Summing Up

Words of Wit and Wisdom

Jeffrey K. MacNelly, commencement speaker, got a standing ovation from his audience following his brief, witty speech. Here are some excerpts:

"I believe we all have some sort of rock to stand on somewhere under all the gaudy paraphernalia we pile on top of it. . . .that private sense of values that we all have inside of us. It's love, I think - love of family, of a few close friends, love of freedom, love of God, maybe. . . ."

"I urge you to consider that when you scatter this afternoon one hour way to the Emerald City. . . ."

He passed along a bit of advice from the actress Patricia Neal, who made a dramatic recovery from a massive stroke: "You should remember three things when you're young. First, find a career you'll enjoy. Second, work like hell. And third, keep your mind open, but not so open that your brains fall out."

MacNelly likened the graduates to shiny new sports cars in the showroom waiting for the road. The more experienced of the world, he said, were like old rusted pickup trucks with scars and dents which he considered even more beautiful than the shiny new sports cars.

"So I think you should remember that the only way you latch on to any wisdom is through experience. And that piece of advice is coming from a fairly young pickup truck with a half of tank or so left," he quipped.

Case Award

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) of Washington has given special recognition to a special 18-page report, published in 1976, which announced the three-year Campaign for the College now ending.

The special report, prepared by the staff of the Office of Information Services (now University Communications), is included as one of nine innovative approaches to communicating a campaign's goals recently offered through microfiche by CASE, the professional organization for higher education public relations, fundraising and alumni relations.

The 18-page tabloid report was included in a Campaign edition of the William and Mary News and also in an issue of the Alumni Gazette, both in May, 1976.

A Busy Weekend

A huge banner was unfurled from the balcony Friday morning to herald the news that the Campaign for the College had exceeded its goal of $19 million with several weeks to go before the official end of the Campaign June 30. The festive air of the occasion set the tone for commencement at which the graduates gave speaker Jeffrey MacNelly a standing ovation. (See related story, page 3)

Newsmakers

Wayne Kernodle, professor of sociology, was the moderator for a day long program on "You and Your Aging Parents" held at Christopher Newport College on Saturday, May 5. The program was sponsored jointly by the Virginia Center on Aging, the Peninsula Agency on Aging, William and Mary, Christopher Newport, Hampton Institute and Thomas Nelson Community College. He was also the presenter for two workshops which dealt with "Making Decisions About Changing Life Patterns of the Elderly." Kernodle also attended a meeting of the Steering Committee for the "Governor's Conference on Aging" which will be held in Richmond on October 16 and 17. Governor Dalton has called for this conference to make the general public aware of the untapped resources that our older citizens represent. The meeting was held in Richmond on May 1.

Kernodle spoke to the Shriners Club of Williamsburg at their meeting on May 2 held at Ft. Magruder Inn, at which time he discussed "Alternative Life Styles in Contemporary American Family." On May 1 he participated in the Pre-Retirement Training Program sponsored by Colonial Williamsburg for its employees, at which time he spoke on the "Personal and Social Adaptations to Retirement."

An article entitled "Cross-Sectional Age Changes in Ego Identity Status During Adolescence," by Philip Meilman of the Center for Psychological Services, was published in the April issue of Developmental Psychology.

Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology, has been listed in three international directories published in Cambridge, England: International Who's Who of Intellectuals, International Who's Who in Community Service, and International Register of Profiles. Zamora is also included in a forthcoming edition of Marquis' Who's Who in America.

Julie Leverenz, director of the Women in Business Program, is the author of a chapter entitled "The Characteristics of an Effective Grants Officer," in the new book Grants: Views from the Campus, published by the Federal Resources Advisory Service of the Association of American Colleges.

James R. Baron, of the department of classical studies, attended the annual meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Scandinavian Study at the University of Kansas, May 3-5. Baron delivered a paper entitled: "Some Cautions Regarding the Debate Over Possible Latin Influences Upon Early Icelandic Saga Writing." He was also an invited panelist at a special session on "Approaches to Ingmar Bergman," for which he presented a defense of the "Archetypal" or "Classical/Mythical" approach.

On Saturday, April 28, Carol Esler and Ward Jones of the department of classical studies attended the annual spring meeting of the Classical Association of Virginia held at the Northern Virginia Community College in Annandale. Esler delivered a lecture entitled "Inscriptions of Pompeii." This lecture was based upon her book Roman Voices: Everyday Latin in Ancient Rome. Professor Jones presented an illustrated lecture entitled "A Pictorial Reintroduction to the Buried Cities of Vesuvius."

David Montgomery, professor of physics, gave a seminar on "Magnetohydrodynamic Turbulence," at M.I.T. in Cambridge, Mass., May 4.

Bruce W. Locke, manager of the College Bookstore was featured as panelist on an early bird session at the annual meeting and trade fair of the National Association of College Stores which was held at the New York Hilton, April 9-12. The session was entitled, "Criteria for Cash Register Decisions in the Eighties."

Virgil McKenna, professor of psychology, was invited by the President and the Chairman of the Alumni Council of Princeton University to participate in a "Princeton Today" program, May 10-12. He met with the President and members of the faculty, administration, and student body in a series of discussions and presentations planned to give an understanding of the work going on at the university.

George W. Grayson, professor of government, has been named to the Board of Editors of Inter-American Economic Affairs, a journal, published quarterly, that focuses on economic and political problems of the Hemisphere.

Grayson's essay on "Mexican Oil" appeared as the Guest Column in the April 20 issue of Energy Digest.

During National Metric Week, Professor Stuart Flanagan was a guest on May 6 for WAVY-TV, channel 10, May 7 on WVEC channel 13, and on May 8 for WXEX channel 8 talk shows when he discussed the economic, political and educational ramifications of the metric system of measurement.

