Journalism Program Receives Major Commitment Daily Press, Inc. Pledges $40,000

The College has received a major commitment from the Daily Press, Inc. to endow a program which attracts America's leading journalists to the William and Mary campus.

President Graves announced Thursday that the Board of Directors of The Daily Press, Inc., publishers of the Daily Press and The Times-Herald, had pledged $40,000 to the College's Journalist-in-Residence program, which brings the nation's prominent media professionals into William and Mary classrooms.

"We are extremely pleased that two of our area's most respected newspapers have offered such major support to a program which encourages our students to enter professional journalism," noted Graves. "The Daily Press and The Times-Herald's names will lend prestige and stability to one of William and Mary's most exciting and worthwhile programs."

William R. Van Buren, Jr. '37

The Daily Press, Inc. Journalist-in-Residence program offers a major name in print or broadcast journalism the opportunity to visit the campus for a three-day series of classroom discussions, seminars and lectures. The visiting journalists also meet with the staffs of William and Mary's student newspaper, radio station, yearbook, and television network to discuss changing trends in journalism.

The program was devised in 1976 by the William and Mary Chapter of the Society for Collegiate Journalists, the nation's oldest collegiate mass communications organization. Visiting professionals who have participated in the program are Roger Mudd of NBC News; syndicated columnist Charles McDowell of the Richmond Times Dispatch; James Naughton, former White House Correspondent for the New York Times and current National Editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer; Robert Pierpoint of CBS News; Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times; and Max Robinson, Chicago anchorman from ABC Nightly News.

More than 1,000 students have participated in one or more activities of the journalist-in-residence program. Although many decide to enter a variety of journalism careers, others pursue leadership roles in business and government.

"This is one of the major strengths of this very creative program," noted Graves. "It is vital that more Americans involved in virtually every field develop a greater understanding of the press and its tremendously important role in our society."

The efforts of the College to encourage students to pursue journalism careers have been effective, and the proof lies in the success of graduates who work in the field across the nation. They include nationally syndicated columnists and cartoonists; editors at major daily and weekly newspapers; managers of radio stations; television anchorpersons; and hundreds of reporters, photographers and creative artists. The list of employers of William and Mary graduates reads like a Who's Who of journalism, and includes the New York Times and Washington Post. Hundreds of graduates work in all areas of journalism, including Pulitzer-Prize winning reporter Ed Roberts of the Detroit Free-Press, award-winning syndicated cartoonist Hugh Haynie, Caskie Stinnett, former editor-in-chief of Travel and Holiday magazines, and Catherine Calvert, former editor with Mademoiselle now with the New York Daily News.

Yet dozens of William and Mary's most accomplished student journalists decide to remain in Virginia, many as reporters and editors with the Daily Press and The Times Herald. William R. Van Buren, Jr., who is currently the president, treasurer and news editor of the Daily Press and The Times-Herald, attended William and Mary and has served as an active supporter of William and Mary alumni activities for more than three decades.

"We are elated that this proven program has been endowed in perpetuity by an organization which recognizes so well the importance of professionalism in all areas of journalism," said Graves. "I know the College of William and Mary has always felt very close to our Peninsula newspapers, and this generous commitment to the College will certainly enhance this spirit of cooperation."

The Theme Was 'BUSINESS'

The College really got down to business over the weekend.

The School of Business Administration's Presidents Day on Friday was highlighted by the dedication of Chancellors Hall as the new home of the business school.

Hays T. Watkins, one of the nation's business leaders and president of CSX Corporation, gave the principal address at the Charter Day Convocation, Saturday in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Dean Charles L. Quittmeyer '40, was named the first Floyd Dewey Gottwald Professor of Business Administration, a chair endowed by the Ethyl Corp. of Richmond.

Associate Professor of Business Administration Jean Conover Wyer received the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award.

Watkins, along with Edwin Dillon Dodd, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Owens-Illinois, Inc., and Donald Hillsdon Ryan '50, co-founder, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Minit International, received honorary degrees from the College.

An assemblage of representatives from the nation's business sector and from abroad gathered on campus for the full weekend program, which got underway in Chancellors Hall Friday morning with the first sessions of the Presidents Day program.

