Thomas Kuhn To Lecture On Scientific Revolutions

Thomas S. Kuhn, professor of the history of science at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and author of "The Structure of Scientific Revolutions," which has had an impact on almost every academic discipline and has sold more than 550,000 copies since it was first published 20 years ago, will give a public lecture at the College.

Kuhn will speak on "Scientific Revolutions," at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 29, in Millington auditorium under the auspices of the philosophy department and the Honors Program. His lecture will be part of the Wednesday Forum series for the Honors Program.

Kuhn's book is frequently used as a textbook at both the graduate and undergraduate levels in both the history of science and the philosophy of science.

Kuhn became interested in the history of science while studying for his doctorate in theoretical physics at Harvard in 1947. While at Princeton from 1964-79, Kuhn taught graduate seminars in the history of modern physical science and undergraduate courses on the development of science since 1780. He was a member of the departments of history and philosophy at Princeton and was principally associated with the Program in History and Philosophy of Science, one of the university's numerous inter-departmental programs.

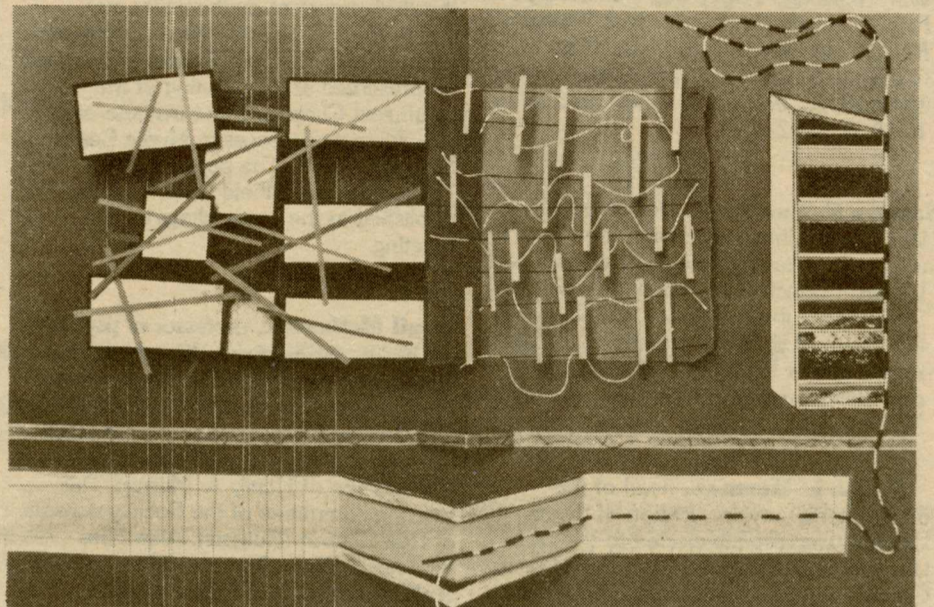

In addition to his teaching, Kuhn is conducting research relating to the history of quantum physics and is also concerned with the discovery and analysis of recurrent patterns in the development and reception of scientific ideas.

scientific ideas are generated, how they take hold of a community of researchers, how they are refined and expanded, and how and why they are replaced."

Kuhn's interest in the life cycle began after he returned from service in World War II with the Office of Scientific Research and Development to assist Harvard President James Bryant Conant with an undergraduate course employing historical materials to give non-scientists a better understanding of the nature of science.

"That exposure convinced me that one could learn much about science by studying the history of the various sciences," says Kuhn. "I was fortunate enough to be appointed a Junior Fellow of the Society of Fellows at Harvard from 1948-51, which provided the first extended opportunity to pursue that study."

Kuhn first devoted his attention to the period of the Scientific Revolution, 1500-1800, but has recently concerned himself with the science of the 19th and 20th centuries.

"Random Sticks and City Planning," a paper construction by Debra Weier, now on exhibit in Andrews Gallery.

Nick Ward, Debra Weier Exhibit In Andrews

The two current exhibits in Andrews Hall both feature the work of sculptors, but the artists are working two entirely different mediums—one in paper, the other in metal.

Both exhibits will be up through Oct. 23. The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Nick Ward uses a collection of parts and scrap pieces of steel for his work, metal that for the most part is discarded industrial material.