On April 26 Alan J. Ward, professor of government, presented a paper entitled "Politics and the Individual in Ireland" to the 17th annual meeting of the American Committee for Irish Studies. He was also appointed an editor of the planned ten-volume Dictionary of Irish Biography.

His article, "World War I and the Tragedy of Armenian Self-Determination," was published in the April issue of The American Review. His recent book reviews include Frank Burton, The Politics of Legitimacy: Struggles in a Belfast Community, in Perspective, and Steven Levine, Politics in New Zealand and Howard Penniman, Ireland at the Polls, both in Choice.

Ward's book, The Easter Rising of 1916: Revolution and Irish Nationalism, will be published in the fall by the AHM press.

Gulesian and Bloom to Direct Summer Program For 25 Tidewater Teachers of English

Mark G. Gulesian, associate professor of education in the School of Education and Lynn Z. Bloom, associate professor of English, will conduct a Summer Writing Institute for Tidewater teachers aimed at improving the teaching of writing in secondary schools.

Under a $20,000 grant from the State Department of Education, the "Eastern Virginia Writing Project" will offer summer instruction for teachers of English in public and private schools in Eastern Virginia on the William and Mary campus, June 18-July 20.

The summer program is sponsored jointly by the School of Education and the Department of English and is one of six summer institutes being funded by the State this summer.

Twenty-five teachers, who are recognized as outstanding teachers by their school divisions, will be selected for the program. Each will earn six hours of graduate credit in English or education for successfully completing the Institute.

George L. Benedict, Kenneth F. Bick, Stephen C. Clement, Bruce K. Goodwin, and Gerald H. Johnson of the geology department attended the meeting of the Southeastern Section of the Geological Society of America in Blacksburg, April 26-27.

George Benedict was co-author of a paper entitled "Trilobite Paleobathymetry: An assessment of depth related assemblages from the Middle Ordovician of the Southern Appalachians."

Stephen Clement was on the Technical Program Committee for the meetings and also was co-chairman of a symposium on Geology of the Piedmont with special emphasis on faulting and fault mechanisms.

Gerald Johnson was co-chairman of a session on Environmental Geology.

Bruce Goodwin was co-chairman of a session on Appalachian Regional Geology and was one of the leaders for a field trip showing Virginia Piedmont geology along the James River from Richmond to the Blue Ridge.

Goodwin had a guidebook entitled "Geology of the Richmond-Petersburg Area" published by the National Association of Geology Teachers in their Guidebook for Field Trips in Virginia, p. 1-15.

William C. Poole, Jr., associate professor of mathematics and computer sciences, has co-authored a paper entitled "Analysis of Dissection Algorithms for Vector Computers," with Alan George of the University of Waterloo and R. C. Voigt of the Institute for Computer Application in Science and Engineering (ICASE), which has been published in the journal Computer and Mathematics With Applications, Vol. 4, 1978.

James E. Smith of the School of Business Administration presented a paper entitled "Whatever Happened to Research Report No. 19: An Analysis of the Perceptions of Two Categories of Respondents," at the Southeastern Regional Meeting, April 26-30, of the AAA held in Miami Beach. The paper will be published in the meeting proceedings.

Neill Watson, assistant professor of psychology, and Patricia Ondercin, staff psychologist at the Center for Psychological Services, recently presented a paper at the Eastern Psychological Association meeting in Philadelphia. The paper was entitled "Gender differences in process variables associated with client ratings of benefit in psychotherapy."

Joseph Galano of the psychology department will conduct a symposium entitled "Educational Applications of a Community Psychology Model of Problem Identification and Program Development" at the Eleventh Annual Conference on Educational Research, sponsored by the Virginia Department of Education, May 21-23 in Charlottesville. Galano is also assisting in an Eastern State Hospital program training all hospital staff in human rights for the mentally ill.

Quantum Physics, a book by Rolf G. Winter of the Physics Department, has been published by the Wadsworth Publishing Company. Pat Winter of the fine arts department designed the cover and contributed a drawing of a platypus.

Ronald St. Onge, associate professor of Modern Languages and Literatures, is the author of an article entitled "La conscience politique du jeune Apollinaire," in Studi Francesi, an international journal devoted to the study of French literature. He also chaired the section on Modern French Poetry at the annual meeting of the Northeast Modern Languages Association in March, held in Hartford, Conn.

A critical edition of James Shirley's seventeenth-century tragedy, The Politician, by Robert Fehrenbach, professor of English, has been selected as one of the books to appear in a new series, Renaissance Drama: A Collection of Critical Editions. Fehrenbach's review of the 1978 Virginia Shakespeare Festival will appear later this spring in the annual theatre issue of the Shakespeare Quarterly, a publication of the Folger Shakespeare Library. The current issue of that journal carries Fehrenbach's essay on Shakespeare's history play, Henry IV, Part I.

Donald Ball professor of English, gave the keynote address, "Perspectives on Eastern Shore Literature: Tradition and Change," at a conference sponsored by the Institute for Eastern Shore Studies at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore, at Princess Anne on May 7.

The curriculum of the Institute has been designed to examine the theory and practice of writing as a process, to enhance the personal writing skills of participating English teachers, and to develop instructional strategies for the teaching of writing in the secondary school English classroom. The Institute will provide participants with the training and materials to extend the Institute's goals through in-service instruction in their own school divisions.

Gulesian, as project co-director, has been responsible for coordinating the planning for the Institute and will share responsibility for the evaluation of the program and for coordinating workshop evaluation activities following the summer session.

Lynn Bloom, also co-director, will be responsible for the daily academic activities of the Institute and will assist with the evaluation.

In addition to Gulesian and Bloom, the staff of the Institute will include Mary Barnes, supervisor of English in the Virginia Beach Public Schools, who will serve as workshop instructor.

