Alumni and Board Host Burgesses Day Saturday

Gov. John N. Dalton and Attorney General John Marshall Coleman will be among 300 persons taking part in Burgesses Day at the College of William and Mary Saturday, Sept. 12.

The event, sponsored by the Society of the Alumni in cooperation with the Board of Visitors, commemorates the times in 1700-1705 that the Colonial House of Burgesses and General Assembly held sessions at William and Mary. The College served as headquarters for the Colonial legislature after it left Jamestown in 1700 while a new Capitol building was under construction in Williamsburg.

Guests Saturday will include legislators, jurists and officials from across the state as well as local elected officials and members of various boards associated with the College.

At a private luncheon preceding the William and Mary-Miami of Ohio football game, President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., will present Gov. Dalton, a

William and Mary alumnus, with a book entitled "Their Majesties Royall Colledge," written by another alumnus, Jack Morpurgo, professor of English literature at the University of Leeds, England.

John H. Garrett, Jr., of Irvington, Va., president of the Society of the Alumni, will act as master of ceremonies.

The Journals of the Council of Colonial Virginia report that the Governor and the Council voted on April 24, 1700, to accept the College's offer of meeting rooms and offices at the College for use by the General Assembly and Burgesses. On May 22 of that year, all of the Colony's official records were ordered moved from Jamestown to William and Mary. The first session of the Assembly at the College was held in October 6, 1700.

References show that General Assembly meetings were held at the College in March 1701 and May 1702, and that the Council met there more frequently.

By June 1702, the lawmakers began urging a speedier completion of the Capitol in Williamsburg, but progress remained slow. Fortunately, additional space at William and Mary was created by expansion of its main building, now called the Sir Christopher Wren Building.

Housing the legislature was not always a comfortable arrangement, either for the College or for Colonial officials.

The Rev. James Blair, president of the College, wrote as part of a criticism of Gov. Francis Nicholson that although he and his government "enjoyed the use of the College for their assemblies, courts and councils . . . he himself has been the forwardest to throw abuses on the College.

"I have heard him swear that he would seize the College for the King's use & he crowded into it, the Secretary's office, the Clerk of the Council's Office, the Clerk of the House of Burgesses' office & all their lodgings, with himself and all the Committees, and had all his public treats in their hall to the great disturbance of the College business," Blair wrote.

The records of the House of Burgesses and the Council were finally ordered moved to the new Capitol by action taken May 9, 1705. On Oct. 30, 1705 the main college building was destroyed by fire of unknown origin.

Nobel Laureate to be Speaker

A distinguished list of speakers, including Nobel Laureate H.C. Brown of Purdue University, will give lectures this fall as part of the seminar in applied chemistry, chemistry 140.

Rector of Board Speaks at Opening Faculty Meeting

Edward E. Brickell '50, Rector of the Board of Visitors, spoke at the first college-wide meeting of the faculty this year.

Thank you President Graves.

I am delighted to be here today to share in this opening meeting of what promises to be another significant year in the history of the College; but I must confess that I'm a bit confused as to what would be the most appropriate form of salutation that I might use in speaking to you.

My association with the College, and with many of you, has been of such duration, and has manifested itself in such a variety of ways, that I could with accuracy address you as former teachers, former colleagues, former employees, personal friends, or professional associates.

May I take the coward's way out of this dilemma by simply saying "Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen." I was flattered when President Graves asked me if I would say a few words to you today, and I naturally inquired as would any William and Mary graduate, if this were a tradition! Being told "no" I just as naturally assumed that if I were not continuing one then I must be starting one.

Having had the rather dubious distinction of ending the tradition of alumni orators a couple of years ago, I can be forgiven, I trust, if I look forward with great anticipation to initiating one in its stead.

I know that all of you know about the Board of Visitors, even if you do not know the members themselves. I hope in just a short while I can bring to you some insight into that Board, and some assurances that the Board and the College faculty are really not very far apart in their goals, hopes, and aspirations for the College.

Admittedly, we sometimes express these things in different languages, and we move toward their accomplishment from different directions, but we move towards them nonetheless.

Board members come from varied backgrounds and training and experiences; each brings to the Board his own particular (and sometimes peculiar) approach to a situation. In my judgment, this is invaluable to the College, which ought to be a repository of differences. It seems to me that sameness would be fatal to such an institution as this. Hutchins: A day without a revolution is a lost day.

Actually, the differences between the Board of Visitors and the College faculty are few, numerically, but they are always accentuated in the media. After all, agreement is dull and makes for dull stories, so our similarities are often overlooked, but this is to be expected.

Having been on the Board for the past five years, and having served as Rector for about the last three and a half, I like to feel that I have a particular insight into what the Board has done, what the Board is thinking of doing, and what the Board has not done.

I can assure you today that the Board of Visitors is very much aware of its legal and other responsibilities, and has a sincere desire to carry out those responsibilities in a manner that will reflect credit upon this institution and upon itself. There is no question in my mind that the Board of Visitors is committed to the same values and to the same qualities as members of the faculty.

That you are appreciated is shown in as many ways as we can think of, but the most significant step we have taken, so far as I'm concerned, has been the one in the improvement of faculty compensation.

As you well know, this has been the number one priority for the Board for several years, and led to the Campaign for the College, successfully completed under the leadership of President Graves.