"In themselves they are not very interesting," explains Ward, "but in combination they become a series of movement and direction in concert with one another and the surrounding space."

Ward says he does not usually work from a predetermined drawing or model but rather fashions his work as he adds each additional piece of metal.

Debra Weier labels her exhibit of paper constructions "A Community of Desires."

"Ten foot-long paper popouts are not the usual format chosen by most artists," she admits, "but my fascination with this format is a physical as well as a conceptual one with the implications of time and a continuing statement."

"I arrived at this form after seven years of evolution. In 1976 I became curious about ancient Japanese scrolls. As I studied them, I understood them as images and events within a narrative story. When a scroll was unrolled, different events were revealed. I wanted to imply in my own work that the story went on and that the edge of the picture story was arbitrary."

When Weier's drawings became longer and longer, she began dividing the pieces into sections and connecting them in a fixed sequence to create a book.

Ward is currently chairman of the sculpture division at George Mason

University in Fairfax, Va.

Weier lives in Hoboken, N.J., where she publishes her own work and collaborative projects with poets and writers through her own Emanon Press.

Search Committee Formed

To: The College Community

From: George R. Healy

Subject: Establishment of a Search Committee

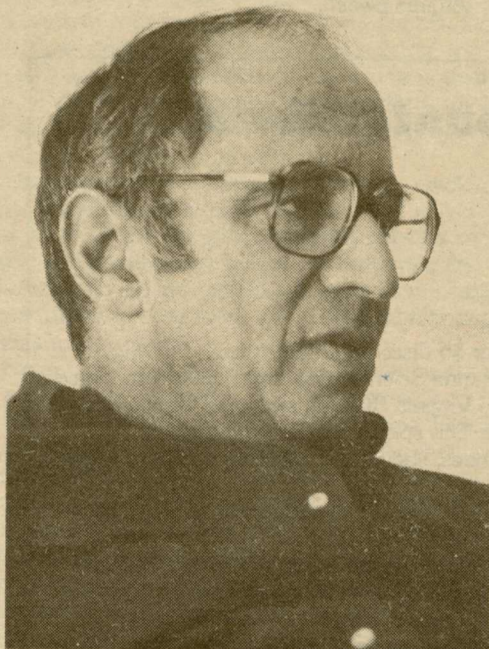

James M. Yankovich, Dean of the School of Education since 1974, has announced his resignation from that position, and his return to full-time teaching in the School of Education, effective at the close of the current academic year.

A committee to undertake a national search for Dean Yankovich's successor has been established by President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. The membership of the Committee is:

- Fred L. Adair, Professor of Education - Chairman
- John Allen, Superintendent of James City County School System
- William Bullock, Jr., Professor of Education
- Edward P. Crapol, Professor of History
- Martin D. Keck, Graduate Student in Education
- John F. Lavach, Professor of Education
- Mary Ann Sagaria, Assistant Professor of Education
- Ronald C. Wheeler, Associate Professor of Education

The Committee will shortly advertise this vacancy, and it will welcome nominations or applications immediately. It has been charged to submit a short list of acceptable candidates to the President as soon as is consistent with a national search, and in no case later than 1 March 1983.

We deeply appreciate the willingness of all members of the Committee, and especially Professor Adair, its chairman, to accept this important responsibility.

A recent interviewer described Kuhn's "The Structure of Scientific Revolutions" as a book which explains "specifically how

Book By Thelin, Lively Review Of Higher Education

John R. Thelin, associate professor of education, has written a serious study about the history of higher education in the United States and has blown away some academic cobwebs and rattled a few campus skeletons in such an engaging manner that his book is interesting to lay readers as well as the administrators and students of education for whom it is intended. His new book is entitled "Higher Education and Its Useful Past."

Most colleges, Thelin finds cherish rituals and shrines to their illustrious past with justifiable pride, but there are exceptions. He cites one institution that having none, hauled in a 75-ton boulder to serve as "Founders' Rock" on a new campus.

