Vetoes Retirement Cuts

Board Moves To Make VIMS Financially Sound

During a busy session held last weekend, the Board of Visitors put its stamp of approval on the College's determined efforts to restore financial stability to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS). At the same time, the Board put its mark of disapproval on legislation that would reduce retirement benefits for current College employees.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., presented a progress report on VIMS (reprinted in full on page three) which outlined important and immediate steps which would be taken to correct substantial financial problems at the Institute. Graves said a new position of associate director for financial affairs and administration would be created to handle the overall management responsibility at VIMS. The new associate director will report directly to the president. Graves said that Paul Koehly, internal auditor at the College, will serve in the position in an acting capacity until a permanent associate director is recruited and selected.

In reaction to current legislation under consideration in the General Assembly, the Board made a general statement in opposition to a decrease in retirement benefits for current employees. The Board's statement says, "It is important to the College that the Commonwealth of Virginia act to protect the retirement benefits upon which the current faculty and staff have planned. The Board opposes any reduction, through legislation pertaining to the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System, that would lead current employees to receive less than the full level of benefits, provided upon their retirement, in the existing plan."

In other actions, the Board approved the negotiations between the College and Eastern State Hospital regarding the proposed transfer of 38 acres of land and six buildings from the Hospital to the College. About 20 acres of this land has been leased to the College for practice fields for a variety of sports, and the two major buildings, known as James Blair Terrace, have been rented by the College for use as residence halls. The other four buildings are currently physician's homes but will be vacated by July 1. If the Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation approves the move, the property will be declared as surplus for Eastern State and transferred legally to the College.

Members of the business affairs staff also reported on the successful programs currently being implemented to save energy at the College. In particular, the College has saved thousands of dollars by using a computer control system known as the Building Operating Service System (BOSS).

The Board approved the appointments of several faculty members to fill existing vacancies. Joanne M. Braxton, a lecturer at the University of Michigan, was appointed full-time instructor of English. John B. Corr, an associate with the law firm of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver and Kampelman in Washington, D.C., was named full-time assistant professor of law. Thomas A. Doerflinger, who will receive his doctorate from Harvard this June, will become full-time assistant professor of history and a fellow in the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

Wendell E. Dunn, a lecturer at the University of Michigan, has been appointed full-time assistant professor of Business Administration. Donald C. Johnson, a teaching assistant at the University of Wisconsin who just received his doctorate, will become full-time reader services librarian in Swem Library. Robert C. Miller, professor at Adrian College, will serve as visiting professor of chemistry. Gerald P. Moran, professor of law at the University of Toledo, has been appointed visiting professor of law. Theodore D. Putnam of the Vistron Corporation in Lima, Ohio, will serve as an instructor of chemistry, and James V. Quagliano, Hudson Professor of Chemistry at Auburn, will be a visiting professor of chemistry. John P. Bensel, a machinist for the Flight Research Corporation in Richmond, has been appointed instructor of physics. Krista Dudley Carpenter, director of financial analysis for John Yancey Management, Inc., and Albert F. Stem, Jr., project director for the Virginia Department of Personnel and Training, have been named part-time lecturer at the business school.

The Board approved the expansion of Yates Hall parking area from 68 to 140 spaces. It also approved a recommendation that the present

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law building, soon to be vacated in favor of new quarters adjacent to the National Center for State Courts, will get a new name when its present tenants leave. Marshall-Wythe will become St. George Tucker Hall when the law school moves to its new quarters.

4 To Receive Honorary Degrees

Four individuals whose fields of achievement range from humor to politics will receive honorary degrees at commencement exercises, Sunday, May 11.

The four recipients of honorary degrees are Art Buchwald, successful humorist and this year's commencement speaker; John Warren Cooke, long-time member and recently retired Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates; Sir Neville Mott, Nobel prize winning physicist from the University of Cambridge; and an alumnus, Rafael Torrens '32, physician, author and leader in the government of Puerto Rico.

Called by Walter Lippmann "one of the best satirists of our time," Buchwald is a successful author of several books, including Washington is Leaking, I Am Not a Crook, and The Establishment is Alive and Well in Washington.

Buchwald's journalism career began in the Marines during World War II and developed when he was a student at the University of Southern California and in Paris. While in Paris, he began writing a column called "Europe's Lighter Side," which was syndicated in the American press.

After leaving Europe, Buchwald settled in Washington, where he now lives. His syndicated column appears in over 500 newspapers throughout the U.S. and the world, and he is heard as

Newsmakers

Paul V. Koehly, director of internal auditing, has been named Certified Data Processing Auditor by the Electronic Data Processing Auditors Foundation for Education and Research. Mr. Koehly qualified for the certification on the basis of his considerable experience in the field.

The EDP Auditors Foundation is a recently founded national education and research association formed to bring experienced and qualified data processing auditors together to improve the profession.

Associate Professor of Business Administration Henry E. Mallue, Jr.'s article, "The 'Time' Approach to Teaching Accounting," has recently been republished in Nanassy, Louis C., ed., Readings in Teaching Business Subjects, 1980, Fearon Pitman Publishers, Inc., Belmont, CA.

David E. Kranbuehl, associate professor of chemistry, was recently awarded a grant by the National Aeronautic and Space Administration to conduct work on the development and characteristics of high performance polymers. The objective of the grant is to examine the effect of the polymer chain's length and the degree of cross-linking between chains on the polymer's thermal and rheological properties. Funds totalling $49,200 in the grant will be used to support research stipends for undergraduate students, supplies and to fund a research position in the Chemistry Department.

Conformal conservation laws in action-at-a-distance electrodynamics by Paul Stephas and Hans C. von Baeyer, professor of physics and Director of VARC, has been published in Physical Review D 20, page 3155 (1979).

Ruth Mulliken, professor of education, conducted two workshops recently, one on stress for the Corona-Narco school district in California, and another on working with problems of human sexuality for the Institute for Industrial and Commercial Ministries in Atlanta. She will conduct a workshop on meeting problems in special education for principals of Newport News later this month.

Armand Galfo, professor of education, has had a booklet entitled "The All Volunteer Force: Pros and Cons" published by the National Defense University.

Lt. Gen. R. G. Gard, Jr., president of NDU, says in the foreword to the publication that it is a well-compiled effort and makes more accessible arguments on both sides, concerning the ultimate success of the all-volunteer force in meeting defense manpower requirements.

Galfo's analysis is presented along with two representative reports and a selected bibliography as well as a list of contributors.

Robert Bloom, associate professor of business administration, has had his paper, "A Balance Sheet Approach to Teaching the Concepts of Expenses and Revenues," accepted for publication in the Journal of Business Education.