Martha Connolly

Connolly Concert Set Saturday

Martha Connolly, lecturer in voice, will present a recital at Bruton Parish Church at 8 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 13.

She will sing two German arias for soprano and violin by Handel; five early English songs from the times of Elizabeth I; and two modern settings of traditional hymns by Charles Ives and Aaron Copland. She will be assisted by Elnore Anderson, violin, and Giles Cooke, harpsichord and organ.

Martha Connolly received her early training in music at the New England Conservatory of Music where she studied piano for nine years. She received her bachelor of music degree from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor and her master of music degree from Catholic University, where she held a full scholarship for graduate studies in voice and piano.

She performed in the Washington D.C., area for several years before coming to teach at William and Mary. She has appeared in opera, oratorio, musical comedy and given recitals in every major museum in the Washington area.

Ms. Connolly is past-president of the National Association of Teachers of Singing for the state of Virginia. She has also taught at Catholic University, Hood College, the University of Virginia, the Northern Virginia Community College and Mt. Vernon College. She last performed locally as the alto soloist for the "Messiah" presented by the Williamsburg Choral Society. She coaches with Genevieve McGiffert.

Shamrock supervisors will be encouraging the consumption of food and teaching the wisdom of avoiding food waste.

Board cards and punch cards will be honored. For others, the cost is $4.50 per person.

Harpsichord Concert Planned

Jock Darling, lecturer in music and organist at Bruton Parish Church, and Thomas Marshall of Williamsburg, will perform in a two-harpsichord concert at 8:15 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 14, in Wren Chapel.

The instruments, built by Richard Cox of New Jersey, are on their way home from a conference in Chapel Hill, N.C., Darling said. He and Marshall are using the opportunity to play these very fine harpsichords in a concert.

Darling and Marshall will perform solos and four-hand pieces using one or both harpsichords.

The concert is open to the public free of charge.

Landlubber Talks Offered by VIMS

"Oceanography for Landlubbers," a series of films and lectures offered by the VIMS-Sea Grant Marine Education Program, has four more programs scheduled before the current series ends.

Programs are held at the VIMS Byrd Hall Conference Room; there is no admission charge. Advance reservations are not necessary but seating is limited to 50 persons in most cases. Each program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Program schedule for the rest of the series is as follows:

March 3 - "The Oyster Industry of Virginia," Dexter Haven, head, VIMS department of applied biology, will present a slide-illustrated talk on the life history, growing, harvesting and processing of the American Oyster.

April 7 - "Pollution in the Chesapeake Bay - How Bad Is It?" Dr. Robert Huggert, head, VIMS Department of Ecology-Pollution, will discuss the present pollution situation in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries. Topics will include Kepone, oil, industrial chemicals and trace metals.

May 5 - "Dangerous Marine Animals of Virginia," slide presentation about the marine animals of Virginia which fishermen, boaters and bathers should avoid during the upcoming summer season.

June 2 - "Incredible Edibles From the Sea," Ms. Liz Cornell, VIMS Sea Grant Marine Education Section, Jim Colvocoresses, VIMS Fisheries Division and Laurie Dean, VPI Sea Grant Home Economist, will present a taste testing program about unusual seafoods, including seaweeds and underutilized fin fishes of Virginia's waters.

Point/Counterpoint Tomorrow Night

Shana Alexander and James J. Kilpatrick, best known for their Point/Counterpoint commentaries on the CBS-TV program "60 Minutes," will square off again for the Speakers Forum at the College of William and Mary at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 10, in William and Mary Hall.

Tickets are $2 for the general public; $1.50 for members of the College community including faculty, staff and students.

Alice Artzt

Classical Guitarist to Give Concert, Master Class

Alice Artzt guitarist, will give a concert at 3 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 14 in the Campus Center Ballroom as part of the current Sunday Concert Series.

Miss Artzt will also hold a master class from 2-5 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 13 in Ewell 100. There is a fee of $3 for auditing this class.

