Charter Day Focuses on Law

Happy Birthday Marshall-Wythe

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law and law education will take the spotlight at Charter Day exercises Saturday in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, beginning at 2 p.m.

The keynote address will be given by Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., and honorary degrees will be conferred upon two outstanding figures in the field of legal education, John Ritchie, III, of the University of Virginia, and William W. Van Alstyne of Duke University. Both Ritchie and Van Alstyne will receive honorary law degrees, the same degree the College conferred on Justice Powell in 1965.

Law education is the focus of attention this year because 1979 marks the 200th anniversary of the founding of the first chair of law in America at the College in 1779.

The College was founded in 1693, but it was almost 85 years later that the College actually became a university. As Governor of Virginia and a member of the Board of Visitors at the College, Thomas Jefferson recommended a series of sweeping changes that transformed William and Mary into a multi-faceted university. One of those revisions was the addition of a chair of Law and Police and there was probably little doubt that Jefferson would ask his former teacher, George Wythe, to serve in that position.

Wythe accepted and, in doing so, started American legal education in colleges and universities on its way. During his tenure at William and Mary, Wythe trained a future President, a future Chief Justice and his own successor as Professor of Law and Police. James Monroe, John Marshall and St. George Tucker head an impressive list of Wythe's students who had an impact on law and government in the state and nation.

Among those who will be on hand for the anniversary convocation will be Governor John Dalton, an alumnus and

Two New Visitors Named

Governor John Dalton has announced the appointments of Robert S. Hornsby of Williamsburg and Dr. Robert J. Faulconer of Norfolk to the Board of Visitors of the College.

Hornsby and Dr. Faulconer, both alumni of the College, will serve four-year terms beginning March 6. They will replace Dr. James E. Kilbourne of Christiansburg and William S. Hubard of Roanoke, whose terms on the 17-member board will expire. Both served two full terms, the maximum allowed by Virginia law. Aubrey L. Mason of Lynchburg and Miss Anne Dobie Peebles of Carson were re-appointed to additional four-year terms on the Board.

Hornsby, Falconer Named To Board

Hornsby received a bachelor of arts degree from William and Mary in 1941 and a law degree from the College in 1949.

Currently, Hornsby serves on the board of directors of Hornsby Oil Company of Williamsburg. He is also president of Heritage Development Co., Heritage Realty Co. and Middle Plantation Holding Co., as well as a member of the board of directors of the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg.

Hornsby is a trustee for Daycroft School in Greenwich, Conn., and formerly served as president of the Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, the William and Mary Society of the Alumni, the Virginia Petroleum Jobbers Association and the Williamsburg-James City County United Fund. He has also served as a trustee for Williamsburg Community Hospital and as a member of the board for the Peninsula Industrial Committee and the Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce.

He is married to the former Lois Saunier of Richmond and has three sons: Bob Jr., Bruce and Jon.

Dr. Falconer, who received a bachelor of science degree from the College in 1943 before his M.D. at The Johns Hopkins University, is currently professor and chairman of the pathology department at Eastern Virginia Medical School. He also serves as a consultant to DePaul Hospital in Norfolk, as well as several other hospitals throughout eastern Virginia.

Dr. Falconer has served as president of numerous medical organizations, including the Virginia Society for Pathology and the Norfolk County Medical Society. He has been a leader in both the state and national organization of the American Cancer Society for over two decades. He is a member of a number of medical associations, including the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of Anatomists and the American Medical Association.

This will be Dr. Falconer's second tenure on the Board of Visitors. He formerly served on the Board from 1972-76. His wife, the former Virginia Davis, is a 1945 graduate of the College, and his daughter Mary-Waite graduated from the College last May.

a lawyer. Dalton will speak briefly during the program.

The 200th anniversary of the founding of America's first chair of law coincided with another historic event at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law--the construction of a new $5.6 million building. During this bicentennial year, dozens of the nation's most prominent legal educators are scheduled to visit the law school.

Also this weekend, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law hosts the first of four important conferences on environmental law, planned under a grant to the Law School from the multi-million dollar Virginia Environmental Endowment.

The Endowment was set up by order of Judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., of the U.S. District Court for Eastern Virginia, and constitutes one element in the Allied Chemical Company settlement growing out of the complex Kepone litigation.