Carl Dolmetsch's review of Commissioned Spirits: The Shaping of Social Motion in Dickens, Carlyle, Melville and Hawthorne, by Jonathan Arac (Rutgers, 1979) was published in the December 1979 issue of Choice.

A critique by Carl Dolmetsch of the world premiere production of Thea Musgrave's "A Christmas Carol," as performed by the Virginia Opera in Norfolk last December, has been published in the current (February) issue of Opera Magazine in London. Opera, for which Dolmetsch has been a staff contributor since 1977, is the only periodical in its field with a world-wide circulation.

An article by Robert Archibald of the economics department and Robert Gillingham of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, "An Analysis of the Short-Run Consumer Demand for Gasoline Using Household Survey Data," has been accepted for publication in the Review of Economics and Statistics.

Entitled "Casting the I Ching with a TRS-80," an article and microcomputer program by Edwin Dethlefsen, professor of anthropology, will appear in the April issue of the computer magazine BYTE: The Small Systems Journal. Described as a "Chinese fortune-hunting device," the computer "game" is more important, according to Dethlefsen, in developing one's capacity to perceive alternative viewpoints in dealing with contemporary or personal problems.

A review of Hazel A. Johnson's A Checklist of New London, Connecticut, Imprints (Charlottesville: University Press of Virginia, 1978) by John D. Haskell, associate librarian, appears in the January issue of The Library Quarterly.

Robert Bloom, associate professor of business administration, will have a paper entitled "Functional Fixation and Information Overload Applied to Financial-Statement Users" in a future issue of Cost and Management, a Canadian journal. Bloom's article, "The Application of Standard Costing to Order Getting Activities," appears in the January issue of The Management Accountant (India).

Anthropology Has New Journal Out

The anthropology department, which publishes Studies in Third World Societies, a scholarly journal devoted to the study of the cultures and societies of the Third World, and the Association of Third World Anthropologists (ATWA) Research Bulletin, has added another publication to its list.

The first edition of the USAPAN Newsletter is currently in print, the first of a publication which will be printed three times a year by the department.

The new publication details the work of the United States Association of Philippine Anthropologists and is edited by Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology.

USAPAN was founded on Dec. 1, 1979 in Cincinnati, Ohio, during the annual meeting of the American Anthropological Association. It is an organization of scholars on Philippine anthropology and related disciplines. Zamora also serves as chairman of the new organization.

Robert Emans, associate dean of education, has an article published, "Guidelines for a Speech on X Education," in the January issue of Educational Leadership, a journal of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Robert B. Bloom, associate professor of education, has been invited to present a lecture, "Schools as a Factor in Mental Health," at the annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association this spring in Toronto. In addition, Bloom will serve as moderator of a panel entitled "Interface: Mental Health and Special Education--Providing and Funding Mental Health Services to Handicapped Children and Their Families." Bloom also will co-chair the annual meeting of AOA's Task Force on Schools and Mental Health.

An article entitled "View from an Archaeology" by Edwin Dethlefsen, professor of anthropology, will be published in the March issue of the Anthropology and Humanism Quarterly.

Robert Hanny, associate professor of education, will serve as a consultant to a Teacher Corps Project at the College of the Virgin Islands, February 26-29. He will conduct four workshops on teaching skills during this period.

Mary Ann Sagaria, assistant professor of education, has had two articles published recently. "Freshman Orientation Courses: A Framework" was published in the fall issue of the Journal of the National Association of Women Deans, Administrators, and Counselors. "Perceived Needs of Entering Freshmen: The Primacy of Academic Issues" will be published in the spring issue of the Journal of College Student Personnel. Collaborating authors for the latter article are L. C. Higginson and E. R. White from the Pennsylvania State University.

Lavach Recruiting Lady Pilots

Despite the constant repetition of the old cliché "you've come a long way, baby," that just isn't so for women in aviation.

Of the 30,000 members of the Air Line Pilots Association, 130 are women. In control towers across the country, only five percent of those at the control panels are women. Nationally, the ratio of men to women in aviation positions is 16 to 1; in Virginia that ratio is 25 to 1.

John Lavach, professor of education, whose secret love is flying, hopes to help women get into traditionally male jobs in aviation with a new program for high school women.

With a grant of $5,000 from the Sex-Equity Coordinator for Vocational Education, Virginia Department of Education, John Lavach will recruit 30 high school women, juniors and seniors, to participate in a 12-week ground school course. At the end of the instruction, students will take the FAA written examination for private pilot's license. The program is a model in the state, aimed at changing the imbalance of the sexes in aviation careers.

From this program, Lavach says, students will have acquired a stepping stone to a career in aviation.

Students will receive free all tuition and equipment necessary for the course and will be reimbursed for travel.

The course will be offered at the Virginia Associated Research Campus in Newport News. This facility, explains Lavach, is centrally located for Tidewater residents and is close to Patrick Henry International Airport, a flight service station, several private fixed base operators with air taxi and charter, an operating control tower, commercial airlines, and other aviation-oriented facilities, which are essential to the program. Also nearby is a component of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, as well as Langley Air Force Base and the Army's Felker Field at Fort Eustis.

Forty hours of classroom instruction will be given in the course which will cover all topics required by the Federal Aviation Administration for the private pilot written examination. Students will study basic aircraft and engine operation, navigation, communication, FAA regulations, weight and balance and other related topics.

Lavach says the program is one for which there is almost an obvious demand. He sees opportunities for more jobs in aviation with the decontrol of airlines and the opening up of more charter, commuter and cargo services. Also, branches of the military services are opening up opportunities which permit women to become pilots.

Lavach also points to a healthy job market for pilots in the future. The World War II pilots who went into commercial aviation are retiring now, he says, and the same influx of post-war pilots did not occur after the Vietnam war because service pilots then were trained mostly for rotary wing aircraft, helicopters.

Lavach will be contacting area high schools this week, recruiting students for the course.

"With the services and many commercial airlines as well as air taxi, air charter and flight schools opening their doors to women, there appears to be an excellent opportunity for efforts to be made in eliminating sex discrimination, sex bias, and sex stereotyping in aviation," says Lavach.

Lavach holds a commercial pilot's license, is an FAA certified ground school instructor and a state certified school psychologist. Lavach found flying came in handy when he was working with school psychologist interns on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. He made his rounds by plane, saving hours of driving time.

Board Members Are Reappointed

Rector Edward E. Brickell of Virginia Beach and four other members of the Board of Visitors were reappointed to new board terms Tuesday by Governor John N. Dalton.

Reappointed to four-year terms, expiring March 6, 1984, are Herbert V. Kelly, Newport News; Harriet Storm, Hampton; Milton L. Drewer, Jr., Arlington; and Raymond T. Waller, Richmond. This will be the first full term for Mrs. Storm who was appointed to the board last fall, fulfilling the unexpired term of Joseph E. Baker of Norfolk who resigned to accept a circuit court judgeship.