Although she grew up in Princeton, N.J., and has long been a resident of New York, classical guitarist Alice Artzt is, for some reason, better known to British audiences than American ones, says Allan Kozinn in a recent article about the artist in the magazine Guitar Player. Most of her long playing records have been released in Britain, and she has been a frequent guest recitalist with the BBC. The editor of England's guitar magazine calls her "America's best player and a model for any guitarist."

Miss Artzt has given concerts in most countries of the world and recently completed a 13-city tour of Japan and a tour of South America and the Caribbean.

She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Guitar Foundation of America and author of "The Art of Practicing," a book on technique published in London.

For her concert Sunday afternoon Miss Artzt will include in her program Sonata Pastorale in G Major by Scarlatti; "Chaconne" by Weiss; Sonata in D minor by Cimarosa; and "Fandango" by Aguado.

Mrs. Wallace poses with her supervisor Mrs. McCoy

Mrs. Wallace Wins Work Award

Mrs. Edith Wallace of Williamsburg has been given the Housekeeping Award for January for her spirit of cooperation and dependability on the job at William Small Hall. She was nominated by her supervisor, Mrs. Lillian McCoy, who supervises the staff in Jones, Small and Morton Halls.

Mrs. Wallace has been a member of the College staff for seven years. She is a graduate of Bruton High School and formerly worked at the Hospitality House.

The widow of William H. Wallace, Mrs. Wallace has six children, five of them in Williamsburg. John is serving with the Army in Germany. Edith, Janette, Theresa, Theodore and an adopted daughter, Francine Williams, reside in Williamsburg.

Mrs. Wallace is a member of Oak Grove Baptist Church and the Household Roof organization.

When she has some time to herself, Mrs. Wallace likes to cook. She specializes in pastries, pies and cakes. Mrs. Wallace is the second generation of good cooks in her family; her mother Mrs. Sadie Cook is also considered a very good cook, she says.

Mrs. Wallace works the early shift at the College, starting at 5 a.m. This means getting up at 3:30 a.m. and going to bed at 6 p.m., says Mrs. Wallace, but she doesn't mind the schedule. She says she enjoys the people she works with.

At the presentation ceremonies in the office of William J. Carter, vice president for business affairs, the certificate of merit was presented by Ernest Boyce, executive housekeeper.

Mrs. McCoy, who nominated Mrs. Wallace, also came in for some praise of her work in readying Morton Hall after the asbestos removal work was completed.

Indian Ambassador to Speak at Festival Dinner

India's Ambassador to the United States, K.R. Narayanan, will deliver the second Mahatma Gandhi Freedom Lecture at the Indian Festival, Sunday, Feb. 21.

The Ambassador will speak at 6 p.m. at a dinner to be held in the Campus Center Ballroom. A minimum donation of $5 is being asked. All proceeds will go to the Mother Teresa Mission of Charity in Calcutta. Tickets are being sold at the Campus Center desk. All sales will be advance reservations; there will be no ticket sales at the dinner.

No topic has been announced for the ambassador's talk. The Gandhi lecture series was opened last year with Philippine Senator Benigno Aquino as the first speaker. The lectures are to be delivered "by outstanding public figures and scholars who by personal example have given meaning and substance to freedom."

Ambassador Narayanan's address is the highlight of a two-day festival sponsored by the South Asia Society and other groups in honor of President and Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., on their tenth year of leadership at the College.

The festival opens with a film, "Ours, Theirs," which will be shown at 6 p.m., Feb. 20 in Millington auditorium. There is no admission charge.

A program of Indian folk dances will be presented as part of the dinner program Feb. 21 and an exhibit of Indian publications will be on display in Swem Library for two weeks, beginning Feb. 21.

A newspaperman from 1944-1948, Ambassador Narayanan joined the Indian Foreign service in 1949 and has served at posts in Rangoon, Tokyo, London, New Delhi, and also in

K. R. Narayanan

Physics Colloquium To Hear Garvey

Gerald T. Garvey of the Argonne National Laboratory, will speak on "Induced Weak Currents in Nuclear Beta Decay" at the physics colloquium Friday, Feb. 12.

Garvey will give an introduction to the nature of induced weak and electromagnetic currents, followed by a presentation of recent experimental results on conserved vector current (CVC), the absence of second class currents and the status of partially conserved axial currents (PCAC).

