Visitors Committee Approves Target Budgets

The Executive Committee of the Board of Visitors, meeting on campus Tuesday, approved the target budget requested for the College in the amount of $90,144,000 for the 1982-84 biennium and an addendum budget of $3,863,700 for the biennium.

For educational and general budget requests, financial proposals are based on assigned targets of $29,569,700 for 1982-83 and $31,113,700 in 1983-84 or $60,683,400 for the biennium.

The 1982-83 amount is 12.07 percent more than is currently appropriated for 1981-82; the 1983-84 target is 5.22 percent greater than that for 1982-83.

In the addendum request, $3,863,700 is requested in the biennium ($1,266,700 in 1982-83 and $2,597,000 in 1983-84). The addendum request covers a 9 percent increase for faculty salaries in each year, instead of the 4.5 percent included in the target. Also in the addendum is a 9 percent increase for classified salaries each year, instead of the basic "merit" increase included in the target. These sums include both salaries and the applicable fringe benefits.

In the area of student financial assistance, the biennial request is $1,041,500 with $441,700 in 1982-83 and $599,800 in 1983-84. The 1982-83 amount is 44.88 percent greater than that appropriated for 1981-82; the 1983-84 target is 35.79 percent greater than that for 1982-83.

Even though all funds for auxiliary enterprise programs are non-general funds, a target of $20,692,600 was assigned with $10,731,800 in 1982-83 and $9,960,800 in 1983-84.

For sponsored programs, which, like Auxiliary Enterprises are also funded with non-general funds, a target of $7,726,500 has been assigned with $3,457,000 in 1982-83 and $4,269,500 in 1983-84. The 1982-83 target is 25.4 percent greater than the amount appropriated for 1981-82 and the 1983-84 amount is 23.50 percent above the 1982-83 target.

Approval was given for a target operating budget of $21,744,500 for the Virginia Institute of Marine Science for the 1982-84 biennial. An addendum budget in the total amount of $2,023,600 was also approved for the biennium.

A target budget of $1,830,000 for the Virginia Associated Research Campus, VARC, for 1982-84 was approved. Approval was also given for an addendum budget for VARC in the amount of $270,950 for the biennium.

In an attempt to broaden the opportunities under the Deed of Trust

Loan Program established to aid members of the faculty and staff in financing the purchase or construction of homes, the Board authorized an increase in the interest rate to be charged from 4½ percent to a floating rate 2 percentage points less than the average interest rate for such loans in the Williamsburg area.

The Planning and priorities Committee has studied the program at the President's request and found that two problems were particularly significant: The fixed interest rate of 4 percent is inordinately low, resulting in a substantial loss on the overall financial return on the endowment and that at the present level of funding, an average of only five loan can be offered each year. This has resulted in a waiting list exceeding 200 names.

The Board felt that the two problems should be remedied by increasing the interest level to a level more in keeping with present market conditions. This action would serve to increase the rate

Summer on Campus

It's all a matter of how you look at things. Her face a study in determination, Camille Nygaard of Annandale (at left) prepares to send a ball screaming past her opposition's goal keeper at this year's Tidewater Soccer Camp on campus. Brent Harris (at right) doesn't look too pleased but critics were very happy with his performance in the Virginia Shakespeare Festival's production of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," which one reviewer called "... a cotton candy confection of razzle-dazzle, fun-filled frolic that never ceases to entertain, amuse, or let you forget what a literary genius Shakespeare was." Judge O'Connor Spoke Here at January Conference

Sandra D. O'Connor, of the Arizona Court of Appeals, President Reagan's nominee to become the first woman justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, was one of the speakers at a symposium on "State Courts and Federalism in the 1980's," held in Williamsburg Jan. 23-24 under the joint sponsorship of the National Center for State Courts and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Judge O'Connor spoke on trends in the relationship between the federal and state courts from the perspective of a state court judge.

