Spring Literary Festival Opens Monday, March 23

The College of William and Mary's Spring Literary Festival '81, supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, will be held on campus March 23-26 with several nationally known writers as guest participants.

John McPhee, writer for the New Yorker; Robert Coover, novelist and playwright, currently teaching at Brown University; Mary Lee Settle, winner of the 1978 National Book Award for fiction; and Alexis DeVeaux, poetry editor of Essence magazine, are among writers who will participate in the Festival.

William and Mary's writer-in-residence, Stephen Marlowe, and Joanne Braxton, a member of the English faculty who has published two works of poetry and a documentary collection of Afro-American slave music, will also be participants.

One portion of the program will be devoted to the Poetry-in-the-Schools program and speakers will include Gary Sange, professor of English at Virginia Commonwealth University; Sally Sange, poet-in-residence for the King William Public Schools; and Ruby Lee Norris, coordinator of the Poetry-in-the-Schools program in Henrico County.

The Festival will open Monday evening with a reading by John McPhee at 8 p.m. in Andrews auditorium.

McPhee is the author of over a dozen books. His "Coming Into the Country" won the 1978 National Book Award. He is a noted environmentalist and was the recipient of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters award in 1977, the same year the "The John McPhee Reader" was published. Two of his books, "Encounters of the Archdruid" (1972), and "The Curve of Binding Energy" (1974), have been nominated for the National Book Award in the category of science.

"Conversation with John McPhee" is scheduled for 1 p.m., Tuesday, March 24 in the Campus Center.

Tuesday evening, Robert Coover and Mary Lee Settle will give a reading at 8 p.m. in Andrews Auditorium. Coover's recent work, "The Public Burning," has received enormous critical attention. His first novel, "The Origin of the Brunists," won the 1966 William Faulkner Award for the best first novel of that year. In 1968 his "The Universal Baseball Association, J. Henry Waugh, Prop" appeared, and in 1969 he produced a collection of short stories.

Settle was winner of the 1978 National Book Award for fiction for her novel, "Blood Tie." She is the author of several other works including "The Scopes Trial" (1972), and most recently "The Scapegoat." She lives in Norfolk and teaches at the University of Virginia.

Coover and Settle will also be featured in "Conversations," at 1 p.m., Wednesday, March 25 in the Campus Center.

Also scheduled for Wednesday is a Poetry-in-the-Schools workshop and an evening program at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Little Theatre in which Alexis DeVeaux and Joanne Braxton will read from their works.

A poet, playwright and novelist, DeVeaux is the author of several plays including "Circle," and "A Season to Unravel," which was produced in 1979. Her books include "Spirits in the Street" (1973), and "na-ni," a children's book published in 1973 which won the Art Books for Children Award. Her latest book, "Don't Explain (A Song of Billie Holiday)," was published last year. She has also had several short stories published.

Braxton, currently a lecturer at William and Mary, is the author of "Sometimes I Think of Maryland" (1977), and "Songs of the Southern Slave." and currently has a book being prepared for publication at the University of Illinois as part of a Music in American Life series.

A "Grand Reading," with Ruby Lee Norris and Sally and Gary Sange will be held from 1 - 5 p.m., Thursday, March 26 at the Matoaka Shelter or in the Great Hall of the Wren Building in case of rain.

The final program of the Festival will be a reading by Steven Marlowe at 8 p.m. in Tucker Hall, room 120.

Marlowe, a William and Mary alumnus, inaugurated the Writer-in-Residence program at the College in 1974-75. He has published nine novels including "Colossus," a book about Goya; "Translation," a suspense novel of evil workings in New England; and "The Valkyrie Encounter," published in 1978, a fictionalized account, of the July 20, 1944 attack on the life of Adolf Hitler, based on a year of research in England and Germany. He is currently working on a long novel with both an academic and an international political setting.

The fifth annual writers festival is being planned by David Porush of the English faculty. The English department and the Committee on Lectures of the College as well as NEA are providing support for the program.

Hard Work is Trademark Of the Ebony Expressions

On a cold Tuesday night, while most of their classmates settle in for an evening of study at the library or kick back and relax in their dorms after a hard day of classes, a handful of college students trickles into a dimly lit basement room of the Campus Center.