Board Actions On VIMS, Endowment, NEH

A PROGRESS REPORT VIRGINIA INSTITUTE OF MARINE SCIENCE OF THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY IN VIRGINIA

This is a progress report on VIMS, focusing on its current financial and operational problems, and the actions being taken to re-establish the fiscal and administrative integrity of the Institute. It reflects recommendations I made to the Board of Visitors of William and Mary at its meeting on February 21-23, which have the approval and full support of the Board.

For the current years, VIMS is still operating at a deficit. As I told JLARC in November, we knew that there were significant problems at VIMS that could not be corrected overnight. We informed JLARC then that we believed that there could well be a further deficit for the current year. This deficit has now materialized.

We shall be presenting these deficit projections to Mr. Charles Walker, Secretary of Administration and Finance, and to Mr. Stuart Connock, Director of Division of Planning and Budget, next week and will request a deficit loan, in accordance with the 1978 Appropriations Act and at their request. Mr. Walker and his staff are aware of these problems and have been working with us to achieve an equitable solution to them. They have given us assurance that we will be funded for all essential costs, including payrolls.

Their assurance, we believe, is based on certain commitments on our part. These commitments include:

- Exercising prudent fiscal management in the acceptance of new grants and extension or modification of existing grants.
- Limiting the filling of vacancies and creating of new positions to those which are truly essential to accomplish the mission effectively and efficiently.
- Establishing controls to avoid incurring non-essential expenses.
- Curtailing any expenditures relating to the VIRGINIAN SEA except to those items required to prevent its deterioration.

In this regard, VIRGINIAN SEA was placed in a wet lay-up status on February 5, 1980. We are presently exploring the feasibility of placing this vessel in full "buttoned up" inactive status, and considering other alternatives.

Further cost savings have been instituted to reduce the overall deficit in Vessel Operations. These include:

- Placed in wet lay-up status two additional major vessels and four smaller vessels.
- Curtailed of overtime.
- Reduction of twenty-four employees in Vessel Operations, lowering the total from 54 to 30.

We intend to initiate all necessary cost savings in Vessel Operations until that situation comes under tight fiscal control.

In recognizing our responsibilities for VIMS at the beginning of this past July, our internal audit staff was assigned, prior to July 1, the responsibility to determine those factors causing deficit operation and to evaluate the adequacy of financial/administrative systems. It was our opinion that it was more important for us to determine first the causes of the financial illness rather than determining a precise amount for the deficit. With this detailed information we could then design a financial management control system which would prevent further deficits. This is moving ahead well.

Further, we requested the Auditor of Public Accounts early last spring to determine the amount of any existing deficits as of June 30, 1979. Notwithstanding the results of that audit, Mr. Walker and his staff have determined that there is a need for further external audit review at VIMS. As a result, Coopers and Lybrand have been retained by the Commonwealth to undertake another audit to establish an independent evaluation of the present fiscal conditions of the Institute.

In the meanwhile, the College's internal auditors have identified a number of major problems at VIMS, involving both specific conditions and system weaknesses, and have made recommendations of actions to solve these problems.

Mr. William Carter, Vice President for Business Affairs, is implementing the recommendations arising out of these audits, and implementation will be complete by July 1. Before then all of the required financial controls will be in place.

In addition to these actions, we are integrating all administrative and financial functions at VIMS with their counterparts at William and Mary. It is a major and complicated task, but this integration is well under way and will be completed and implemented well before July 1, 1980. As a result of this action, the administration of the College in Williamsburg now has direct and full administrative and financial authority and responsibility for the future of VIMS.

We are moving immediately to employ an individual who will serve as Associate Director of VIMS for Financial Affairs and Administration and will be responsible for implementation of the integration of all administrative and financial functions at VIMS with William and Mary. This person will be charged with producing at VIMS a viable system of administration and fiscal accountability. In his overall management responsibility, this individual will report directly to the President of the College until further notice.

Until the new Associate Director has assumed his responsibilities, Mr. Paul Koehly, Internal Auditor of the College, will serve in this position in an acting capacity, effective immediately. He (and his successor) will be keeping me fully and continually informed of progress, and will submit a formal report to me on a monthly basis. I shall in turn make monthly reports to the Board of Visitors and to the appropriate officials in state government.

Dr. Hargis will continue to serve as Director of VIMS and Dean of the School of Marine Science. He will thus be in a position to devote all his energies to the research and instructional functions of VIMS and the School, without incurring the burdens of administration and overall fiscal concerns.

Other personnel actions are being considered and will be taken to ensure that we have the right individuals occupying critical positions at VIMS, that full integration is effective, and that financial integrity is assured and sound management practices are in effect.

There is still one area that could cause further deficits in the future. This problem deals with under-recovery of overhead and/or indirect cost from external agencies-Federal government, and private. To correct this adverse condition, we have sought approval (and understand we have approval) from the State to fund these costs in accordance with the procedures being followed for all colleges and universities. This approach to funding overhead for VIMS is now permitted by the current Appropriation Act, but the funds have not been provided in the past.

Every effort will be exerted to ensure that, with the funding support of the State, there will be no deficit incurred or continuing at VIMS, after July 1, 1980.

With reference to Graduate Marine Science Consortium: The four institutions (W&M, U.V.A., ODU, TECH) are entering into a Consortium in order for the Commonwealth to work toward Sea Grant College Status. On January 22, I proposed to the other university presidents and to Dr. Gordon Davies, Director of the State Council of Higher Education, a Compact and Bylaws for the Consortium that reflects our discussion with Dr. Ned Ostenso, Director of the National Sea Grant Office, and our own internal discussions. My proposal took an approach to the Consortium that provides for maximum decentralization, minimum expenses and bureaucracy, maximum protection of institutional autonomy, and maximum opportunity to protect our present dominant position in marine science. This compact has been approved by Dr. Davies and the other presidents and is now being reviewed at the state and federal level.

Dr. George R. Healy, Vice President for Academic Affairs, currently is working on solutions to the questions concerning academic organization and educational program interface with the College of William and Mary. We intend to complete that study and start to implement it this spring.

In closing, I would like to reflect back to July 1, 1979, when we assumed responsibility for VIMS. We knew that the financial and administrative deficiencies at VIMS were serious at that time, but in all candor we did not know the full extent of the problems. We do now. With the knowledge that we have gained through our collective efforts, we are moving forward to institute the necessary financial controls and management practices to re-establish the financial and administrative integrity at VIMS. Good progress is being made and the job will be completed well before July 1, 1980.