At the same time, Board members have been extremely active in working with the administration in influencing the executive and legislative branches of state government on behalf of the College. I rarely go to Richmond to see any of our legislators or members of the executive branch of government that I don't bump into some member of the Board of Visitors lobbying, formally or informally, for the College. The contacts that some of our Board members have cultivated over a period of years have been invaluable in this regard.

I personally feel that the present system of faculty liaison with the Board of Visitors is working quite well. I can promise you that faculty views are presented, straightforwardly and forcefully, by the liaison committee. While I am not assigned to particular committees in my role as Rector, I make every effort to attend the Academic Affairs Committee where the faculty liaison group reports and comes to discuss matters of concern.

Again, I must say that I have been struck by the great similarities between the efforts of the Board of Visitors and the efforts of the faculty, as personified by the Liaison Committee. Our differences are relatively few, but I can say to you that these differences get a good airing and an honest look.

You have obviously selected knowledgeable and articulate spokesmen, and I urge you to continue to do just that. I had determined several days ago that I would make these remarks memorable, for the same reason that all my commencement addresses are memorable: brevity. I have attempted to be brief, but I do not wish to have that brevity construed as any sign that I feel that my appearance here today is insignificant and of no moment.

I feel very much to the contrary.

I hope that this is just another small indication of the concern the Board of Visitors has for you and for the College, and another small indication of the willingness of the Board to be as much of a part of College life as possible without interfering in the administration and teaching that go on here.

I urge you individually, individually and collectively, to take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself to meet members of the Board, formally and informally, at social events, athletic events, campus activities, and through your Liaison Committee.

What you have to say to us is heard, and your opinions are respected.

Most of us on the Board were undergraduates at this institution, and we remember many things about our lives here. Most of them are recalled favorably, and some not so favorably.

But then, as now, we all recognize that the great strength of this institution lies in its faculty--and the faculty's commitment to academic and other excellence, and we understandably look to you to continue that commitment and to fulfill that commitment in every possible way with every student that comes to the College.

As a teacher, I always looked forward to the opening of school as a time of great personal pleasure. Thank goodness I still do. I think the real reason can be found in the application of a statement by Thomas Paine, under entirely different circumstances in an entirely different time. Speaking of the opportunities facing the citizens of this new land, he wrote, "It lies within our power to begin the world all over again." At the risk of being a bit trite and a little corny, I always feel the opening of school in that same light. We have the opportunity to begin the world all over again for countless hundreds of our students, and that's what this institution has always been about.

Guidelines Listed for Grants

Applications for Summer Faculty Research Grants, Semester Faculty Research Assignments, and Minor Grants for Research

1. Summer Faculty Research Grants

ELIGIBILITY: All members of the faculty as defined by the bylaws of the several faculties of the College who are not emeritus and who hold a contract for full-time employment from the College with a commitment for renewal beyond one year.

STIPEND: For summer 1982 the stipend will be one-ninth of the all-ranks average of faculty salaries for the year 1981-82.

DEADLINE: Noon, Monday, October 26. Sixteen copies of the application should be sent to the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Room 6, the Brafferton.

2. Semester Faculty Research Assignments

ELIGIBILITY: All members of the faculty as defined by the bylaws of the several faculties of the College. An applicant who is emeritus or who does not hold a tenure-eligible position will be assigned only if funds are available after all other worthy applicants have been funded. Worthy proposals will be funded on the basis of seniority of service to the College.

STIPEND: One-half of the applicant's base salary for the ten-month academic year.

DEADLINE: Noon, Monday, November 16, 1981. Sixteen copies of the application should be sent to the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Room 6, the Brafferton.

3. Minor Grants for Research

ELIGIBILITY: Faculty, staff and all currently enrolled students.

STIPEND: Normally less than $300.

PURPOSE: To cover necessary and unavoidable minor expenses directly related to an applicant's research, expenses which cannot be funded through the normal budgets of the College. Examples include purchase of microfilm and expendable supplies and equipment; photocopying charges; travel to archives and special libraries. (Restrictions are noted on the application form.)

DEADLINE: Noon, Monday, October 5, 1981 and noon, Monday, February 1, 1981. Three copies of the application should be sent to the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Room 6, the Brafferton.

Applications for all of the grants described above are available from the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs (Room 6, the Brafferton) or the Office of Grants and Research Administration (James Blair 205)

SAVA at Women's Center

A group of women associated with the Williamsburg Area Women's Center has established a support service to assist victims of sexual assault. The volunteer group, called SAVA, is composed of a dozen women from different age groups and backgrounds who are ready to offer immediate practical assistance and emotional support to sexual assault victims.

They will assist victims during visits to doctors, police investigations, and court trials, if needed. Volunteers have also developed channels of referral for long-term psychological counseling.

Those interested in joining as SAVA volunteers may call the Women's Center at 229-7944 for information on training and time commitment.

Victims of sexual assault who may need or want the assistance of a SAVA volunteer should call the Women's Center or Bacon Street Hotline, 253-0111.

held at half-time during the William and Mary-Virginia Tech game in Blacksburg, Sept. 19.

Head cheerleader Chrys Lonick says that the cheerleaders have also been enlisting the aid of local merchants to promote spirit and get support for the opening home game, Sept. 12.

