Shakespeare Festival Announces Summer Season

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival will offer theatregoers three popular and strikingly diverse plays by William Shakespeare--Julius Caesar, The Tempest, and Two Gentlemen of Verona--during its 1981 season here on campus.

"We want to offer three very different productions this year," said festival director Kent Thompson of the 1981 selections. "We think the audiences will appreciate this and find the plays even more exciting."

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival, now in its fourth year, will present the three productions in repertory nightly except Mondays from Thursday, July 9 through Sunday, August 16.

In deciding on the 1981 season, Thompson said he was anxious for the Festival to offer one of Shakespeare's histories or tragedies. "Julius Caesar was the perfect choice because it's so well-known and has so much pageantry and spectacle," he said.

Because Julius Caesar will be the largest scale production every done by the Festival, many local volunteers will be needed to fill both speaking roles and crowd scenes, said Thompson. Julius Caesar will open the 1981 Festival season July 9.

The Tempest, which opens Tuesday, July 14, will provide the largest artistic and technical challenge ever encountered by the Festival, according to Thompson. "The challenge will be good for us," he said. "We must continue to grow artistically in order to satisfy our growing audience."

Thompson said he will hire a guest artist to play the role of Prospero, the powerful main character in The Tempest.

Rounding out the season will be Two Gentlemen of Verona, an early Shakespearean comedy which opens Friday, July 17. "The play is colorful, physical, and a lot of fun to watch and to produce," said Thompson.

The play is also one of Shakespeare's most popular comedies. Joseph Papp's musical adaptation of the play, Two Gentlemen, enjoyed a successful Broadway run several years ago and is still performed in regional theatres.

The Festival will continue to offer special programs for the public during the 1981 season, including weekly audience discussions after each Wednesday performance, two children's Sunday matinees with theatre tours, and a senior citizens' matinee.

"Over 16,000 people attended the Festival last year," said Thompson. "I think the 1981 season will attract an even bigger audience, especially if we stick to our major goals; providing the public with the highest quality productions of Shakespeare possible and serving as an entry-level showplace for some of the finest young professional actors in the country."

Opening January 28

Cast members in rehearsal for the upcoming production of "The Mikado," by Gilbert and Sullivan which will be presented Jan. 28-Jan. 31 by the Sinfonicon Opera Company, strike a pose as "gentlemen of Japan." Performances will be given nightly at 8:15 p.m., in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Tickets are $3.50; $2.50 for students.

National Prize Won by SCJ

The College's chapter of the Society for Collegiate Journalists has been named the outstanding chapter in the nation and winner of the Edward E. McDonald Chapter Achievement Award.

The William and Mary chapter was ranked first in the nation by four of the five judges in the competition. William and Mary scored an average of 431 points out of a possible 500 with second place going to Fort Hays State University in Hays, Kan.

According to Wilford Kale, bureau chief of the Richmond Times Dispatch in Williamsburg, and chapter adviser, the three students most responsible for the chapter's strong showing in competition were Anne Gornet '80, of St. Louis, past president; George Stukenbroeker '80, a staff writer for the Daily Press, and Caroline Bolte '81 of Dewitt, Va., and currently vice president of the chapter.

The Journalist in Residence program, a strong recruitment effort to form new chapters at other colleges and revitalization of the Raft Debate were instrumental in earning the chapter its award.

College May Get Bonuses

Governor Dalton has recommended to the 1981 General Assembly session several appropriations that will, if enacted, affect William and Mary.

They include:

- $5,035,460 to enable the State to pay its share of an average 9% salary increase for faculty across the state;
- $31,418,595 to raise classified employees' salaries throughout the state by 9% effective July 1;
- $1,000,000 to increase by 50% the amount available during the current budget biennium to correct asbestos hazards in state-owned buildings.
- $10,000 as the state's share of costs of preparation of a proposal to locate an accelerator laboratory in Virginia under sponsorship of the Southeastern Universities Research Association, a consortium which William and Mary physicists helped form;

--$1,780,000 to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science to support operating expenses for the second year of the biennium, over its ordinary appropriation. A provision is made that VIMS will apply all available indirect cost recovery funds to reduce its deficit, to the maximum extent possible.

Details of employee and faculty salary increases are not outlined in the Governor's recommendations. The funds come from an anticipated general fund surplus.

Law Scholars Set Conference

Four members of the state and federal judiciary and four legal scholars will meet on Jan. 23 and 24 at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law to discuss issues facing the state and federal courts, including topics such as overlapping jurisdiction, making the state courts more hospitable, and the role of the state courts in enforcing the federal Constitution.