As we accomplish these required actions, we reaffirm our commitment to maintain and enhance VIMS' research and education status in the scientific community. VIMS is a major and highly valuable resource for the Commonwealth of Virginia and the nation, and we intend to protect it and advance it. VIMS is also an important addition to this university and we are pleased that it is a part of us.

1980-81 REVISED BUDGET FOR ENDOWMENT INCOME AND OTHER EXPENDABLE PRIVATE FUNDS

At its meeting on November 30-December 1, 1979, the Board of Visitors approved the initial edition of the 1980-81 Budget of Endowment Income and Other Expendable Private Funds under the control of the Board of Visitors in the amount of $205,913.

In response to the requirement for additional endowment income to meet increasing needs for additional endowment income, particularly the need to supplement State-funded salaries of the faculty, it is recommended that the income requirement be increased from 5% to 5½%, effective July 1, 1980, for the 1980-81 Revised Budget, as presented in the attached schedule. This revision will result in an increase of $11,877 to $217,790 from the $205,913 initially approved.

RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia hereby approves increasing the income requirement from 5% to 5½% as recommended and consistent with the Revised Investment Management and Spending Policies as presented in a separate resolution of this meeting of the Board of Visitors; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, That this deviation from the existing Spending Policies, as specified in Article A II-E and F, be approved to permit a spending rate of 5½% for 1980-81; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, That it is the intent of the Board of Visitors to maximize the total income generated for the Eminent Scholars Fund through dollar-for-dollar matching by the Commonwealth of Virginia.

NEH FUNDS

The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded the College of William and Mary $500,000 through its Challenge Grant Program. This grant is contingent upon the College securing $1.5 million of new private support.

The specific goals of this grant are to add to endowment specifically to assist the humanities at William and Mary in the following areas:

1. Faculty Compensation (Including endowed professorships)
2. Library Acquisitions
3. Instructional Program Enrichment
4. Summer Research Grants
5. Faculty Exchanges

In order to provide for the management of gifts and bequests designated for the support of the NEH Grant, it is

RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, directs that the Vice President for Business Affairs shall establish whatever funds deemed necessary in order to receive and manage gifts and bequests designated for the purposes of the NEH Grant; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, That the income from the various funds established shall be applied toward the specific goals of the National Endowment for the Humanities Grant as set forth above.

Notebook

No News Next Week

There will not be an issue of the William and Mary News next week, due to the spring recess. Next issue will be Tuesday, March 11.

Deadline for items to be included in the March 11 issue is Thursday, March 6.

Help Wanted

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival is seeking the help of volunteers during the three days of auditions, Feb. 29, March 1, 2. Assistance is needed in getting applicants registered and on stage on time. Timers are also needed to keep things moving along.

Two shifts have been set up each day, from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Anyone who would be willing to work a shift or part of a shift is asked to contact Linda Williams at the department of theatre and speech, ext. 4395 or 4273.

Library Break Hours

Friday, Feb. 29-Saturday, March 8
Monday-Friday: 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday: 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Sunday: 1 p.m.-5 p.m.

Men, Women in Services

Capt. Donald Pratt, assistant professor of military science, and Lt. Stella Lee, a recent graduate stationed at Fort Story, Va., will discuss "Men and Women in the Military" at this week's Project Plus Forum at 7:30 p.m. in Wednesday, Feb. 27, in Millington Auditorium.

McGill Scholarship

The Ralph McGill Scholarship Fund offers scholarships of up to $1,500 to those who have completed at least two years of college and who have demonstrated an abiding interest in the news and editorial phase of newspapering. Scholarships are limited to those students from the South. Applicants must show that they firmly intend to pursue a career in daily or weekly newspaper work. Limited information is available in the Office of Career Planning, but application forms and more information may be obtained by writing: The Ralph McGill Scholarship Fund, Box 4689, Atlanta, GA 30302.

Holtzman Interns

There will be several openings in the fall for college students to work as full-time interns in Congresswoman Holtzman's Brooklyn and Washington offices. The Brooklyn program emphasizes case work and community relations, with some research. The Washington program emphasizes issue-oriented work, including legislative research and correspondence. Interns in both offices are also expected to help with the routine chores necessary for the functioning of Congressional offices.

Students can apply for an internship by sending a letter, a resume (which should include the name, address and telephone number of at least one person who is familiar with the applicant's work, e.g., a professor or work supervisor) and a short writing sample to Rodney N. Smith, Administrative Assistant, 2238 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. Applicants should be sure to include telephone numbers where they can be reached at home and at school. They should also say whether they prefer the Brooklyn or Washington office.

Submissions Sought

Two cash awards of $25, one for fiction and one for poetry, will be awarded to winners in the Spring Writers Festival contest.

Submissions must be typed, double spaced, accompanied by a cover sheet with name and telephone number, and sent to David Porush, English department, before the deadline, March 10.

Festival Program Set

Joyns Hawkes, Leslie Epstein, George Starbuck and Paula Rankin will be here for the Spring Writers Festival, March 17-20.

David Porush, English department, who is planning the program, has announced that there will also be a performance of the play "The Ravine," based on poems by Nelly Sachs.

Asia House Speaker

Asia House will sponsor a lecture entitled "Nuclear Issue in Indo-U.S. Relations" by Gurdip Singh Bedi, the political counselor in the Indian embassy, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 28, in the Asia House lobby. A reception will follow at 9 p.m.

Prior to coming to Washington in 1978, Bedi was secretary to the Indian Atomic Energy Commission.

Orientation Aides

All students who are interested in being Orientation Aides for Fall 1980 should pick up applications in James Blair Hall, Room 210. Completed applications must be returned to James Blair 210 no later than 5 p.m. on March 17.

Study in Spain

Spaces are still available in the William and Mary Summer in Spain program. Students will spend five weeks (tentative dates: May 29-July 5) studying in the Marques don Francisco Javier Comejo y Vallejo (1667-1759) in Valle de Ruesga, Asturias, Spain, and will tour Madrid, Oviedo, Leon, Burgos and the surrounding countryside.

For more information, contact James D. Lavin, Wash. 209; James E. Griffin, Wash. 202; or Dean Joseph Healey, JB 209.

There will be an interest night program Thursday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m. in Washington 303 for those interested in the summer program in Spain. Slides will be shown and faculty participants will be on hand to answer questions.

Mobil Oil Program

Mobil Oil will select one sophomore woman from each of the 20 participating colleges and universities to take part in their sixth annual "Explore the Business World" program, to be held April 14-18 at Mobil Oil's New York office. Maria Fakadej, last year's participant from William and Mary, will talk about this program Wednesday, Feb. 20, at 7 p.m. in Morton 102. Contact the Office of Corporate Relations and Placement, Morton 104, for a time and place, as well as for application forms and further information on the program. The application deadline is February 29.