Friday colloquiums are held at 4 p.m., in William Small 109. Coffee is served in the conference room before each program at 3:30 p.m.

Nuclear Disarmament is Topic of Two-Day Program Feb. 22-24

The Nuclear Disarmament Study Group at the College, an informal study group of students and faculty, is planning an awareness program Feb. 22-24 on the threat of nuclear war.

Bishop Walter Sullivan of the Diocese of Richmond will speak on "The Nuclear Arms Race and the Threat of Nuclear War," at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 24, in Millington auditorium.

Bishop Sullivan is one of a small number of the nation's Catholic hierarchy who have in the past year taken courageous stands against the arms race. With Bishops Hunthausen of Seattle and Matthiesen of Amarillo, he has called upon his people to stand against the arms race and for those working on, or connected with, the use of nuclear arms, to consider the moral implications of that work and association.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 22 with a showing of the film "War Games," in the Campus Center Little Theatre. A discussion of the film will be led by Stephen Hodges, director of the Richmond Peace Education Center.

On Tuesday several members of the William and Mary faculty will present 15-minute talks and will participate in a discussion period following their presentations. Speakers and their topics are as follows: Martin Cook, visiting assistant professor of religion, "Rethinking the Morality of War"; Hans vonBaeyer, professor of physics, "Some Political Misconceptions About the Arms Race"; Jonathan Strauss, assistant professor of economics, "Some Economic Misconceptions Concerning the Arms Race"; and Gary Kreps, associate professor of sociology, "The Social Consequences of Nuclear War."

An ecumenical Ash Wednesday service will be conducted at St. Bede's Catholic Church Social Center by Father Ron Sequin and other campus clergy.

James C. Livingston, professor and chairman of the department of religion, and Mark C. Fowler, assistant professor of philosophy, serve as coordinators for the Nuclear Disarmament Study Group.

Hampton Institute Choir to Perform Feb. 20

Hampton Institute's concert choir will present a concert at 7 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 20 in the Little Theatre of the Campus Center.

The concert is being sponsored by the Black Student Organization and the Office of Minority Affairs. The concert is open to the public. There is no admission charge. The concert is part of a current series of lectures and performances during the semester which will include Maya Angelou, poet, author and artist, at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 19 in the Campus Center Ballroom; and Washington Attorney Elaine Jones at 7:30 p.m., March 19 in the Campus Center Little Theatre.

The program schedule also includes a student musical performance March 21.

The Hampton choir under the direction of Roland Marvin Carter, will present a program highlighting the work of Black composers. They will sing several motets and anthems by R. Nathaniel Dett who used Afro-American spiritual music as themes in his works. Dett was director of the Hampton Institute choir from 1913 to 1931.

The program will also include "Hold

Australia. He has been Indian Ambassador to Thailand, to Turkey and the Peoples Republic of China. From 1979-80 he was Vice Chancellor of Jawaharlal Nehru University in New Delhi.

The Ambassador is a graduate of the University of Travancore and the London School of Economics which he attended as a Tata Scholar. His specialization was political science.

'Cabaret' Next For Theatre

The prize-winning musical play "Cabaret," with all of its nightclub glitter intermixed with the frenzy of the beginnings of Nazi Germany, will be presented in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial for six performances starting Friday, Feb. 19.

The William and Mary Theatre will present the highly acclaimed show at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 19 and 20, and in a special matinee at 2:00 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 21. The following week, "Cabaret" will be performed at 8:15 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 25-27.

According to critic Stanley Richards, "Cabaret" was "one of the most acclaimed and successful musical plays of its decade." It won the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award for best musical of the season, eight Antoinette Perry (Tony) awards including best musical play, five citations in "Variety's" annual poll of New York Drama Critics, and an Outer Circle Award.

To bring "Cabaret" to life for the William and Mary Theatre, director Louis E. Catron has put together a cast of almost 40 students. Choreographer John Wesley Taylor and Musical Director Paul Ranzini, both seniors at the College, are designing the elaborate dance and choral numbers.