The symposium, titled, "State Courts and Federalism in the 1980s," is sponsored by the Law School and the National Center for State Courts. Transcripts of the presentations will appear in a special issue of the school's Law Review.

Participants from the academic community are Paul Bator and Martha A. Field of the Harvard University Law School; Burt Neuborne of the New York University School of Law; and Robert M. Cover of the Yale University Law School.

Representing the federal judiciary will be Judge Ruggero J. Aldisert of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and Judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., of the Eastern District of Virginia. Chief Justice Robert J. Sheran of the Minnesota Supreme Court and Judge Sandra D. O'Connor of the Superior Court of Maricopa County (Ariz.) will represent the state courts.

Law Review Article Focuses on Anne Boleyn Trial

Could an exceptional lawyer - Perry Mason or F. Lee Bailey - have saved Henry VIII's wife, Anne Boleyn, from the headsman's axe?

Probably not. Not even as the firm of "Mason and Bailey" unless they could have spirited her into the 20th century in a time machine. Once accused of treason in Tudor England, the prisoner's fate was sealed.

Frederick Schauer, Cutler Professor of Law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary, and his wife, Margery Stone Schauer, have taken a fresh look at this famous trial in a collaborated article in the latest issue of the William and Mary Law Review.

The idea for the article came initially from Mrs. Schauer, who recently completed a manuscript for a book about the early life of Anne Boleyn entitled "Touch Me Not." The Public Broadcasting System's TV series on the wives of Henry VIII served to give the Schauers another nudge. Mrs. Schauer took on the historical approach and her husband the legal view.

Scholars have, at different times, either focused on the trial to learn more about legal principles, procedures and institutions in Tudor England, or regarded the trial as a political event with very little relevance to the history of legal institutions. The Schauers have sought to show the interaction of both politics and law in their article, which is entitled "Law as the Engine of State: The Trial of Anne Boleyn.;"

"The treason trials of Tudor England, although they may not have exemplified much attention to modern day due process, were still trials," maintain the Schauers, who point out that when the law is used as an engine of the state for political expediency, as in the case of Anne Boleyn, the case explains as much about law as about the state.

Anne Boleyn, the second wife of Henry VIII, was accused of treason against the King in 1536, found guilty and beheaded. Henry VIII wanted to be rid of Anne so he could marry again. He could not achieve his freedom through political maneuvers or through the Church, but he knew a trial for treason would end in her death. The Schauers caution that Henry's action must be viewed with an understanding of the times. "Henry VIII's reign was not nearly so uncontrolled or entrenched as is often assumed," they write. "The kings possessed nothing like the modern standing army, and their power depended in large upon favorable public opinion. One very important purpose of the trial of Anne Boleyn was to convince the people that she was guilty and that her fate was justified. If the trial was not a complete success in this regard, it nonetheless was more persuasive than the evidence itself could justify."

Collaborating on the article was an interesting experience, both Schauers agree. The manuscript went back and forth between them for about three and a half years. On leave for a year for study at Cambridge, England, Schauer did a great deal of research into the trial. Mrs. Schauer had earlier retraced Anne's steps as a young girl in France for her book. Mrs. Schauer admits there were times when she wished her husband had used a lighter touch with his editing. She would like to have seen more of the colorful characterization of the heroine included.

"I excised some of the adjectives," explained Schauer. "He took out all my adjectives," replied Mrs. Schauer. "I got to describe Anne fully in one sentence."

"I got interested in Anne Boleyn because she was included in a novel I was reading," said Mrs. Schauer. "There was something about the way she was presented that was very haunting to me. I wondered how she became the woman she was. No one had ever dealt with that before so I decided to write about her early life."

Mr. and Mrs. Schauer use reference volumes in the Rare Book Room at the new Marshall-Wythe Law School building.

"I dealt with the seven years she spent growing up in the court in France and ended my book with her on her way back to England. She was 14 then - no 14½ - that's important when you have a short life. She was 28 when she died."

"I always knew she was not nice at all, but I never lost the view that she didn't deserve to have her head cut off just because she was such a rotten person."

Mrs. Schauer is now researching another book, this one on Katharine of Aragon.

"The trial of Anne Boleyn, as well as the other state trials of that time, was inseparable from the power and politics of the state," conclude the Schauers.

"Law, like armies, was an engine of the state, not a mechanism for justice. The evil of the state trials is only in small part the problem of factually innocent people being frequently executed." The greater harm, they assert, is that the trials established "a connection between legal procedures and political power that could help only to reinforce scepticism about the law and the procedures employed."

"When law is used as the agent of raw political will, law is weakened as political power is strengthened ..." the writers contend.