New Book Out

The University of Massachusetts Press has just published The Responsibility of Mind in a Civilization of Machines: Essays by Perry Miller, edited by John Crowell and Stanford J. Searl, Jr. From the 1930's until his death in 1963, Perry Miller was one of the foremost scholars in the field of American intellectual history.

Crowell received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from California State University in Sacramento, and was a doctoral candidate in history at the College. He also has been working as an editorial intern and a freelance editor at the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

Hear Ye, Hear Ye!

The Publications Council is seeking applicants for the positions of editor and manager of campus media.

Any member of the student body, currently enrolled, who wishes to apply for editorship of any of the College publications, including the Amicus Curiae, Colonial Lawyer, Flat Hat, William and Mary Review, and Colonial Echo, and the post of manager of the radio station, WCWM, is asked to submit letters of application and all written material in support of that application, plus a full biography and details of academic and publishing experience, to the secretary of the Publications Council, Ken Smith, Campus Center.

Deadline for applications is March 15.

Summer in Montpellier

There is still space available in the Montpellier Summer program at Universite Paul Valery in Montpellier, France, June 25-August 3 (approx.).

For more information, contact: Ron St. Onge, modern languages department, or Dean Joseph Healey, JB 209.

Psi Chi Speaker

Otello Desiderato, a behavior therapist from Connecticut College, New London, Conn., will discuss "Innovative Techniques of Dealing with Anxiety Disorders" at a public lecture, at 4 p.m., Friday, March 14, in Millington auditorium, sponsored by Psi Chi psychology honorary.

The speaker will be introduced by Dan Weintraub, president of the recently reactivated Psi Chi fraternity.

Health Care Programs

Allentown Affiliated Hospitals announces the 12-week 1980 Work/Study Program, designed to provide practical health care experience to students with an interest in a health-related career.

The program will be conducted from June 2 to August 22 and will consist of 25 positions in the following departments: anesthesia, dietary, education, microbiology, chemistry, medical library, nursing, pastoral care, pharmacy, physical therapy, respiratory therapy, social services, surgery and volunteer services.

Participants in the program are paid a weekly salary of $150.00 based on a forty-hour week. In addition, many educational opportunities are provided. For more information ask for Ref. F-18-1, Placement Office.

Game Times

The women's basketball team defends its State Division II VAAIAW basketball championship in William and Mary Hall, Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 28-30.

Games will be held on Thursday and Friday at noon, 2:30 p.m., 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.

On Saturday the consolation game will be played at 10 a.m.; the third place game at 12:30 p.m. and the championship game at 3 p.m.

William and Mary opens its bid Thursday at 6 p.m. against George Mason University.

Publishing Seminar

The Publishing Institute, offered by the Graduate School of Librarianship and Information Management at the University of Denver, combines practical workshops in editing, production and marketing with lecture/teaching sessions conducted by leading experts from all areas of publishing. The Institute provides a concentrated, four-week, full-time course for 6 quarter hours of credit and devotes itself exclusively to book publishing. The Institute is designed for recent college graduates and library school graduates interested in publishing, and for those who are currently employed in publishing who want a broad overview of the whole industry as well as an introduction to the techniques of editing, marketing and production. Tuition will be $725. Applications are due no later than April 1. More information is available in the Office of Career Planning.

Museum Work

HUGUENOT HISTORICAL SOCIETY: The Huguenot Historical Society provides in-the-field training for college students who are interested in making some phase of museum work their life occupation. Students will be working 5 days a week for 10 weeks, beginning the end of May, working in costume and architecture. Between $1000 and $1200 will be earned by each student. More information may be obtained in the Office of Career Planning.

Assistants for Orientation

Any student interested in being an Orientation Assistant Director for Fall 1980 should pick up an application form in James Blair 210. Applications will be available beginning March 10. Applications must be returned to Dean Worthington no later than 5 pm on March 17.

Internships

ENVIRONMENTAL INTERN PROGRAM: Graduate and undergraduate students seeking professional paid experience in their fields of study should consider the Environmental Intern Program. Spring and summer positions are available in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Western Pennsylvania. Students studying Geology, Chemistry, Economics, Education, Liberal Arts and Law are especially encouraged to apply. More information is available in the Office of Corporate Relations and Placement. Ask for Reference J-24-1.

Williams Slates Two Talks

"Empire As a Way of Life" will be the theme of two lectures to be delivered March 11 and March 18 by William A. Williams, visiting James Pinckney Harrison Professor of History.

Williams, who assumed the Harrison chair in January 1980 for the spring semester, is recognized as a leading revisionist historian, not only with regard to the development of American foreign policy, but also the entire American experience over the past 200 years. Author of The Tragedy of American Diplomacy, Williams is currently professor of history at Oregon State University.

"The theme of the lecture series is the way in which American culture has developed around first the opportunity and then the assumption that American democracy couldn't function unless the people had a surplus of space and a surplus of resources," Williams explains.

He will give the first of the two-part lecture series at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 11 in Millington Auditorium. The second lecture is scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 18 in Millington.

Williams, in his twelfth academic year at Oregon State, is teaching two classes at the College this spring. One is a lecture course entitled "Comparative Maritime Cultures," and the other is a seminar called "America and the Sea." Both courses are innovations of Williams, who helped develop a cooperative liberal arts/oceanographic undergraduate program about five years ago at Oregon State.

"We developed a core program in which students can get most required courses by developing both potentials. I did a lot of work on the proposal for the National Endowment for the Humanities."

The proposal has merited Oregon State a $500,000 challenge grant from

Williams

NEH that Williams hopes the university will receive this fall.

Williams not only teaches about maritime life at Oregon State, he almost lives it. "My wife and I live right on the beach just outside of Newport, about 50 miles from the Oregon campus," Williams says. He commutes to his Tuesday and Thursday classes by bus, sometimes staying overnight through Thursday, a schedule he finds "not at all strenuous."

Woodward

Jackson

Forum Speakers

The Rev. Jesse Jackson will speak Wednesday, Feb. 27, at 8 p.m. in William and Mary Hall as part of the William and Mary Speakers Forum. Bob Woodward, co-author of The Brethren, will be here March 18. Tickets are $1.50 for members of the College community; $2 for the general public.

Shakespeare Festival Seeks Actors

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival will hold auditions for actors Feb. 29-March 2, by appointment only.

Positions are available for 15 actors in the 1980 summer season which has scheduled performances from July 10 to August 17 of "The Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," and "The Comedy of Errors." The salary for actors will be $1100.