Careers in Local Government

James Oliver, administrator for James City County, will present a seminar on Careers in Local Government Tuesday, Sept. 15 at 3:30 p.m. in Wren 100. Oliver will provide information regarding career opportunities and will give suggestions regarding securing positions. This seminar is sponsored by the Office of Placement.

Charter Members

The newly formed College chapter of Alpha Kappa Sorority, the first black Greek sorority in the United States, has 15 charter members including Sharon E. Chapman, Maurene L. Churchill, Sharon R. Crumpton, Tracey L. Eadie, Melaina L. Hood, Sharon E. Horner, Gloria L. Lamb, Virginia L. Lassiter, Ingrid E. McDonald, Andrew J. Miles, Michele D. Morrow, Angela M. Taylor, Michelle Z. Taylor, Deborah D. Vaughn and Cynthia D. Wallace.

New League on Campus

The Preservation League is a new organization on campus that is hoping to recruit members interested in preservation in the area including architectural, environmental, archeological and even cultural.

The League will hold its second meeting at 7 p.m., Monday, Sept. 14 outside the Gallery in Andrews Hall.

Spokesman Brian Gordineer suggests that some of the areas the League might include in its program are Gloucestertown, Peacock Hill, Powhatan Plantation and the Common Glory amphitheatre.

Covenant Auditions

The Covenant Players will hold auditions Sept. 13 and 14 in the Little Theatre at the Campus Center, 7 - 11 p.m., for the first production of the year, "The Shadow Box" which will be presented Nov. 6 - 8 and 13 - 15. The director will be Paul Sagan.

Callbacks will be held Sept. 15 from 7 - 11 p.m. in the Sit 'n Bull room at the Campus Center.

The Covenant Players will present two plays this year. In the spring they will stage "Holy Ghosts," a regional folk drama by Romulus Lenney.

Mermettes Wants Swimmers

A workshop for prospective members of Mermettes, the aquatic arts group, will be held Monday through Wednesday, Sept. 14-16, from 7-9 p.m. in Adair pool.

A reception will be held following the workshop Monday evening.

No background in aquatic art or synchronized swimming is necessary, however applicants should be strong swimmers.

Mermettes is open to both men and women. For further details contact Sarah Bingham ext. 4360.

Equipment Loan

Backpacking equipment including tents, packs, stoves, pads, sleeping bags and cook sets are available for rent at Adair 301, Monday and Thursday 1:15 to 1:15 p.m. A $10 deposit fee is required.

Venture Program

The College Venture Program will hold meetings Sept. 30, Oct. 21 and Nov. 18 in the Campus Center, Room 4 at 3 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

Venture is a program to enable students to take a semester off to work full or part time as part of their educational experience.

Rescheduled Seminars

Placement Seminars, previously scheduled for Morton Hall, Room 141, will be conducted in Wren 100 until Morton Hall reopens. Students who have not received a detailed schedule should stop by the Office of Placement which is temporarily located on the second floor of the Campus Center. Also, those who will be graduating in 1982 are encouraged to pick up registration material from the Office of Placement at their earliest convenience.

ACN Plans Reception

The Association for Computing Machinery, ACM, is planning a student-faculty reception Friday, Sept. 11 at 3:30 p.m. in Jones Hall 103.

Foreign Service Examination

The Office of Career Planning, which is temporarily located in the Gold Room (second floor) of the Campus Center, has received booklets containing information regarding the 1981 Foreign Service Written Examination Registration Information and Application Forms.

The Examination will be administered on Dec. 5, and interested students are encouraged to obtain these booklets and file their registration materials well in advance of the Oct. 23 deadline.

President's Hours

President Graves will be in his office in Ewell Hall to talk with students today from 4 to 5 p.m. No appointment is necessary. His next schedule time to meet with students is Wednesday, Sept. 23 from 4 to 5 p.m.

Public Debate

The first public debate of the Marshall-Wythe Debate Forum will be held at 7 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 10 in the Wren Chapel.

The College community is invited to attend and hear arguments on both sides of the resolution: "That this house believes pornography to be a greater evil than censorship."

The government's arguments will be presented by Colin Buckley and Scott Jenkins; Kevin Gough and William Scott will represent the opposition.

The Marshall-Wythe Debate Forum is a series of public debates on contemporary issues sponsored by the Debate Council. Four debates will be scheduled each semester this year.

MEMORANDUM TO ALL STUDENTS OF THE COLLEGE:

I regret to inform you that for the second time in two weeks one of our coeds has reported being assaulted. This afternoon the Campus Police were informed that a student was raped and sustained minor physical injuries in an incident in the fraternity complex Saturday night. The Police are investigating the matter and have a suspect in the case.

The Police indicate that there is no relationship between this incident and the one reported earlier. It is a most tragic reminder, however, that even our campus is not always free from danger. To reiterate my appeal of last week, each member of the community is urged to take reasonable measures to insure her or his own safety and to report any incidents or suspicious persons to the Campus Police.

Students Congratulate President on Ten Years

The group met by lamplight on the grass near the Wren Building but there was no sinister intent. In fact, it was quite the opposite.

Students Tuesday evening, in a spontaneous show of affection, gathered to wish President Graves a happy anniversary on the completion of his tenth year in office.

