Summer School Opens June 12

Summer school classes begin June 12. Full time employees and staff members who wish to take advantage of the tuition waiver for courses should get the appropriate forms signed by their supervisors before going through registration at the Summer School office.

With permission of their supervisors, staff members are allowed to take one course per session or a total of 6 hours during the summer.

Paul Clem, director of the Summer School, is encouraging registrations by or before June 1. After that date all registrations will be handled on the first day of classes, June 12, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Summer School office.

The first session of Summer School runs from June 12 to July 14 and the second session will begin July 17 and run through August 18. Summer School graduation is August 19.

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law has its own summer school schedule. It offers just one session from June 5 through July 14.

Classes meet Monday through Friday and opening day of each session will be a regular class period. Classes will also meet on Tuesday, July 4.

Courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels in arts and sciences, business and education will be offered this summer.

Special programs this year include the Summer Field School in Pre-historic and Historical Archaeology which will be held June 6 through July 14 at Flowerdew Hundred Plantation on the James River. Theodore R. Reinhart, chairman of the department of anthropology, is director of the field school.

The summer band school will again offer two two-week sessions for high school musicians.

Rising 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th graders will be here June 18-July 1. The session for rising 7th, 8th and 9th graders will be July 2-15. Several public concerts in the Wren Yard will again be a feature of the Band School schedule.

Pat Keenoy of Caldwell, N.J., poses with her parents for pictures outside the United Methodist Church on Jamestown Road following the baccalaureate service Saturday during commencement weekend. This year's commencement saw a return of the baccalaureate after a pause of several years. Despite a grim forecast from the weatherman, the sun broke through late Sunday morning and the seniors marched from the Wren Building across campus to William and Mary Hall where friends and relatives lined the steps to greet the parade. Honorary marshals selected for their contribution to the class of 1978, Stan Brown, Director of Corporate Relations and Placement; Lester Hooker, Director of William and Mary Hall; and Ken Smith, Associate Dean of Students for Activities and Organizations lead the graduates across campus. The commencement address was delivered by Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, the first woman in the history of the College to do so. The valedictory was given by Chris Kelley, president of the senior class, who was the major architect of the expanded commencement program this year.

Danforth Taps Two Scientists

A husband-wife team specializing in clinical psychology have been appointed to a six-year term as associates for the Danforth Foundation.

Neill P. Watson, assistant professor of psychology, and C. Thayer Cory, a psychologist at the Community Health Center at Riverside Hospital, were among 538 persons in colleges and universities across the country to be selected as Danforth Associates.

The purpose of the Danforth program is to encourage the humanizing of the learning experience in colleges and universities, and to increase the effectiveness of learning and teaching on college campuses. Each year, associates attend approximately eight conferences focusing on various themes to carry out program objectives.

In addition to being guests of the foundation at conferences, associates are eligible to apply for grant funds up to $2,000 for special projects to enhance faculty-student relationships. Projects may involve efforts among faculty to develop new teaching styles and skills and to renew themselves as more effective teachers and members of the learning community. They also involve efforts to enhance the educational experience of those who have often been excluded from many phases of higher education in our society, including women, older adults, and minority persons.

Watson joined the psychology department in the fall of 1976. He specializes in clinical psychology and holds an undergraduate degree from Yale and a doctorate from Harvard.

In addition to her work at Riverside, Cory is the co-author of the book "Our Bodies, Ourselves," a commentary on women and sexuality. She has taught a course for counselors at the School of Education on the topic of human sexuality. She received her undergraduate degree from Boston University and a master of theological studies degree from Harvard.

After 12 Years Summer Law School Flourishes in England

The Marshall-Wythe Law School was the first law school in 1967 to initiate an overseas summer school in England. Twelve years later, despite competition from many imitators, the program is flourishing.

Some 140 students, representing 85 different law schools across the country, will attend the 1978 session at the University of Exeter in southern England, July 4-August 9.

The school will offer 12 different courses taught by an Anglo-American faculty from the University of Exeter and Marshall-Wythe. Professors Scott Whitney, Dennis Brion, William Swindler, Emeric Fischer and Walter Williams from the Marshall-Wythe

School of Law will be members of the summer school faculty.

This year's enrollment is the second highest in the history of the program. Last year 156 students enrolled. Emeric Fischer, director, said part of the drop may be attributable to the decline of the dollar and the fact that about 20 law schools now have overseas programs patterned after the Exeter summer school.

Enrollment, Fischer added, had exceeded expectations. The first year of the summer school 30 students were enrolled. For several years enrollment hovered around 85 but shot up in 1976 to 115.