The daily schedule of the Institute will be woven around a topical theme, selected by participants. Each teacher will be asked to prepare a 45-minute video-taped lesson designed to illustrate one or more teaching methods related to the chosen topic. Presentation and discussion of the video tape will be part of the daily instructional program.

Each day participants will be given writing assignments to practice their own writing skills within the framework of the process approach to writing, thus testing the theories advanced in the Institute.

The proposal for the Institute, written by personnel of William and Mary and English supervisors of Hampton and Virginia Beach schools, is based on a three-year plan.

Future institutes may include elementary teachers, teachers of other secondary subjects, and school administrators.

Commencement '79 - A Happy Event

Jeffrey K. MacNelly, cartoonist for the Richmond News-Leader and two-time winner of the Pulitzer prize, got a standing ovation from graduates in a packed William and Mary Hall Sunday afternoon at the 286th commencement ceremonies.

The youngest speaker ever, MacNelly, 31, received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree. Governor John N. Dalton, who was on hand to see his daughter Kathy receive her baccalaureate degree, spoke briefly and was also an honorary degree recipient. He received an honorary doctor of laws degree.

The College also conferred honorary degrees upon Daniel H. Boorstin, Librarian at the Library of Congress and also a Pulitzer Prize winner; and Richard Beale Davis of the University of Tennessee, a scholar of intellectual and literary history of the early South. Both received honorary doctor of literature degrees.

The Lord Botetourt Medal for the highest scholastic attainment by a member of the graduating class went to Carol Ann Arnold of DeWitt, N.Y., who maintained a perfect A average throughout her four years as a student.

The James Frederick Carr Memorial Cup, awarded on the basis of character, scholarship and leadership, was awarded to Susan Patricia Manix of Stamford, Conn.

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award in recognition of influence for good was awarded to Alvin Gerald Austin, Jr., of Roanoke and Cathy Michele Allen of Rocky Mount, N.C. The award traditionally also goes to a member of the community and this year was shared by Mary and Don Gonzales of Williamsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Gonzales were cited for their many contributions to the life of the college, their generosity to students, particularly international students, and their support of functions and activities on campus, especially musical programs. Gonzales is senior vice president of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. Mrs. Gonzales, a past president of the Occasion for the Arts, is founder of the Wednesday Morning Music Club.

In her valedictory remarks, Margaret Nelson, president of the senior class, announced that members of the class had pledged a gift of $20,000, the largest ever by a senior class, to the College. The money will be used to plant two trees on campus and to install an electronic check out system to improve security at Swem Library.

Margaret also announced the establishment of the John Kratzer Memorial Award, which honors a member of the class of 1978, a varsity basketball player who waged a losing battle with cancer but became a symbol of steadfast courage and optimism in the face of adversity.

The class president also recognized the three honorary marshals chosen to lead the seniors across campus from the Wren Building to William and Mary Hall. This year's marshals were Alex Kallos, retiring professor of modern languages and literatures; Bruce D. Rigelman, assistant professor of government; and Barbara Ball, office of university communications.

Rain threatened several times to upset commencement weekend activities, but all survived. The candlelight ceremony Saturday evening looked as if it would be a victim, but the rain cleared and over 1,000 seniors took part in the program.

The mood of the weekend was one of high spirits, established perhaps on Friday with the announcement that the Campaign for the College had surpassed its $19 million goal with gifts and pledges of approximately $20,500,000. A huge banner was unfurled and hundreds of balloons were released to signal the big announcement made by Roy Charles, national chairman of the Campaign.

A champagne toast and lunch on the lawn under the trees in back of the Wren Building followed.

The baccalaureate service was held Saturday morning in the United Methodist Church and was followed by the ROTC commissioning ceremonies in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. A luncheon was held for graduates and their families.

Saturday afternoon, the festivities included the President's Reception hosted by President and Mrs. Graves, concerts by members of the William and Mary Choir, and following the candlelight service, a ball in the Campus Center.

A number of graduates used their mortar boards to transmit special messages to the crowd of nearly 10,000. There were flowers, a paper windmill, a "Hire Me" plea, the word "Mom" and several other messages meant for parents.

Champagne corks arched over the graduates several times during the program and at one point a firecracker was set off in the middle of the hall.

Members of the class of 1929 were recognized as they held their 50th reunion and were inducted into the "Old Guard" of the College.

As the commencement program concluded with the singing of the Alma Mater and the transference of the chain of office to the incoming senior class president, students scattered for individual diploma presentations held by departments and schools across campus.

Leave of Absence

To: Members of the Faculty and Administration of the College

In May, 1977, the Board of Visitors authorized President Graves to be on administrative leave during part of the summer of 1978. Illness in his family required the President to postpone this leave until the summer of 1979, and this rearrangement of plans was authorized by the Board in February, 1978.

Dr. Graves will be away from the College from June 10, 1979 to August 25, 1979, during which time he and his family will be travelling in Europe. While in Europe he will be making a number of contacts on behalf of the College with institutions and individuals with which William and Mary has continuing relationships.

One month of the period that he will be away will be considered his regular annual vacation. During the remainder of the period, Dr. Graves will be on administrative leave, at full pay, with his salary and fringe benefits being reimbursed to the State with private funds contributed to the College specifically and solely for this purpose.

During President Graves' absence Dr. George R. Healy, as Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs of the College, will serve as chief executive officer of the university. Dr. Healy is taking his vacation in the latter part of May and the early part of June. Dr. Graves may be reached in an emergency, while in Europe, through his office or Dr. Healy's office.

Six Faculty Members Win NEH Research, Study Grants

Two more faculty members have been selected for National Endowment for the Humanities seminars this summer, bringing to six the number of NEH awards which have been made on campus recently.