The first conference, featuring federal, state, industry and environmental and consumer representatives, is built around the specific theme, "Avoiding a Hazardous or Toxic Substances Calamity - Are Federal and State Laws Adequate and Are They Being Administered Adequately?"

The opening session Friday afternoon will concentrate on the Virginia sector and state legislation. Maurice B. Rowe, Secretary of Commerce and Resources, will give an overview of Virginia laws and regulations and Senator Herbert H. Bateman of Newport News and Delegate Gerald H. Baliles of Richmond will discuss special laws for the protection of Virginia rivers, waters and the marine environment.

The public is invited to attend Charter Day which traditionally attracts state legislators, current and former government officials and business leaders from throughout the state. Following Justice Powell's address and the presentation of honorary degrees, a reception will be held in the foyer of Andrews Hall honoring Powell, Van Alstyne and Ritchie.

A native of Suffolk, Justice Powell attended Washington and Lee and Harvard Universities. He holds eight honorary doctorates. He practiced in Richmond for nearly 40 years before being selected to serve on the Supreme Court. He is chairman emeritus of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. Both Ritchie and Van Alstyne have been visiting professors at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

$100,000 PledgeAnheuser Busch Gift To Go For Faculty Research

The Anheuser-Busch Foundation has pledged $100,000 to the College in response to one of the College's most urgent needs, the support of faculty.

For the period 1979 through 1983, the firm will give $20,000 each year to support four summer research fellowships and one semester research fellowship.

"There is no question that this generous support of faculty development will be of enormous benefit in keeping our professors moving ahead in their disciplines and professional fields of expertise," said Thomas A. Graves, Jr., president. "This gift to the Campaign for the College is just one more example of the continuing and close relationship which has developed over the last few years between $150,000 to build new tennis courts behind William and Mary Hall. The eight new courts, which were completed last year, greatly increased the availability of courts for faculty and students.

Anheuser-Busch has sponsored a three-year lecture series at the School of Business Administration which brought three experienced business leaders to the William and Mary campus. William P. Benton, vice president of Ford Motor Co.; Frank Borman, former astronaut and current Anheuser-Busch and the College.

"The ability to provide research fellowships to professors is absolutely necessary if we are to maintain high academic standards centered around a faculty that is active and creative in its educational pursuits," Graves continued.

Anheuser-Busch and the Foundation have on several occasions shown support for the Campaign for the College, a three-year fund-raising effort with a goal of $19 million. Soon after the Campaign began in May 1976, the Foundation gave the College president of Eastern Airlines; and Minnie Dobes, vice president at Lehigh Valley Railroad, each presented a lecture on the free enterprise system and talked informally with business students about trends in the corporate world.

August A. Busch III, chairman and president of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., is currently a member of the School of Business Administration Sponsors. The company also employs several hundred William and Mary students during the summer at Busch Gardens.

Paper Company Gives $15,000 Gift

The International Paper Company Foundation of New York has given the School of Business Administration a $15,000 grant to support its Women in Business Program.

The gift to the Campaign for the College will be used to promote development of similar Women in Business Programs at other universities in the South. A portion of the grant will also supplement the funds available to women for fellowships in the Master of Business Administration degree program at the College.

Julia B. Leverenz, director of the program, said that the grant will enable the School to continue making new plans for special events in 1979. An upcoming seminar will focus on careers in business for women liberal arts majors, and a math anxiety workshop is scheduled for entering women MBA students. Leverenz noted that the International Paper Foundation grant will help the program develop a more widespread influence throughout the South.

The Women in Business Program was established at William and Mary in May 1977, when the IBM Corporation awarded $100,000 to the College over a four-year period for a program "designed to encourage women, particularly those in the South, to pursue careers and attain executive positions in business management." A unique, three-part program was developed, consisting of off-campus meetings to inform and recruit women undergraduates and women already in business, an on-campus program of conferences for improvement of management skills and career counseling, and financial aid to qualified women students.

The program focuses on the needs of women students, women already established in business careers and women contemplating business careers. Through seminars which provide students and business executives with opportunities for mutual discussion, the program helps students to gain valuable experience. At the same time, executives learn more about the special contributions women can make to the business world.