Classes in comparative conflicts in law, comparative constitutional law, law and medicine, environmental law, international law, the law of sales and the law of commercial paper will be taught by members of the Marshall-Wythe faculty this summer.

Business School Announces Four Award Winners

The School of Business Administration has announced the names of four award winners.

Elizabeth L. Wagner of Richmond has been awarded the first Elizabeth S. George Scholarship, established by W. Brooks George of Richmond in honor of his wife. George, chairman of the board of the House of Edgeworth, is a former rector of the Board of Visitors of the College and a member of the business school's Sponsors' Board. Miss Wagner received a baccalaureate degree at commencement and will enroll in the MBA program this fall.

The Wayne F. Gibbs senior prize to the undergraduate student in accounting with the highest overall academic average in business went to Mrs. Carol R. O'Connor of Williamsburg.

Newsmakers

Two members of the psychology department, Larry Ventis and Deborah Hartley, attended the Fifth Biennial Southeastern Conference on Human Development, April 27-29, in Atlanta. Larry Ventis presented a paper entitled, "The Effects of Age at Marriage and Child Spacing on Maternal Social Reinforcement," which he coauthored with Virgil McKenna and Cynthia Null.

Dr. Stephen C. Clement, Dr. Bruce K. Goodwin, and Dr. Gerald H. Johnson of the department of geology attended the Annual Meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science in Blacksburg, May 10-12.

Clement presented a paper on "Tracing the origins of red earthenwares through clay chemistry."

Goodwin presented a paper on "Potholes at the falls of the James River in Richmond, Virginia."

Three senior geology majors also presented papers. These students and their papers were: Roger W. Buck, "The geology and geophysics of the Green Spring Pluton, Louisa County, Virginia," Maximo Lorenzo, "The interpretation of paleontological and sedimentological variations in the Yorktown Formation (Early Pliocene) at Kingsmill-on-the-James, James City County, Virginia," and Joel P. Gregory, "Reconnaissance of the metamorphic geology of Pittsylvania County, Virginia."

Johnson serves as a member of the council of the Virginia Academy of Science, and Dr. Goodwin served as a judge in the Earth Science Section of the Virginia Junior Academy of Science.

John McKnight and Hans vonBaeyer of the physics department gave their specially prepared 18th century scientific demonstration for a physics colloquium at New York University and the New York Academy of Science this past week.

History Grads Receive Awards

Three recent graduates have received special awards from the department of history.

Miss M. Elizabeth Bowen of Prince Frederick, Maryland, was the 1978 recipient of the William Elbert Fraley Award for having received highest honors in history for a thesis entitled "A Small Affirmation of the Heart." Miss Bowen is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and a double major of English and history.

The Fraley Award was established in 1969 as a memorial to an alumnus and is awarded each year to a student receiving the highest degree of honors in history. The award amounted to $500 this year.

Miss Elizabeth M. Richardson of Alexandria and James Ormonde Butler of Roanoke were co-recipients of the Richard Lee Morton Scholarship Award for 1978. Both students are members of Phi Beta Kappa. The department of history supplemented each award with a check for $175.

The Morton Award was established by a group of students in honor of Dr. Richard Lee Morton upon his retirement from the College. Morton served as chairman of the department of history for many of the 40 years he taught at the College.

Dr. Joseph Galano of the psychology department, a board member of the Williamsburg-James City County Community Action Agency, recently participated in the Fifth Annual CSA Day Conference in Philadelphia. The conference, "The Mid-Atlantic Conference on Poverty and Human Resource Development," was intended to assist in understanding major issues and developing effective community action programs throughout the mid-Atlantic states. This year's conference addressed key elements of present and projected welfare reform, urban and community development, aging, family crises and economic development and strategies that will impact on low income, disadvantaged persons in our country.

William D. Barnes of the Fine Arts Department received a purchase award for his painting "Table Top/Rice Flour" at the La Grange National. It will become part of the permanent collection at the Chattahoochee Valley Art Center, La Grange, Ga.

John Bridge, visiting professor of law from the University of Exeter, participated in a panel on "The Emerging European Constitution" at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law April 27-28 in Washington. He presented a paper on "The Protection of Basic Individual Rights in the European Community."

Ron Brown, professor of law, is the author of "Federal Regulation of Collective Bargaining by State and Local Employees: Constitutional Alternatives," in the current issue of the South Carolina Law Review. He also spoke on the same general subject before a conference sponsored by the Virginia Education Association in Richmond late in April.

Scott C. Whitney, professor of law, is the author of "Environmental Regulation of United States Deep Seabed Mining," in a symposium on "New Directions in United States Ocean Policy" in the recently published issue of the William and Mary Law Review. The same issue also contains a review-essay on "The Memoirs of Earl Warren," by William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law.