"If our nation's bifurcated judicial system is to be retained, as I am sure it will be," concludes Judge O'Connor, "it is clear that we should strive to make both the federal and the state systems strong, independent and viable." Judge O'Connor suggests that at both the state and federal levels, efforts should continue to be made to improve the judicial selection processes and to provide adequate and appropriate training for those selected.

"The states should, in my view," she says "adopt procedural rules which are generally patterned after the federal rules of criminal and civil procedure, and evidentiary rules which are the same or parallel to the federal rules of evidence. In this way perhaps parity will become less a myth and more a reality."

Fiering Book on Moral Philosophy is Published

A new book by Norman Fiering, editor of publications at the Institute of Early American History and Culture and lecturer in history "Moral Philosophy at Seventeenth Century Harvard," has been published for the Institute by the University of North Carolina Press in Chapel Hill.

Fiering's book, which explores the seventeenth century foundations of the tremendous interest in moral philosophy in the 18th century, is the first of two volumes which will carry his study of moral philosophy through the 18th century. The second volume which will be entitled "Jonathan Edwards's Moral Thought and Its British Context," will be published this fall.

The current volume, Fiering explains, provides the necessary background and support for arguments explored in the second volume. Fiering hopes that the two books will be read and used as companion volumes. But they are not, he explains, in exact sequence and the Edwards book is not a direct continuation of "Moral Philosophy at Seventeenth Century Harvard."

In his current volume, Fiering treats two inter-related themes in the history of ideas. The first and most fundamental is the transformation of philosophical ethics from a discipline based exclusively on Aristotle to a new discipline much broader in concept. The second theme concerns the virtual revolution in the theory of the passions that occurred in the seventeenth century in connection with the break with Aristotle. Most classical writers has denied that the passions have a positive role in the life of virtue. The essence of the seventeenth century revolution was that the passions and affections came to be recognized as acceptable natural guides to conduct.

Drawing on sources that have gone largely untapped, Fiering gives particular attention in his book to the evidence found in student notebooks and commencement theses at Harvard during the seventeenth century, and extends his focus to an extensive investigation of philosophical and psychological ideas in the seventeenth century New England.

Karen Smith, director, women's sports information, received awards for women's sports publications at the COSDIA College Sports Information Directors of America Workshop in Philadelphia recently. The all-sports brochure won "Best in the Nation," in Division B in the category of recruiting and general information brochures. Smith also received Best in the Nation honors in Division B, special programs, for her AIAW Division II Gymnastics Championship program. The poster designed for the championship awarded second place in national competition and the William and Mary women's basketball media guide placed fourth.

Fiering, a specialist in American intellectual history and eighteenth century thought, has had articles published in a number of scholarly journals, including the William and Mary Quarterly, and American Quarterly and the Journal of the History of Ideas.

He received his undergraduate degree from Dartmouth and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. He received a three-year research fellowship from the Institute in 1969-1972 which he used to work on his book. He revised his manuscript and supplemented it during a year's leave in 1978-79 at the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina.

Earlier this year Fiering was awarded the first annual Walter Muir Whitehill Prize of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts.

The Whitehill Prize is given for a distinguished essay on Colonial American History, previously unpublished with preference given to New England subjects.

The prize included publication in the New England Quarterly of Fiering's winning essay, "Philosophical Anglicanism and the First American Enlightenment," which is a study of the liberalizing influence of Archbishop John Tillotson on New England intellectuals in the early eighteenth century.

Lawyer Cynthia Baskett Wins BPW State Title

by Mary Quattlebaum

Cynthia K. Baskett, a Norfolk attorney and a 1979 graduate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has been selected Virginia's 1981 Outstanding Young Career Woman for 1981 by the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Cynthia Baskett

Sivathanu Nagar Pillai, a member of the Swem Library staff, has returned after a nine-month leave of absence during which he visited his parents in India. Pillai, his wife and two children visited relatives in Nagercoil in the southernmost tip of India.