The group proceeded from their meeting place to the President's House, stood on the steps and knocked on the door precisely at 10 p.m. As the President opened the door the visitors broke into song, and serenaded him with "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

Graves invited the visitors inside and offered them jelly beans. These are not, he said, Reagan jellybeans. He wanted to make it clear he wasn't being political.

Inside the house the visitors gave a cheer for the President and he responded. It was, he said, times like this that made the job worthwhile. Reminiscing about his years in the President's House, Graves recalled that when he moved in, his daughter Liza had been a three year old toddler. Now she is 13.

Graves touched on the rich history of the President's House which has been home to all but one of William and Mary's presidents since it was built in 1732. Robert Saunders, president 1847-48, chose to live elsewhere while continuing to use the house for entertaining.

He quipped that if he made it through one more day he would best his stay at Harvard where he was Associate Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration from 1967 until he came to Williamsburg in 1971. Graves is a 1947 graduate of Yale where he majored in economics. He served in the U.S. Naval Reserve in World War II and returned to continue his education at Harvard where he received an MBA in 1949 and a Doctor of Business Administration in 1958. In 1960 he became Director of the of the International Management Development Institute in Lausanne, Switzerland. Four years later he joined Stanford University as Associate Dean of the Graduate School of Business and Director of the International Center for the Advancement of Management Education.

The late-night visit obviously pleased the President and may have nudged memories of his first days on campus which were also highlighted by a memorable student visit.

In remarks to an all-college opening convocation on September 14, 1971, Graves recounted the following moving day incident which happened "on what must have been the hottest, muggiest day of the summer."

"By 10 a.m. I was already soaked to the skin, dirty from trying to relay the brick floor in the basement of the President's House and grateful that a Flat Hat photographer was not around when one of you who are students, very neatly dressed, walked up to me on the sidewalk and introduced himself. Despite my disreputable appearance and in extremis condition he welcomed me, invited me to the Hoi Polloi that evening, inquired as to how the moving was going and left. Fifteen minutes later he was back, now in his oldest clothes, and for the next six hours he carried and pulled and pushed alongside of the movers and me -- on a free Saturday."

"Now perhaps you can understand why, on still brief acquaintance, I feel so good about this College . . ."

Faculty Club Plans Seafood Fete at VIMS

The Faculty Club of the College of William and Mary has accepted the invitation of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science to hold its first social event of the year on the grounds of the Institute at Gloucester Point on Friday, Sept. 18. Festivities will start at 6 p.m. In event of inclement weather, the alternate site will be the home of associate dean John Zeigler.

Various seafoods will be featured. The Club expects to offer an abundance of crabs which are now in season and plentiful in the area. Also included will be clams, oysters, fried fish, hush puppies, and such snacks as pretzels and chips. All the usual beverages, including beer and white wine, will be available.

The fee for membership in the Faculty Club this year will be $12.00. Payment of this fee will admit a member and spouse or one guest to this event at not extra charge. Only members and their guests will be admitted to this first party! The Faculty Club is open to all members of the Faculty and administration of the College. Membership fees may be paid at the party or beforehand to Prof. Roy

Washington Programs

The Washington Program is offering three seminars this year on the following topics: "The Electoral Mandate: Who Gets Elected and Why," October 26-28; "The Military Revived," Feb. 15-17; and "Historic Preservation: In the Public Interest," March 29-31.

Applications for the October session are due Oct. 15. A fee of $70 covers transportation lodging, breakfast and lunch and one major cultural event during the two-day stay in Washington.

Twenty students will be selected for each program. Speakers will include top resource persons from private and public institutions in Washington to give a lively in-depth and varied approach to the topic. Any student at the College in good academic standing may apply.

Application forms and details concerning the three programs may be obtained from Joseph P. Healy, Office of Extramural Program, The Brafferton, room 8.

Pearson, Treasurer Faculty Club, School of Business Administration.

The Faculty Club plans four other social events during the current year. Parties will be held on Oct. 23, Feb. 19, March 19, and April 16. The party of Feb. 19 will be held in the Great Hall of the Wren Building and guests will be the Board of Visitors of the College. For the other three events, the Club is seeking new and unusual locations. Suggestions from the faculty will be welcomed.

Membership in the Faculty Club will entitle the holder to reduced rates at these four parties. Members will be charged $3.50 per person per party while non members will be charged $6. Non-drinking non members will be charged $5. while non drinking members will pay only $2.50 per person.

The Club hopes that the event of Sept. 18 will be a means of acquainting more fully the faculty of the College in Williamsburg and the faculty at the Institute with each other.

Messmer Named to Mack Professorship in Business

Donald J. Messmer, professor of business administration at the College of William and Mary, has been named J. S. Mack Professor at the College's School of Business Administration.

The new endowed professorship in retailing has been established by a gift from the J. S. Mack Foundation, established by J. S. Mack, co-founder of the G. C. Murphy Company. The company continues an interest in business education that it has maintained with William and Mary over the span of many years.

Donald J. Messmer

The professorship honors James Stephen Mack, a member of the class of 1935 and his father, John Sephus Mack, one of the founders of the G. C. Murphy company. The younger Mack was a past president of the company. The third generation of the Mack family engaged in the retailing business, John Mabon Mack, received a BA degree from William and Mary in 1961.

The professorship will stress education in retailing, a facet of business in which Messmer has wide experience. Prior to coming to William and Mary in 1973, Messmer worked for eight years in private industry and was exposed to a broad variety of commercial and industrial problems. He held positions in sales management, sales administration and field sales.