William R. Hamilton, assistant professor of music, and Robert H. Welch, assistant professor of modern languages and literatures, have been tapped for summer programs. Hamilton will go to New York City, Welch to Albany, N.Y.

NEH awards were also recently made to James C. Livingston, professor of religion, a grant for 1979-80 to study the 19th century poet and critic Matthew Arnold; Walter L. Williams, Jr., professor of law, to attend a summer seminar at the University of California, Los Angeles, on "Topics in Law and Morality"; Thomas M. Finn, for a summer program to do research on emergent Rabbinic Judaism and Jewish Christianity at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America; and John H. Willis, Jr., professor of English, a grant for summer research in England on the history of the Hogarth Press.

The eight-week program in which Hamilton will participate begins June 18. It has been designed to contribute to the development of a many-faceted approach to the study of music. The main element in that approach will be the integration of theoretical concepts with instruction in harmony, counterpoint and analysis.

Hamilton is particularly interested in the work of music theorist Henrich Schenker, a late-19th- early-20th century Austrian theorist. The significance of Schenker's approach to music theory will be one of the topics under discussion at the seminar. One of the questions to be raised, said Hamilton, will be the suitability of Schenker's approach to the study of music theory at the undergraduate level, and whether it can be used from the beginning to advanced levels of instruction. Schenker is known for using an adaptation of regular music notation, so students are not required to learn a new language of signs and symbols to understand his theories.

Along with Robert Welch, twenty professors of French have been selected to participate in the program with eminent specialists to develop and design sophisticated instructional materials. Each week the Institute will focus on one major aspect or theme concerning French society; norms, values, and patterns of behavior; kinship, the family, and the role of women; youth; social classes; the citizen and the state; and the media.

The faculty includes Roland Barthes, College de France; Claude Fischler, Centre d'Etudes Transdisciplinaires; Gerard Vincent, Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris; Evelyne Sullerot, an economic and social counsel with the French government; Stanley Hoffman and Laurence Wylie from Harvard University, and the director, Georges Santoni, from the State University of New York at Albany.

Welch's main interest is a course which will offer a synchronic eclectic approach stressing a number of areas which would be a departure from the more traditional, historically-oriented French civilization course. The two-semester course here does not go much beyond World War II.

The new course, he feels, would fill a need, especially for students preparing to go to France, on one of William and Mary's junior year abroad or summer program at Montpellier. Welch was director of the Montpellier program last year. The new course would also be a good accompaniment for a new course on French cinema which will be offered next year, said Welch.

Certificates Presented

President Graves Praises Adult Skills Program

The Adult Skills Program held its annual recognition ceremony Thursday morning to honor students, tutors, staff and friends of ASP.

Adult students who had completed 50, 75 and 100 hours in the Program were presented certificates by President Thomas A. Graves.

In announcing the recipients of certificates, Mrs. Rita Welsh, ASP co-director, had special praise for John Cooper and Emma Harris, who have passed the GED test for a high school diploma. Cooper, a psychiatric aide at Eastern State Hospital, was a student in the program for over four months.

Mrs. Harris was in the program two months and now plans to attend a community college.

President Graves, in presenting the certificates, said he made a special point to attend the ceremony each year. "I do not know of anything William and Mary does that is more important," he said. He began a round of applause for the work of Mrs. Welsh, which grew into a standing ovation. "I only do it because I want to, I love it," she responded. She in turn thanked Mrs. Anna Glisson, secretary at the ASP office, who "has organized and polished all procedures and provided a sympathetic and understanding ear to students and tutors alike."

ASP will begin a new academic year in mid-September. Although most of the tutors have stopped because of final exams, the program will remain open until June 14 for independent study.

For those who wish to continue studying through the summer, the Williamsburg Regional Library has set aside a study for the exclusive use of ASP students and tutors in the balcony area. Any students and tutors who wish to use it should check in with the reference librarian. Also, the library has introduced a new section called Adult Basic Education, which contains books and tapes for adult students.

A community service which receives funds from the United Fund, the Adult Skills Program is supervised by a Board of Directors headed by Don Lashinger, associate professor of education at William and Mary and co-director, with Mrs. Welsh, of the student-tutor program. Other members of the Board include Mary Beth Ryan, Gil Bartlett, Rita Welsh, Edith Edwards, Layton Brenegan, Robert Armstrong, John Baganakis, James Beers, Charles Crone, Charles Davidson, Zoe Graves, Clara Harris, Clifford Howlette, Nathan Lewis, Joyce McDonald, Henry Melton, Fraser Neiman, Irving Robitshek, Ann Talcot and Fran Williams.

The current ASP Newsletter contains a number of personal notes from students about their experiences on the job, on vacation and in the ASP classroom. The following poem, written by a student who wishes to remain anonymous, echoes the sentiments of many participants that the program has meant a great deal to them.

To be alive. . .but only half,
To hurt for that half lying dormant within,
To find help takes courage and a very strong will.
Yes, something must be done.
You can't go on being half alive.

Hurt and Help found each other at ASP.
Help sat listening to Hurt spilling out, tumbling out after thirty years of aching.
Help listened, Help perceived.
Help's eyes spoke of warmth, kindness, friendship, understanding, knowing.

HURT turned into HOPE.

Football Tickets Available Now

Tickets for the five home football games are now on sale to faculty and staff. The Indians will play Colgate, September 15; James Madison, October 6 (also Parents Day); Rutgers, October 20 (Homecoming); Richmond, November 17; and East Carolina, November 24.

Members of the faculties and staff who wish to have the same seats as last season, are asked to send in their checks before June 1. After that date tickets will be available to the general public.

Checks should be made out to WMAA and sent to Bettie S. Adams, Box 399, Williamsburg.

CPR Course

The American Heart Association still has openings in its CPR course which will begin on campus June 1. Those interested are asked to contact the AHA as soon as possible, phone 874-4849, P. O. Box 5009, Newport News, 23605.

