books, Locus of Control, by Herbert M. Lefcourt and E. Jerry Phares' Locus of Control in Personality. Both books discuss recent research dealing with antecedents and consequences of people's beliefs about the degree to which they control events that affect their lives.

History Department Chairman Thomas Sheppard has recently had published reviews of three works of French scholarship. Societas: A Review of Social History published Sheppard's review of The Peasants of Languedoc by Emmanuel Le Roy Ladurie in its Autumn 1975 issue. The American Historical Review published his reviews of Maurice Garden's Lyon et les lyonnais au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siecle and Maurice Courdurie's book, La dettè des collectivités publiques de Marseille au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siecle: Du debat sur le pret a interet au financement par l' emprunt in its April 1977 issue.

Carl Moody, economics, read an invited paper entitled "Cross Section Estimates of Productivity Growth: Correcting for Multicollinearity" at the econometric theory session of the Eastern Economics Association in Hartford, Conn., on April 15.

Three other members of the economics department, Martin Garrett, Fred Harris and Allen Sanderson, participated in the Virginia Economics Association meetings in April that were held in Roanoke. Harris presented a paper entitled, "Market Value Maximizing Product Differentiation: An Alternative Behavioral Model," while Garrett and Sanderson discussed papers concerning urban development in Tidewater and alcoholic beverage control, respectively, at a session on "Virginia Economic Issues." Professor Garrett was nominated and elected to the executive committee of the V.E.A.

Incorporating moral education into the public school system was the subject of a workshop led by School of Education professors William Losito and William Garland, May 5, in Norfolk, for members of that city's school board and representatives of the local civic community. The workshop, said Losito and Garland, was a pilot program to determine to what extent the public school system can and wants to give priority to moral development in school instruction.

"A Consensus Approach to the Designing of a First Course for the Training of Group Counselors," a presentation made by Charles Matthews, education before the second national conference for the Teaching of Group Theory and Practice, has been published in the Spring issue of Together--Journal of the Association for Specialists in Group Work.

Eric L. Bradley and C. Richard Terman, both of the biology department, and Kuo-Li P. Sung, a former graduate student now at Columbia University, had an article published in the Journal of Reproduction and Fertility, V. 49. The article was entitled "Serum corticosterone concentrations in reproductively mature and inhibited deer mice (Peromyscus maniculatus bairdii)."

Two other recent publications by Terman include: "The influence of pheromones produced by freely growing laboratory populations on the reproductive maturation of prairie deer mice following prenatal and postnatal exposure," by Terman and P. L. Kipps in the March issue of Researches on Population Ecology; and "An experimental study of movement in natural populations of Mus musculus, Microtus pennsylvanicus and Microtus pinetorum," by Terman and P. Judy Ewart, of the administrative data systems group at the College's computer center, is organizing the annual convention of the Virginia Association for Educational Data Systems, which will be held in Williamsburg, June 16-17. Data processing personnel, treasurers, accountants and auditors, financial aid officers, registrars and others involved in data processing across the state are expected to attend the convention, which will be based on the theme "New Worlds of Educational Data Systems." Ewart is president-elect of VAEDS.

Actions of the Board of Visitors, May 12-14

Because of State budgetary uncertainties, the College has not yet submitted to the Board the budget for the educational and general program for 1977-78. Like other State agencies, the College does not yet have information on the amount of funds available to it for the remainder of the current fiscal year and for 1977-78. According to Vice President for Business Affairs William J. Carter, it is unlikely that the funding information necessary to prepare the 1977-78 educational and general budget will be available until June.

Since allocations of the tuition and general fee for programs other than the educational and general budget are not affected by those circumstances, the budgets for athletic and recreational activities were presented to the Board. (See budget display, Page 10.)