"We are very happy to have this new professorship," says Charles L. Quittmeyer, dean of the School of Business Administration. "And we are fortunate to have such a strong teacher in the area of marketing and retailing as Professor Messmer to fill it."

Messmer received both his baccalaureate and doctoral degrees in business from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo. He is a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national honor society in business administration. He has been awarded an NDEA fellowship and won recognition from the American Marketing Association in their research design competition and for his doctoral dissertation, a marketing and quantitative analysis of television advertising.

He has published articles on several different aspects of retailing in business journals as well as numerous other articles related to marketing. He also has served as a marketing consultant for a number of business firms.

Messmer was coordinator for a lecture series entitled "The Free Enterprise System," held at the College and funded by a grant from Anheuser-Busch Companies. He also is an active member of the Southeastern American Institute for Decision Sciences, having served as its Vice President-Finance and currently is acting as the local arrangements coordinator for the 1983 meeting to be held in Williamsburg. In October he will begin serving as President of the Colonial Capitol Kiwanis Club.

Messmer says he is delighted at the emphasis the new professorship places on course offerings in retailing because of the growing number of graduates who go into retailing as a career. Messmer regularly teaches courses at both the undergraduate and graduate level in marketing research and advertising management.

"We have appreciated over the years the relationship the school has had with the G. C. Murphy Company and are fortunate to have S. Wame Robinson, retired chairman of the board, living in Williamsburg," says Dean Quittmeyer. Quittmeyer noted that the Board of Visitors of the College in their resolution accepting the endowment from the J. S. Mack Foundation, expressed special appreciation to the Trustees of the Foundation and in particular Joseph N. Mack, treasurer and Mr. Robinson.

Officers of the G. C. Murphy Company have participated in special events at the School of Business Administration, including Presidents Day and have been active in working with the School to expand employment opportunities for William and Mary business graduates. Dean Quittmeyer was speaker at the 1979 banquet in McKeesport, Pa., when Robinson was named Man of the Year for the McKeesport area, home base for the G. C. Murphy Company.

James S. Mack, following in the tradition of his father, was president of the G. C. Murphy Company from 1953 until his death in 1968. Mack entered the retail business his father had established in 1911 with 11 stores in Pennsylvania that he and his partner purchased from G. C. Murphy. The company had 299 stores when Mack became president in 1953; last year the Company's annual report listed 512 stores, many of them large retail marts, operating in 22 states with a sales volume in excess of $800 million.

S. Wame Robinson noted that the philosophy of the founders, which was later espoused by the younger Mack, was to "give people what they wanted, at the right price and at the right time."

The J. S. Mack Foundation was initiated by the elder Mack for student scholarships, the establishment of recreational facilities and donations to educational institutions.

Directories Available

The Office of the Assistant Vice President for Business Affairs has a substantial number of new telephone directories available both for Williamsburg and for SCATS.

Please contact Dennis Cogle's office for either or both directories. The available supply will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Smithsonian Happy with Hampton Whale

Gerald Johnson, professor of Geology, has received a letter of thanks from the National Museum of Natural History of the Smithsonian Institution, thanking him for the gift of a nearly complete whale skeleton three to four million years old.