Barka Gets Contract For Study of Colonial Potter

Norman Barka, professor of anthropology, has received a contract for $57,867 from the National Park Service which will allow him to play detective in "The Case of William Rogers, the Poor Potter of Yorktown."

For a long time it was the case of the "missing" kiln of the poor potter of Yorktown. For over 10 years, archaeologists sought the site of the kiln of the prosperous Yorktown brewer and merchant who excelled as Virginia's most prolific and accomplished potter in the early 18th century.

"We know so little about the ceramic industry as a whole, and especially about pottery kilns prior to the 19th century. So what we have found here is unique in this country," said Barka. It is also one of the best preserved sites of its kind, which heightens its importance as a major archaeological find in the New World.

Not much is known about Rogers. The label "Poor Potter" is a misnomer for someone who was a seemingly prosperous entrepreneur. Rogers probably did not actually make the pottery himself, but employed workmen from England and Europe.

Stephen Clements of the geology department at the College will provide technical assistance in the analysis of clays and glazes. Barka will also be assisted by Chris Sheridan, a potter with a background in archaeology, and James Smith, a graduate of William and Mary.

IEACH Council Elects Officers

Mary Maples Dunn of Bryn Mawr College has been re-elected chairman of the council of the Institute of Early American History and Culture which is co-sponsored by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Five persons have been elected to three-year terms on the institute council. They are Michael Craton of the University of Waterloo in Canada; Lois Green Carr of the St. Mary's City, Md., Commission; E. James Ferguson of Queens College of the City University of New York; Donald Lamm of W. W. Norton and Co., publishers; and Lawrence W. Towner of The Newberry Library.

Darrett B. Rutman of the University of New Hampshire was elected council secretary. Roger F. H. Leclere, a vice president of Colonial Williamsburg, serves as treasurer for the institute.

The institute, in the first of a three-year fund campaign, needs to raise $100,000 in private gifts to secure a conditional matching grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

It was announced at the council's annual meeting last weekend the Liberty Fund Inc. of Indianapolis will sponsor an institute conference on needs and opportunities for the study of American economic history before 1789. The conference, which will be restricted to 25 invited specialists, will be held here in the fall of 1980. The contribution by the Liberty Fund will be about $40,000.

The institute also has received a $6,000 grant from the Jennings Charitable Trust and approximately $8,500 from the Associates of the Institute, a group formed in late 1977 and now numbering about 200 people.

The institute is seeking to raise $500,000, a total which includes the conditional $125,000 national endowment grant and a contribution, announced last year, of $200,000 from the Mellon Foundation. Some money raised, including the Liberty Fund grant, does not count toward the money to be matched by the national endowment, due to NEH grant technicalities.

Council members reorganized the structure of two standing committees to provide for greater continuity of membership and established a third committee. The reorganized committees are for book publishing and for the William and Mary Quarterly. The new committee is for programs and development.

Communications Program is Tagged One of Nation's Finest

A legislative communications program which involves alumni volunteers on behalf of the College has been recognized as one of the best of its kind in the nation.

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) of Washington announced that William and Mary's program, which is conducted jointly with the Society of the Alumni, has received its second highest award for higher education governmental legislative relations programs for 1978-79.

The William and Mary program, developed in 1977-78, is based on involving interested alumni of the College in helping inform members of the General Assembly about William and Mary and its legislative interests. It was prepared by Ross Weeks, Jr.,

Assistant to the President and Director of University Communications, in collaboration with Gordon C. Vliet, Executive Vice President of the Alumni Society, and Mrs. Harriet Nachman Storm of Hampton, past president of the Society.

The Society's Public Affairs Communications Team (PACT) currently has about 75 volunteers around Virginia who are kept informed throughout the year about College affairs, and who make efforts to meet with legislators in their areas to discuss William and Mary.

The CASE recognition is based on organization of the program, cost-effectiveness, and success in reaching its objectives.

John Willis Writing History of Hogarth Press

John H. Willis, Jr., professor of English, has been awarded a grant of $2,500 by the National Endowment for the Humanities to complete research for a history of the Hogarth Press, which was started by novelist Virginia Woolf and her husband Leonard.

Created as a hobby in 1917 by two authors, the Hogarth Press developed into a major influence in the world of letters. It published the major works of Freud, essays by H. G. Wells and the first English translation of some of the works of Tolstoy, Dostoevsky and Chekhov, in addition to the novels of Virginia Woolf.

Willis has already completed some of the preliminary research on the project in England, both at the Press and at the Woolf collection at the University of Sussex. He will also devote a College-supported semester leave next spring to this project.

Leonard and Virginia Woolf purchased a small hand press in 1917. They set up the press in their dining room at Hogarth House in Richmond, England. According to Willis, they had bought the press partly as a hobby, partly to provide manual work to occupy Virginia's time, and partly for the anticipated pleasures of printing their own writing and that of a few friends. Their first publication was entitled Two Stories, one each by Virginia and Leonard. The Press sold 150 copies by subscription in July 1917.

By 1923, the Press had published 32 titles, including a novel and two collections of stories by Virginia Woolf and two volumes of poems by T. S. Eliot, most notably The Wasteland. The Press also published a variety of poems, stories and essays by Clive Bell, E. M. Forster, Roger Fry and Herbert Read.

In 1924 the Woolfs purchased a larger press and expanded Hogarth into a full-time publishing business. That year the Press took over the significant task of publishing the books of the International Psycho-Analytical Library, which included two earlier books by Freud and his "Collected Papers." From 1924 until Freud's death in 1939, Hogarth Press published the English translation of every book written by the famous psychoanalyst.

After his death, the Press also published a 24-volume standard edition of his complete works.