Those wishing to audition should make an appointment by calling 253-4395 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Kent Thompson, artistic director for the Festival, says the productions require 11 male and four female performers. There are also openings available for production, design and technical staff.

Dora Short Sets Tuesday Concert

Dora Short, who joined the music faculty in 1975 as a lecturer in music, will present a faculty recital at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 11, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Her program will include compositions by Schubert, Beethoven and Ives. The Bach Partita in E minor will also be performed.

Accompanying Ms. Short on the piano will be James Gemmell. Gemmell is a graduate of the Juilliard School and is the first American to win the Chamber Music prize in the 1976 Tchaikovsky competition.

A member also of the faculty of the Juilliard School, Ms. Short is conductor of the William and Mary College-Community orchestra. She is first violinist with the Feldman String Quartet and teaches at the University of Maine's Summer Chamber Music School.

Sophomores Plan For Concentrators

This year, for the first time, a series of departmental and school forums has been set up to help students, particularly sophomores, with their choice of a concentration.

These forums will run March 11 through March 17 following an introductory program for all sophomores and others eligible to declare a concentration, at 4:30 p.m. Monday, March 10, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

David Holmes, associate professor of religion, will speak on the value of the liberal arts education and how to choose a major; Sam Sadler, dean of students, will speak on various programs and offices which can be of assistance to students; and Charles Toomajian, registrar, will outline the procedures students will need to go through, as well as answer questions.

Students are asked to see their advisors (before spring break if possible) to make appointments between March 10 and March 21 to plan their degree program for the next two years and discuss registration for the fall semester of 1980-81.

The new plan, which the Committee on the Sophomore Year, headed by Stephanie Buchanan, has been working on since the first of the year, replaces "concentration night" with "concentration week" with the hope that the expanded program will be more valuable to students.

Students have been working with Dean Sadler, Jack Edwards, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, and David Kranbuehl, associate dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, in setting up the program.

Times, dates and locations of all forums are included in the calendar on the final page of the News.

Preview Program Focuses On Opera

A preview program on Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" will be held at 8 p.m., Monday, March 10, in the Campus Center Ballroom, sponsored by the music department.

"The Tales of Hoffman" will be presented by the Virginia Opera Association in Norfolk, beginning March 21.

Participants will include Carl Dolmetsch, professor of English, Alexander Kallos, professor emeritus of modern languages, and Stephen J. Potorti, a senior.

Kallos, a well-known authority on German Romantic literature and an opera enthusiast, will discuss the life and writings of E. T. A. Hoffman (1776-1822), the real-life author-composer on whose fantastic stories Offenbach based his final work for the musical theatre and who is actually the central character in this work.

Dolmetsch, whose weekly column of musical opinions and reviews, "Soundings," appears in the Virginia Gazette, will discuss the musical and dramatic content and the performance history of the opera. Dolmetsch is also a staff contributor to several opera magazines.

Stephen Potorti, a senior studying piano, will play excerpts from the score to illustrate the musical highlights of the opera.

Mrs. Major Dies

We have been informed of the death, Jan. 6, in Amherst, Ma., of Mrs. Jean Stewart Major, 93, a former member of the home economics department of the College.

Born in Coitsville, Ohio, Mrs. Major taught at the College until her retirement in 1928 as professor emeritus.

She was a graduate of Columbia University, receiving B.S. and M.A. degrees in 1928.

Survivors include a nephew, Robert D. Stewart, Amherst, Ma., and a niece, Mrs. Barbara Stewart Musgrave, 40 Hobart Lane, Apt. 11, Amherst, Ma. 01002.

Music Recitals Set This Week

The music department will present two senior recitals during the coming week.

Clarinetist Susan Anderson, a business management major from Springfield, will present her senior recital at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 28, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Her program will include works by Brahms, Bartok and Hindemith.

Assisting Anderson will be Laurie Gescheider, piano; Elnore Andersen, violin; and winds of the William and Mary College-Community orchestra.

Anderson is planning a career in orchestra management and has worked for the American Symphony Orchestra League, the Washington Opera and the Shenandoah Music Festival.

Ann Hoyt, soprano, a music and sociology concentrator from Arlington, will present her senior recital at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 27, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. She will be accompanied by Laurinda Nicholson, pianist.

Hoyt's program will include works by Schubert, Grieg, Berlioz and Mozart. Mrs. Marion Wilson of Williamsburg will appear as a guest artist, joining Hoyt for the Gloria by Ned Rorem for two sopranos.

Symphony Tonight

The Richmond Symphony, under the baton of Jacques Houtmann, will perform tonight, Feb. 26, at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall as part of the Concert Series.

Esther Vassar Enjoys Hectic Teaching Schedule

"It's Wednesday so this must be William and Mary."

Esther Vassar doesn't quite have the difficulties of keeping track of time and place that an international traveler does but her "split shift" working schedule does take careful planning.

Mrs. Vassar is a member of the faculty here and at Hampton Institute. During the half time that she is at William and Mary she is both teacher and administrator. She works with the Office of Minority Affairs and the English department and, more recently, the Project Plus program. At Hampton Institute she is an English instructor.

Mrs. Vassar manages to keep her schedule straight and says she rather enjoys the opportunity to be both administrator and teacher. She feels it is good for teachers to be exposed to administrative problems, and for administrators to keep in touch with students through teaching. Mrs. Vassar shrugs off the complications of her schedule; after all, she chose it over four full time jobs she was offered when she moved to the area.

The wife of Bobby Vassar, executive director of the Peninsula Legal Aid program, and mother of Banyon, aged 5 1/2, she began her teaching career in the public schools of Washington, D.C., and Charlottesville and has also taught at Hollins College, where she was both teacher and administrator; at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, she taught Afro-American Studies and at St. Augustine's College in Raleigh, N.C. She has also taught at her Alma Mater, Howard University.

Mrs. Vassar has a B.A. degree from Howard, and an M.A. degree from the University of Virginia. She has also studied at the D.C. Teacher's College and Tennessee A&I State University.

Mrs. Vassar keeps her administrative and teaching paperwork separated on each side of her desk. On the administrative side is correspondence pertaining to projects for the Black Student Organization and Delta Sigma Theta sorority. Both groups actively sponsored the recent Black Heritage Celebration program which Mrs. Vassar coordinated. She is working now on details of the visit of Dr. Edward E. Azar of the political science department, University of North Carolina, who will speak March 13, at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Sit 'n Bull Room, on "Who's Winning in the Middle East?"

When she is on campus, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Mrs. Vassar's door is always open to students who want to drop in to discuss something with her or just say hello.

This interaction, says Mrs. Vassar, is one of the pluses of the teaching profession.

"There is nothing more honorable than the profession of teaching," she asserts, "although it is a profession that society doesn't give great honor to."