Once they have all arrived, their laughing, teasing, and jiving stops and they join together in prayer. Then it is time for business. Their business is joy and music and they are called the Ebony Expressions.

Begun in 1975 as one student's idea for a musical project, the group has established itself as a dynamic outlet for William and Mary's black students. Originally called the Black Student Organization Choir, the group soon became the Ebony Expressions.

They are not a social service group. They receive no money from the College. They are organized, with a core group of officers, and they support themselves. The character of the group changes from year to year, as members graduate and new ones arrive. But their purpose stays the same. They come to sing.

"We've grown since things first started in 1975," says Mitzi Keyes, a senior sociology major at the College and director of this year's 21-member group. "We've got more dedication now, but we've kept the same purpose in mind. We started out as a group of in mind. We started out as a group of black people who wanted to get together and sing, and that's what we still are."

The music they sing ranges from soft and soulful to bright and glorious. "One thing that makes us unique is our variety," says Keyes. "We do contemporary, spiritual, and gospel. We're looking for another musician besides our pianist. I'd really like to have a drummer."

The group recently performed at ceremonies marking Black History Month. They will take part in the College's talent show on March 21, and will sing for the campus Circle K group on March 28. Then comes their key performance at an April 10th spring concert, where they will present about 10 numbers.

"Our dedication wouldn't be the same if all we did was rehearse and sing for ourselves," says Keyes. This sense of sharing their musical gift is stressed by Gilda Washington, a senior sociology major.

"When we sing for other people, we hope they get something out of it too," she says.

Sincere and earnest when they talk, even restrained, the members of the group burst into tight knots of feeling and sound when the music starts. After listening to a tape of the Commodores' "Jesus is Love," they plunge into their own version.

Keyes hands an extended solo to Roger Bailey, a senior chemistry major, while she eagerly shoots around the stage, bringing the group's choral "ooo's and ah's" together with Bailey's lead.

Ebony Expression members (L-R) Lynda Brown, Angela Taylor and Sharon Crumpton get into their music in a weekly rehearsal session.

Several Music Students Plan Senior Recitals During March

Steven B. Munson, a senior, will be heard in a concert of piano music at 8:15 p.m., Friday, March 20 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Munson, who is majoring in music and computer science, is presently in his fourth year of piano study and his fourth year as a member of the William and Mary Choir.

He has received the Carl A. Fehr Award for outstanding service to the Choir and is a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, honorary music fraternity.

He is a student of Christopher Kypros, who will conduct an orchestra of William and Mary students for the final number on the program, Concert No. 21, K. 467 by Mozart.

As soloist, Munson will play "La cathedrale engloutie," and "Feux d'artifice," by Debussy; and Etude, Op. 10, No. 12 and Ballade, Op. 23, both by Chopin.

Munson's recital is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Monday Concert

Amy Anne Stearns of Rye, N.Y., will present a senior organ recital at 8 p.m., Monday, March 23 at Bruton Parish Church.

Miss Stearns, a senior music concentrator at William and Mary, began studying organ during her freshman year with Edwin Godshall and for the past two years has been the pupil of James S. Darling, organist and choirmaster at Bruton Parish Church.

A member of Delta Omicron honorary music fraternity, Miss Stearns sings in the William and Mary choir and acts as historian for the group. In 1980 she was a recipient of a scholarship honoring Stephen Paleles a former member of the College's music faculty.

Miss Stearns has selected to play for her program Passacaglia in D minor by Buxtehude; Variations on "Est-ce Mars" by Jan Pieterzoon Sweelinck; Sonata No. 3 by Hindemith; and Prelude on "A Mighty Fortress" by Jan Bender.