Tickets are available at the PBK box office, which will be open beginning Feb. 8, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. For tickets call 253-4272 during box office hours, or beginning one hour before curtain time the days of performances.

Because past William and Mary Theatre productions have sold all tickets for several production nights, theatre officials urge early reservations for "Cabaret."

According to Dr. Catron, "Cabaret's" popularity results from a potent mixture of dramatic effects. "For one thing, the show features highly effective musical numbers," he says. "There is the tender 'Married,' which lifts the hearts of two of the play's elderly people; there is the challenging question, expressed by one who wishes to survive anti-Semitic oppression, 'What Would You Do?'

"The mysterious Master of Ceremonies lures his audiences to suspend their intellect with his songs which welcome them, and us, into the cabaret's retreat from reality," Catron adds. "His decadent repertoire includes such famous numbers as 'Willkommen,' 'Sitting Pretty,' 'Two Ladies,' and 'If You Could See Her' (or the Gorilla-girl act.)"

Among the unique features of Catron's "Cabaret" is his insertion of the well-known song, "Money," from the movie version, which is not ordinarily included in stage productions.

"Cabaret" also has a theme which is hidden in soft silken threads," Catron adds. The musical is based upon the John van Druten prize-winning play "I Am A Camera," which deals with adventures in Berlin "when the Nazis were breaking the thin crust of a dream world." The van Druten play in turn is based on Christopher Isherwood's Berlin Stories.

The main plot of "Cabaret" concerns the romance between Clifford Bradshaw, a conscientious, alert young writer who realizes the dangers of Nazi encroachment, and Sally Bowles, an eccentric nightclub singer who would rather not face the reality of impending doom; she lives instead in a world of illusion and glitter where "life is a cabaret." "We see in her escapism the mentality that is most susceptible to totalitarian movements," says Catron.

"Never didactic, 'Cabaret' expresses its message by indirection," he adds. "We in the audience know what is happening in the outside world and so the increasingly frenzied atmosphere of the cabaret world makes us think even more about the dangers of blind escapism."

Fast to Dreams," based on poems of Langston Hughes, composed by the current choir director Roland Carter; selections from Scott Joplin's opera "Treemonisha," and Duke Ellington's Third Sacred Service.

Over the years the Hampton Institute

Choir has appeared in New York's Carnegie Hall, Boston's Symphony Hall, the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. and major educational institutions in the East and mid-West. The choir has performed on local and coast-to-coast radio and television.

Architecture Lecture To Be Given By Richard Guy Wilson

Richard Guy Wilson, associate professor and chairman of the department of architectural history at the University of Virginia, will give a slide lecture on "Victorian Architecture Against the Backdrop of Victorian Civilization," at 7:15 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 11, in Rogers Hall room 107.

A noted architectural historian, Wilson specializes in 19th and 20th century architecture and is currently writing a book about the 20th century firm of McKim, Mead and White.

Wilson's lecture is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

VSRS Pre-Retirement Seminars

During February and March, the Field Services department of the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System will conduct a series of pre-retirement seminars. The program will include representatives from VSRS, Blue Cross-Blue Shield and Social Security. These meetings are tentatively scheduled in Williamsburg on Feb. 23 and in Hampton on Feb. 26.

Employees nearing age 55 or older who have begun planning for retirement are encouraged to attend.

Those individuals who wish to register may do so by calling Charla Cordle in the Personnel Office at ext. 4214 on or before Feb. 11.

Track Coach Gives Pointers For Aspiring Marathon Runners

by Roy Chernock, Track Coach

As we in the athletic department at William and Mary begin our preparations to conduct the 4th Annual F&M Bank/Colonial Half Marathon it dawned on me that there are a number of beginners who would like to set a goal of running our race but need help to prepare. The following general guidelines should help.

1. Before you begin, see a physician and have him assess your readiness to begin.
2. Plan to run at least five days a week, less and you're kidding yourself if you think you'll ever be ready for competitive runs.
3. Schedule your runs for a specific time period daily and stick with your schedule.
4. You should not be exhausted after your runs but rather feel refreshed. If exhausted, you're running too fast or too far - cut back!
5. Set reachable goals for yourself - daily - weekly - monthly. Keep your goals in mind and reach them.
6. Seek advice from experienced runners but decide yourself what's best for what you're trying to accomplish.

