RESEARCH IN LIFE SCIENCES IS TOPIC OF LECTURE

"Basic Research in the Life Sciences and the Potential Future Impact on Health, Food, Energy and Materials" is the subject of an applied chemistry lecture, Thursday, Dec. 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Millington Auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

The talk will be given by biochemist Dr. R.W.F. Hardy, associate director for Central Research and Development, E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., as part of his two day visit on campus.

Hardy will also discuss "Energy, Food and CO₂ and N₂ Fixation" in an applied chemistry seminar Friday, Dec. 2, at 3 p.m. in Millington Hall.

Holiday Songs Featured In Choir Concert

The William and Mary Choir and Chorus, which has not staged a Christmas concert for nearly two years, will sing a variety of American and European holiday songs next week in a special program at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

This year's Christmas Concert will be presented at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings, Dec. 2-4.

Due to a conflict with an appearance in the Phi Beta Kappa anniversary oratorio last December, the choir and chorus were forced to forego their traditional Christmas Concert in 1976. But this year, the choir and chorus are back to present the annual holiday concert that for years has been a Christmas Season highlight for the Williamsburg community.

Under the direction of Associate Professor Frank T. Lendrim, the choir and chorus will sing compositions by Roger Hannahs, Ralph Vaughan Williams, Giovanni Gabrieli, and a number of other composers from around the world. The chorus will sing 12 parts of Vincent Persichetti's Winter Cantata. Featured soloists include James Keena, Kathy Brown, Carl Meyer, Catherine Sentman, and Ann Hoyt.

The Botetourt Chamber singers and the men of the Choir will also perform. The grand finale of the concert will be the traditional singing of Christmas carols, when the entire audience is invited to join in.

Tickets for the concert are currently available at the James Blair Switchboard, Campus Center front desk, the Rexall Drugstore, and the Music Department Office.

Reynolds Metals Gives $100,000 For New Business Professorship

Reynolds Metals Company, headquartered in Richmond, will establish an endowment at the College to fund a new professorship in the School of Business Administration, the company and the College announced jointly Saturday.

The $100,000 endowment will support the Richard S. Reynolds, Jr. Professorship of Business Administration.

The Reynolds Metals gift is the fourth corporate contribution of $100,000 or more to the College's three-year, $19 million Campaign for the College. Total Campaign commitments and gifts now exceed $8.3 million to support the College's goals of faculty development, program enrichment and student assistance.

Dr. Charles L. Quittmeyer, Dean of the School of Business Administration, said the new endowment will support a professor whose primary academic and research interests are in the field of international business management.

Loyal Virginians may cry "foul," but a visiting anthropologist says our modern Thanksgiving celebration is an outgrowth of the Massachusetts Pilgrims' harvest observance, not the day of thanks declared at Berkeley Hundred on the James River in 1619.

Modern Thanksgiving Is Not Of Virginia Origin, Deetz Says

A professor at William and Mary has fired the latest salvo in the continuing battle between Virginia and Massachusetts to claim rights to the first Thanksgiving celebration.

James Deetz, visiting professor of archaeology and on leave this year from Brown University, says Virginia should give up its claim to the first Thanksgiving. The observance as we know it today, he asserts, stems from the 1621 harvest festival of the Pilgrims who settled in Plimoth Plantation, Mass.

Virginians have traditionally claimed Berkeley Plantation in Charles City County as the site of the first Thanksgiving. In 1619 some 39 settlers landed at the site along the James River. Their charter instructed them that the day of their arrival "shall yearly and perpetually keep holy as a day of thanksgiving to Almighty god."

According to Deetz, that still doesn't qualify them.

The Virginia "thanksgivings" were primarily religious days marked by fasting and humiliation. The tradition as we know it today, says Deetz, is a direct descendent of the Massachusetts Pilgrims' celebration of the harvest yield of the year.

An account kept by Pilgrim Edward Winslow describes the festival as a time of feasting and recreation, with emphasis on the former. Deetz says the celebrators probably sat on the ground and ate their meal with fingers, knives and spoons. Forks then were virtually unknown. The traditional meal was a young, lean goose. The meal also probably included venison pies, puddings (among them, pumpkin), corn meal cakes and ale.

For the skeptical, Deetz points out that, while Winslow's account only mentions fowl, slightly later accounts mention turkey as one of the meats served, and archaeologists have recovered turkey bones from Winslow's home site in Massachusetts.

When they were not feasting, the Pilgrims paraded and demonstrated their martial skills. Athletics were also an important part of the celebration, Deetz says. Englishmen were serious sportsmen, and King James had even issued his own "Book of Sports" in 1618.

Independent observers have questioned Deetz' objectivity in his claims, pointing out that he is also assistant director at Plimoth Plantation. The Maryland native responds that he is from south of the Mason-Dixon Line and not unduly prejudiced in favor of Yankee claims.

Will his arguments settle the long-standing debate? Deetz says he'd like to think so, but he's not going to worry about it in any case. He plans to enjoy his turkey this week.

Some suspect he'd like to think of those at Berkeley Plantation as eating crow.

Friel, Barton Named Drapers' Scholars

Seniors Eileen Friel of Fairfax and Douglas Barton of Springfield have been named recipients of the Drapers' Company Exchange Scholarships for 1978-80.

The scholarships are awarded annually for two years of study at a British university of the recipient's choice.