Will the Schauers collaborate again? They exchange glances and smile. Not right away, as both have their individual commitments, but maybe sometime in the future "if the right vehicle comes along." Currently Mrs. Schauer is working on her new book and Professor Schauer has a publisher's contract for a book on the philosophy of law.

"It is hard," says Professor Schauer. "to look at the proceedings of Anne's trial with 20th century eyes and see it as a 'fair trial.' By our standards, it was not. Today, in light of the death penalty, all precautions would be taken to insure that no innocent person was executed. In Tudor times, it was important that no one accused of treason escape - better a few innocent heads roll than one guilty one escape..."

In Tudor time Continued on P. 4 was routinely used. Threats of torture and promises of rewards were used to get information on an accused.

ROTC Scholarships

The Professor of Military Science is now offering to students who are not enrolled in ROTC an opportunity to apply for an Army 2-year scholarship.

This is a special program which permits the Professor of Military Science to identify outstanding students on campus and to offer them the opportunity to compete for an ROTC scholarship.

If you meet the eligibility requirements listed below, stop by Room 1, Blow Gym, and pick up an application package!

A citizen of the United States.

Under 25 years of age on 30 June of the calendar year in which eligible for graduation.

Radcliffe Publishing Course

The William Cross Ferguson - Harry L. Blair Graduate Scholarship for the Radcliffe College Summer Course in Publishing Procedures is awarded each year to one William and Mary senior or recent graduate. The scholarship is for $1,500 to be applied toward the cost of the course ($2,020 in 1981). Selection for the scholarship assures admission to the course. The scholarship is administered by the William and Mary Committee on Training in Publishing Procedures.

The Radcliffe Publishing Procedures Course is a six-week intensive professional program taught principally by eminent publishing executives. The course is generally recognized as the surest entrance to a career in book and magazine publishing as well as the most effective publishing training program now in existence. The course is held in Cambridge, Massachusetts, from June 29 to August 7, 1981.

The deadline for submitting completed applications to the Committee on Training in Publishing Procedures is 5 p.m., Wednesday, 4 February 1981, but interested students are encouraged to complete their applications as soon as possible. Applicants may be from any academic concentration, but should have a demonstrable and serious interest in a publishing career, whether in the design, production, editing, or sales. Announcement of the award will be made by 6 March.

Application forms may be obtained at the Office of Career Planning, Morton Hall 140. Information about the course is available at the office as well.

Ambassador Opens P.P. Forums

The Ambassador to the United States from Tanzania, Paul Bomani, and author Michael Harrington are among the guests who will speak at Project Plus Forum programs scheduled for the spring semester.

The weekly Forum is one element in the academic and residential program of Project Plus. The program topics are tied into the overall theme of Project Plus this year, "Food and Energy: Problems of Scarcity in a Hungry World."

Bomani will speak on "Conquest of World Hunger and Poverty: The View from Within," at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 28 in Millington Hall auditorium; Harrington will speak Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Ambassador Bomani has been actively involved in the development of his country since its independence. He has served as Tanzanian Minister of Agriculture and Cooperative Development, Minister of Finance, and Minister of Economic Affairs and Development Planning. He was a member of the delegation to independence settlement with the British government which negotiated independence for Tanganyika in 1961 and is co-author of the recently published book, "Conquest of World Hunger and Poverty."

Harrington, one of America's foremost Socialists, was chairman of the Socialist Party in the United States from 1968-72. He is also distinguished for his articulate and critical written analyses of national and world problems. His books include: "The Other America; The Twilight of Capitalism," "The Vast Majority: A Journey to the World's Poor," and "Decade of Decision: The Crises of the American System."

The Forum on Feb. 4 will feature a PBS documentary film, "Within Our Power," which deals with the effort of the poor population of Franklin County, MA, to determine and reduce their consumption of energy. Commentary will be provided by Hans vonBaeyer, professor of physics and director of the Virginia Associated Research Campus, VARC, in Newport News.

Senator Aquino Here Jan. 27

Senator Benigno Aquino, Jr., of the Republic of the Philippines, who spent seven years in prison for his defense of human rights, will speak at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 27 in the Campus Center Ballroom.

Aquino will give a talk on the meaning and substance of freedom and democracy based on his experiences in the Philippines.

Currently, Aquino is a Writing Fellow at Harvard's Institute of International Studies. He is also a lecturer at the John F. Kennedy School of Business Administration at Harvard.

Now 48, Aquino was 17 when he was a war correspondent for the Manila Times during the Korean conflict. He subsequently entered politics, became mayor of his hometown, governor of his province of Tarlac and the youngest senator of the Philippines. At present, he is secretary-general of the Philippines Liberal Party.