Now, more specifically, the following are important as well.

What Should I Wear? Wear cotton socks and jockey type undershorts (Men) and loose fitting tee shirt, sweat shirt or thermal underwear top and cotton or nylon shorts. Your one important investment is a good pair of running shoes, ones with a strong heel counter, plenty of cushion but supple at the midsole. Try on several brands before you decide what's best for you. If possible get two pair so you can change off to air out or dry each pair. Repair them as they wear down. With wet and cold weather coming this may be important as well as getting a pair of cotton gloves and a hat to wear when it's really cold. You'll find that you won't need to bundle up as running warms all of you but your hands and head.

How Far and How Fast Do I Run? Learn to take your pulse and then run at that moderate rate of speed that keeps your pulse somewhere between 120 and 155 beats per minute (somewhat higher for college age runners - 140-170), lower for folks over 50, for about 20 minutes at the start. Walk when you feel breathless and run again when your breathing returns to normal but continue for 20 minutes. You should be able to work up to 30 minutes in a matter of several weeks and now you're ready for a real training schedule: plan on running five or six days a week and include one longer but slower run per week and one shorter but faster run. Your five day schedule might look something like this:

- Day #1 - 40 minutes with pulse at about 140 beats per minute.
- Day #2 - 40 minutes with pulse at about 140 beats per minute.
- Day #3 - 20 to 30 minutes with pulse at about 160 beats per minute.
- Day #4 - 40 minutes with pulse at about 140 beats per minute.
- Day #5 - One hour with pulse at about 120 beats per minute.
- Optional #6 and #7 - Repeat Day #1.

After about two months you could be training at least six days per week and seven would be optimal. In either case the extra day should be similar to Day

#3 above. Always follow the hard day with an easy day. As you feel stronger you may want to increase the length of time of your short, medium, and long runs to 30, 60 and 90 minutes but only make changes when you are positive you're ready physically and mentally. Always consider weather conditions and time of year when making changes.

Summary Remember that almost anyone can run, almost anywhere, almost anytime and it's almost free!

See you at the F&M/Colonial Half Marathon on March 14.

Marathon awards include souvenirs to all competitors, awards to the top 10 places, the first three women, the first three men and women sub-masters and masters. Merchandise awards will also be given and additional awards as entry size warrants.

(Questions concerning the marathon should be addressed to Coach Chernock, ext. 4320.

"Earl The Pearl" Is A Real Gem

McLane Devotes Time And Money To Women's Diving Team

by Karen Smith Women's Sports Information Director

Earl McLane, the women's diving coach "officially" at the college for the past seven years, spends one and a half hours a day, five days a week, patiently watching and correcting the women divers. But Earl "the Pearl," as one diver refers to him, is truly a gem in his demeanor and year's of service to the diving program.

McLane receives around $800 a year, most of which he puts back into the program, according to swimming coach Chris Jackson. "Earl is so patient," she says. "He goes on all the trips - Earl and 27 females for a week - that could drive anybody crazy."

Initially, McLane started hanging out at Adair Pool to teach his son Shawn, now an accomplished diver who has competed at the USA Age Group Nationals, how to dive. "Shawn's the major reason I got involved in diving," McLane admits. "But diving is such a fascinating sport, it's a challenge to both the diver and the coach."

And the 27 females? "It's fun to take part in the team and to be involved in a team activity," he says. "The swimmers (and divers) change, but the spirit of the team and character of the kids doesn't change."

A native of Wagner, S.C., (where he did very little diving) McLane has been a member of the William and Mary faculty since 1965, and is now a full professor in the Philosophy department. He received a B.A. in Religion and Philosophy from George Washington University and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Philosophy from Yale.

Each year McLane requests permission from the Dean of Faculty and his department chairman to be involved with the diving program. "I've had to miss a few philosophy classes over the years, although my students didn't mind that much," he says adding that, "Our divers and swimmers miss very few classes because the away meets are usually late in the afternoon."