During its first 20 months, the Women in Business Program sponsored a number of successful events. An all-day seminar in November 1977 attracted over 400 women from the Peninsula area of Virginia, as well as the northern and western sections of the state. Business executives from American Telephone and Telegraph Company, CBS, Mobil Oil and IBM Corporation participated in panel discussions on such topics as "What an MBA Degree Can Do For Me" and "The Job Market for Women." Representatives from 11 schools with MBA degree programs were also present to discuss their programs with prospective students. The event attracted national news coverage, and resulted in a large number of inquiries from individuals and institutions interested in the program.

"Meet the Presidents Day," a day-long seminar sponsored by the MBA Association of the College last February, included a seminar entitled "Women in Business," featuring Kathleen Conley, who holds an MBA degree from William and Mary and is currently manager of financial and business services at Dow Chemical Company.

The Women in Business Program also sponsored two events designed to help women once they have entered the business world. The first, entitled "Speak for Success," was a practical course on public speaking conducted by Susan McHugh, professor of speech. The second, "Dress for Success," was a business-women's fashion show based on the recently published book of the same title.

Since the start of the Women in Business Program, enrollment of women in the William and Mary School of Business Administration has risen from 15 percent to 30 percent, which is well above the 17 percent national average for women in MBA degree programs. Fourteen women applied for the three scholarships offered by the Women in Business Program in its first year.

Faculty Club Party

The Faculty Club will hold its fourth cocktail party of the year Friday, Feb. 16, from 5:30-7:30 p.m., in the display area of the anthropology department on the ground floor of Washington Hall. This area provides an interesting setting for the party with colonial artifacts on display in the hall and material from the Harley Collection on exhibit in the African Room. "Flowerdew Hundred Hall" contains Indian and colonial artifacts collected from Flowerdew Hundred and Maycock Plantations.

All members of the faculty and administration are invited to attend and may pay at the door or pay in advance to Martin Mathes, Department of Biology, at the usual rates: members $2.50 per person (non-drinkers $1.50) and non-members $4 per person (non-drinkers $2.50).

For those interested in dinner after the cocktail party, Shamrock Foods is providing a gourmet candlelight dinner in the Dodge Room, and will serve until 8:30 p.m. The entree will be a choice of either Prime Rib au Jus or Stuffed Flounder Espanol, which will be served with an appetizer, a salad, two vegetables and dessert. The cost will be $5.95 per person, and reservations are necessary. Call 229-0521.

Faculty members are also reminded that the Faculty Luncheon at the Hospitality House has been extended to Monday and Tuesday, and is served between the hours of 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Heacox to Talk at P.P. Forum

How does something that happens become a poem?

Tom Heacox, assistant professor of English, will discuss the relation between experience and the creative process in poetry writing at the Project Plus Forum, Wednesday evening, at Millington Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The program follows the general theme of the Forums this year, which has been "Creativity."

A graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Heacox holds both his graduate degrees from The Johns Hopkins University. He teaches creative writing courses and has published poems in many journals and magazines, including Pequod, The Virginia Quarterly, American Scholar, Inlet, Real Toads and the William and Mary Review.

The next Forum will be February 21. A film, "King of Hearts," will be shown and F. Robert Bohl, Jr., associate professor of philosophy, will comment on the film as it relates to the program topic, "Creativity and Madness."

Able to leap from tall buildings in a single bound! Students in Sylvia Shirley's "Adventures" course learn the ropes, so to speak, by jumping from Adair Gym onto a 100 ft. rope slide. Most students who participated liked it so much they went back for more. But when they offered to let our "News" photographer try it, he declined on the grounds that he might bust his "camera." Dick Gregory Due Feb. 16

Dick Gregory, celebrated comedian and civil rights activist, will be the main attraction of the 1979 Black Culture Series sponsored by the Black Student Organization.

Gregory, who will speak in the Campus Center Ballroom at 8 p.m., Friday, Feb. 16, is just one of the special guests scheduled to participate in the annual series of cultural events coordinated by the BSO.

Gregory's lecture is one of many the activist has made at campuses across the nation during the last decade. Born in St. Louis and educated at Southern Illinois University, Gregory first established himself as a first-rate comedian and nightclub performer. During the Sixties, he made numerous appearances on major talk and variety television programs, played to packed houses at entertainment spots across the nation, and cut several record albums.

More recently, Gregory has become a symbol of the civil rights movement. He was a candidate for the Peace and Freedom Party in 1968, and 10 years later received the Ebony-Topaz Heritage and Freedom Award.