Stephanie Raitch

Miss Stearns will also play three chorale preludes by Bach and Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

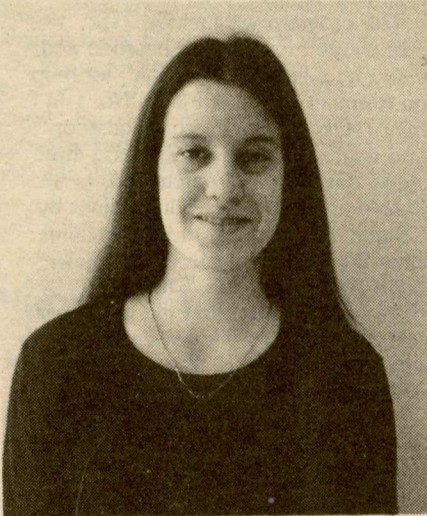

A reception will be held at the Parish House following the performance.

Geralds in PBK

Kathryn Lynn Geralds, a senior, will present a piano recital at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday, March 25 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

For the first half of her recital, Miss Geralds will play Brahms' Intermezzo Op. 117, No. 2; Beethoven's Sonata No. 30 in E major, Op. 109 and two selections from Barber's "Excursions."

The second half of the recital will feature Geralds as accompanist for several vocalists who will sing a selection of German, French, Spanish and American art songs as well as Italian and French arias. Guest vocalists, all students at the College, will be Paul Cohill, tenor; Valerie Fisher, soprano; Timothy MacGowan, baritone; and Beth Miller, mezzo-soprano.

Geralds is an active accompanist in the music department. Her experience includes chamber ensembles and pit orchestras as well as solo vocal and instrumental accompaniment.

A music major, Geralds is using the German art song composer Hugo Wolf as the focus of an honors research project in music. She is also studying song composition with Edgar Williams, assistant professor of music.

She is a member of Delta Omicron music fraternity and was one of last year's recipients of the Aurelia B. Walford music scholarship.

Raitch to Play

Stephanie Raitch, violinist, and former concertmistress for the Denbigh High School and the Peninsula Youth orchestras, will present her senior recital at the College of William and Mary, at 8:15 p.m., Saturday, March 21 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Miss Raitch's recital is open to the public without charge.

Miss Raitch, daughter of Mrs. Jean Raitch of Newport News, will play Sonata for violin and piano in G minor by Henry Eccles; Concerto No. 1 in G minor by Max Bruch; Gavotte from Partita No. 3 in E Major by Bach; "La fille aux cheveux de lin" by Debussy; Spanish Dance Op. 22, No. 3 by Pablo de Sarasate; and "Serenade Espagnole, Chaminade" by Fritz Kreisler.

Piano accompanist for Miss Raitch will be Thomas Marshall.

Miss Raitch is a music major and has studied violin with Dora Marshall Short for the past five years, four of them at William and Mary. She had dedicated the selection in her program by Debussy to Miss Short.

Miss Raitch was the concertmistress for the Denbigh High School orchestra for four years, and concertmistress for the Peninsula Youth Orchestra for one year. She received three scholarships for her work with the orchestras and

Business Students Corner the Soft Drink Market

When it comes to the competitive world of the soft drink industry, a team of students in the School of Business Administration proved that as tomorrow's entrepreneurs, they could give Coke a run for its money.

A team of nine undergraduates won first place in their industry's competition in the sixteenth annual Emory Business Management Game, in which 25 to 30 colleges and universities across the nation pit their business brains against a giant computer in a simulation of the real business world.

"Each year, Emory's computer simulates an industry and each school represents a business in that industry," said Jesse S. Tarleton, associate professor of business administration and faculty advisor for the team. "We had the best case presentation in our industry and also won the industry competition."

During the computer game, which lasts five and a half weeks, the competing schools are divided into six or seven groups to form mini-industrial communities and compete head-on with each other. Teams compete by solving tricky business problems and mailing the answers to Emory's computer.

"The student team acts as a business firm and make business decisions in four major areas: sales, production, marketing and finance," said Tarleton. Their decisions, made twice a week, are sent to the computer for analysis. The computer findings are analyzed by a panel of judges, which decides which business is strongest based on both objective and subjective criteria.

At the end of game play, all competing schools travel to Atlanta for the final round of competition. Although the William and Mary team blew away the competition in its industry group, the team barely missed winning the overall competition. "That will give us something to aim for next year," observed Tarleton.