A physics major, Friel is working on an honors project in theoretical astrophysics: constructing a simplified model of stellar evolution. She will be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa on Dec. 5, and is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, the freshman scholastic honorary.

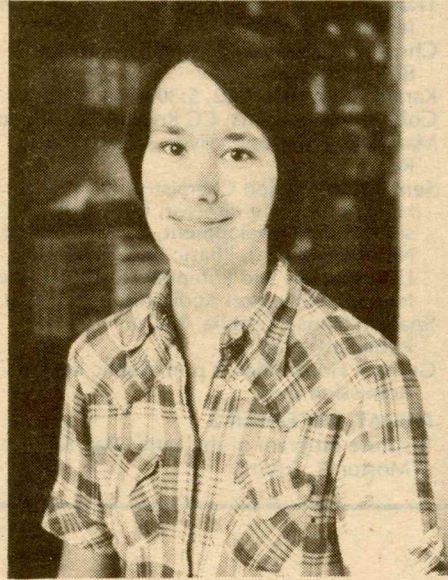

Friel works for the physics department as a research assistant and tutors freshmen physics students. She hopes to attend Cambridge next year studying either physics or astronomy.

Barton, a computer science and music major, is working on an honors thesis involving the combination of computer science and music. He is co-musical director of Sinfonicron, an organization which presents a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta each year, and is a member of the William and Mary Choir and the Botetourt Chamber Singers. He studies voice at the College under Frances Breeze.

Barton has worked as a balladeer and juggler for Colonial Williamsburg, and has sung with the Cathedral Choir in Washington, D.C. He will also be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa in December, and is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, the freshmen men's honorary. Barton hopes to attend one of the musical conservatories in London to pursue his interest in voice and music.

From: Campus Police
Bicycle Safety

Due to an increasing number of bicycle accidents and infractions involving violations of the Virginia Motor Vehicle Code, the William and Mary Campus Police are reemphasizing campus vehicle safety and security, especially as it pertains to bicycle traffic.

Accidents and near mishaps due to violations such as failure to obey highway signs, improperly operating bicycles, improperly carrying articles on bicycles and improper equipment may result in a state traffic infraction citation and an appearance in traffic court.

Stiff fines are set out by the Virginia Motor Vehicle Code for failure to stop at stop signs and failure to give proper turn signals, both of which apply to bicycles driven on the public roadways. A bicycle on the public roadway has no immunity from negligent traffic offenses such as reckless driving, failure to maintain proper control, excessive speed, or hit and run.

Proper equipment is a must for bicycles as well as cars on campus. Brakes must give adequate response and stopping power. For night travel, a headlight visible for at least 500 ft. and a rear reflector visible for at least 200 ft. when illuminated, is required.

The large number of bicycles and the often congested traffic conditions on campus require a smooth, regulated traffic flow on campus roadways for a margin of safety. To establish this margin of safety, a policy of emphasis will begin after the Thanksgiving Day Break.

Students and faculty are also urged to chain their bicycles to an immovable object when they are not in use. A large percentage of stolen bikes have no security devices and are just ridden away. Registering your bike with the Campus Police is quick, inexpensive, and a great aid in the recovery of a stolen bicycle. A W&M bicycle sticker gives the police a complete description of your bicycle, which is essential for prompt recovery of your bicycle.

Protect your transportation and property by locking chains, doors and car windows, and remember to abide by the Virginia Motor Vehicle Code whether you operate a four-wheeler or two-wheeler. Help keep the campus safe for all.

Japanese Sacred Dance, Films To Be Shown Here Next Week

The Sacred Dance of the Tenrikyo Faith, a religion comparatively little-known in the eastern United States, will be performed at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 29, in conjunction with a film presentation describing what has been called "the fastest-growing religion in Japan."

The events are part of the Southern States Tour of Tenrikyo Headquarters in North America, operating out of Los Angeles. The Seated Service and the Sacred Dance will be held in Apartment One, 112 North Boundary St. The film Oyasato, which shows activities of the Great Shrine in the sacred city of Tenri in Japan, and a Japanese cultural film will also be shown. Both films are in English.

The two films will also be shown the following evening at 8 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre at Swem Library. All events are open to the public without charge. No collection is taken.

"Tenrikyo" is a Japanese word which may be translated as "The Religion of Divine Wisdom." Also called "The Bright Path" and "The Path of God the Parent," it was founded in 1838 by Miki Nakayama, a farmwife, before Japan was opened to Western ideas. It now has several million followers throughout the world. The Sacred Dance is performed for the dual purpose of spiritual healing and world peace. Because of the latter motive, the Dance was banned during the Second World War by the Japanese military dictatorship.

School Honors Father-Son Business Team

The presentation of the Business School Medallion to two of Richmond's most respected business leaders was the highlight of a busy weekend for the School of Business Administration.

Dean Charles Quittmeyer presented the medallion to Floyd D. Gottwald and Floyd D. Gottwald, Jr., vice-chairman and chairman of the Ethyl Corporation. The award recognizes business leaders "who have made important contributions to the state and the nation."

The senior Gottwald attended the College before starting his business career as an office clerk at the Albemarle Paper Company in 1918. His son recently visited the campus to participate in the Business School's special interview-by-telephone class.

The School's Board of Sponsors also held their annual business meeting last weekend.