At 9 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 17, the BSO will sponsor a "Cabaret" in the ballroom with live music by "Third World Connection" and disc jockey Chester "B" Bentley of WOWI in Norfolk. Tickets are available from BSO members.

At 8 p.m., Friday, Feb. 23, the BSO will stage its annual talent night in the ballroom.

From Feb. 16-22, an exhibit of art work by local black artists will be on display from 1-5 p.m. Several of the artists will be on hand to answer questions about their work.

Michael Ford, president of the BSO, said that this year's Black Culture Series will continue throughout the spring, with additional events being planned for April and May.

A Letter From President Graves to the College Community

Yesterday afternoon the Board of Visitors and I met at length to assess the situation in regard to the expansion of Cary Field Stadium.

During the meeting we gave the most careful consideration to the many and varied expressions of opinion on this subject which either Board members or I had received up until the time of the meeting.

At its conclusion we drafted the attached statement which tries to express as carefully and as fully as we can the position of the Board of Visitors and the President, and I announced it at a press conference about 9 o'clock yesterday evening.

I know that on a matter of this importance the position which we have taken will please some and disappoint others. But now I ask that all of us, whatever our persuasion on this particular question, set aside whatever differences there may be among us, get back to the fundamental purpose of why we are all here -- a first-rate William and Mary education -- and turn all our efforts to working together to strengthen and support that objective.

Thomas A. Graves, Jr.
President

Statement Issued Following Board of Visitors Meeting, Thursday

The Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary sincerely regrets the misunderstandings which have arisen as a result of its previous actions with regard to Cary Field and its decisions in connection with possible expansion of the stadium.

It would appear that those who have been so dissatisfied about the action are not properly aware of the actions or intentions of the Board.

The Board of Visitors is of the opinion that William and Mary is one of the unique institutions in the United States today and worthy of all our efforts to preserve and foster it in its present character. The Board also believes that Williamsburg is a unique community and deserves our support in maintaining it as such. The Board sees the combination of the College of William and Mary and Williamsburg as something very precious, and believes that it is the obligation of the Board of Visitors to protect and preserve this relationship against all the normal pressures that impinge upon an ordinary college in an ordinary town. The members of the Board of Visitors, whose ties and associations with the College are of long standing, each recognize these obligations as part of a sacred trust.

The Board feels that inter-collegiate athletics are an integral part of the College. Such activities contribute measurably to those things that we desire to make a part of the institutional life at the College of William and Mary and in the surrounding community.

Having in mind the allegations of those who would charge that the possibility for enlargement of the stadium over a period of years uses money that might otherwise be committed for faculty salaries or other academic needs, the Board desires to reaffirm the statements contained in its earlier resolutions. The proposal for enlargement of the stadium would be completely dependent upon contributions from gift sources that might be available for this purpose and not available for academic purposes. It should be clear that these proposals, on this basis, could not adversely affect our academic undertakings.

The commitment of the Board of Visitors is to continue our present athletic program and to broaden our women's program in conformance with Title IX. We recognize the probable increase in financial support which may be required. We see three possible sources of increased revenue: (1) donations from the Athletic Educational Foundation, (2) student fees, and (3) gate receipts. Donations from the Athletic Educational Foundation are absolutely essential, but we must assume that there are limitations to their annual increases. We all have the desire to keep increases in student fees to a minimum, when possible to reduce such fees, and ultimately to eliminate student fees entirely. Our only logical source for continued increase in revenue is from gate receipts, both at home and away.

For the past year the Ad Hoc Committee on Athletics of the Board of Visitors has been studying our expansion alternatives and have, after analysis, determined that, of the two possibilities, a new stadium or the expansion of Cary Field, the only economical and practical solution is a program of enlargement of Cary Field.

There are only 8,791 permanent seats in the present stadium with an additional 6,018 in temporary end-zone seats, not enough to meet our increasing requirements. Because of our limited seating capacity, our major competitors decline to play at Cary Field, yet when we play elsewhere with teams such as V.P.I., Virginia, and Navy the attendance far exceeds Cary Field capacity. Unfortunately, it is an economic fact of life that colleges will not schedule games in a stadium unless it be of a size which exceeds the present capacity of Cary Field. These same opponents play us now in basketball at William and Mary Hall with its 9,000 permanent seats.

