Clifford Currie Heads for USA

To: The College Community

I am very pleased to announce that Dr. George R. Healy has just informed me that the appointment of Clifford W. Currie as Librarian of Swem Library, approved by the Board of Visitors on February 23-25, 1978, has now been authorized by all appropriate federal authorities.

Mr. Currie will be arriving in Williamsburg to assume his responsibilities as Librarian of Swem Library on a full-time basis about April 1, 1979. Mr. John Haskell, who has been serving as Acting Librarian in Mr. Currie's absence and to whom we owe a great debt of thanks, will be continuing as Associate Librarian.

Dr. Healy is largely responsible for the successful completion of this long difficult process, and I want to express publicly my appreciation for his skillful and patient efforts on behalf of the College.

For 'Meet The Presidents Day'

E. Claiborne Robins, Jr., Heads List

More than 40 of the nation's biggest business executives plan to take a day off from work next week, not to play golf or hit the ski slopes, but to come to class.

Thursday, executives will be at the School of Business Administration to participate in "Meet the Presidents Day," an annual meeting of business minds organized by students in the Master of Business Administration program. In a series of lectures and seminars, the visiting executives will discuss a wide range of controversial subjects, ranging from collective bargaining to nuclear power.

E. Claiborne Robins, Jr., president and chief executive officer for A. H. Robins Company in Richmond, will focus on the proliferation of federal regulations that control and hinder business operations. Robins' lecture, entitled "The Buck Doesn't Stop Here Anymore," will explain why today's executive is really not accountable for all business decisions because so often the executive is constrained by federal rulings.

James V. P. Conway, Deputy Postmaster General, will discuss "Collective Bargaining in the United States Postal Service." He will talk about different labor negotiation strategies an executive may decide to formulate.

Peter C. Holenstein, financial systems analyst for the National Corporation for Housing Partnerships, will discuss "Banking in the Face of Federal Anti-Trust Regulations."

Herbert E. Markley, president of the Timken Company, a principle producer of roller assemblies, will focus on the deregulation of the transportation industry. Markley is also chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Judge Thomas P. Harwood, Jr., Commissioner of Virginia's State Corporation Commission, will chair an Economic Outlook Panel that will try to predict the economy's performance during 1979. Joining Harwood will be Markley and two members of the faculty at the School of Business Administration, Franklin Robeson and Marvin M. Stanley. The panel will focus on the possibility of a recession and the environment for capital investment.

Jack R. Pope, director of marketing for Offshore Power Systems, a subsidiary of Westinghouse Electric Corporation, will discuss "Nuclear Power: Economics, Risks, and Regulations."

E. H. Schollmaier, president of Alcon Laboratories, Inc., a pharmaceutical firm, will talk about "Mergers as a Growth and Diversification Tool: Benefits and Pitfalls," a topic that is very familiar to Schollmaier. The executive has directed more than 22 mergers.

R. H. Schaper, executive director of purchasing for Gulf, will talk about procurement in the business world.

Students will also conduct a telephone interview with Allan S. Boyd, president and chief executive officer of AMTRAK.

In each session, the executive at the front of the class will not only be addressing students, but fellow executives as well. During question and Classified employees who were not able to report for work on Monday, Feb. 19, due to hazardous driving conditions, will not be charged for leave. Those classified employees who worked on this day will be credited with compensatory leave on an hour for hour basis.

The names of classified employees who worked on Feb. 19 and the number of hours that they worked should be reported in writing to the Personnel Office in order that they may be credited with comepensatory leave.

Hourly employees who worked on Monday will be paid at their regular hourly rates.

Seniors Host Jeff MacNelly

The senior class has invited cartoonist Jeffrey D. MacNelly, one of this year's commencement speakers, to campus Feb. 22 to get to know him better.

Senior class president Margaret Nelson said MacNelly had expressed an interest in meeting students on an informal basis, so an invitation was extended to him.

He will give an illustrated talk on the creative art of the cartoonist at 2 p.m. in Millington auditorium.