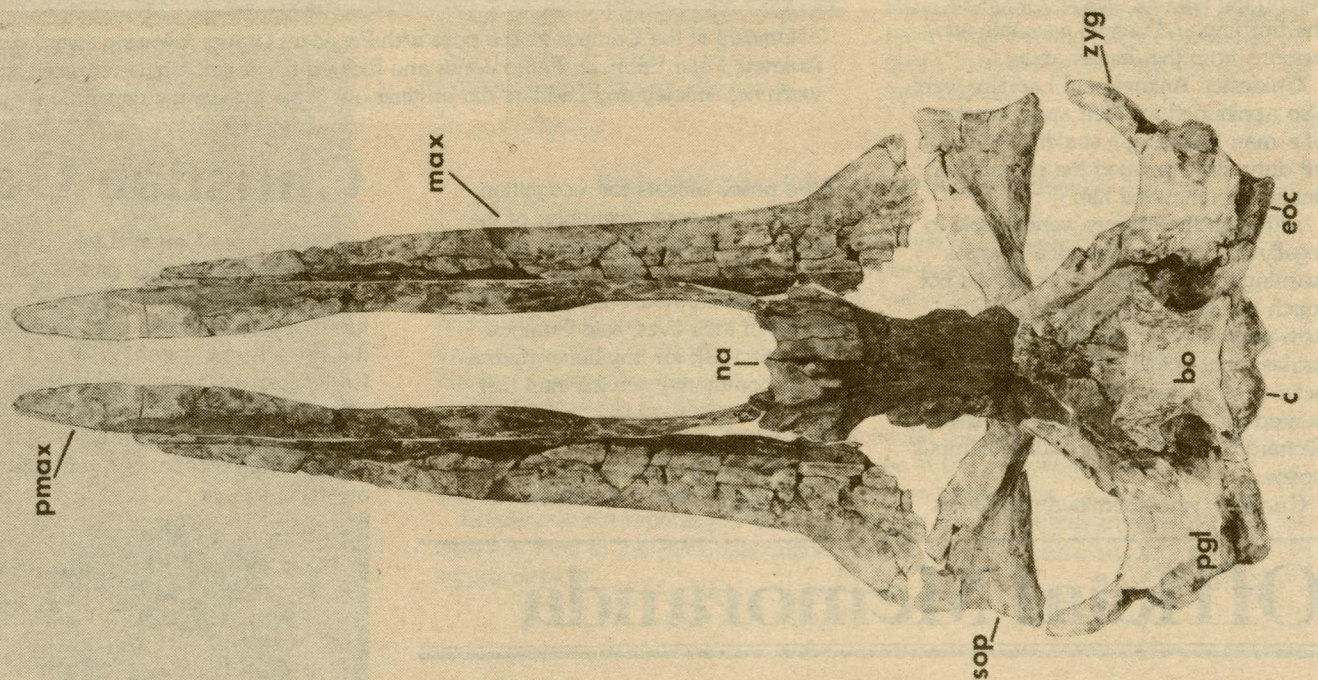

The whale was discovered in a borrow pit on the property of Hugh Dellinger of Hampton in 1971. Johnson and members of a freshman colloquia dug up the whale bones and spent about a year putting the pieces together, working up literature and taking measurements.

The skeleton is of a Balaenotera, a toothless whale akin to the finback whale. The find is especially valuable because of the long nasal bones of the skeleton and other anatomical differences not usually found in fossil whales.

"The skeleton comes from a part of the geologic column that is poorly represented in our collections," writes Richard S. Fiske, director of the National Museum "and will thus add significantly to our knowledge of whale evolution. It has been accessioned as a gift from the College of William and Mary . . ." Johnson says that the skeleton will be assigned a scientific name which may include the name of the Hamptonian who first discovered it.

"We deeply appreciate your generosity in placing this specimen in the National Collections for we are aware of the amount of labor that you and your students have put into collecting and preparing the numerous bones of this specimen," said Fiske in his letter to Johnson. Johnson says that the Museum is a logical home for the skeleton because it has a large depository and facilities for proper preservation.

The skeletal head of the ancient whale is approximately six feet long including the long nose bones. The whale, which is estimated to have reached its mature growth, had an overall length of about 30 feet.

Chemistry Lectures Slated for New Guy Hall

Joel D. Jamison, manager of chemical sciences at Hercules, Inc., will speak on "Creating Value Through Technology," Sept. 24. Nobel Prize winner H.C. Brown will speak on "Boron Chemistry: A Nobel Lecture," Nov. 5.

Other speakers include Steven D. Ittel, research supervisor at the Dupont Experimental Station, Oct. 1 on "Transition Metal Chemistry;" Peter J. Stang, professor of chemistry, University of Utah, Oct. 8 on "Cancer Chemotherapy and Organic Chemistry;" and Robert Abeles, professor of biochemistry, Brandeis University, Nov. 12 on "Suicide Enzyme Inactivators."

All lectures will be given on Thursdays at 6:30 p.m. in the William George Guy Lecture Room in Rogers Hall. Speakers will meet informally with students on Friday mornings following their talks.

The series will open Sept. 10 with a talk on "The Decay of Stone and Preservation of Monuments" by Seymour Lewin, professor of chemistry at New York University.

A recognized authority in the field of physical and analytical chemistry, Lewin has been a Fellow at the Belgium-American Education Foundation and an honorary professor at the Institute Quimico Sarria in Barcelona Spain. He was editor of Art and Archeological Technology Abstracts 1968-69, and has been a consultant with the U.S. Army Chemical Corps, the Smithsonian Institution, and the Food and Drug Administration.

He has won many awards, including the Cressy Morrison Prize, the New York Academy of Science award, the Kasimir Fajans prize, and the Medal of Honor from the Government of Ethiopia.

Officers Win Recognition for Valor, Resourcefulness

Four members of the Campus Police Force were cited recently for outstanding performance beyond normal job requirements and shared seven awards.

Cpl. Peter Ladriere, Sgt. Richard Chidester and Investigator David Ankney were given awards for significant contributions to the College's effort to conserve financial resources. On their own time they did carpentry work, electronics installation and vehicle repairs, which saved the College thousands of dollars. Over 100 hours of personal time and talent has been donated by the three police officers.

Patrol Officer Pedro Jones and Sergeant Chidester were recommended for an award for their work in the outstanding performance and initiative they took during the fire at the fraternity complex Sept. 12, 1980.

Chidester was the supervisor on duty at the time of the fraternity fire. He responded while directing other officers. On arrival at the Sigma Pi house, he instructed Jones to search the upper floors for residents still in the building. Then at great risk to himself, entered the lobby and searched it for possible victims. Finding none he left and proceeded to direct his squad and other responding units toward a successful evacuation of the building.

As the fire department was controlling the main fires, Chidester was searching other buildings, evacuating them, and locating still more fires. As a result of his capable handling of a serious situation, property damage was held to a minimum, and there was no loss of life.

Jones located witnesses who subsequently provided information leading to the arrest of the person responsible for setting the fire. He checked floors of the building and helped evacuate two persons from the danger area.

Chidester, Ankney and Ladriere were also applauded for their apprehension of a man harassing a student. Although off duty, they pursued the suspect and finally apprehended him.