Funding for the self-supporting auxiliary enterprises is similarly not affected, and the Board approved the 1977-78 Maintenance and Operating Budgets for State and Private Auxiliary Enterprises. The budgets showed an overall increase of 6.8 per cent over 1976-77 caused by the continuing effect of inflation on contractual services, particularly increases in the cost of electricity and other utilities. The budget noted that increases in salaries and in the cost of essential equipment replacement and in debt service had also significantly increased operating costs.

The Board approved the College's request to seek additional capital outlay funds for 1978-80 from the State to renovate the roofs of four academic buildings.

Damage to the four buildings--Adair

Gymnasium, built in 1963, William Small Hall (1964), Swem Library (1966) and portions of William and Mary Hall (1971)--was caused last winter by the extremely cold temperatures and ice and snow. Attempts to spot-patch the suspected leaking areas have not arrested the problem.

Damage was also sustained on the roof of Phi Beta Kappa Hall. The Director of Engineering and Buildings has approved an emergency appropriation of $69,000 for its renovation.

The Board approved additional funding to renovate Taliaferro Hall, the last of five renovations of student residences begun in July 1973. The estimated cost of $425,000, approved by the Visitors in September 1976, has been revised to $485,000. The increase is based on a recently completed quantitative cost estimate for the renovation and will also cover the costs of additional fire code regulations that have been instituted.

To lessen the extra financial burden on students who concentrate in music, the Board of Visitors voted to remove the $90 applied music fee for students enrolled in 400-level (advanced) applied music courses.

The fee will still apply for instruction at the 100 to 300 level in music.

Several amendments were approved to the "Statement of Rights and Responsibilities" adopted by the Board of Visitors on July 16, 1973.

The changes were made both to clarify the wording of several sections and to eliminate inconsistencies between the statement and provisions of such federal government policies as the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 and the implementing regulations for Title IX of the Higher Education Amendments of 1972.

The statement amendments have been accepted by a majority vote of the full-time students of the College who voted in referenda on the changes, and by a majority vote of the members of the faculties and administration, who voted in special referenda.

The changes will be incorporated in the statement published in the 1977-78 student handbook.

Retirement Resolutions

RETIREMENT OF C. HARPER ANDERSON SCHOOL OF LAW

Charles Harper Anderson has served on the Faculty of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law for thirty-one years. During that time his students have been greatly benefited by his nearly unique capacity to blend the virtues of traditional scholarship with a seasoned lawyer's grasp of practical problems.

A great teacher touches the lives of his students in ways that transcend the limits of the subjects he may teach. Measured by this standard, Harper Anderson has been a great teacher. His wit, his ideals and his insight into the human spirit have been as much his legacy to his students as his formidable knowledge of the law of property or civil procedure.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, taking note of the imminent retirement of Lecturer Anderson after this long period of distinguished service, herewith expresses the gratitude of the College and the Commonwealth for his important contribution to its academic and professional heritage and gratefully approves a change of his status from Lecturer in Law to Lecturer in Law, Emeritus, effective at the close of the 1976-77 session, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the records of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Lecturer Anderson with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

RETIREMENT OF ROGER D. SHERMAN DEPARTMENT OF THEATRE AND SPEECH

Roger Sherman was appointed Instructor of Fine Arts in 1946 and was promoted to Assistant Professor in 1954. He resigned from the College in 1958 to accept another position. He was appointed Associate Professor of Theatre and Speech upon his return in 1966. Mr. Sherman was appointed chairman of the Department of Theatre and Speech in 1973 and was promoted to Professor in 1974.

In more than three decades in Williamsburg, he has been an important force in the Department of Theatre and Speech, the William and Mary Theatre, and the "Common Glory." He has taught and worked in theatre administration and management, as well as in several technical areas of theatre. His gentle and effective leadership as chairman of the Department has maintained the proud traditions of both the Department and the William and Mary Theatre.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges with deep regret the retirement of Roger Sherman and gratefully approves a change of his status from Professor of Theatre and Speech to Professor of Theatre and Speech, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the Minutes of this Board and a copy be transmitted to Professor Sherman.