During his stay, Pillai spoke to several organizations including the Lions Club of Nagercoil, the Rotary Club of the city, press groups and students and faculty of several colleges.

Articles in the Indian Express (English edition) Dinamalar, Dina Thanti and Malai Murasu, detailed Pillai's impressions of life in the United States for Indian readers. He touched on several aspects of life here including education, human rights and family life. He was the chief guest at a United Nations Day Celebration Oct. 24 in Nagercoil. On May 4, he addressed the students and faculty on Anna College in Nagercoil on the educational system here.

Pillai said that often his audiences had formed an opinion of life in the United States from rather exaggerated reports of domestic problems here and were amazed at his assessments.

Pillai is currently working toward a doctorate degree in education and management at Laurence University, Santa Barbara, CA. He holds a master's degree in education from James Madison University and an M.B.A. degree from Golden Gate University, San Francisco, CA. Pillai took most of his courses for his business degree at the Langley Air Force Base division of Golden Gate.

Miss Baskett will leave July 24 to attend the national convention of the BPW in San Francisco, where state winners will be honored. The BPW is the oldest existing professional women's organization in the United States.

A senior associate with the firm of White, Johnson and Lawrence, Miss Baskett is co-authoring a book entitled "A History of the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals," with Dr. William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law, Emeritus. She is doing research for her own book, a history of local admiralty practice.

Miss Baskett is active with the Model Judiciary Program, a cooperative project of the YMCA, Norfolk Public Schools and the local Bar Association. She is also treasurer of the Tidewater Women's Bar Association.

As well as her legal interests, Miss Baskett is organist and choir director at Hope Lutheran Church in Virginia Beach and a member of the Vogan Chorale. Also a painter, Miss Baskett has exhibited watercolors in local art shows.

A 1976 graduate of Virginia Wesleyan College, Miss Baskett received her law degree from Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1979. She was editor of "The Colonial Lawyer," at Marshall-Wythe for two years. She was formerly associated with the law firm of White, Reynolds, Smith and Winters of Norfolk, as an associate attorney.

Miss Baskett says she wants to develop more expertise in family law and eventually would like to serve as a judge in the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court. Her professional goals also including more writing, "to preserve the rich history of our judicial system."

The Game of Soccer Popular With Boys and Girls

by Stuart Wagner

"WILLIAMSBURG LOVES SOCCER" reads the green and white bumper sticker that appears so regularly all over town.

"Soccer mania" picked up momentum in the Tidewater area in the early seventies and has grown rapidly.

A major impetus to soccer's widespread appeal in this area has been the Tidewater Soccer Camp under William and Mary's Soccer Coach Al Albert's supervision. Initially it gave local youth from Williamsburg, Hampton and Newport News a chance to gain some practical experience from qualified coaches and players.

Now in its eighth season, the camp is host to youngsters from outside Virginia. What started with a handful of would-be Peles has now blossomed into a major summer event catering to over 170 East Coast youngsters at six one-week camps.

Coach Albert's goal for the camp is to provide the soccer enthusiasts with quality soccer instruction. This year Albert is coaching a team out of the United States and has left the directorship in the hands of John Daily, a coach under Albert since the 1977 camp season, but the camp standards remain firm.

Quality of instruction continues to be stressed at the camp. To qualify for the camp faculty, a coach must be licensed by the United States Soccer Federation and have Al Albert's personal O.K. says Daily.

This year a special "girls only" week of training attracted over 70 players. Many of these girls have been playing soccer in one form or another since they were about three or four on either a local league in their community or at home with their older brothers and sisters. "Some of them will go on to become very good players in college," says Daily. To the girls it's a way of enjoying themselves. "I just like to go out and play; it's a lot of fun" says one pleased camper.

Two William and Mary students, Rebecca Tuttle of Marshall, Va., and Mary Edgette of Hampton, are among the counselor for the girls at this year's camp. Both were coached by John Charles, women's soccer coach at the college. Tuttle and Edgette say there is a shortage of women coaches for the women's soccer teams. Coach Albert would like to see some of the girls enrolled in his camp today go on to become coaches. "Most women on a soccer team would relate better to a female coach than they would a male coach" says Daily.