Our studies over the past year have included renderings of the enlargement of the stadium, consideration of the increased gate receipts over the past five years, and the possibilities of future gate receipts. Studies have been conducted to assure that parking will be available on the completion of Phase I. Figures have been prepared to determine the maintenance costs that would be involved in an enlarged stadium. The Board has determined that there are major benefits to be realized, that the additions will not adversely affect the image and appearance of the College, and that it is an economically viable undertaking that is in the best interest of the College of William and Mary.

We have recognized the immediate necessity for the renovation of the stadium and have begun the appropriate steps to assure the complete updating of our present stadium facilities.

Phase I of the expansion program calls for an additional 11,788 seats on the west side, and the removal of 3,162 temporary seats in the north end. Our permanent seating capacity would then be 16,513 permanent seats on the west side, 4,066 on the east, for a total of 20,579 seats. The apparent need and the economic feasibility of the undertaking prompted us to authorize Phase I of the expansion at our December meeting. The commitment was made when it was determined that there was a need for further enlargement, that it should be funded by private donations, and that appropriate studies could be made to determine its effect on the students, the College and the community.

We recognize that football attendance presently, and in the future, creates parking problems in the City of Williamsburg, and, as a part of the resolution favoring possible expansion, the Board specifically provided for research into a solution to parking problems, including cooperation with the City of Williamsburg, Colonial Williamsburg, and all others interested in this matter.

The Board would remind the citizens of Williamsburg that we were assured by our architect that the plans would conform with the zoning ordinances of the City of Williamsburg.

Members of the Board are well aware of some of the disappointments with the conclusion of the Board. The Board, however, senses substantial support of the people in Williamsburg and of the members of the William and Mary community.

The Board therefore again goes on record as intending to proceed with expansion of the stadium in accordance with the procedures provided above, subject to the donations of private funds for this purpose.

The Board would hope that all of those whom we recognize as being vitally interested in William and Mary and Williamsburg will be assured that its actions will only be such as the Board sincerely feels will work to preserve and foster William and Mary and its unique character.

Music Fraternity Wins Triennium Merit Award

Nu Sigma chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia has been awarded the Charles Lutton Memorial Province Merit Award for its accomplishments throughout the triennium, 1975-1978.

The campus chapter has earned a perfect score for the past three years in the seven categories judged by the national organization, including province interaction, community service, membership development, musical achievement, chapter operation, alumni relations and fraternal traditions.

Phi Mu Alpha is best known on campus for its collaboration with the women's music fraternity, Delta Omicron, in the production of a yearly Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. During the past three years, productions of "Patience," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "The Scorchers" and "Ruddigore" have been presented.

The fraternity each year sponsors an American Composers Recital which this year will be presented Feb. 19 at 8 p.m. in Ewell 100, to promote American music.

Members serve as volunteer ushers for Concert Series performances and during the Christmas season presented choral and instrumental entertainment for the patients at the Pines Convalescent Home. The chapter also has plans for a program in the schools to introduce young children to various instruments and help students form an early interest in music.

For their own entertainment, the fraternity will sponsor a formal waltz in April. Special guests will be members of the Sinfonicon Opera Company who helped with the production of "Patience."

The fraternity also awards a scholarship each year which funds applied music lessons for a music concentrator. Winner this year is Laurinda Nicholson, a sophomore from Chester, Va. Nicholson is a member of the choir and a pianist who is studying with Vera Lendvay. She was an accompanist for her high school choir at Thomas Dale High School and is interested in church music.

Tom Cambern is president of Phi Mu Alpha on campus. Other officers include Bill Weiser, vice president; Mike Rogan, secretary; and Carl Meyer, treasurer.

The campus chapter was established in 1965. The national organization was established in 1899 at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

Although there were many women working in European courts, they usually were considered a rarity despite their numbers. Lavinia Fontana, celebrated for religious paintings and portraits, received recognition from the church after she accepted an invitation from the Pope to go to Rome.

Tufts was educated at Harvard University and the Institute of Fine Arts of New York University, where she received her doctorate. She has published numerous articles on women painters and has in preparation an article on the life and work of Louis Melendex and women artists of the Renaissance.

A reception will follow in Andrews Gallery.

'Agora' Debutes

A new publication on campus, "Agora" (marketplace), is being published by the Office of Extramural Programs, with news about the international community on campus.

