Reception Monday Evening To Honor Kenan Professor

The Fine Arts Department is extending an invitation to members of the Williamsburg and campus communities to attend a reception to welcome the Collège's first Kenan Distinguished Professor, William Fleming, renowned cultural and intellectual historian and musicologist.

A reception honoring Fleming will be held at 4 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 31 in the foyer of the Andrews Fine Arts Hall.

Fleming will teach two courses this semester, "Arts and Ideas," and "Masterpieces of Art," and will also give several public lectures. His tenure at the college will be limited to this semester.

Fleming is best known to students of art as the author of "Arts and Ideas," originally published by the Henry Holt Co. in

Conference Funding From BSA

The BSA has limited funds available to cover the cost of registration fees, travel, lodging and meals for students wishing to attend conferences during the semester.

Students wishing to attend conference and receive assistance from the BSA funding, should submit a written request to Dan Stipano, chairman, (220-0201) BSA financial committee, before the deadline, Feb. 28.

Threatened 1983-84 Budget Shortfall

Though critical information from the State is still missing, and will remain so for several weeks, the Governor's executive budget for 1983-84 recommends reductions in William and Mary's educational and general appropriations which in sum threaten a possible budgetary shortfall in excess of $800,000 even assuming no salary increases for any category of employee.

In this situation, it is vitally important that we do whatever is possible to keep the university financially flexible, and to avoid expenditure commitments for 1983-84 that may take us to levels we will not be able to support.

To that end, the following actions have been approved by the President, subsequent to discussions in the Planning and Priorities Committee, and are understood to be in effect as of 20 January 1983, and until further notice.

Personnel

1. Deans and directors responsible for recruiting replacements for known faculty and faculty-equivalent vacancies are not to issue any "letters of intent" recommending appointment for 1983-84, until such time as the true budget situation is known, and, within that knowledge, priority decisions on an individual basis can be made as to which positions to fill, which to delay further, and which to leave vacant.

2. No classified or hourly replacement authorizations, unless approved prior to 20 January 1983, will be approved until it is reasonably clear that such positions can be financially supported in 1983-84.

3. All requests for reallocation of classified positions, not approved for consideration prior to 20 January 1983, will be held until further notice.

Maintenance and Operating Budgets

The 1983-84 M&O budget call, already delayed, will be further held until it is clear what level of M&O expenditure can be sustained. All persons responsible for administration of budgets are however notified that, when defined later, the guidelines for M&O requests may provide for no increase, or even a decrease, in funds available for M&O expenditure in 1983-84.

Other Possible Expenditure Reductions

At the direction of the appropriate vice president, all deans and directors are instructed immediately to review all activities and cost centers within their administrative jurisdictions, to determine which of them could, if necessary, be modified, reduced, suspended, or moved from E&G to other funding sources, so as to relieve pressure on the 1983-84 E&G budgets. The conclusions to this review are to be reported in writing to the respective vice presidents no later than 10 February 1983.

It is possible that from the present State legislative process will come revised funding appropriations or revenue flexibilities that will enable us to reduce the large budgetary shortfall we now project. Many persons are working hard to realize such an outcome. For the time being, however, responsible budgetary planning requires that 1983-84 expenditure commitments be held to the lowest possible level. Your understanding of the difficulties, and your cooperation in addressing them, are much appreciated.

Special Programs Offers Wide Variety of Courses

"Education a la carte" might be a good name for a variety of non-credit short courses, seminars, institutes, field studies and conferences offered this spring to Peninsula residents.

Through its Office of Special Programs, the College is inviting adults not interested in degree programs to take part in instruction and entertainment in a variety of fields.

Over 80 topics, from tax planning to pocket billiards, are listed in the new catalogue, copies of which may be obtained by calling the Office of Special Programs, 877-9231, ext. 62. Registration forms are included in the catalogue. Senior citizens may inquire about reduced fees, however, charges will be made for field trips.

Special inquiries concerning registration may be made to the Director of OSP, Carson H. Barnes, Jr., at the telephone number listed above.

Classes are held both in Williamsburg and at the Virginia Associated Research Campus (VARC) in Newport News for the convenience of area residents. Special parking permits for the Williamsburg campus are available for students.

Several new courses have been added to the general interest curriculum. They include: "English as a Second Language," "Non-verbal Communication: Saying it Without Words," "Oral Communication Skills Personalized," and "Financial Planning for the 80's."

New courses in historic and colonial studies include a series of slide lectures on preservation, a course called "Landforms and the Geology of the Richmond Area," and two tours, one of historic churches of St. Mary's and Charles counties in Maryland, and one of 18th century Richmond homes.

A natural basket workshop, instruction in soccer for adults, and a course in graphoanalysis (handwriting analysis) have been added to class offerings in skills and crafts.

Classes in "Personal Growth" and the popular "Women Today" series have been expanded for the spring semester.

"On Camera--Producing for Television," and "How to Succeed in Fast Foods," are two new courses in the section on careers.