MacNelly, who won the Pulitzer prize in 1972 and 1978 for editorial cartoons, works for the Richmond News Leader. His syndicated cartoons appear in more than 350 newspapers across the country. His comic strip, "Shoe," now appears in more than 400 papers.

MacNelly will be guest of honor at a wine and cheese party, hosted by the senior class, in the Great Hall of the Wren Building. Members of the faculty are being invited as special guests.

Lela Early, vice president of the senior class, social chairman Jeff Rupp and his committee, and Meg Lewis, class secretary-treasurer, are all working on arrangements for MacNelly's visit.

Other pre-commencement events are being planned by the senior class.

Scheduled Feb. 22-25 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall

Theatre Students 'Going Crazy' with 'Woyzeck'

What color mascara does a monkey wear? What is the best way to sew a purple horse? What sort of music does a madman hear? These may appear to be rather bizarre questions, but they are foremost in the minds of students on the production staff of the William and Mary Theatre's production of "Woyzeck," scheduled to be presented Feb. 22-25 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Lisa Loeb, a sophomore, is "Woyzeck's" makeup designer. Her tasks include giving three human actors the faces of monkeys for one scene and creating an enlarged head for an actor in another scene. "The people in this play," she said, "have to be distorted, because Woyzeck's vision of the world is distorted." Loeb explains that for most plays done by the William and Mary Theatre, there is no official makeup design. But the stylization in this play demanded formal designing.

Kathy Gorges, costume designer, faces similar challenges. Gorges, a senior, must design a hunchback, a shirt for a butcher that has chopped off his hand, and a horse. "Our horse will be very decadent -- purple with yellow polka-dots," she explains. The costume will be worn by two actors. Gorges is also making a monkey suit which will be worn by Christopher McConachie, the seven-year old son of the director. Both "animals" appear in scenes which take place at a fair side-show.

When asked how a mathematics concentrator became a theatrical costumer, Gorges explains, "It's the basically creative nature of a mathematician."

"It's fun to design the costumes and know you're helping to shape the character," Gorges says. Her assistant,

Sue Casey, a junior concentrator in theatre and history, adds, "I'd say we help shape the people, too."

Hardwick Spencer, as the doctor who uses Woyzeck as a human guinea pig, is one of those actors who will be shaped and painted, but his pre-occupation at the moment is music. As the play's musical director, Spencer has had to find or to write music to blend with and embrace the eerie mood of the play. There is a great deal of music in the play, most of it being what Spencer describes as "something you hum while you iron." It is predominantly incidental music used to define a character or to intensify an emotion.

Spencer wrote some original music for the play, but most of the songs are German folk tunes that he adapted with English lyrics.

Tickets will be available at the William and Mary Theatre box office from 3-5:30 p.m., Feb. 19-23, from 7-8:15 p.m., Feb. 22-24, and from 12:30-2 p.m., Feb. 25. Telephone reservations are taken at 253-4272 and 253-4469 during box office hours only. All seats are reserved.

Audience members are invited to participate in discussion sessions to be held after the performances Feb. 22 and 25. The director and cast members will be present to answer questions and listen to comments.

Music From Marlboro will present a concert at 8:15 p.m., Monday, Feb. 26, at the Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall as part of the Concert Series. The group of outstanding soloists from the celebrated Marlboro Music Festival joins together for an evening of chamber music representative of the concerts which draw crowds from around the country to Marlboro, Vermont, each summer. General admission tickets are available at the Campus Center and at the PBK box office the evening of the performance.

Meet the Presidents Day

answer periods that follow each lecture, executives are expected to compare different techniques often used in business exchanges. Ford Ladd, a first-year MBA student from Williamsburg who serves as chairman of Meet the Presidents Day, says the Business School "has encouraged all executives to speak their minds."

"I think this is one of the largest groups of executives we've ever had on campus," says Ladd, "and we hope students will take advantage of all the experience and knowledge they'll be surrounded with. The topics we've selected for discussion should result in some interesting discussions and, we hope, a little controversy here and there."