RETIREMENT OF ALBERT E. HAAK DEPARTMENT OF THEATRE AND SPEECH

Albert Haak was appointed Instructor of Fine Arts in 1947. He was promoted to Assistant Professor in 1952 and to Associate Professor in 1959. Following the creation of the Department of Theatre and Speech, he was promoted to Professor of Theatre and Speech in 1971.

In his long career as Technical Director, he has been responsible for over 120 major productions of the William and Mary Theatre as well as 28 seasons of "The Common Glory." In this job, which demands imagination and a variety of skills, he has performed effectively and efficiently to maintain the high standards of the Theatre. As a teacher and advisor he has faithfully maintained the high standards of William and Mary.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges with deep regret the retirement of Albert Haak and gratefully approves a change of his status from Professor of Theatre and Speech to Professor of Theatre and Speech, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the Minutes of this Board and a copy be transmitted to Professor Haak.

RETIREMENT OF FRANK B. EVANS, III DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

Frank Evans was appointed Assistant Professor of English in 1947. He was promoted to Associate Professor in 1949 and Professor in 1961.

He has been a mainstay of the Department of English for thirty years. In addition to his full teaching duties at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, he has been a leader in the College in both curriculum development and faculty governance. He played an important part in two self-studies and chaired the Ad Hoc Committee on Revision of the Curriculum (1968-70), as well as serving as chairman or playing a key role on numerous other committees. He is one of the leading current experts on Faculty policy and procedures.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges with deep regret the retirement of Frank Evans and gratefully approves a change of his status from Professor of English to Professor of English, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the Minutes of this Board and a copy be transmitted to Professor Evans.

RETIREMENT OF EDWARD M. RILEY

Dr. Edward M. Riley, Director of the Department of Research at Colonial Williamsburg, was appointed Lecturer in History in 1963. This was done in recognition of his assistance in the Apprenticeship Program prior to 1963 and in the anticipation of his continued participation in the future.

There are many graduate students in history who received assistance from Dr. Riley in their research who will always remember his kindness, patience, and insistence on professionalism in their research and writing. Both undergraduates doing special work in departmental honors and graduate students in the doctoral program received his help and advice.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges with deep regret the retirement of Edward Riley and gratefully approves a change of his status from Lecturer in History to Lecturer in History, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the Minutes of this Board and a copy be transmitted to Professor Riley.

CHRISTOPHER NEWPORT COLLEGE

In the late 1950's citizens of the Lower Peninsula approached the College of William and Mary, its Board of Visitors, and President Alvin Duke Chandler requesting their assistance in the establishment of a two-year branch college in their community.

The sincerity of these citizens and the obvious need for higher education in this area moved the Board of Visitors in 1960 to establish, in conjunction with the City of Newport News, Christopher Newport College. The first students were enrolled in September 1961 and H. Westcott Cunningham, an experienced college administrator on the staff of the founding College, was appointed its first president.

With pride, the College of William and Mary watched its creation grow, for the seed had obviously been planted in fertile soil. In 1971, ten years after its first class was enrolled, students numbered 2,068 and faculty, 74. In November of that year it was given independent accreditation as a four-year college by the Southern Association of State Universities and Colleges. In 1977, the student body numbered 3,344 taught by a faculty of 103.

Under the direction of the Board of Visitors and the Academic Vice President, Christopher Newport College has developed a vital curriculum. This curriculum is based on a core of the liberal arts and encourages programs of professional education that respond to the students' learning interests and manpower requirements. This College, since its inception, has been committed to new ways of implementing liberal and professional programs which do acknowledge the students' needs and prior life experiences.