McLane says he learned that courage is an important factor in trying a new dive when you know you might land flat on your back on the water. "I did quite a bit of diving when Shawn was learning; of course he left me in the dust when he was about 10, but by trying to dive yourself and learn where to put your arms and so forth, that's very valuable to coaching."

In addition to coaching, McLane has done his share of judging at the AIAW Division II National Championships for four years and at the National USA Age Group and National Junior Olympics. Sometimes he is asked to judge dual meets where William and Mary is involved, but he prefers not to since "I'm usually soft on the opponents and harder on our divers."

Senior Wendy Berry says McLane is anything but "hard" on the divers in practice. "Dr. McLane helps us to relax," she says. "He is very patient and understanding but will push us to a certain extent to learn new tricks."

The women's diving program lost its two most outstanding divers over McLane's tenure to graduation last year. Theresa Norman holds the Adair Pool and School records with 384.4 points in the 1-meter dive as well as the school's 3-meter record at 369.401. Carolyn Morse was an All-American in the 1-meter board and Norman was an All-American in both 1 and 3-meter events during their college careers!

This year Berry, a former gymnast who learned most of her dives from McLane, has been joined by freshman Lynda Harnish who McLane predicts will reach nationals this year or the next.

Most of the William and Mary divers are either very interested in attending William and Mary or have had mostly 1-meter experience since the College does not have a 3-meter board. In addition, since the boards have more spring than when the pool was built, the divers must adjust to a quick slope to a shallow depth and practice diving with swimmers in the lanes most of the time.

Still, McLane who also handles recruiting of the divers, says "we have an excellent 1-meter facility. Our 1-meter board is as good as any in the country." McLane himself donated the 1-meter board and is trying to arrange 3-meter practice time nearby since the lack of a 3-meter board is a major recruiting problem.

Obviously, the pay is not the crucial ingredient to McLane's tenure as diving coach. "You might have heard me yelling during practice yesterday," he says. "Wendy learned a new dive and I could emphasize with how that felt. Intrinsically, diving is a fascinating sport."

Benefit Raffle

Panhellenic Council is sponsoring a Raffle in support of summer camping experiences for residents of the adolescent unit at Eastern State Hospital. All sororities are involved in ticket sales for the service project, according to Barbara Buzzell, publicity chairman.

Tickets are 50 cents and may be purchased until Feb. 22 from any sorority member.

Drawing for eight prizes which have been donated by local businesses will be held during the last William and Mary home basketball game on Feb. 27 at William and Mary Hall. Children from the hospital unit will participate in the drawing.

Prizes include: Three $25 gift certificates from Binns Fashion Shop, Alexander Beegle and Daddy's Money; a picnic for four from the Cheese Shop; a leather address book from D.M. Williams' leather shop; vinyl sports tote from Athletic Attic; a canvas purse from the Unicorn; and a medium pizza from Paul's Delly.

Take a Cool Break

How about a cool adventure over spring break? Spaces are still available in the Winter Camping class to be held in the Adirondacks, New York, March 5-13 for 1 physical education credit. Skills include cross country skiing, snowshoeing, snow shelter construction, ice fishing, mountain climbing. A fee of $180 covers lodging in an outdoor education center, food, equipment, travel, and instruction. For further information, call Sylvia Shirley, MW 10:30-11:30 a.m. ext. 4360.

Summer Study in China

The U.S.-China Education Foundation in the Peoples Republic of China offers a full six weeks of academic study at several Chinese universities. Fourteen weeks of additional travel are included. Program dates: June 14 to August 10; cost: $2,995. There are several types of programs offered and applications are now available at the Office of Extramural Programs, Room 8 in the Brafferton. Any further information on this and all the other overseas study programs available can be found at this office.

for jobs in the real world because of the self-imposed deadlines we had to work under," says Straight. "It was tougher than a lot of jobs you would get after college."

Although creating something from scratch means putting in extra hours of thought and work, all four students say they wouldn't have it any other way.

"We enjoyed coming up with ideas and putting the whole program together," says Ms. Haynes, who adds the ultimate compliment: "We got really psyched about it."
