EASTER EGG HUNT CANCELLED

President and Mrs. Graves will be out of town on Easter Sunday, March 26. Consequently, their traditional Easter Egg Hunt for the children of the College community will not be held this year. The Graves said they regretted not having the pleasure of offering the Hunt this year but hoped to resume it again next year.

GRAYSON IS AAUP SPEAKER

George W. Grayson will discuss higher education and the 1978 General Assembly at a meeting of William and Mary's chapter of the American Association of University Professors, Monday, March 20, at 8 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Sherry will be served at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Grayson, professor of government at the College, represents the 51st district in the House of Delegates of the Virginia General Assembly.

CRIMINAL LAW SEMINAR SLATED

Virginia's new capital punishment statute is the topic of a Criminal Law Seminar to be held in the Moot Courtroom at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Thursday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Association of Trial Lawyers, the seminar is open to the public.

N.Y. ACTING COMPANY TO PERFORM ON CAMPUS

"Mother Courage and her Children" will be performed on campus March 15 by the Acting Company of the drama division of the Juilliard School, New York, as part of the current William and Mary Theatre Season. Bertolt Brecht's chronicle of the Thirty Years' War has been acclaimed as the playwright's masterpiece and the prime example of his "epic theatre." Alan Schneider directs the performance, at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Admission is $3.

UP, UP AND AWAY--Chimney sweep Isaac Watts of Rochelle, Va., (below) joined Tom Risch, chairman of the board of August West Systems, the country's largest organization of chimney sweeps (above, tipping his top hat), in cleaning the parlor fireplace in the President's House last Friday, despite a downpour of sleet and rain. Dozens of chimney sweeps from across the nation were in Williamsburg at a convention to compare notes about one of the fastest growing and most profitable occupations in the country. National Center Headquarters Opens Here

Williamsburg officially becomes the headquarters this month for the National Center for State Courts, a private, non-profit organization pioneering in court reform.

Members of the College community are invited to attend an informal open house at the Center's new headquarters building, 300 Newport Avenue, on Sunday, March 12, from 3 to 5 p.m.

The building is located on a seven-acre tract adjoining the future site of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Hubert Jones of the Richmond architectural firm of Wright, Jones and Wilkerson, Inc., has designed both the Center and the law school buildings to complement each other. Construction on the law school is scheduled to begin this spring, with completion expected in the spring of 1980.

The two-story structure has dual entrances that provide access to the lobby from the main drive and from the law school mall. Its 32,000 square feet of floor space accommodate a unique technical library, a flexible, modular office complex, the executive offices and varied conference facilities.

Newsmakers

The professional appointments, lectures, achievements and publications of William and Mary faculty and staff are featured regularly in this column.

Faculty members in all schools and departments and professional staff in all offices are invited to submit written notices of appropriate professional activities to the News Office, 308 Old Chemistry Building.

Armand Galfo, School of Education, is serving as a referee of papers submitted for the Ninth Conference on Computers in Undergraduate Curricula to be held at the University of Denver in June.

In the English department, Carl Dolmetsch's review of The Art of Djuna Barnes: Duality and Damnation, by Louis F. Kannenstein (New York University Press, 1977) has been published in the January 1978 issue of Choice: Magazine for Libraries.

Victor Liguori, sociology, participated in a workshop in fishery management sponsored by the South Atlantic Fishery Management Council, Charleston, S.C., Feb. 21-23. Liguori, presenting perspectives on Middle Atlantic fisheries, was one of two mari-

Shakespeare Auditions Set

Auditions for the College's summer Shakespeare Festival productions of "The Taming of the Shrew," "Twelfth Night," and "Romeo and Juliet" will be held March 10 and 11, 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 2-5 p.m., at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Auditions will be by appointment only.

For the four minute audition, actors are asked for two memorized speeches of a contrasting nature with at least one of them from a Shakespearean play. Eleven actors will be hired for the ten week rehearsal and production period, June 10 to August 21, at salaries of $800. College housing will be available to company members for the ten week period if needed.

To make an appointment to audition, call 253-4395 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. prior to March 9.

Faculty Women's Status Examined

Women faculty members are invited to an open discussion of their status as faculty members at the College, Thursday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

The meeting is part of an effort by Wesley C. Wilson, the College's affirmative action officer, and by the Affirmative Action Advisory Committee, to obtain thorough information about the question of discrimination against women faculty members and other staff at the College.

In a letter to all faculty women, Wilson and Satoshi Ito, associate professor of sociology and head of the Affirmative Action Committee, said the most serious charges concern the question of inequity in salaries of female faculty members as compared with their male peers.

Questionnaires have been distributed to faculty women to help determine problem areas, and the survey results will be discussed at the March 16 meeting. Additional questionnaires are available in Wilson's office, Brafferton, Room 1.

time specialists invited from states outside the jurisdiction of the Council.