"If a teacher does her job well, there are rewards that can't be taken away from her," she says. "How often does a lawyer get a client coming by just to say hello and doctors are always afraid that a phone call means someone who is looking for free medical advice. . . . Teachers have been giving advice free of charge for years," she adds.

Mrs. Vassar came to teaching because in her hometown of Newport, Tenn., "That was what you were supposed to do if you were a woman and were Black. It was alright to teach and there were more teacher role models than any other professionals. We did have one Black doctor but there were no Black lawyers; most Black professionals were teachers.

"I sometimes wonder what I would have been if I had not been brought up in Newport and had not been Black but I am very satisfied with what I am. I like this stage of my life. I couldn't be happier. I don't even care to think about what it would be like to be 21 again."

While campus work takes a large chunk of her time, Mrs. Vassar is planning to take a course in watercolors to renew a childhood fondness for painting. Now she confines her art to homemade birthday cards for her son Banyon.

She had an early desire to study art but an incident in grade school produced a negative association which turned her away. When she was in the fifth grade in Newport she entered a painting of Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane in a three-state competition and won second prize, $10 and a free dinner for herself and her parents at the local hotel. The judges, however, did not know she was Black, so her teacher was selected to accompany her to the hotel instead of her parents.

Mrs. Vassar is currently teaching a course on the Black woman in Project Plus. She draws on her own experiences and has her students read nine books as well as plays that reveal the role of Black women in different life styles. She says she has been pleased with the lively interchange of ideas she has with students and says many have told her they enrolled in the course to dispel myths they had inherited or collected about the Black women.

"They are not afraid to talk about their image of the Black woman in the stereotype of the matriarch, the aggressive, assertive individual. For many, she added, it is their first encounter with a Black teacher. Most of her students are white, half of them are men.

Vassar

"When they tell me they want to understand Black women I tell them I can't help them--that's too tall an order. I tell them not to generalize, to judge each person on his or her own personality, profession and position and everything will work out fine."

While there is a lot of discussion in class, Mrs. Vassar says, "It takes more than a soft couch and an informal session to learn." The Project Plus class is currently comparing and contrasting the characters in two plays they have read, "River Niger" and "Raisin in the Sun." Next students will take a look into the role of the Black woman in effecting social change.

Mrs. Vassar has been teaching for the past 13 years, and she retains an enthusiasm and spontaneity which reflect her love of teaching. Last semester she taught freshman English. "Students expect to dislike a course like this," she said. "It is my job to make them like it and appreciate its content so they will benefit from it."

She says she has been around long enough not to be surprised by students, either by their brightness or, in some cases, by their irresponsibility. The students here are as bright as she thought they would be. "I always expect, from each teaching assignment, some joys and some problems."

The State of the Art in Disaster Reporting Is Studied by Sociologist Gary Kreps

When people read a newspaper, tune in on their radios or switch on the television to follow the latest developments in a disaster, whose responsibility is it if the information they receive is wrong?

That is one of many questions that the National Academy of Science (NAS) Committee on Disasters and the Mass Media recently asked Gary A. Kreps, associate professor of sociology.

Kreps was selected by the committee to serve as a consultant to its two-year study of the mass media's role in disaster reporting. Funded by the National Science Foundation, the study stemmed in part from earlier research pinpointing the key part communications media play in influencing the behavior of individuals and organizations in all phases of disasters.

Kreps was one of several experts presenting papers at a committee workshop held in Washington, D.C. to explore issues relating to disaster reporting research. Kreps' paper on "The State of the Art of Disaster Reporting" focused in part on the case against the media. Reporters have been accused of inaccurately documenting the impact of disasters, of exaggerating dramatic or sudden happenings, and of conveying false images about disaster behavior.

To Kreps, such disaster situations are too complex to simply make the mass media "a collective scapegoat." He describes natural and man-made disasters as "stressful and uncertain situations in which reporters try to document quickly what is happening."

Using the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant incident as an example, Kreps says, "I view it as having been a highly uncertain situation, and the media conveyed this uncertainty--at the same time, there was strong pressure on the media to give accurate information."

Kreps adds that the mass media professionals and social science researchers often have different perspectives about disasters and disaster reporting. Kreps remembers that at one workshop, an editor asked the other participants whether they could understand the pressures of meeting newspaper deadlines.

One controversial topic Kreps does not plan to dwell on is victim exploitation by reporters eager for a story. "I don't see that it's that important to do research on the way reporters or even researchers handle victims," he says. "The idea of exploitation can be overstated--sometimes it's even therapeutic for the victims."

Kreps notes, "It's more important to look at things like accuracy of reporting and seeing what role the media play in disseminating information about hazards." He says there is increased attention being paid to the mass media as key factors in disaster predictions and warnings. The media can be used to link the public and such agencies as the National Weather Service more efficiently than other means of communication. Already, Kreps says, newspapers and broadcasters have improved their techniques of providing information on emergency precautions for hurricanes, tornadoes and floods.

Yet no matter how efficiently the news is communicated, there is no guarantee that people will react quickly, even if their own lives are in danger. "The message can get through, but it doesn't mean people will respond. There are strong reasons why people just don't leave an area in an emergency, and people also don't like to think about or plan for disasters in advance."

Luncheon Programs Slated By Women in Business

The Women in Business Program at the College will sponsor two Friday noon luncheon programs, March 14 and 21, at the Hospitality House.

"Business and Its Responsibility to the Family" will be the topic of the March 14 program. Principal speaker will be Jake Mascotte, business executive in residence at the College during the month of March. He is Executive Vice President of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Kansas City, Mo., with a background in banking and tax accounting. While at William and Mary he is teaching a course entitled "Business, Values, and Religion," in cooperation with the department of religion.

Barbra Holt, president and founder of Barbra Holt Associates, Inc., a New York City based executive recruiting and consulting firm, will speak on "Corporate Good and Personal Welfare: Creating a Humane Environment," on March 21.

The cost of each luncheon program is $8 and reservations should be made with Julia Leverenz, director of the Women in Business Program at the School of Business Administration, by March 10. Further information may be obtained by calling Ms. Leverenz at 253-4286.

The Women in Business Program at the College is supported by grants from IBM Corporation and the International Paper Company Foundation.

Buchwald, Cooke, Mott, Torrens To Get Degrees

a performer on records, on television and before audiences across the nation.

John Warren Cooke was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates from 1942 until his retirement this year, and he served as Speaker of the House from 1968 until his retirement.

A member of the Democratic Party, Cooke was born in Mathews, Virginia, where he now lives. He is the director of the United Virginia Bank of Gloucester and is also the president of Tidewater Newspapers, Inc.