Other special guests include James F. Babcock, president of First Virginia Bank of Tidewater; Paul N. Carlin, Assistant Postmaster General; J. Richard Carling, executive vice president of Dominion National Bank; James G. Crouse of Crouse Co., Inc.; Richard A. Clough, senior vice president of Virginia Tractor Co., Inc.; A. G. ## Conference Features Discussion of Religion

The Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy has awarded a grant for a conference on the academic study of religion in public schools, to be held March 9 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

James C. Livingston, professor of religion, and William F. Losito, associate professor of education, will be co-directors of the day-long conference to study legal, social and educational issues in the academic study of religion in the public schools. The amount of the grant is $1850.

Robert A. Spivey, president of Randolph Macon Women's College, formerly Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and chairman of the religion department at Florida State University, and Joseph Forcinelli, director of the program on religion and education at the Divinity School of Harvard University, will be guest speakers at the conference.

Spivey will speak at a morning session, giving a broad overview of the issues and Forcinelli is expected to deal with specific curricular models and guidelines at the afternoon session.

Forcinelli established a pilot program in the study of religion for secondary schools in Claremont, California, and prepared the proposal for the certification of teachers in academic studies of religion for the state of California.

A panel composed of area school administrators and representatives from state government and academia will be named later to participate in the afternoon session.

Invitations to the conference are being sent to central office administrators in school divisions in Eastern Virginia, members of the State Board of Education and other selected guests.

The conference has been planned for a small group to allow a careful discussion of the issues in an attempt to clarify them and enable represent-

Ball Lectures On Future Theatre

David Ball, associate professor of theatre at Carnegie-Mellon University, who has collaborated with Bruce McConachie on the adaptation of Georg Buchner's "Woyzeck," will present a lecture entitled "New Trends in American Theatre" at 4 p.m., Monday, Feb. 26, in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

Ball, who was one of the developers of the experimental wing of the Guthrie Theatre, will draw on his experiences there and with other Minneapolis playhouses to talk about the future of the American theatre. Ball will include in his talk the rise of regional theatre in America and its advantages and difficulties, as well as its future potential.

atives to go back and initiate discussions with people in their areas. Planners hope that the conference will be the catalyst for further public discussion on the academic study of religion in public school humanities curriculum.

Losito and Livingston explained that "while our Constitutional heritage has consistently separated Church and State functions, it has just as consistently and emphatically supported the legitimacy of the cultural study of religion within the curriculum of public education."

Contest Set For T-Shirts

March 1 is the deadline for entries in the Fine Arts Society T-Shirt design competition.

All entries should be related to the field of fine arts and must be submitted on an 8½ by 11" piece of paper to the department secretary, Andrews, second floor by 5 p.m. on March 1.

Alumni Board Elects Grant, Garrett, Sell, Kappel

The Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni elected new officers at their annual winter meeting last weekend.

Denys Grant, a 1958 graduate who currently resides in Richmond, was elected president, replacing Mrs. Harriet Nachman Storm of Hampton.

John H. Garrett, Jr., of Irvington, Va., will serve a second one-year term as vice-president. Mrs. Patricia King Sell of La Jolla, California, will serve as treasurer of the Society of the Alumni.

New to the list of officers is Mrs. Elaine Elias Kappel of Pittsburgh, who was elected as secretary for the coming year.

Grant is personnel director for Wheat, First Securities, Inc. He previously served as vice president for manpower development for First and Merchants Corporation.

Garrett is Kilmarnock Branch Manager for the investment brokerage firm of Cecil, Waller and Sterling. A retired naval captain, he was president of the Class of 1940. He is a member of the Irvington City Council where he serves as vice-mayor.

The new treasurer, Mrs. Sell, is a housewife and civic leader who has helped organize alumni chapters in Pittsburgh and San Diego. She has served as chairman of the alumni service committee for three years, and recently completed a one-year term as secretary.

Mrs. Elaine Kappel moves into the position of secretary with considerable past involvement in alumni relations. She helped found the Pittsburgh Alumni Chapter and served as its first president. She is a housewife and award-winning sculptress who is active in many Pittsburgh area cultural organizations.