The ladies need endurance and fortitude to keep up with the day's schedule of events. The mornings are reserved for instruction on tackling, passing, ball control, and shooting. In the afternoons they play as a unit learning the values of teamwork and team spirit. With the constant reminders such as soccer training films during lunch and dinner and a round of indoor soccer in the evening, the girls get quite a workout.

The week of fun, instruction and camaraderie culminates with a round robin team playoff and a championship plus awards for contests in penalty kicking, dribbling and juggling not to mention awards for the MVP and the camper who has displayed the best attitude towards the week of training.

Member of Shakespeare Company

Travel Abroad has its Ups and Downs

Brent Harris of Virginia Beach, a rising senior, could be called a Wrong-Way Corrigan of sorts.

While many students this spring were anxious to get their exams over so they could pack their bags for summer travel abroad, Harris was in Europe, moving up his exam schedule and abandoning travel plans so he could get back to Williamsburg.

Harris spent his junior year abroad at the University of Exeter in England under William and Mary's exchange program. He was a member of the Virginia Shakespeare Festival company last year and was anxious to pick up his option for a second season.

"I just loved it last year. I know I will go back to Europe to do some more traveling. I loved working with the Festival last year and was anxious to get back with the company again."

Harris will take on several different roles, first as a member of the chorus in "Julius Caesar," which opens the season July 9. There are no costume changes with the change of characters, says Harris, who explains that the chorus is an important aspect of the play. It is the job of the chorus, he says, to portray a cross-section of the Roman populace and show how the changing views of the populace affected Caesar.

In "Two Gentlemen of Verona," he is the buffoonish lover Thurio, and in "The Tempest," he has the part of a courtier, one of the lords stranded by the storm.

A theatre major, Harris says his year in England was a great experience and a chance to see a lot of Shakespeare done — and they really know how to do it," he adds.

Although he had been abroad before on a tour, Harris found that dealing with day-to-day life abroad has its special challenges.

Even though there were no language barriers in England, Harris found the academic system very different. It is more independent than ours, he says. "You have to be prepared to take responsibility. And I don't think the English students take school as seriously as we do. They don't seem to panic about papers; they seem more sophisticated, sometimes cynical. Some of them think of Americans as all very rich, very naive."

One result of Harris' year abroad has been a sharpening awareness of his national identity.

"You think of yourself as an American, but you don't really realize what that means until you are abroad. We have a culture to be proud of and sometimes they try and tell you in Europe that you don't have a basis for it. . . . There is sometimes an anti-American feeling; you can detect it in subtle ways, for example in the humor, and you have to get used to it," explains Harris. "You realize how isolated the United States is. There are people from Asia and Africa, they're all there in England. It's a meeting place for people from all parts of the world."

"There's a reserve about the English people but it is not a coldness," says Harris. He laughs when he recalls a conversation with an Englishwoman who could not understand how Americans got through the day without the ritual of teatime. She asked him, "What do you have to eat between lunch and dinner?" One Englishman, he said, told him he thought the United States should adopt a monarch and have a king.

Harris says he was glad to find his fears of traveling in Europe without much knowledge of languages were unwarranted. "Most people speak a little English," he says "and if you try what few words you do know of a language, people love you for trying. I learned just how easy it is to get around Europe." Harris and friends did a great deal of traveling in Europe on trips that took them through France, Germany and included a train ride from Greece to Hungary.

"I'm glad to be back," says Harris. "While it was an exciting experience, it was sometimes a painful experience."

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival will run through August 16 with performances of "The Tempest," "Julius Caesar," and "Two Gentlemen of Verona." Several Sunday matinees are scheduled during the run including two of return on a portion of the College's endowment investment; also a higher rate of interest would probably limited interested participants to those who are trying to buy a house for the first time. It would probably not, the board noted, appeal to those who are interested in refinancing their existing mortgages.