Sir Neville Mott, a native of England, is a recognized leader in the field of physics. He was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1977 and is a pioneer in the energy-related field of amorphous semiconductors.

In addition to the Nobel prize, Mott has received numerous other awards and honors for his lifelong work as researcher, educator and author. He taught physics and mathematics in England at the University of Bristol and at Cambridge University, where he was the head of the Cavendish Laboratory for 20 years. He is currently a professor at the Cavendish Laboratory.

Rafael Torrens is a former Speaker of the House of Representatives in Puerto Rico, and he is presently an advisor to the Governor of Puerto Rico, particularly in the movement toward statehood for the Island.

Following graduation from the College, Torrens studied art and law before he received his medical degree from Yale University. He has written a number of books, papers and articles on philosophy and art. Torrens is a member of the Puerto Rico Council of Higher Education, which governs all institutions of higher learning in Puerto Rico, and he recently retired as a Professor of Medicine at the University of Puerto Rico.

Commencement exercises are at 2 p.m. in William and Mary Hall. Approximately 1600 graduate and undergraduate students will receive diplomas.

Faculty Selected To Serve On Scholarship Board

Two faculty members, Jewel L. DeLaune, School of Education, and Robert P. Maccubbin, English, have been invited to serve on the Student Selection Board for a scholarship-intern program which is being established by the Daily Press, Inc., to assist qualified Black journalism students from the Newport News-Hampton standard metropolitan statistical area, which includes Gloucester, Williamsburg, James City County, Newport News, Hampton, York County and Poquoson.

The program will provide one $2,500 scholarship grant to a qualified Black student at each of the following schools for each of the next five school years: Hampton Institute; Howard University; Virginia Commonwealth University; and one accredited journalism school of choice.

Each scholarship recipient will also be offered at least one summer internship of ten weeks duration, with pay, between either the sophomore and junior years or junior and senior years.

Candidates will be screened by the selection committee which will include two educators from Hampton Institute, Howard University, Virginia Commonwealth University and William and Mary, and one from Christopher Newport College.

"The purpose of this most worthwhile program is to stimulate an interest in journalism among, and provide aid to, qualified Black students from our circulation area with an aim toward increasing minority representation on the news staffs of The Daily Press and The Times Herald," says N. L. Freeman, general manager of The Daily Press.

Marshall-Wythe Hall be renamed St. George Tucker Hall after the Law School moves to its new site. It rescinded a portion of a previous resolution that had named the Law School Building after President Tyler, primarily because Tyler Residence Hall will not be razed for another two to three years.

The Board established two new endowment funds, the Harry L. Blair Scholarship Endowment Fund and the William S. Hoge, Jr. and Philip W. Hiden Memorial Fellowship Endowment Fund.

In addition, the Board announced who will receive honorary degrees at the May Commencement exercises (see related story on page one). It also approved setting up special funds to receive donations specifically meeting an NEH challenge, and approved a revised budget for endowment income and expendable private funds (see resolutions on page three).

Increased Mileage Rate for Official Vehicle Use

The user rate for state-owned pool vehicles has increased from 13 to 17 cents per mile.

This increased rate for state-owned vehicles was directed by Harold C. King, chairman of the Central Garage car pool committee in a letter February 5. He cited executive order 31 - regulations governing certain state-owned vehicles, as the authority for the above rate increase. This change is necessary to fully recover the increasing costs of operation, depreciation and additions to the fleet of state-owned pool vehicles.

This new rate increase is proportioned as follows: 11 cents for operation, 5 cents for depreciation and replacement and 1 cent for capital revenue.

Please revise your Administrative Procedure Manual on Travel Regulations 3.4.1 Page 6, by inserting the above changes where applicable.

The increased rate for personal-owned vehicles used for official College business has not been increased, and is still 15 cents per mile.

WORK OF WINOKURS

"Small Spaces," above, is a porcelain landscape 6" x 8", unglazed, red and grey sulfates, part of the exhibit of work by Robert and Paula Winokur, currently in Andrews Gallery until March 14. The gallery is open daily, Monday-Friday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Educators and CENTEX Team For Seminar Series

A seminar series of gifted/talented entitled "Problems in Education: Seminar in Gifted Education" is being offered as a graduate course by the School of Education in cooperation with CENTEX (Center for Excellence, Inc.)

Project Gett-Up (Gifted Education Via Telecommunications), an inservice training telecommunications production, broadcasts once a week via two-way interactive television to five school divisions and three private schools. Prominent leaders in the field of gifted talented from around the nation present lectures in their area of specialty to teachers in Hampton, Newport News, Poquoson, Williamsburg-James City County and York County. Teachers are able to respond to the consultant "face to face" about issues concerning the gifted/talented in education via the conference telephone system.

James Yankovich, dean of the School of Education, is pleased with the content of the course. "The gifted talented is a new and emerging field in education; consequently, literature is not well settled. At this time, we could not afford to bring in 16 experts in the field."

"The medium is one of the unique features of the course because it allows the course to be broadcast to multiple sites," Yankovich says. He also feels that one important consideration in the use of this medium is the saving of time and fuel for the student.

Over the next several weeks educators will gain inservice education, three hours of graduate credit from William and Mary or three hours of non-college certificate renewal. They will hear from leaders such as Dr. Joseph Renzuli, professor of educational psychology, School of Education, University of Connecticut, Director of Teaching Talent Program of the Bureau of Educational Research; Dr. Sidney Parnes, professor of creative studies, Director of Interdisciplinary Center for Creative Studies, Buffalo State University; and Dr. Donald Treffinger, Leader of Creative Problem Solving Institute and professor of creative studies (SUNY) at Buffalo, and a member of the Executive Board of National Association of Gifted Children, Director U.S.O.E. Office on Gifted and Talented.

They will address concerns on characteristics and identification, program design, curriculum development, teaching strategies, and evaluation of the gifted/talented.

This project is funded with a $54,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education and was developed by the York County gifted and talented program coordinator, Joan Byrne.

Writing Project Set for Summer

The Eastern Virginia Writing Project, one of six sites in the Virginia Writing Project, will begin its second-year of operation with a five week writing institute for 25 selected teachers on June 16. The project is designed to improve the writing and the teaching of writing K-12 for teachers in Tidewater school divisions.

Mark Gulesian, associate professor of English/Education, and Lynn Bloom, associate professor of English, are co-directors of the Institute. Application information may be obtained from Mark Gulesian or by calling ext. 4524. The deadline for applying is March 15.

Teachers who participate in the institute will receive six hours of graduate credit, a $200 stipend, and, if sponsored by their school division, paid tuition.

The Project is funded by Title IV-C, Elementary and Secondary Education Act, State Department of Education.