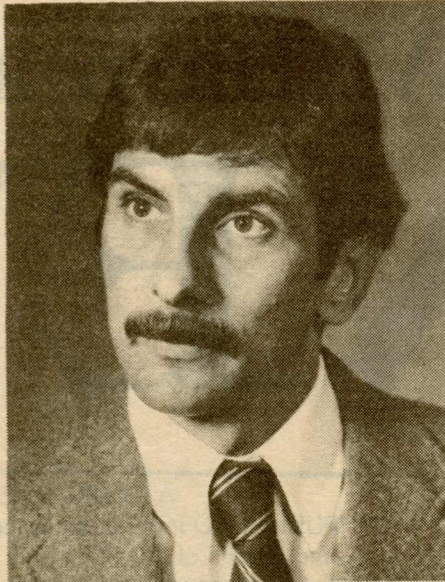

The sports fans who glorify football giants have forgotten one of the best in ignoring Hobey Baker, Princeton 1913, says Thelin. He was "the college athlete supreme: the gentleman sportsman," contends Thelin after researching the role of sports in higher education through the years.

And Thelin cites the gentleman in search of an honorary degree who advertised his candidacy in The Chronicle of Higher Education, the education field's trade journal.

The overemphasis on sports may be a current topic for administrative committees but the issue is not a new one. As far back as the 1300's reveals Thelin, administrators were worried about students neglecting their books for the thrill of competition. Today it is probably football, then it was sword fighting.

And there is nothing new to the lament that support for higher education is eroding. Back in colonial days, Thelin notes, an attorney for the English Crown, tired of the colonial argument that a college would

William H. Warren, William J. Maddocks, James A. Haltiner and Henry E. Mallue, Jr., of the faculty of the School of Business Administration, were guest speakers at the Fall meeting of the Purchasing Management Association of Carolina-Virginia, held Sept. 16-18 at the Motor House, Colonial Williamsburg. Faculty members conducted a seminar on "Purchasing Strategy and Tactics."

Jesse S. Tarleton, associate professor of business administration, presented a paper at an International Symposium on Exporting held in late August in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The paper, co-authored by Professor George Tesar of the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, is entitled "Stimulation of Manufacturing Firms to Export as Part of National Export Policy." The meeting, sponsored by the government of Brazil, the Organization of American States, and Georgetown University, attracted an audience of internationally known policy-makers, academicians, and practitioners active in exporting.

"Guidelines for the Beginning Playwright," an article by Louis E. Catron, theatre and speech, recently was published for the third time in less than a year. It appears in the 1982 edition of The Writer's Handbook, an annual hardcover collection of essays regarding the arts and crafts of writing. The article previously appeared in Dramatics (May, 1981) and The Writer (November, 1981). Before that it was one of the handouts for the playwriting courses.

A paper by Margaret K. Schaefer of the department of mathematics and computer science and Elmer Schaefer of the Marshall Wythe School of Law, will be presented at the meeting of the Southeast Chapter of the Institute of Management Sciences in Myrtle Beach, S.C., on Oct. 8. The paper, entitled "When to Kick a Field Goal," will be published in the proceedings of the meeting.

Virgil McKenna, professor of psychology, has been selected to be a founding member of the Society for Personology. The Society is made up of approximately fifty personality researchers and theorists interested in the study of individual lives in the tradition of Henry A. Murray. The steering committee of the Society consists of Rae Carlson (Rutgers), Alan Elms (Harvard), Silvan Tomkins (Pennsylvania and Princeton), and Edgar Vinacke (S.U.N.Y. at Buffalo).

Robert A. Johnston, professor of psychology, and McKenna have edited Introductory Psychology: Readings for Discussion (Ginn Custom Publishing), a reader specially designed for use in the small discussion sections of Psychology 201-202.

Victoria A. Woodbury, lecturer in Russian, Department of Modern Languages and Literatures, has published "The Art of Characterization in Vladimir Korolenko's Stories" in Occasional Papers in Language, Literature, and Linguistics, Iowa State University, July 1982. She has also been requested to contribute a second article, on the well-known modern Soviet poet Evgenii Evtushenko, to the revised edition of the Encyclopedia of World Literature in the 20th Century, to be published soon by Frederick Ungar Publishers in New York. For World Literature Today she has reviewed the new and enlarged edition of Selected Poems of Marina Tsvetayeva, translated by Elaine Feinstein (Oxford University Press, 1981), and a collection of poems, Iz-za Hrat (From Behind Bars), by the contemporary Soviet Ukrainian dissident poet, Taras Mel'nychuk. Dr. Woodbury also recently reviewed the new textbook, Modern Ukrainian, by Professor Assya Humesky (Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies, 1980) for the Modern Language Journal, Ohio State University.

save souls, snapped back "Souls! Damn your souls! Raise tobacco!"