The actual rate would be established quarterly by the Vice President for Business Affairs, in consultation with the Faculty Housing Committee.

The plan was initiated during the administration of President John Stewart Bryan. Loans were made from the General Endowment Fund of the College until 1951 when certain funds of the College were transferred to the Endowment Association and became known as the "College Fund."

The Board of Visitors has increased the maximum loan authorization eight times since the program was established. The terms of the program, however, remain essentially as they were in 1951; the interest rate at 4½ percent; the maximum amount available for loan $25,000 and the term of the loan, 30 years.

In other action, the Executive Committee gave authorization to provide permanent concession facilities in Cary Field Stadium and additional office space in William and Mary Hall.

Authorization was given for funds up to $30,000 from the Intercollegiate Athletics Reserve Fund to accomplish the conversion in Cary Field and funds not to exceed $7,000 also from the Intercollegiate Athletics Reserve Fund to accomplish the work space conversion in William and Mary Hall.

The number and quality of the concession stands now at Cary Field Stadium provide less than adequate service to the spectators the Visitors noted in explaining the need for the work.

Cary Field has three large masonry tower structures that can be adapted to provide larger concession stands to more quickly serve the spectators. There are also two other existing brick tower structures that can be adapted to accommodate vendor dispensing stations at each side of Cary Field, and which will also increase service to patrons seated in the stands. Adaptations, in the way of installing electrical and water service, drains and portable counters to each tower can provide increased concession service to the spectators. At the end of the sports season the utilities can be shut off, and the portable counters removed, thus preventing deterioration from the weather, discouraging possible vandalism, and restoring the brick arcade and tower areas to a clean appearance.

In William and Mary Hall, a classroom will be converted into two offices, an area for secretaries and a book storage area to alleviate problems of adequate office space, and poor communications and coordination between Athletic Association coaches.

The Executive Committee did not act on the appointment of a new Director of University Communications and Friday Duane A. Dittman, Vice President for University Advancement announced that a new national search will be launched. The new search, he said, would entail the re-advertisement of the position "to elicit a new pool of candidates to be considered."

Dittman added in a statement to the press and media, that prior to the re-establishment of the search, officials at the College will undertake a re-evaluation of the duties and responsibilities of the position. Dittman said he expects the new search to be fully underway by September.

W&M Fund '80-'81 Goal Is Surpassed

The William and Mary Fund for 1980-81 is over the top! Jacquelin Crebbs, Director of Annual Support in the Office of University Advancement has announced that the $500,000 goal for the drive has been reached. When the Fund closed on June 30, reports Ms. Crebbs, $500,745 had been received.

Alumni contributions through the William and Mary Fund benefit those faculty and student projects which aren't possible through State support. They also support the programs of the Society of the Alumni.

Ms. Crebbs says she is elated that the fund has not only reached its goal but has set new records. This year's fund represents the largest amount given by alumni to the yearly drive and also the largest participation by former students. This year's effort reflects an increase of $104,000 over last year and 1,200 more individual donors.

The major incentive for increased giving at William and Mary, according to Ms. Crebbs, is the $500,000 three-year Challenge Grant offered the College by the National Endowment for the Humanities in 1980. To earn that award, William and Mary must raise $1.5 million in new private gifts for endowment and increase the level of support from annual gift programs. The money raised through the William and Mary Fund has helped the College qualify for the second installment of $200,000 from NEH, reports Ms. Crebbs. The College received the initial installment of $200,000 last summer.

The chairmen of the drive, Marilyn and John Entwisle of Philadelphia, both members of the class of 1944, were also a major factor in the success of the drive, added Ms. Crebbs. The Entwisles, says Crebbs, wrote over 400 personalized, handwritten appeal letters to alumni and made hundreds of telephone calls during the drive. Also, says Crebbs, "we started earlier this year and tailored our approach to suit the various constituencies among our alumni."