There are 95 students on campus now, divided almost equally between undergraduate and graduate disciplines. These students come from all areas of the world, including Southeast Asia and the Republic of China, Europe, the Middle East and India, Central and South America, Canada, Africa and Australia. The international community also includes William and Mary students who have been or who are presently abroad in a variety of exchange programs in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Spain and Italy.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the news letters or learn more about them is invited to contact Dean Joseph Healey, James Blair 209; Kathy Dobbs, Brown 314, ext. 4265; or Eric Scalise, Colonial Towne Apt. 24A, 229-1163.

The first issue of the newsletter contains information on career opportunities for foreign national students, the International Circle, immigration regulations, and off-campus employment.

Hobbies To Fill Locksmith's Retirement

When William E. Jones, the College locksmith, retired last week after 21 years, his co-workers at the Buildings and Grounds department gave him a rocking chair that will probably last a long time -- while he'll enjoy the comfort, Jones has so many projects lined up he won't spend too much time rocking.

A painter and sculptor in his spare time, Jones is looking forward to being able to spend more time with his hobbies. His interest in sculpture is long-standing. When he was in the eighth grade, he won a scholarship to the Museum of Fine Arts in Chicago. Any idea of a career in art was not given very much encouragement at home, he recalled; Jones grew up during the Depression years.

But Jones has never lost his love of art, which he says is "whatever is pleasing to the individual's eye." He hopes, with some spare time, to work on his painting techniques and some ideas he has about heightening the dramatic effect of three-dimensional designs.

Jones is also very involved with youth work in the Elks. He will be president of the Elks Boys Camp at

W. E. Jones

Clifton Forge this summer, charged with supervising over 500 teenagers. He is chairman of the S.E. District National Foundation, the educational division of the Elks, and he also heads the membership and ways and means committees. Although the public view of the Elks may sometimes be only social, in reality the organization is 90 percent service, ten percent social, he asserts.

One of the first orders of business in retirement, says Jones, will be to finish some projects he started for his wife Grace, who is secretary of the history department.

Jones has seen a lot of changes on campus and helped to initiate a few himself. Working with another Jones, W. Melville Jones, Professor of English emeritus and a former Vice President of the College, William Jones devised a plan for registration in Blow Gym which then was a spacious setting for a much smaller enrollment.

Becoming involved with the life of the campus has been a hallmark of Jones' years here and he doesn't want to lose those ties. He says he'll be back on campus with his familiar white truck if called to help out with any lock problems.

Jones joined the Building and Grounds department in 1958 as head of housekeeping. Previously, he had been grounds architect for the Medical College of Virginia. He has been the College locksmith at William and Mary for about six years.

Valentine Fetes Begin Friday

The Catholic Student Association and the Canterbury Association are joining forces to sponsor a St. Valentine's Day Waltz and a showing of the film "Camelot."

The First Annual St. Valentine's Day Waltz will be held at Bruton Parish House, Friday, Feb. 9, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

This is a semi-formal dance open to the college community. Admission is $3 per couple. Tickets are limited; they can be obtained from the Student Activities Office in the Campus Center or by contacting one of the officers of the CSA or Canterbury.

Music for the evening will be provided by a 20-piece waltz-jazz band: The full-length motion picture "Camelot," starring Richard Harris and Vanessa Redgrave, will be shown at Bruton Parish House at 7 and 9:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 13. This legendary tale of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table won three Academy Awards. There is no admission charge; donation requested.

Williams Seeks Good PR To Right Ancient Wrong

That serpent in the Garden of Eden has given snakes a bad name down through the ages.

That's the opinion of Jerry Williams, an English major and snake collector, who feels snakes have been maligned unjustly. He takes every opportunity he can to set the record straight.

Williams has 11 snakes which he keeps in the greenhouse in Millington Hall. They are all harmless, all have names and, according to Williams, are ideal pets. He points out that they don't have to be walked on cold winter mornings, they are quiet, require little space, don't shed fur in the rugs and do not demand a lot of attention. They eat rats and mice.

Williams has a boa constrictor named "Agnes," a ball python dubbed "Botetourt" and a king snake he calls "Sam." "Naomi" is a California king snake named for his grandmother (pretty but high strung); and "Louise" is another boa constrictor.

"DuPard" and "Edwina" are a couple of teenage boa constrictors named for one of Williams' friends who for a while took the pen name of Edward M. DuPard. He has since changed his non de plume. Williams hopes DuPard and Edwina will present him with a batch of snakeletters or snakelings but so far they haven't. It will be quite a present if they do: snakes have about 32 young when they give birth.