Thelin says his reason for writing the book is that all too often Henry Ford's quip "History is bunk" has provided a convenient excuse to exclude historical studies from the practical affairs of management and administration.

"My particular concern is that there is little assurance that college and university administrators have read about the history of the institution in which they lead and serve. The oversight is ironic because Henry Ford, in fact, thought history was an important subject, and was upset that it

Physics Colloquiums

Daniel Larsen of the University of Virginia will speak on "Laser Photo-detachment Spectroscopy of Negative Ions in a Magnetic Field: a look at atomic physics in one dimension," at the physics colloquium at 4 p.m., Friday, Oct. 1 in Small 109. Coffee will be served in the conference room at 3:30 p.m.

Speaker at the Oct. 8 colloquium will be S. Triebwasser of IBM who will take as his topic, "Large Scale Integration: The Second Revolution in Electronics."

Women's Forum Meets Tonight

The Women's Forum will present, "The Female Candidate" at 8 p.m. tonight in Millington Auditorium.

The program will feature Shirley Cooper, Democratic Congressional candidate from the 96th District, and Meyera Oberndorf, Virginia Beach Councilwoman.

As a teacher, Mrs. Cooper reaches out towards students in support of educational reform. She is a seasonal political figure, having served seven years on the York County Board of Supervisors and twice chaired that commission.

Mrs. Oberndorf is the outspoken nemesis of the "good ole boy" network in Virginia Beach.

Mission Statement for Campus Police

To: The College Community Date: September 20, 1982
From: Lawrence W. Broomall
Subject: Mission Statement for Campus Police

Recently a panel, serving at the request of President Graves, evaluated various administrative practices within the Campus Police Department of the College. Included in panel recommendations was perceived need for a clearly defined mission statement that would be of value to staff members within the department as well as to the general College community.

Such a mission statement has been approved as follows:

THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY MISSION STATEMENT FOR THE CAMPUS POLICE DEPARTMENT

The primary purpose of the College of William and Mary Campus Policy Department is to provide an environment conducive to and supportive of education at William and Mary. As part of this mission, the Department protects the rights of all persons within its jurisdiction to be secure in their possessions, and to live and work in peace. It is the Department's role to enforce the law and university regulations in a fair and impartial manner, recognizing the limitations of police authority and the constitutional rights of all persons.

The responsibilities associated with this mission are many. They include enforcing federal and state law; enforcing state and university regulations; maintaining peace and order on the campus; protecting persons and property; controlling and enforcing traffic and parking regulations; administering first aid to the injured; preventing crime; educating the community in law enforcemtn; assisting vistors; assisting other university departments in their roles; counselling or referring victims; and generally providing assistance to citizens.

Exceptional responsibilities and autonomy are required to serve a unique citizenry in a special environment. The Department is an organization whose very existence is justified on the basis of community service. Official activity is not limited by traditional law enforcement responsibilities. Actually, that portion of police service dealing with criminal activity is only a part of the Department's overall responsibility. A greater percentage of time and energy is expended on noncriminal service functions and working with law abiding citizens of the community. Police powers are a special resource for the Department and allow sufficient response to situations that require the authority of law. At the same time, the autonomy of the Department as a law enforcement agency allows flexibility in responding to the special situations that occur in the unique environment of a college campus. This autonomy requires that the Department maintain an especially cooperative relationship with the Office of the Dean of Students and the offices of other local criminal justice agencies.

compete with economics as 'the dismal science' " he adds.

As a writer, he explains "my role has been to act as a broker between the discipline of history and the field of higher education administration."

Thein says he is fascinated by colleges and universities. "They are fascinating places. Their charm and complexity comes in large measure from the fact that they are historic institutions." Thein is a student of all aspects of life on the country's campuses and has a library of over 300 titles, mostly novels about student life on campus.