Although the officers were unable to legally do more than issue a trespass warning to the suspect since he did not touch the student, they are credited with preventing an assault. "It is my professional opinion that the quick actions of Ladriere and Ankney prevented the rape of the student," said Richard S. Cumbee, director of campus police.

of the police officers for recognition, said the men were "examples of the type of people the department has."

The officers recognized for their work at the fraternity house fire worked at the risk of their lives, said Cumbee. "You can't ask for any better dedication to community service than that," he added.

He said that the work of Ankney, Chidester and Ladriere had continued to save the department money.

Christian Gets August Award

The Campus Center is taking on a homier look, and while part of the credit can be given to the new furnishings, it is also due to the work of the housekeeping staff, William J. Carter, vice president for business affairs, told Mrs. Alice R. Christian as he congratulated her for winning the August Housekeeper of the Month award.

Alice R. Christian

The standard for the campus, Carter said, should be to make the grounds and buildings reflect the same care people give their own homes and gardens.

Mrs. Christian, who has been a College employee for a little over a year, is assigned to the Campus Center. She formerly worked at the Campus Police Office.

A native of Charles City, Mrs. Christian is a member of the Twelve Notes Social and Savings Club in Charles City and is going to Canada with club members for a week's vacation. The group of working women hold fund-raising events and meet monthly at different homes to plan trips with money they have raised.

Mrs. Christian is married to James Christian, a press operator at the Richmond Corrugated Box Company. She has one daughter, Denise, an eight grade student at Charles City High School. Before joining the College staff, Mrs. Christian was a teacher's aide in the Charles City School system. She is a member of Parrish Hill Baptist Church.

Mrs. Christian's supervisor, Mrs. Josephine Strong, who nominated her for the award, characterized her as "a very courteous, hard working person who is dependable and friendly to be around."

Presentation of the award was made by Ernest L. Boyce, executive housekeeper in the office of the Vice President for Business Affairs.

Employee Reminder

Permanent classified employees who took the Labor Day Holiday are reminded that a leave slip must be submitted to the Personnel Office for that day.

Employees at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science who took the holiday have been asked to indicate eight hours in the space provided for holiday on their time and effort sheet.

Official Memoranda

Separation of Mail

Quite often we receive in this office an envelope which has been sent from a College office, addressed to an individual or another office on the campus, and on which full postage has been affixed. And the reason for this generally is quite evident: there is no indication on the envelope that it is on-campus mail.

Accordingly, we call your attention to the following:

ON—CAMPUS MAIL

Whenever you send out mail destined for a location on the campus of the College of William and Mary, the envelope should be marked in the upper right-hand corner "CAMPUS MAIL" in bold clear lettering.

If there is more than one piece of such mail, the several pieces should be bundled together, with a slip of paper prominently displayed on the bundle to identify "CAMPUS MAIL".

OUTGOING, OFF—CAMPUS MAIL

Such mail should be bundled separately from the campus mail, with a slip of paper which indicates "OUTGOING MAIL".

Mail in this category should be subdivided, as appropriate, into different bundles for "Foreign Mail", "Air Mail", "Certified Mail", etc.

Your cooperation will be appreciated. It should facilitate the handling of mail in the Campus Post Office, and reduce the number of instances in which improper or incorrect postage is applied.

Fine Arts Secretary has Magic with Sewing Needle

Two well dressed stiffs were hauled away to Augusta, Ga., from Peggy Miller's house Sunday in broad daylight, and nobody raised an eyebrow.

Peggy Miller is a moonlighter whose job as a courturiere is more exotic than her full time job as secretary in the fine arts department at the College. Since last October she has been dressing two mannequins for the Augusta County, Ga. Museum. The project has required hundreds of hours with the needle and a lot of time pouring over research volumes as well as the assistance of knowledgeable friends. She gratefully acknowledges the help of Swem Librarian Clifford Currie and Raymond Julian of Williamsburg, an architect and former member of the faculty at the University of Virginia.

King George III of England and Major General Nathaniel Greene of the U.S. Army were the two "stiffs" that Mrs. Miller has been dressing in the living room of her home. They will be part of a diorama at the Georgia museum which is being assembled by Richard Wescott. Wescott originated the science and space museum in Durham, N.C. and is now working on the history of Augusta which is named for George III's mother.

King George is dressed in the robes of a member of the Royal Order of the Garter, the oldest chivalric order in continuous custom in Great Britain. It was instituted circa 1344 by Edward III.

The king's lace trimmed shirt and breeches are of white Italian silk. The lace is from France and Belgium. His breeches are also silk, embellished with stripes of gold and silver threads. This material was imported from India. He wears a black velveteen mantel lined with white silk and a red silk sash and sword belt. A blue garter with the motto embroidered in Frence, is buckled just below his left knee. A jeweler has been commissioned to make the elaborate gold collar and pendant that will go around his neck and the emblem of the Order of the Garter which will go on the mantel is being hand embroidered.

General Greene, who will be shown in a battlefield scene in the diorama with his horse and his aide, is dressed in the formal uniform of his rank. He has on a blue wool coat with lots of gold buttons down the front and on the wide cuffs and buff colored linen trousers and westcoat over a cotton batiste shirt with hand rolled ruffles at the neck and cuffs. His costume also includes epaulets of bullion with two silver stars on each shoulder and a purple sash to emphasize his high rank.