The International Circle at the College, one of the sponsors of Senator Aquino's campus visit, is listing his talk as the first Mahatma Gandhi Freedom Lecture. Sponsors also include the departments of anthropology and government, Asia House, the Asia Society and the Anthropology Club.

CCS Presenting Vintage Flicks

"Spellbound," the 1945 film thriller with Ingrid Bergman, is the next movie to be presented by the Cinema Classics Society which is offering a full semester of classics for a season ticket price of $12 for students; $15 for non-students. Single admission is $2 per film. Additional information may be obtained from Wayne Taylor, ext. 4275.

Films are screened in Millington auditorium at 8 p.m.

Taylor says that in addition to the announced schedule there will be some bonuses for patrons. He is hoping to show a Vincent Price double feature just prior to the appearance of Price on campus, Feb. 25. In April, a Woody Allen festival is planned.

Films scheduled this semester include the following: "All Quiet on the Western Front," (1930), Feb. 1; "My Man Godfrey," (1936), Feb. 8; "Great Expectations," (1947), Feb. 15; "Lost Horizon," (1937), Feb. 22; "Scarface," (1932), March 1; "Henry V," (1946), March 22; and "Sullivan's Travels," (1941), March 29.

Switzer/Williams to Play Jan. 25

Matthew Switzer, cellist, and Christine Anderson Williams, pianist, will present a recital Jan. 25 at 8:15 p.m. in Ewell 100.

The program will feature music of Beethoven, Debussy, Hindemith, and Tchaikovsky.

Mrs. Williams is a graduate of Duke University and holds a master's degree in piano performance from the Manhattan School of Music.

Switzer is a former member of the Richmond Symphony and is currently studying in New York with David Soyer, cellist in the Guarneri Quartet and faculty member of the Curtis Institute.

The recital is open to the public; admission is free.

Also "Morocco," (1930), April 5; "Red Dust," (1932), April 12; "Eastern Parade," (1949), April 19; and "The Talk of the Town," (1942), April 26.

Olshansky Coming to Speak, Jan. 21

Norman Olshansky, director of the Virginia-North Carolina office of the Anti-Defamation League, will discuss "Current Patterns of Racism and Anti-Semitism in Virginia," at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 21, in Rooms A and B of the Campus Center.

Olshansky will devote special attention to the activities of such extremist hate groups as the Klan and the Neo-Nazis.

Olshansky, who studied at William and Mary and Virginia Commonwealth University, earned an M.S. in social work from Wayne State University in Detroit. He was named Social Worker of the Year in 1973 by the Oakland County, Michigan chapter of the National Association of Social Workers. He joined ADL in 1978.

Olshansky's talk is sponsored by the Hillel organization at William and Mary and the Office of Minority Affairs.

Tudor Trial Dooms Queen

Evidence was altered before it was presented in court. Anne was imprisoned when accused and kept locked away from visitors before her trial. She was not allowed to see a list of the charges against her before the trial. She was her own counsel. Schauer explains that as scandalous as these practices appear in light of modern legal procedures, they were the accepted procedure then and Anne received no more, no less, than anyone else on trial for treason.

"I look at the trial from a legal and philosophical perspective," says Schauer. "Just because you call something a trial, it may not serve the same purpose as what we think of a trial serving today. We have tried to expose the differences between what may on the surface look like similar procedures but which are, at a deeper level, procedures designed to serve different purposes. We also suggest that when you are conducting a trial where the result is preordained or determined, it causes serious damage to the idea of having trials and the idea of having laws, and it would have been better, in the case of Anne Boleyn, to have saved the expense of the trial, if you can take as a given that she was going to have her head cut off. It would have been better, in terms of respect for legal institutions and the development of law, if they had just cut her head off rather than claim that it was a balanced trial."

TV Appearance

Dr. and Mrs. Schauer will be interviewed about their article on the Good Morning Show over WWBT-TV, Channel 12 at 10:45 a.m., Thursday, Jan. 29.

Organ Recital

Dr. Peter Williams, lecturer in music at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland and an international authority on the organ, both as a performer and scholar, will present a recital of organ music at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 21 at the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church on Richmond Road.

The recital is being sponsored by the music department and the Sunday Concert Series. The recital is open to the public free of charge.

As director of the Russell Collection of harpsichords and clavichords in Edinburgh, Williams supervises one of the great collections of keyboard instruments in the world.

Published weekly by the Office of University Communications during the academic year, except when the College is in recess, and twice each month in June, July and August.