Then there's "Leon," a corn snake, and "Fang," a ferocious name given to a small scarlet snake which looks very much like the deadly coral snake found in southern Florida. Both snakes are colorfully banded but there's a rhyme to help the layman tell them apart: red to yellow, kill a fellow; red to black, venom lack.

"Bosco" is a black snake Williams got in payment for a day's work laying a new floor in a pet store. Williams wanted merchandise rather than money and the management was agreeable. He has an African Savannah Monitor lizard at home named "Merrimac."

One of the most interesting snakes in the collection is "Swami," a Florida Indigo snake now on the endangered species list because its habitat is being eroded by parking lots, shopping centers and condominiums.

Williams recently gave a program on snakes to members of the Science Club at Queens Lake Intermediate School. About 40 students attended the program after school. They were fascinated by the snakes, asked lots of questions and had a chance to touch one of the snakes as Williams held it.

Williams has given several programs in schools around his hometown of Charlottesville and enjoys the opportunity to talk about snakes to groups and point up their good qualities.

Snakes are not wet, slimy and slippery; they are warm and smooth. The snake's tongue is not a stinger but a sensory organ the snake uses to check out his environment. The idea that snakes are basically malevolent is just a lot of bad PR stemming way back from the misdeeds of the Biblical serpent.

Williams admits that snakes are probably not the most intelligent animals to have as pets but they don't demand much. They have exotic coloring, respond to affection and need only a plump mouse every ten days to keep them sustained.

Considering evolution left the snake with no ears, no voice box, no eyelids and no legs, they do well to survive, contends Williams. He enjoys his pets and, because he has spent a lot of time studying them, is thinking of writing an elementary book on snake care for beginners. He deplores snake people who exploit the animals to make practical jokes and charlatan snake charmers who sew the snake's mouth shut for safety, regardless of the damage to the snake.

The movies have also been responsible for a lot of misinformation about snakes, said Williams. They are usually shown in a bad light. Scenes of Tarzan battling a boa constrictor are totally misleading, he adds: the boa constrictor is not found in Africa. The snake who is introduced to kill the victim and thicken the plot of a murder mystery would probably not have reacted in the stereotyped Hollywood manner, left to its own devices, said Williams.

This spring, Williams is planning on going snake-hunting to add some poisonous snakes to his collection for study. With a pillow case, a forked stick and some panty hose, Williams hopes to capture a copperhead and a cottonmouth. The panty hose, he explained, are used to get a secure tie once the snake is in the bag. All snakes, said Williams, have to be securely housed. If a snake can find a tiny hole, just large enough for its nose or part of its head, it will manage to escape, he added.

People begin life with no innate fear of snakes, said Williams; they are taught to be afraid. Truth is, snakes are more afraid of people. Highly sensitive to vibrations, they will get out of the way when they hear someone coming and be gone, long before the person comes into view.

Has Williams been bitten? He'd be a rich man if he had a nickel for every time, he admits, but that doesn't diminish this attraction to snakes. He hopes to do more programs in schools. He's willing to go anywhere, he says, if there's a chance to do a little PR for snakes.

New Exhibit in Zollinger Highlights Samauri Swords

Some fine examples of Japanese Samurai swords from the collection of two local collectors are now on display in the Zollinger Museum of Swem Library.

The exhibit will be up through April 2. Museum hours are 8:15 to 4:45 p.m. on weekdays and 9 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. on Saturdays.

Revered with almost a mythical religious attachment, the Samurai sword was a badge of honor and considered the soul of the Samurai, the feudal warriors of Japan. The Samurai were stripped of their societal standing, almost instantaneously, in 1876 by a decree from the Emperor Meiji who sought to modernize Japan and rid himself of armed dissidents among the ranks of the Samurai.

The Samurai sword was made by smiths as early as the 8th century. It took a good smith about a month to fashion a sword. Designed from multi-metal foldings, the swords were hot-forged, shaped and tempered, and then turned over to the sword polisher who was also a highly regarded artisan.

Handed down through families, swords sometimes changed size with each owner. Blades were shortened from the hilt and, because of this, many have lost their original signatures.

Although the Samurai sword is usually pictured in the hands of a fierce warrior, women of that class also carried weapons, including a dagger and a curved spear called a Naginata, to defend their homes when their husbands were away.