"Treatment Effectiveness as a Function of Client Involvement in Goal-Setting and Goal-Planning" is the title of an article by Joseph Galano, psychology. The article, published in the 1977 Goal Attainment Review, reports on a successful effort to increase treatment effectiveness by maximizing clients' involvement in their own therapy programs.

William Barnes of the fine arts department is represented by a drawing and a painting entitled "Interior/Exterior" in the Tidewater Artists Association show currently being held at the Portsmouth Community Arts Center. The show, which includes some 125 works, was juried by Edward Lawson, chief of education at Washington's Hirshhorn Museum.

On Feb. 3, James Whittenburg, history, read a paper entitled "Birth, Death, Marriage, and Migration: Demographic Trends Among Early Southern Quakers" at The Second Annual Symposium on Georgia Studies held last month in Atlanta. The paper reported on Quaker migration patterns from the Middle Atlantic region to the

Film Animation Programs Set

Artist and filmmaker Phil Trumbo will give a lecture and conduct a workshop on film animation on campus this week.

Trumbo's lecture, March 10 at 8 p.m. at Andrews Hall, will include slides illustrating the relationship of film animation to drawing and painting.

The following day, March 11, the Twentieth Century Gallery will sponsor a workshop by Trumbo, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Andrews Hall. To register, call the Gallery at 229-4949.

Workshop participants will view a variety of animated films and experiment with different approaches to film graphics during the morning session.

South and the Mid-West as a strong influence on the Quakers, determining even the yearly cycle of births and marriages. Students in Whittenburg's quantification seminar helped design the project and interpret the statistics on which Whittenburg's paper was based.

Paul Helfrich, fine arts, had one of his drawings selected for exhibition in the Nineteenth Dixie Annual Exhibition of Works on Paper. The exhibition included artists from 13 southern states and was juried by James T. Demetrius, director of the Des Moines Art Center, Des Moines, Iowa.

Merritt Cox of the department of modern languages has been asked by the Fordham University Press to read and judge for publication the Cervantes Lectures that have been given at Fordham University for the last 25 years by some of the most outstanding Hispanists in the United States. Cox is the author of two published biographies on the Reverend John Bowles, the 18th-century Englishman who produced the first annotated edition of Don Quixote and established the direction of modern Cervantean criticism.

During the afternoon, each participant will create a short animated film under Trumbo's direction.

A graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, Trumbo has shown his works in numerous one man and group shows in Virginia, North Carolina, Louisiana and New York. He has published several comic strips and was commissioned to paint six large works for the First and Merchants Center in Richmond. Two of his television commercials have been nominated for Cleo Awards.

"Film Animation: Phil Trumbo" is part of the Virginia Museum's artist-in-residence program.

College Women Set Emeriti Tea For March 15

The College Women's Club will hold their annual emeriti tea Wednesday, March 15, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Alumni House. Mr. John Davis, curator of metals at the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, will give a lecture and slide presentation on collections from Colonial Williamsburg.

Graves Made Honorary Chimney Sweep

Chimney sweep Tom Risch presented President Thomas A. Graves Jr., with a sweep's top hat and made him an honorary member of their fraternity. Risch invited Graves to join him on the roof of his house for first-hand experience with the job. The president declined, however, saying he'd try his hand at sweeping during more accommodating weather.

Once the President's House chimney was cleaned, sweep Isaac Watts said that on a scale of one to 10, the chimney "was about No. 6 dirty." Watts said he believed it was not used daily and figured Graves and his family to be "only occasional fireplace users, not people who heat their homes with it night and day."

Tradition says that chimney sweeps bring good luck to those around them, and Risch and Watts aren't about to argue with tradition. Cathy Baker, a William and Mary senior from Edina, Minn., kissed a smiling, dusty Watts on the cheek as soon as his work was done, hoping that some of his luck and not too much of the dirt on his face would rub off.

Aids Courts In All 50 States Plus U.S. Territories

State Court Center Is Improving Judicial System

Paintings on loan from the College decorate the lobby and executive suite. Colorful draperies and contemporary furniture are featured throughout the building.

The building will be formally dedicated March 19, followed by a major four-day conference on reforming the state court system. Some 400 leading judges, lawyers, civic leaders, public officials and foreign jurists will attend "State Courts: A Blueprint for the Future."

College officials have worked closely with the National Center staff since Williamsburg was first considered a possible site for the Center's permanent headquarters several years ago. In fact, the "terrific cordiality" of William and Mary representatives and the opportunity for affiliation with the Marshall-Wythe School of Law were important reasons why Williamsburg was ultimately chosen, said Arne Schoeller, deputy director of the Center.