Team members include Barry Lovell, president of the team's company and a senior from Poquoson; Ann Pearson, vice president of marketing for the team and a senior from Leesburg; Mike Neighbors, vice president of production and a senior from Williamsburg; and Karen Van de Castle, vice president of finance and a senior from Watchung, N.J.

VIMS Aircraft

Aircraft operations are a little known service available at the College's School of Marine Science, VIMS. For over five years VIMS has had the use of a DeHavilland Beaver airplane through a no-cost lease from the Navy. During that time the aircraft has been used on over 700 separate missions for a total in excess of 1,800 flight hours. The flights have been evenly split between scientific use such as aerial reconnaissance and photography and general transportation in the service of the Institute's research mission.

The Institute's Remote Sensing Center, within the Division of Physical Sciences, uses a 9-inch mapping camera or dual 70-mm Hasselblad cameras to photograph shoreline erosion, aquatic vegetation, algae blooms, and a number of other phenomena. Additionally the aerial capabilities are used to monitor wetlands permits and to map the movements of dye patches or oil slicks. The aircraft's usefulness in general transportation has been an unexpected benefit. VIMS scientists have been able to participate in conferences or meetings they would not have been able to attend without a great expense in travel time. Trips that would have required many hours of driving and nights away from home have been possible in a short day with the use of custom air-travel. Indeed, on several occasions, scientists have been able to take part in meetings at two or three widely separate locations on the same day by flying from one to the other. The aircrafts has also been used to rush live juvenile fish from sources as far away as the Hudson River for study and to carry priority supplies and replacement crews to research parties working away from home facilities. Aside from its normal operations the aircraft has taken part in emergency missions carrying food to Tangier Island when the customary supply routes were blocked by ice.

In the five years of operations, very few flights have been cancelled by unscheduled maintenance. Adverse weather, fog, low clouds, or thunderstorms, has caused the cancellation or rescheduling of some missions. The Institute's pilot, Sam White, is an instrument rated, commercial pilot with a rating for float planes as well as conventional single- and multi-engine aircraft. He has over 6,000 flight hours. Carl Hobbs, Supervisor of Flight Operations in addition to his normal responsibilities as an Assistant Professor, is a substitute pilot and instrument rated commercial pilot. Information concerning the Flight Operations capabilities, costs, and scheduling procedures can be obtained from Hobbs at 642-2111 or SCATS 644-6650, at extension 198.

Training Seminar - "Stress Management"

The Personnel Office is sponsoring a course on stress management in the working environment. Participants will learn to understand how stress can affect both physical and mental health, identify specific situations which lead to stress, how stress can and does affect job performance, and explore the various methods of coping with and productively managing stress.

This course is open for all interested employees of the College. The workshop will be held April 16 and 17 in the Sit 'n Bull Room of the Campus Center from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Lunch will be provided. The cost of this seminar will be $15 per participant and each participant's department will be responsible for this charge.

For further information and registration, interested individuals should contact Charla Cordle at ext. 4214 in the Personnel Office. Deadline for registration is April 1. Those interested are encouraged to register early as space is limited.

Requisitioning Cutoff Date

We have been notified by the Division of Purchases and Supply that April 30th is the cut-off date for receipt in Richmond of requisitions to be funded in this fiscal year. Requisitions affected are those exceeding $500.00 for supplies and equipment which must be processed by that office, or requisitions for printing or ADP equipment which exceed $200.00.

After April 30th only emergency requisitions will be considered as an exception and must be approved by the Assistant Vice-President for Business Affairs here and the Division Director of Purchases and Supply in Richmond.

In order to comply with the above, we ask that your requisitions be submitted to the College Purchasing Office not later than March 31, 1981. Hopefully this will allow enough administrative lead time, production, and delivery time to insure procurement, delivery and payment prior to June 30, 1981.

Urgent purchases of day-to-day supplies involving dollar values of up to $500.00 will be processed as necessary through June 5, 1981 if delivery is assured before June 30, 1981.

We trust that the schedules noted above will relieve a "log jam" of requisitions at the end of this fiscal year and prevent a reversion of funds because of undelivered supplies and equipment.

Any questions regarding these procedures should be referred to the Purchasing Office, Extensions 4215, 4279, and 4373.