James R. Baron, associate professor of classical studies, presented a paper entitled "Dionysiac Ritual and Aeschylus' Trilogy Form in Bergman's En Filmtrilogi," to the Annual Meeting of the Association for the Advancement of Scandinavian Study at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on May 6.

Perrow, Goodrich Named Literary Prize Recipients

The Tiberius Gracchus Jones Literary Prize for 1978 has been awarded to Michael Perrow for "Harmonics," a sequence of poems, and to Michael Goodrich for an untitled short story.

Perrow received a bachelor of arts degree at commencement last week.

Cecil M. McCulley, of the English department, chairman of the prize committee, said judges were particularly impressed with Perrow's handling of southern dialogue in his story about his home town of Milledgeville, Ga. He added that it is very unusual for the prize to be won by a freshman.

Because of the number of meritorious entries, the Society of the Alumni supplemented the prize money

Bright Honored Upon Retirement

John C. Bright, director of Veterans Affairs at the College, has been commended by the Veterans Administration for his more than 30 years of service to veterans of three wars.

In a ceremony in the office of President Thomas A. Graves, Bright, who is retiring this year, was presented with a VA commendation for "contributing significantly" to the education of veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and providing counseling on the VA Education Assistance Programs.

On hand for the presentation were two members of the VA regional office in Roanoke, one of them a veteran who was served by Bright's office when he was a graduate student at William and Mary in the early 70's.

Robert Aspell, supervisor of the "Vet Rep on Campus" unit of the VA office, and Robert Mitchell, chief of the Veterans Assistance Section who attended the School of Education at William and Mary in 1971-72, made the presentation.

Bright was first appointed to the St. Helena Extension Division of the University in Norfolk in 1946. There he served in a number of capacities as Assistant Professor of History, Director of Admissions, Registrar and Director of Veterans Affairs.

He joined the Williamsburg campus in 1948. In addition to his administrative appointments as Director of the Work-Study Program, Director of Student Aid and Placement, Assistant to the Vice President for Student Affairs and Director of Veterans Affairs, Bright was assistant professor of history from 1948-54.

so that two awards of $30 could be made this year.

Honorable mention this year went to the following: Catherine Baker, Henri Cole, and Lindsey Eck, poetry; Sandra Ann Keiser and Robert H. Richard, Macon Shibut and Gerald Wass, fiction; and Elizabeth Buurma and Karen Hall, drama.

The literary prize was established by Archer G. Jones as a memorial to his father Tiberius Gracchus Jones who was in residence at the College, 1844-45. The income from the gift of $1,000 supports a prize for the best English essay submitted by an undergraduate student.

Summer Schedules at Pool, Hall

For all members of the college community, faculty, staff and their families, the facilities of Adair pool will be open daily from 2-7 p.m. from June 13 through August 17. The tennis courts will also be available to the college family for summer recreation.

William and Mary Hall will be operating on summer hours after May 14, 1978. The building will be open from 7:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday and closed on weekends.

John Kratzer Dies

John Kratzer '78 died in Atlanta, Ga., Thursday evening, May 18 after a long battle with cancer.

Funeral services were held Saturday at the Holy Cross Catholic Church, Tucker, Ga.

The family has asked that expressions of sympathy be made in the form of contributions to Our Lady of Perpetual Health Cancer Home, 760 Washington Street, SW, Atlanta, Ga. 30315.

Sports Information Director Bob Sheeran said this week that plans for memorials honoring John were under discussion.

Coaches Tom Brennan and George Spaak represented the College at the funeral on Saturday.

John entered William and Mary four years ago on a basketball scholarship. Although he was not able, because of his illness, to play his senior year, his teammates elected him captain for the 1977-78 year. He received trophies for his team at the Brigham Young Cougar Classic and the Tangerine Bowl. His presence on December 7 was credited with giving William and Mary the edge that enabled them to score a stunning upset over the University of North Carolina.

Travel Guide Is Published

There's a new book out about Williamsburg that might well be termed a "William and Mary family" publication.

The book is entitled "In and Around Williamsburg With Children." The author is Sarah Kranbuehl, former president of the Williamsburg League of Women Voters, and wife of David Kranbuehl, associate professor of chemistry and Associate Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

The whimsical drawings throughout the book are the work of Katherine Blue, assistant catalogue librarian, and Virginia A. Carey of Williamsburg, the former Virginia Vogle '72.

The family on the cover is Charles T. Cullen, Editor of the Papers of John Marshall, his wife Shirley and their children Leslie and Spencer.