In January of 1976 the General Assembly of Virginia took a natural and appropriate action by designating Christopher Newport College an independent State institution, and further directed that on 1 July 1977, the College would be the responsibility of its own Board of Visitors.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia extends its very best wishes to the Board of Visitors of Christopher Newport College and its second President, James C. Windsor, wishing them well in the success that they will most certainly continue to enjoy in the service to community and Commonwealth; that a special relationship should always exist between these institutions and that as founder, the College of William and Mary will ever view with pride the accomplishments of Christopher Newport College, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the minutes of the Board of Visitors and that copies be sent to the former Chancellor Alvin Duke Chandler, former President H. Westcott Cunningham, President Emeritus Davis Y. Paschall, President James C. Windsor, and the Rector of the Board of Visitors of Christopher Newport College.

REPORT ON BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS AT WILLIAM AND MARY CAMPUS AND BUILDINGS IMPROVEMENTS AND CAPITAL OUTLAY PROJECTS

Campus Landscaping:

Crim Dell Area - Planning for this area is being considered in the master landscaping plan along with a plan for a Wild Flower Refuge area, as available funds permit.
Jamestown Road Parking Area - Project completed with the exception of landscaping. Working drawings have been completed and approved by Governor's Offices. However, project has been deferred because of funding problems.

Repairs and Renovation:

Alterations to Old Fraternity Lodges - Renovation of these eleven buildings has been completed and they now house 66 students. Phase 2 will cover site improvements and landscaping, which is scheduled to begin, provided there is sufficient funding.
William and Mary Hall - A contract for waterproofing the exterior foundation at the northeast corner of the auxiliary gymnasium is still in process since the earlier work performed by the contractor did not solve the leak problem.
Millington Hall - Physiology Laboratory - A study of Room 24 was made to determine the acceptability of the space for use as an operating room. It was found not acceptable to use ether as an anesthesia. It was decided to use a non-flammable anesthesia in the future and the space will be ventilated to eliminate any health hazard. Plans have been completed, bids received and the contract awarded. The project will be started shortly after the end of the semester so as not to interfere with academic instruction.

Survey to Provide Accessibility and Usability of Major Campus Facilities for the Handicapped - This survey has been conducted and the report, including review to determine the schedule and cost of implementation, has been received. Plans are in progress for modifications to make student residence facilities on the first floor of Landrum Hall accessible and usable by the physically handicapped. A contract has been completed to make facilities usable in five lodge buildings as described above. Further planning for access by the handicapped to academic and administrative buildings is underway.

The Commons Dining Hall

Exterior Improvements - Plans have been prepared for improvements of the plaza area in front of the Commons. The scope of work envisions a brick plaza, installation of benches and plantings. The work will be done as funds become available.

Interior Improvements - New chairs and tables have been delivered. Other phases to follow when funds are available include dining room salad bars, beverage stations, additional serving line equipment and floor treatment.

Small Hall

Planetarium Study: Schematic plans and a cost study have been prepared to show the feasibility of locating a planetarium and conference area on the present open first floor deck on the north side of the building. The possibility of seeking funds for this project is being considered by the Physics Department and the Vice President for College Development.

Campus Center

Wigwam Terrace Study: A schematic plan and cost estimate have been made to determine the feasibility of developing the open terrace adjacent to the Wigwam for expanded dining use, further planning to proceed as funds are available.

Necessary Projects Awaiting Availability of Funds:

The following projects have been identified as essential to the proper maintenance, functioning and repair of the physical plant of the College but are delayed at this time, due to funding restrictions.

The projects are: Masonry repairs to Phi Beta Kappa Hall and Andrews Hall - $34,000; roof repairs to the lower roof section of William and Mary Hall - $6,500; acoustical treatment of several classrooms in Old Rogers Hall - $4,200 - and the Ballroom of the Campus Center - $16,000; acoustical treatment to the walls of the Director of Athletics Office in William and Mary Hall - $1,800; correction of storm water runoff from the Barksdale Memorial Athletic Field to the walkways and entrance areas of Phi Beta Kappa Hall and Andrews Hall - $10,000; grading and crowning of Cary Field playing field to include installation of necessary drain tiles - $20,000; masonry repairs to east stands - $60,000.