The Board gave commendations to Mrs. Storm, the outgoing president, for her leadership of the Society throughout 1978, and particularly for her leadership of the 1978 William and Mary Fund campaign. The annual fund-raising solicitation conducted among undergraduate alumni of the College is nearing its goal of $400,000.

Other retiring members of the Board also recognized were: Mrs. Jean Canoles Bruce of Norfolk, who was president of the Society in 1976-77, J.

W. Hornsby of Newport News, and R. Bradshaw Pulley of Virginia Beach, who was vice president in 1977.

New members taking their place on the Board are James W. Brinkley of Towson, Md., Robert H. Land of Alexandria, Austin L. Roberts, III, of Newport News, and G. Elliott Schaubach, Jr., of Norfolk.

Grants Total Over $110,000

Grants totalling more than $110,000 have been awarded to the College for research and studies that cover a wide variety of disciplines.

The United States Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, has awarded $13,135.75 for a social and economic assessment and evaluation of Jefferson National Forest, which will be undertaken by Edwin H. Rhyne, professor of sociology, and Martin A. Garrett, Jr., professor of economics. An updated social and economic assessment of the five-county-area surrounding the Mount Rogers Recreation Area will be compiled. Such a study is required of every federal agency under the National Environmental Protection Act.

The Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission's Virginia Research Center for Archaeology, VRCA, has provided $33,096 in contracts for professional services in archaeological conservation by William and Mary's Archaeological Conservation Center. Work will include conservation of items from the Shipwreck fleet project in the York River and the Governor's Land Archaeological Project.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has awarded $41,923 for the continuation of research by Stefan Feyock, Robert Noonan, and Michael Donegan, of the mathematics and computer science department, for work on the development of a multi-target compiler writing system.

Two grants have been awarded for research in chemistry. One for $9,974 will be used for continuation of research in high performance polymers by David Kranbuehl, associate professor of chemistry; the other, for $13,000, will be used to underwrite research by Melvin Schiavelli, associate professor of chemistry, in Allenyl-X compounds.

The Office of Education, HEW, has awarded $3,963 for the purchase of materials at Swem Library. This grant, to be used during the period of Oct. 1, 1979, to Sept. 30, 1980, will be utilized for the Library's resource program.

History Professor Says 'Yes'

Did the Indians Invent Scalping?

Who invented scalping? The American Indians, who are depicted with tomahawks in every television western, or the Europeans who paid bounties for hairy proof of having killed an enemy warrior?

"The prevailing white myth is that the Indians were too noble to invent such a barbarous thing," says James L. Axtell, professor of history. "But that's just sloppy history."

According to Axtell, this myth "comes from guilty white liberals who misguidedly think you have to clean up the Indian past to make them acceptable and worthy of rights today. But you don't need to do that," says Axtell. "The rights should be theirs no matter what their great-grandfathers--ours--did."

Axtell is an ethnohistorian: he studies frontiers where two cultures meet, using anthropological methods and concepts to learn about each culture on its own terms.

"Most historians unconsciously tend to adopt the perspective of the people whose documents are being used," notes Axtell. "Since the Indians left few written documents, most historians have a white perspective."

Axtell, to avoid this pitfall, researched the history of scalping from unwritten as well as written records. He investigated Indian folklore, names and languages, studied archaeological findings, and noted the existence of scalplocks in contemporary art and museums.

"There is evidence of scalping on skulls found in Indian mounds from 0, 500, and 1000 A.D.; all the way through history, and all over the United States," says Axtell. He also used as evidence the fact that many Indian languages contain words that mean "scalping," "to scalp," and "the scalped."

Even when consulting European written documents, says Axtell, researchers find notes taken by the first explorers which contain simple pictures of a scalplock and descriptions written in unusual terms, comparing a scalplock to a parchment or some other familiar object which Europeans could understand.

Another historical truth frequently ignored by conventional historians is the degree to which Indians converted white settlers. Whites attempted religious conversion of Indians, while Indians practiced "cultural conversion" by adopting a white person completely into their society, maintains Axtell.