The cover photograph and the design of the book are the work of James C. Rees, Director of the College News Office. The list of acknowledgements also includes several other College folk.

As well as being a helpful guide to what is available to sightseers and of special interest to young visitors, the book also offers historical information on each location and building. It makes a handy helper for a school course in American history. Mrs. Kranbuehl's book is directed at the parents of young children but it makes interesting reading for anyone with an interest in this area of Virginia.

At top, the Cullen family, Charles and Shirley and their children Leslie and Spencer pose for photographer Jim Rees. At bottom is one of the whimsically drawings by Kathryn Blue that author Kranbuehl used throughout the book. The ships at Jamestown are one of the attractions featured in the guide book on how to travel with children and have the experience be pleasurable to both parent and child.

Woodpecker losing home to the Woodman's Axe

One of the country's most beautiful and interesting woodpeckers is in danger of becoming extinct -- not because someone or something is trying to kill the birds, but because the trees that serve as their homes are gradually disappearing.

Gary Miller, a graduate student from Dayton, Va., has spent months looking for the homes of red cockaded woodpeckers and has discovered less than 40 adult birds in Virginia. The woodpecker must build its home in pine trees that are at least 60 years old, and new methods of clear-cutting forests for lumber have eliminated most older trees in Virginia.

"We're fighting an uphill battle to save this bird in Virginia," says Miller. "Its chances are really better in other southeastern states where older pine trees exist on land owned by the federal government."

The red cockaded woodpecker, a bird about eight inches high with a flashy black, white and red pattern on its head, has some unusual habits which make survival difficult in today's world. Unlike most other woodpeckers, they build their homes in live rather than dead trees. But only older pine trees infected with a redheart fungus disease have a soft inner core that enables the small birds to drill their holes.

Why must red cockaded woodpeckers nest in cavities within pine trees rather than in nests on pine tree limbs? "It's just one of those things that has evolved through time -- we really don't know why," says Miller. "The birds have characteristics like well-developed neck muscles, stiff tail feathers and chisel-like beaks which make them well-adapted to drilling holes in trees."

Red cockaded woodpeckers tend to be what Miller describes as "cooperative breeders." The young birds usually stay with their parents for at least one full year to serve as "helpers" during the next breeding season. They feed insects to the newly-hatched chicks while the parents collect food for themselves and their "helpers."

This species of woodpecker is very vocal and usually nests and feeds in groups. Miller says he has spent entire days observing the habits of the endangered species in an effort to determine the "home range" of each family of birds. He says the nests are most prominent in Sussex County.

The research conducted by Miller is under the supervision of Mitchell A. Byrd.

Business Awards

The Board of Sponsors award to the graduate student in the MBA program with the highest academic average went to Anthony V. Anderson of Newport News.

The Dean's award for the graduate student in the MBA program who has contributed the most to the school was won by Sarah A. Bane of Halifax, Va., who has been director of the Women in Business Program this year. The program was established by a $100,000 grant from IBM to the Campaign for the College, initiated in 1976 to raise $19 million in private funds over a three-year period.

Official Memoranda

To: Deans, Department Heads, Directors and Supervisors

Subject: End-of-Year Fiscal Activity

Since this is the second year of a biennium, any unspent appropriations are reverted to the General Fund of the Commonwealth. Therefore, it is incumbent upon each of us to guarantee that our funds are utilized in the most effective manner. In an effort to achieve such maximum effective usage we suggest the following:

1. Do not hold any invoices in your office, even those which normally would be paid in the 1978-79 fiscal year. If funds are available, we will process them in 1977-78. This step is suggested as a very frank "hedge" against the recent pronounced pattern of slow delivery by suppliers. In case some of our purchase orders are undeliverable by June 30, this gives us a ready means of utilizing funds to prevent reversion.
2. Keep a close check on your outstanding purchase orders, by mail and/or by telephone, to insure wherever possible delivery and payment before June 30.

We emphasize that we are not encouraging frivolous spending. We are suggesting ways to ease somewhat the fiscal difficulties we anticipate in 1978-79.

We would appreciate your cooperation in this matter.

CLARIFICATION

A question has been raised which indicates a misunderstanding of our intention in Item #1 above.

We emphasize:

NO INVOICE SHOULD BE PREPARED AND SUBMITTED IN ANY CASE IN WHICH GOODS OR SERVICES HAVE NOT BEEN RECEIVED.

You are reminded again that your signature on an invoice certifies to such receipt.

Published weekly by the Office of University Communications during the academic year, except when the College is in recess, and twice each month in June, July and August.