From the mid-twenties through the thirties, the Press continued to broaden its lists. All of Virginia Woolf's novels, stories and essays were published by Hogarth. It also published novels, works on history, politics, art history and aesthetics, and volumes of poetry by other authors, including the great "Duino Elegies" by Rilke. There was also a Letter Series, an Essay Series and a Pamphlet Series with political essays by Harold Laski, H. G. Wells, A. L. Rowse and Mussolini.

Janet Froom Wins Blair Fellowship

Janet Diane Froom of Rockville, Md., a 1979 graduate, will spend next year at St. Mary's College, St. Andrews University, Scotland, as recipient of the James Blair Fellowship.

The scholarship was established several years ago but this year was given the name of the James Blair Fellowship in honor of James Blair, the Scotsman who was the College's first president from 1693 until his death in 1743. The great Scottish reformer John Knox was an alumnus of St. Mary's and Andrew Melville, who carried on Knox's work and established Presbyterianism as the state religion in Scotland, was Principal of St. Mary's.

The scholarship provides a year of study in the humanities and is open to rising juniors or graduating seniors.

Miss Froom, a theater and speech concentrator, transferred to William and Mary from Chatham College, Pittsburgh, after her freshman year. She was valedictorian of her high school in Rockville, Md.

160 Years of Teaching

Retirees Look Back On Classroom Careers

When it is all added up, the College is losing the experience that some 160 years of teaching can bring with the retirement of five faculty members this year.

Alex Kallos, professor of modern languages and literatures; Richard K. Newman, professor of fine arts; Anthony L. Sancetta, Associate Dean of Undergraduate Studies in the School of Business Administration and first Zollinger Professor of Business Administration; Alan Stewart, professor of music; and William F. Swindler, professor of law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, represent careers in teaching which span several decades.

Kallos is already at work on his first retirement project, a book entitled Baudelaire and Rilke: A Study in Thematic Affinities of Their Poetry.

He will probably be best remembered on campus for the exuberance and excitement he brought to the classroom. His many jaunts to Europe were more than journeys home to his beloved Vienna where he was born in 1914; he brought back slides and, more importantly, the flavor of the countries he visited, to impart to his students.

Although he was once likened to Santa Claus because of "... his face exuding optimism and unabridged joy in what he's doing," he was an exacting teacher. He firmly believed in classroom discipline and those who took German knew his "How to be happy and successful in my course" lecture at the beginning of each course in which he laid down the rules. He's proud of his record -- in 30 years of teaching, only two students have opted to drop the course after his lecture.

He plans to continue travelling, and remain active in the professional organizations he belongs to.

Newman is going to let retirement just happen. He said he doesn't like to plan too far ahead and he hasn't done much planning for retirement. He expects to do some work in his yard, get to those articles he has never been able to finish and enjoy being relieved of the daily charge of classes.

Looking back, he remembers with particular joy the distinguished faculty lecture award he received from students in 1969 when the fine arts department moved from Taliaferro into Andrews in 1967. And another high point was reached this year, he said, with the Artist-in-Residence program and the outdoor sculpture Robert Engman has created. Newman thinks the addition of sculpture to the campus is an important addition to a university environment and will "lift the spirit" of those who enjoy it.

When he does his final exam, Newman said he was planning to wear a special T-shirt, a gift from students. It is emblazoned with the advice "Brush Up Your Technique with an Artist."

At a reception for Newman in Andrews a plaque was presented to him which will go over the door of the large lecture hall on the first floor of Andrews, honoring his contributions to fine arts at the College.

It has been a satisfying 30 years, said Anthony L. Sancetta. His philosophy has been to teach students rather than subject matter. It is more important, he feels, to help students develop their own talents to the full extent of their abilities rather than try and cast them in a mold.

Don't major in business to get a job after graduation unless you like business. You can't maximize your talents if you don't like what you are doing, asserts Sancetta. "You can get a job in anything if you are good at it."

Business is a very difficult discipline, said Sancetta, "up there with chemistry and physics." The best preparation for business is lots of math and a "strong dose" of humanities and history "because that is what people are all about."

Looking back, Sancetta has some regrets. He feels that the College has missed some good opportunities over the years, opportunities for growth and development in prestige and position among the great institutions of the country. He hopes those in positions to take advantage of such opportunities will do so if they are presented in the future.

For Alan Stewart, his enjoyment of his 35 years at the College has been coupled with a strong affection for Williamsburg as a great place to live and bring up children. He and his wife Jackie have been active participants in the musical life of the community and College and will continue to do so.

Stewart's love affair with music goes back to when he found a fiddle in the family attic at age ten; he liked to teach so his career became a natural marriage of the two. He is also an avid sports fan. He played a number of sports himself in high school and when he was advised to give up strenuous exercise because of a heart condition, took up golf. He especially enjoys the Golden Horseshoe Course and can be expected to spend some of his retirement leisure on the links. He will continue private lessons and his association with musical groups in the area. Stewart has played in the Peninsula orchestra, the Norfolk Symphony, and has been 27 years at what he calls his "wig job," the Palace Ensemble. Some of his most enjoyable performances have been concerts with the Feldman Quartet for school-children.

"Children are a wonderful audience. They enjoy the great classics. There's no need to give children cheap music, they enjoy good music," said Stewart.

William F. Swindler, professor of law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, is retiring but will be on campus next year as a special consultant on bicentennial affairs as the law school celebrates its 200th birthday.

If he does have any spare time, there are five "delinquent" book manuscripts waiting for his attention. These include a treatise on Constitutional Law, a book on the Continental Congress, a definitive book on the Supreme Court under Earl Warren and volumes nine and ten of his series on Documents of U.S. Constitutions, which is on library listings as the definitive reference on state constitutional documents.