"Indians converted their captives mostly in warfare," he explains. "Captured women or children were adopted into families to replace members who had died or been killed. The captive literally took the dead person's place. They were loved and trusted as if they had been born of Indian mothers."

More often than not, the captive would learn to like his surroundings after the initial shock. "Thousands of Europeans became Indians in the colonial period," Axtell says.

Most recently, Axtell's ethno-historical perspective was employed by the Mashpee Indians of Cape Cod, a small tribe of 500 who decided to sue the government for the return of their town, the title to which was "inviolably" theirs until the state of Massachusetts arbitrarily detribalized them in 1869.

Henderson To Speak At Women's Club

Dr. June Henderson of the Student Health Services will be guest speaker at the Thursday evening meeting of the College Women's Club, Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, Rooms A&B.

Dr. Henderson will give a talk and show a film about breast cancer and will demonstrate methods of self-examination.

Club members and friends are invited to attend.

Recital Features Chris Hux

The music department will present a voice recital by Christopher W. Hux, Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Hux is a senior biology concentrator and is currently studying voice with Frances P. Breeze. He has been actively involved with the William and Mary Choir, Botetourt Chamber Singers, Backdrop Club, the Sinfonicron Opera Company, William and Mary Theater and Orchestras. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia professional music fraternity.

The program will consist of a group of early Italian art songs with harpsichord accompaniment; several of Faure's chansons; "Dalla Sua Pace," from Mozart's Don Giovanni; and Ralph Vaughan Williams' song cycle "On Werlock Edge," for voice, piano and string quartet.

Hux's accompanist will be Laurie Marie Geschieder, a senior music concentrator and a student of Yona Knorr. Ms. Geschieder has performed with the William and Mary orchestra and was cast as the corpulent "Lady Jane" in the recent Sinfonicron production of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "Patience."

The Mashpees had to pay taxes when they were detribalized and, in order to do so, they had to begin selling their land. Now condominiums and resorts are encroaching upon them, and they have decided to contest their detribalization.

Axtell's role as research historian and expert witness was to prove that the Mashpees were indeed a tribe, and the same tribe that was granted the land by a seventeenth-century deed. Many Mashpees have married blacks over the years, so that racial overtones complicated the proceedings.

The Mashpees lost their first court case last winter, but are appealing. If a mistrial is called, Axtell would have to appear again as an expert witness.

Axtell is in the process of writing a three-volume work on the English, French, and Indian interactions in colonial North America.

Tate, Whittenburg Serve As Directors Of Phi Alpha Theta History Conference

Topics ranging from the intellectual history of the late Middle Ages to political concerns in 20th century America were covered in papers by members of Phi Alpha Theta international honor society in history at a regional meeting of the Society on campus Saturday.

Thad Tate, Director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture and professor of history, and James P. Whittenburg, assistant professor of history, served as co-directors of the conference. Several members of the history department, including Judith Ewell, Phillip Funigiello, Robert Lemire, James Thompson and Helen Cam Walker were commentators for the sessions.

Students from William and Mary, ODU, VPI and the University of Richmond were represented at the meeting. Papers from William and Mary included the following: "The Development of English Coffeehouses in the 17th Century," Robin Anderson; "Birth of an Attitude: U.S. Recognition of Porifirio Dias," Liz Gibbs; "Southern Agrarians and the Catholic Worker Movement," Janet Steele; "Popular Reaction to George Whitefield in the Colonies," Benton Gates; "The Churches of Colonial Providence: The Rhode Island Way," Thomas Carroll; and "Economic Opportunities Open to Women in the 18th Century Southern Colonies," Suzanne E. Coffman.

Thad Tate was moderator for a panel discussion on "Non-teaching careers for history majors" during the afternoon. Participants included Jeanne Zeidler, Hampton Center for the Arts and Humanities; Donna Sheppard, Publications, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation; Paul Hensley, archives, the Mariner's Museum; John Poston, intern in historical sites management, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation; and Carter Hudgins, Virginia Research Center for Archaeology.