Although she is an accomplished seamstress, this assignment has been a unique one for Mrs. Miller. When she covers up her typewriter at 5 o'clock at the office she is the person behind the "Pegee" label, a successful design line of historical clothing. She has copyrights on many of her creative styles for men, women and children that span more than 300 years of history.

The Smithsonian Institution has used Pegee patterns and the guides at the boyhood home of Robert E. Lee, Woodlawn, are authentically dressed with patterns by Pegee. Her work has been featured several times in Lucille Rivers' syndicated column on sewing, primarily because Mrs. Miller's work is highly valued in a business that is becoming more and more controlled by large corporations. Just last week Mrs.

Miller received a reorder of patterns for Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

She provides the main resource for things they don't wear and start a well defined program of wardrobe building. Mrs. Miller is also emphatic about good fabric and good workmanship as regimental and ceremonial uniforms for Revolutionary and Civil War buffs and supplies garments for theatrical productions as well as civic pageants.

Peggy Miller checks her work on the lace cuffs of the royal shirt before it is shipped to the Augusta Museum.

Although she is an authority on historical costuming, Mrs. Miller keeps up with the contemporary world of fashion and has taught a class for the College's Office of Special Programs on how to have an adequate wardrobe without a fat bank account. Her advice is to know the styles and colors that flatter your figure and coloring, consider your lifestyle and avoid impulse buying.

She tells her students to take inventory of their closets, dispose of well as good line in clothes. She expects the garments she makes to provide ten years of wear. If they don't, she considers them a poor investment.

After working with silk for the Augusta project, Mrs. Miller is planning to expand her imports of Indian silk. Silk she maintains is a fine fabric for clothing. Not only does it give the wearer a feeling of elegance, it is long wearing, more comfortable than synthetics and can, with care, be laundered. People in India, explained Mrs. Miller, have been wearing silk for thousands of years, long before dry-cleaning was introduced.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Virginia requires written notification of any change of status for any dependent over 19 years of age. Dependent children are eligible for BC/BS benefits until:

- the end of the year the child reaches age 19 if not a full-time student
- the end of the month that the child marries
- the end of the month the child stops going to school full-time if under 23
- the end of the month the full-time student reaches age 23.

The appropriate forms for notification of a status change are available in the Personnel Office and must be completed by the subscriber whenever a change occurs. If an up-to-date student status from is not on file with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Virginia claims may be denied on the dependent.

Revised Holiday Schedule for State Employees

Action by the 1980 General Assembly through the passage of House Bill 172 changed legal holidays in Virginia for calendar year 1981. That bill provides that in 1981, October 12 (Columbus Day) will not be observed as a legal holiday. In its place, October 19 will be celebrated as Yorktown Day, commemorating the 200th anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis to General George Washington.

The College has an alternate holiday schedule which utilizes Columbus Day during the Christmas/New Year's holiday period. Since classes will be in session on Yorktown Day, this holiday will be utilized in the same manner with the College, VIMS and VARC open for business on October 19.

Employees not reporting to work on October 19 must submit a leave of absence form to the Personnel Office charging annual or sick leave as appropriate

Policy Regarding Payment for Overtime Work

Effective with the Oct. 1-15, 1981 payroll, eligible employees of the College, as approved by the Department of Personnel and Training, who have worked more than 40 hours during the work week, and who are to be paid at the rate of time-and-one-half for such overtime work, will be compensated for those extra hours worked in one of two methods.

1. Overtime compensation will be included with regular salary; paid on the 1st and 16th of each month.
2. Overtime will be compensated on supplemental payrolls; paid on the 12th and 26th of each month.

If overtime compensation is included with the regular salary, then tax deductions applicable to the overtime will be based on the employee's W-4 statement.

However, if overtime compensation is not included with the regular salary, the overtime will be taxed at a 20% rate for Federal income taxes, with FICA and State income taxes being calculated on the regular basis.

When payment is made under the second method, it will be the responsibility of the department head to verify that overtime has been earned by the employee, based on actually working a 40-hour week. (Under the first method, such verification is made in the College Personnel Office.)

Questions regarding this policy should be directed to Lee Martin, Director of General Accounting, Extension 4221.

'Employee Nights' Are Designated

"Employee Days" have been designated at five home football games and four home basketball games this year.

I. H. Robitshek, director of personnel, has announced that as "a token of the esteem and appreciation of the College community for our employees," complimentary tickets will be available to designated employees.

One-hundred complimentary tickets for each of the five home football games will be issued to permanent College employees who have an annual salary that does not exceed $9,800 as of July 1, 1981. College employees with long service and retirees who fall within the state salary limitation will be given preference. Eligible individuals may obtain the complimentary tickets by applying in person at the personnel office, James Blair 201.

Employee Day games include the following: Sept. 12, Miami of Ohio; Oct. 17, Marshall; Oct. 31, James Madison; Nov. 7, Harvard; and Nov. 21, Richmond.

College employees will be admitted free to four basketball games during the 1981-82 season. Employees must present their current College of William and Mary or Virginia Institute of Marine Science identification card. This offer, says Robitshek, is not applicable to individuals with faculty status.

Basketball games on the employee schedule include the following: Nov. 27, Elizabethtown College; Nov. 30, Christopher Newport College; Dec. 19, North Carolina Wesleyan College; and Jan. 9, Lebanon Valley.