The College has already taken advantage of the Center's resources, borrowing its experts to teach courses in law and government and to advise on plans for the innovative moot courtroom being designed for the new law building.

William and Mary faculty and students will have access to the Center's highly specialized collection of state court research material, probably the most comprehensive of its kind in the nation. Officials for the two organizations also foresee opportunities for William and Mary faculty and students to collaborate with National Center staff on research projects.

Much of the work of the National Center for State Courts is on a project-by-project basis, with task forces set up to research problem areas and to recommend specific action. Funding comes from federal grants, particularly through the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, as well as from state court contributions and grants from private corporations and foundations.

Many of the projects are attacking inefficiency and delay in the courts by introducing more efficient business practices into court management and helping courts take advantage of modern technology.

The Center regularly provides research and information services to those interested in the state courts. Last year alone it responded to some 700 requests for information—by everyone from court personnel to legislators and journalists, said Schoeller. There are plenty of figures to keep track of—state and local courts handle about 95 per cent of the volume of court business, Schoeller estimates, and the National Center is concerned with the courts in all 50 states plus five U.S. territories.

The National Center also coordinates professional groups in the field of judicial administration, serving as secretariat to court-related organizations. Its publications make research findings readily accessible.

Projects undertaken by the Center have sought solutions to an astonishing variety of court problems, and the Center maintains a staff with diverse talents to deal with them.

"The general assumption is that the Center is a law faculty, but it's not," said Schoeller. "It's a different enterprise. We're concerned with management of the courts, not with individual cases."

Computers Are Lecture Topic

The revolution in the computer world is the subject of the Project Plus Forum on Wednesday, March 15.

Captain Grace Murray Hopper, head of the Navy Programming Language Section of the Department of the Navy, Washington, D.C., will speak on "Future Possibilities: Hardware, Software and People," at 7:30 p.m. in Millington Hall auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

Cpt. Hopper has received many honors and awards in recognition of her work on computers and her contributions to the on-going revolution in the development of high level languages. A mathematician and engineer, she has had extensive experience in the computer industry, working for such corporations as Remington Rand and the UNIVAC division of Sperry Rand.

Senior State Department Official Discusses Panama Canal Treaties

U.S. State Department official Richard Wyrrough will discuss the Panama Canal treaties Tuesday, March 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre, Swem Library.

The public is invited to attend his talk, which is sponsored by the government department.

Wyrrough is deputy director and senior advisor for treaty affairs in the Office of Panamanian Affairs at the State Department. He was a member of the U.S. delegation that negotiated the new Panama Canal treaties and served as the staff coordinator for the delegation.

Prior to joining the U.S. Department of State in 1974, Wyrrough served Power has become a nasty word in the worlds of business and government, something people want desperately to have—but don't want to talk about.

A sociologist at the College has come to the defense of power, declaring it a necessity for getting things done. Although Sociology Professor Edwin H. Rhyne admits that power can destroy, he insists that the lack of power can be equally as destructive.

Rhyne teaches a course at William and Mary on the structure of power, where he tries to draw comparisons between different organizations of power in varying social situations.

Power can also affect different people in different ways, and Rhyne points to various residents of the White House to prove his point. Like so many others, Rhyne says Richard Nixon was corrupted by power, by "the distorted impression that he could do anything he wanted to do."

Yet Rhyne insists President Abraham Lincoln, a man who ultimately possessed more power than Nixon and most other presidents, was not corrupted by power. He points to Harry Truman as another example of a president who grew more mature instead of becoming more corrupt during his term in office.

Whether the results are good or bad, Rhyne admits that power can be "addictive to some extent. It can be a very seductive thing, but I would say it's more like cigarette addiction than heroin addiction. And we can't forget that power is not unique in this sense. A person can also become addicted to irresponsibility and non-power."

If power is what enables leaders to get things done, why does it maintain such a negative connotation in the minds of most people? "By definition," says Rhyne, "power is the ability of one human being to get another human being to do his or her bidding, even though the other person may not wish to do it. That's part of the reason we have such a negative feeling about power. We like to think of ourselves as being independent, each marching to our own little drummer. But power can only exist when several people, and sometimes a whole nation, are marching to exactly the same drummer."

"Power is a natural part of human life," Rhyne explains. "It's not something that a few self-seeking people create. It must exist, and we must recognize this fact, although we do't basically like the idea."

Who's the most powerful person in the world today? Rhyne says it's a "dead heat" between President Jimmy Carter and Russia's Leonid Brezhnev. "Potentially, President Carter has control over the greatest number of resources because the United States is still the most influential country in the world," he explains. "But the President may have a more difficult time exercising his power. Brezhnev has fewer resources under his control, but he has much greater leeway in how he uses them."