CAPITAL OUTLAY PROJECTS - 1976-78

Renovation of Student Residences:

Renovation of Jefferson Hall - Unforeseen conditions in the building have required additional work by the Contractor and completion date has been extended to May 1977. This should not significantly delay completion of the final phase of the Dormitory Renovation Program, as explained below.

Renovation of Chandler Hall - Working drawings and specifications are complete. Bids will be received when authorized by the Governor's Office with construction to be started in June 1977. Completion is scheduled for June 1978.

Renovation of Taliaferro Hall - Working drawings and specifications are complete. Bids will be received when authorized by the Governor's Office with construction to be started in June 1977. Completion is scheduled for June 1978.

Utilities and Site Work for New Law School Building - An appropriation of $486,150 has been provided for site work and the installation of utility lines to the future building. This covers all work that can practicably be done prior to actual building construction. Completion has been delayed due to weather conditions and is now expected to be complete in May 1977.

Plans for New Law School Building - The working drawings and specifications have been completed and approved by the Governor's Office and by the Art Commission. Funds for construction, $5,100,000, have been included by the 1977 General Assembly for this project in a General Obligation Bond referendum for November 1977.

Plans for Renovation of Physical Plant Services Complex and Parking Area - The preliminary plans and specifications have been completed and approved by the Governor's Office. The working drawings phase was terminated by directive from the Governor's Office due to shortage of funds. Remaining funds were reverted to the State. This is one of the highest priority projects and has been requested again for the 1978-80 biennium.

Planning for Renovation of Old Rogers Hall for the School of Business and Other Academic Uses - Preliminary plans and outline specifications are complete and have been completed within the limited appropriation. This is one of the College's highest priority projects and has been requested again for the 1978-80 biennium.

Installation of Storm Drainage System, Final Phase - Plans and specifications for this project have been completed. This appropriation of $96,600 will provide for the connection of remaining storm drainage collection lines into the recently completed storm drainage system. This construction of a basin to be located in the area behind Swem Library will collect debris before the storm water flows into Lake Matoaka. Detailed planning is being undertaken so that a contract may be awarded in the near future. Working drawings and specifications have been completed. Bids were received on May 5, 1977; awarding the contract should follow within thirty days.

Replacement of Aged Steam and Condensate Lines - Colonial Campus - This project will be performed by a welding contractor working under the supervision of College personnel. The College will supply all piping, valves and traps for the welding contractor to install as a replacement of the present pipelines, which have exceeded their expected life usage and have been in almost constant need of repair. The piping, valves and traps have been put on order with partial shipments already received. A contract has also been awarded to a local welder. Work will commence May 16, 1977.

Installation of Additional Tennis Courts - A $150,000 gift from the Anheuser-Busch Foundation has made it possible to plan the construction of eight tennis courts which will be located in the area behind William and Mary Hall designated on the master plan for physical education facility development. The site will accommodate ten additional courts and a multi-purpose playing field as funds become available. Further development of the Adair site for additional tennis courts will await the availability of additional funds.

A contract has been awarded and construction will begin as soon as weather permits. The low bid was under the estimated cost; this may make it possible to install lighting for at least six of the eight courts with provisions for future lighting installation for the ten courts being planned for this site in the future. Plans and specifications have been prepared for this work. The courts are scheduled for completion by July 14, 1977. Installation of lighting may require extension of that date.

APPROVAL OF 1977-78 BUDGETS FOR ATHLETIC AND RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES, THE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION, AND THE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S INTRAMURAL AND RECREATIONAL SPORTS

Budgets for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1977, through June 30, 1978, have been prepared for Athletic and Recreational Activities, for the Men's Athletic Association, the Women's Athletic Association, and the Men's and Women's Intramural and Recreational Sports Programs. The budgets are predicated on the allocation of a portion of the Tuition and General Fee, in accordance with the guidelines for the Implementation of the Statement of Athletic Policy which was approved by the Board of Visitors at its meeting on November 22, 1974, and with the revised allocations which were approved on March 18, 1977 by the Board.