One of the most satisfying decisions Swindler looks back on is his decision to stay in Williamsburg despite other tempting offers. The area, he has said, has a unique potential and the coming of the National Center for State Courts and the beginnings of the new law school building bear him out. For those interested in legislative and constitutional history, there is Washington nearby and "you are here in Williamsburg where so much of it happened."

As Director of Development when he first came to the College, he was part of the development of the College's tie with NASA which set the stage for serious graduate study and he admits to doing a lot of nagging when the opportunity to bring the National Center to Williamsburg came along.

Swindler sums up his eventful career with a line from Tennyson: "I have become a part of all I have seen." His involvement with campus life attests to this.

Swindler isn't planning on spending any time on the golf links in retirement. He says he drove his last golf ball into a gully in World War II and hasn't picked up a club since.

"Just say research is my hobby," he said. "For people who don't understand, that will sound dull but to those who do, it tells it all."

In memory of John Kratzer, Pi Beta Phi sorority has donated $225.00 to the local American Cancer Society Crusade through a recent candy sale on campus. Kratzer, a member of the class of '78 and an honorary captain of the William and Mary basketball team, died of cancer in May of 1978. Persons at the College who wish to remember John may also make a memorial donation in his name to the American Cancer Society. Mailing envelopes and memorial cards are available at the front desk of the Campus Center. All proceeds of the John Kratzer memorial donations will go toward the American Cancer Society's research, rehabilitation and education programs. Peter Logan, ACS Crusade Chairman in Williamsburg, receives a check from Pam Pritchard, PBP president, and Kim Poland, philanthropy chairperson.

Russian Teacher To Study Abroad

Anne Netick, associate professor of modern languages and literature, will participate in a summer exchange of language teachers with the U.S.S.R., sponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council.

Twenty to 25 teachers from across the country will participate in the program which will run for ten weeks at the Moscow State University. As well as lecture classes, participants will be expected to participate in practicum sessions.

Sightseeing trips will be arranged for the teachers. Ms. Netick said she doesn't expect to have much time for other recreation: classes are scheduled six days a week. The Russian approach to language training, she explained, differs from the American in that heavy emphasis is put on grammar and writing, even in the early stages of instruction. Russian language teachers will be in the United States this summer as part of the exchange program to learn the American approach to language training. The program, she said, is an outgrowth of the cultural exchange agreement between the two countries made in the 1960s.

Ms. Netick will leave in mid-June.

Employee Recognition Award Is Won by Mrs. Hazel Hunt

The Employee Recognition Award Committee has selected Hazel W. Hunt, a secretary in the Residence Hall Life Office for special commendation and a gift in recognition of a difficult job well done.

Under the ordinary sequence of events, Mrs. Hunt is a recorder for the room assignments but when the director of the program, Barbara Nanzig, became ill, Mrs. Hunt stepped in to keep the process moving toward a successful completion.

"In this she performed marvelously," said her boss, John D. Morgan, associate dean for Residence Hall Life, who nominated her for the award. "She performed her job with enthusiasm, loyalty and dedication," he said. "Mrs. Hunt not only performed her duties but without the extra effort and the positive attitude she displayed, it would have been extremely difficult for us to have managed through what was a very difficult period," he added.

A Tarheel by birth, Mrs. Hunt moved from North Carolina soon after she was born and grew up in the South Boston area of Virginia. Her husband, Dana, is associate minister at the United Methodist Church. The Hunts will be moving soon to another church assignment.

The Hunts have two sons, Marc, a graduate student at the University of North Carolina in environmental management; and Marvin, a lecturer in English at East Carolina University.

Mrs. Hunt enjoys her job and the contact she has with students. She loves to read.

Conversation on Child's Rights Set Tonight at Center for State Courts

"A Child's Right to Decide. . .," a conversation with Judge Orm W. Ketcham, Dr. Frank Marsh, and Gerald H. Holman, M.D., is planned in observance of the International Year of the Child, at 7:30 p.m., tonight in the Conference room of the National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg.

The discussion will focus on the emergence of children's rights in catastrophic disease and mental illness. It will permit the panel and audience to participate in an examination of the extension of the Constitution to adolescents and children through cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judge Ketcham is currently senior staff attorney at the National Center for State Courts, joining the staff in October of 1977 to develop and direct projects in the field of juvenile justice and to provide technical assistance to state juvenile courts. He is also a lecturer at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. In a recent paper on the subject of children's rights, Judge Ketcham observed, "Judicial decisions now assure a child a legal right to be heard in an increasing number of proceedings involving the child's own freedom and future."

Joining in the conversation will be Frank Marsh, professor of philosophy and Biomedical Ethics at Old Dominion University. Dr. Marsh had 23 years experience as a trial lawyer in Tennessee, before obtaining his degree in philosophy and Bio Ethics. He is currently finishing a book on the subject of the emerging rights of children.

The program is sponsored by the Bio-Medical Ethics Program, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary and Campus Urban Ministries of Norfolk Presbytery. Coordinators for the program are Ingrid Hillinger, lecturer in law, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the Reverend Thomas Mainor, and Dr. Don Self of EVMS. Mainor will moderate the panel.

New AAUP Officers

David Holmes, associate professor of religion, has been elected president of the William and Mary chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) for 1979-80. Other officers are Deborah Harley, assistant professor of psychology, vice president; and Roy Champion, associate professor of physics, secretary-treasurer.

September Meeting

A College-wide meeting of members of the Faculty and Administration of the College will be held on Tuesday, September 4, at 3:30 p.m. in Millington Hall Auditorium.

The Academic Deans will also take this opportunity to bring the faculties up to date on some of the important awards, recognitions and accomplishments of individual faculty members that are of particular interest to the entire academic community, and Dr. Healy will highlight some of the major educational plans and developments for the coming academic year. Immediately following the session in Millington Hall, all in attendance at this meeting are cordially invited to an informal social hour and refreshments in Andrews Hall Foyer and Gallery.