The exhibit in Swem includes a statue of a Samurai with his sword held high over his head, ready to cast it into a lake to complete an ancient ritual.

Financial Aid

Students who wish to apply for student financial assistance in 1979-80 should attend one of two seminars to be conducted by the Director of Student Financial Aid. The seminars will be conducted on Thursday at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre.

During the seminars information will be provided concerning changes in programs, procedures to be followed, deadlines, and helpful hints. Forms needed by applicants will be discussed and distributed.

The Middle Income Student Assistance Act signed into law on November 1, 1978, by President Carter is expected to make additional students eligible for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program and for interest benefits on the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

All students who anticipate applying for student financial assistance in 1979-80 are encouraged to attend one of these seminars.

Offices Move

The fiscal administration office for grants has moved from James Blair 206 to James Blair 111.

Kay Champion, assistant to the director for grants and contracts, will be moving from JB 112 to JB 111.

Landscape Committee Named

The College has been working to insure a coordinated effort to maintain and expand the landscape in a thoughtful, controlled pattern.

Recently a Landscape Advisory Committee has been named in order to provide suggestions and comments based on expertise in a variety of areas.

The committee (Dr. G. W. Hall, Dr. M. C. Mathes and Dr. S. Ware, Biology; Dr. G. H. Johnson, Geology; J. Connolly, E. Farmer, J. Gamache, Buildings and Grounds; and R. Mahone, Colonial Williamsburg) will serve in an advisory capacity to William Carter, Vice President of Business

"We would like, through our committee structure, to provide a forum for the exchange and development of ideas concerning the landscape program at the College. We welcome ideas and comments on our landscape program from students, faculty, garden clubs, and the general community," said a committee spokesman.

Affairs, and will meet on a regular basis to consider proposals for new projects, maintenance of existing areas, identification of problem areas and the use of our landscape collection in educational programs.

Tax Liability Explained

SUBJECT: Tax liability for certain individuals with more than $50,000 of life insurance coverage under the VSRS Group Life Insurance Program.

The following information has been provided by the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System to inform members of their tax liability in accordance with the Internal Revenue Code:

Code Section 79 of the Internal Revenue Code states in part that:

"Employees must include in income the cost of group-term life insurance provided directly or indirectly by their employer or employers to the extent that such cost exceeds the sum of the cost of $50,000 of coverage for such insurance and the amount (if any) paid by the employee toward the purchase of such insurance.

Any amount paid by the employee toward the purchase of group-term life insurance coverage on his life during his taxable year acts to reduce the amount includible in his gross income. This applies even though such payments are made for insurance coverage during periods when his coverage did not exceed $50,000."

"The cost of group-term life insurance provided an employee during any taxable period for inclusion in the employee's gross income is to be determined under the uniform premium table method. Under this method the cost of group-term life insurance protection is determined on the basis of uniform premiums computed on the basis of 5-year age brackets."

Uniform Premiums for $1,000 of Group-Term Life Insurance Protection

5-Year Age Bracket	Cost per $1,000 of Protection for 1-month Period
Under 30	8 cents
30 to 34	10 cents
35-39	14 cents
40-44	23 cents
45-49	40 cents
50-54	68 cents
55-59	$1.10
60-99	$1.63

"The fact that an employee pays the entire premium on the insurance does not mean that he will not be subject to tax on the cost of group-term life insurance. In a number of group plans, the charging of a uniform premium for each employee covered may result in the cost of coverage for older employees being subsidized to some extent by contributions by younger employees and the imposition of a tax on the older employee."

Example: State employees pay a monthly group-term life insurance premium of $0.30 per thousand dollars of protection ($0.60 per thousand dollars of salary). If a 62 year old employee has insurance coverage of $80,000 for the entire taxable year (salary of $40,000), an extra $298.80 must be included in his gross income. Using the above premium table, the cost of the $30,000 of insurance coverage over $50,000 for a 62 year old individual would be $586.80 ($1.63 X 12 months X 30). Subtracting the employee's annual contribution of $288 ($0.30 X 12 months X 80) from the cost gives the amount of $298.80 to be included in gross income.

(The Personnel Office has a table to assist employees in computing this special income item).

President Graves recognizes the efforts of three sororities for their performance in a recent phonathon held by the Office of Development.