In 1977-78 and subsequent years, the budgets for the intramural and recreational sports programs will be administered as a portion of the Student Activities budget, since the portion of the allocation applicable to those programs was transferred to Student Activities by the Board's action of March 18, 1977. It is understood that the revenue budgets for intramural and recreational programs will continue in the future to be based on a minimum of $3 per student in accordance with the policy of the Board of Visitors.

Summaries of revenues and the proposed expenditures have been prepared by the athletic departments and have been carefully reviewed by the President and his administrative officers.

RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors hereby approves the attached 1977-78 Budgets for the Athletic and Recreational Activities, the Men's Athletic Association, the Women's Athletic Association, and for the Men's and Women's Intramural and Recreational Sports.

Official Memoranda

From: W. T. Allen, Office of Purchases and Stores
 To: Deans, Department Heads and Supervisors

Subject: Closing of Warehouse for Inventory

The College Warehouse (Stores) will close at 4 p.m. on Friday, June 10, for the taking of inventory. It will reopen at 7:30 a.m. on Monday, June 27, for normal operation.

Please anticipate your needs, because no issues will be made during this inventory period.

It should be noted that all items issued on or after June 27, 1977 will be charged against budgets for the 1977-78 fiscal year.

From: W. T. Allen, Office of Purchases and Stores
 To: Deans, Department Heads, and Supervisors

Subject: Agency Purchase Order Cut-off Date

The Office of the Director of Purchases and Stores will not accept requisitions for purchases (Form D.P. 1) after June 10, 1977, for the purchase of any item/s whatsoever for Fiscal Year 1976-77. This is to insure delivery and invoicing of all outstanding purchase orders by June 30, 1977. Please anticipate your needs accordingly!

The Purchasing Department is now accepting requisitions numbered for Fiscal Year 1977-78 for delivery and payment after July 1, 1977.

If there are any questions, please call the Purchasing Department at Ext. 4215, or 4279.

From: Dennis K. Cogle, Business Affairs Office
 To: All Employees

Subject: Use of Scats

The College has received an informational listing of long-distance calls made since the installation of the new CENTREX system. This listing includes a large number of calls made to locations in Virginia and Washington, D.C.

Apparently there has been a serious misunderstanding on this point. The CENTREX arrangement does not change the SCATS requirements at all. You should continue to use the SCATS lines for ALL calls to locations within the State of Virginia or to Washington, D.C., because of the substantial cost savings involved. This applies equally to "on-SCATS" and "off-SCATS" destinations.

In summary then:

1. Use the SCATS lines for all calls to locations in Virginia and in Washington, D.C.
2. Do not use the direct dialing facility provided by CENTREX to make calls to locations in Virginia and in Washington, D.C.

Each of you is urged to give this matter your immediate attention. Thank you for your cooperation.

Personnel Bulletin

Memorial Day Holiday, 1977

College administrative offices, the plant department (except for those employees required to maintain essential services), and the mail room will be closed on May 30, 1977. The Campus Police Department will maintain regular hours.

The names of permanent classified employees who are required to work on that day, should be reported in writing to the Personnel Office in order that they may be credited with compensatory leave. Permanent classified employees who are required to work on May 30, should take compensatory leave earned as soon thereafter as possible in order to avoid excessive leave accumulation. Hourly employees who work on this day will be paid at their regular hourly rates.

Independence Day Holiday, 1977

College administrative offices, the plant department (except for those employees required to maintain essential services), and the mail room will also be closed on July 4, 1977. The Campus Police Department will maintain regular hours.

Permanent classified employees should follow the leave reporting procedures outlined above. Hourly employees who work on July 4 will be paid at their regular hourly rates.