The Academic Deans, Dr. Healy and I hope that many of you will be able to meet with us for this introduction, both as academic colleagues and socially, to the new College year.

A reminder notice will be sent to you in August by Dr. Healy, but hopefully you will be able to reserve the time on September 4 on your calendar now.

On the following Sunday, September 9, Zoe and I will look forward to having you and your spouses come by the President's House for Brunch. A separate invitation will be sent to your homes for this occasion.

Nooney Wins Ferguson Scholarship

Nancy Lammers Nooney, a senior majoring in American studies, has been selected as the 1979 recipient of the William Cross Ferguson Scholarship, which will enable her to attend the Radcliffe Publishing Procedures Course in Cambridge, Mass., this summer.

Ms. Nooney attended both the University of Dayton, Ohio, and Tulane University before entering the College of William and Mary in 1974. For her major she integrated studies in American literature and history. She has written her senior thesis on "Nathaniel Hawthorne and the Transcendentalist Era."

Ms. Nooney is presently employed as secretary to the Director of Public Affairs for Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

The Radcliffe Publishing Procedures Course is a six-week intensive professional program, taught almost entirely by eminent publishing executives. The course is generally considered to be one of the surest entrances to a career in book and magazine publishing, as well as the most effective publishing training program now in existence. Eighty people are accepted for the course which will be held at Radcliffe College, June 25-August 3. Ms. Nooney is the seventh person to be selected for the scholarship from William and Mary, which is open to graduating seniors and recent graduates.

The William Cross Ferguson Fund, which also supports the Ferguson Seminar in Publishing held bi-annually on campus, was established in 1968 by Dr. Walter F. C. Ferguson in honor of his brother, William Cross Ferguson, a graduate of the class of 1916 who was president of the World Book Company.

Graves is Chairman

President Graves has been named chairman of the schools and colleges committee of the Yorktown Bicentennial Celebration.

Graves will head a committee that will develop and organize educational programs supporting the 1981 celebration of the surrender of the British troops at Yorktown. The National Park Service, the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission, and the local governments of York County and Yorktown are working together to plan a series of activities to commemorate the end of the Revolutionary War, highlighted by four days of celebration from October 16-19, 1981.

The schools and colleges committee will encourage academic publications concerning the bicentennial as well as events such as debates, lectures and symposiums supportive of the celebration.

Lewis A. McMurrin, Jr., is serving as chairman of the general steering committee, and James R. Sullivan is serving as president.

New Job For Mann

Secretary of the Commonwealth Frederick T. Gray, Jr., has employed Horace Edward "Chip" Mann as his new Executive Assistant. Mann, 23, is a 1977 graduate of the College of William and Mary and the youngest member of the College's Board of Visitors.

Mann will work closely with the Secretary on research projects aimed at revising the notary public laws and regulatory procedures, improving the administration of lobbying laws, and assisting more ex-felons to gain restoration of voting rights. During legislative sessions, he will also be responsible for tracking legislation affecting the Secretary of the Commonwealth's office, or any of the boards and commissions appointed by the Governor.

Mann replaces former Assistant to the Secretary of the Commonwealth John R. Broadway, Jr., a lawyer. Secretary Gray will assume all of the legal responsibilities formerly shared with Mr. Broadway. By hiring a non-lawyer, Gray expects to save taxpayers approximately $7,000.00 per year.

Antique Show

An Antique Show and Sale will be held at William and Mary Hall, on May 18, 19, and 20 with proceeds from ticket sales going to the Association for Retarded Citizens of Greater Williamsburg.

Seventy-five antique dealers will be on hand on Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19, from 11 a.m. until 10 p.m., and on Sunday, May 20, from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. Tickets are $2 at the door or $1.50 in advance. A special "Champagne Preview" on Thursday, May 17, from 7:30 p.m. until 10 p.m. The preview will feature refreshments for the guests as well as time to preview the antiques. Preview tickets are available for $5 and are good for the remaining days of the show.

Ticket sales for both the "Champagne Preview" and the three day Antique Show and Sale will be used by the Association for Retarded Citizens of Greater Williamsburg to support the Citizen Advocacy Program.

Archaeological Exhibit at Wren Traces Food Through the Ages

Twelve thousand years of food procurement, preparation and consumption in Virginia have produced a rich and varied material culture for archaeologists.

Lithic tools silently express pre-historic man's search for food. Floral and faunal remains, preserved through favorable environments, disclose what was eaten. Vessel wares and shapes communicate how food was prepared and served.

By examining the whole system of foodways, archaeologists can better understand the cultural record of past Virginians in their attempt to cope with their world.

The Virginia Research Center for Archaeology currently has an exhibit "Foraging, Feasting and Fast Foods: The Archaeology of Virginia's Foodways" on display in the basement of the Wren Building.

The exhibit is open to the public daily, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. In-depth tours for individuals and groups may be arranged in advance by calling Dennis Hartzell, educational coordinator for VRCA, 253-4836. The exhibit is expected to be on display for at least a year.

The exhibit includes the tools of the earliest Virginians who hunted mammoth, mastodon and other giant mammals with spears. The exhibit also includes samples of unearthed bones and shells which give clues to the types of food eaten by early man in Virginia.

The changing pattern of food procurement, preparation and serving from the colonists until the late 1800's are artfully traced with artifacts and prints of the period. There is also a sample of material found in a wine cellar at Croftman, the home of Robert (King) Carter.

Through the time periods, the exhibit takes the visitor from the archaic to the present. As the note on the final case indicates: "Foodways have changed considerably from the time of early man in the Chesapeake to fast food lifestyle of modern Americans. Standardization, mass production, worldwide transportation and the advanced technology of preservation have today produced a good related material culture that may present interpretative problems for the archaeologist of the future."