The Office of Special Programs offers the free public lecture series "Our Future in the Cosmos," sponsored jointly with NASA Langley Research Center.

Another free program, a series of informational sessions on "Oceanography for Landlubbers" is offered at VIMS. The next series begins Feb. 2.

Papers Sought For Conference March 25-26

The College will be host of the annual meeting of the Virginia Social Science Association, March 25-26.

The VSSA is an organization of Virginia social scientists, especially in anthropology, history, political science, sociology, psychology, economics and business.

Faculty members in the social and behavioral sciences interested in reading papers or attending the sessions as delegates, may contact any of the following persons: Dr. Nelson Wikstrom, VSSA President, Dept. of Political Science, Virginia Commonwealth University, Richmond, Va., or Mario D. Zamora, local arrangements chairman, department of anthropology.

A 10-lecture series, "Stars, Planets and Life," is offered on a fee basis at VARC and begins March 1.

The Office of Special Programs catalogue also gives information on the

Jogathon Nets Over $4,000

The Kiss '96 Jogathon for Women's Athletics, Dec. 1-2 was a runaway success. Over $4,400 was raised.

"I feel very encouraged that, despite the snow, we had such an enthusiastic response," said Karen Arwe, Director of Development for Women's Athletics.

A field of 94 joggers, representing a variety of groups from the college and local community, raised the $4,400 in pledges from 454 sponsors. This revenue brought the year's fund-raising total to over $23,500.00, according to Arwe, whose target for 1982-83 is $30,000.00.

The first special event fund-raiser ever held for the women's program here was supported by Kiss 96 FM, Mid-Atlantic Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Inc. and the Akers Beverage Company. Kiss 96, the popular Tidewater radio station, provided T-shirts, while Mid-Atlantic donated soft drinks, for all participants.

A gift certificate from the Akers Beverage Company was awarded to the lacrosse team, which raised a team-best $241.05. Among the local groups, which entered teams, were the Kiwanis Club, the Rotary Club and Williamsburg Community Hospital. Other college entrants were Swem Library, the Women's Athletics staff, women's athletic teams and a host of sororities, including Phi Mu, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Tri-Delt, Delta Gamma, Chi Omega, Chi Phi and Gamma Phi.

"This will more than likely become an annual event," said Arwe, who feels that future jogathons will draw upon an even greater number of participants and sponsors, "I'm already excited about such a prospect."

Alumnus Chosen For Chilean Work

René A. Henry '54 of Los Angeles, management consultant, author and journalist for the housing industry, has been retained by Fundación Chile for a major project related to housing in Chile.

Fundación Chile is a non profit organization founded in 1976 by the Chilean Government and the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (ITT). Its charter is to bring into the country new technologies that may help upgrade local industry. The main fields of activity of Fundación Chile are food technology, agribusiness, dairy and meat industry, marine resources and new business opportunities in areas such as forestry, non traditional sources of energy and microprocessor technology applied to the automation of industrial processes.

Henry recently spent 12 days in Chile meeting with and presenting a day-long seminar for the nation's leading economists, architects, engineers, component manufacturers, lenders, building code officials and executives in various government agencies.

During his trip to Chile he did an overview analysis of the nation's housing industry, use of wood in housing and the manufactured housing industry. During the seminar he presented recommendations on manufactured housing technology, component standardization, housing financing and tax reform.

NSU Troupe Due Tuesday

Norfolk State University's Touring Ambassadors will present "Stagetime," at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 1 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

This performance is open to the public free of charge and is sponsored by the Black Student Organization and the Office of Minority Affairs as part of the 1983 Black Cultural Series.

The company of college performers was created by its artistic director, Robert Wynn-Jackson, a member of the Norfolk State University faculty.

The Ambassadors present both dramatic and humorous material designed to feature creative artists in drama, song and dance. Oratorical readings and mime sequences are also included. The music is selected mainly from successful Broadway shows. However, the performance includes jazz, popular, spiritual, gospel and rock tunes. Special excerpts from drama, fiction and non-fiction works, and poetry are interspersed with musical selections.

Each production, says Wynn-Jackson, is coordinated with unique costumes and scenic effects. He plans each booking with consideration of the audience, sponsor and environment, aiming to make each performance a new and different one.

For their Williamsburg show, the Ambassadors will include a special tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr.

The Black Cultural Series this semester, which opens with a program of readings by Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Gwendolyn Brooks, Jan. 27, will also include three lectures by prominent professionals in diverse fields. Gen. Julius W. Becton, Jr., Deputy Commanding General for Training TRADOC, Ft. Monroe, will speak at 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 10 in Andrews auditorium.

Sitarist Miner To Perform

Allyn Jane Miner, an accomplished sitar player who received her doctorate in Indian musicology in July from Banaras Hindu University in India, will be heard in concert at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 31 at the Creative Arts House.

The concert is sponsored by the Asian Studies faculty, the department of music and the Creative Arts House. (The Creative Arts House is the last building in the Botetourt Residence Complex.)

Miner has had extensive private instruction in the sitar in India and has performed in several concerts there. She participated in All-India Radio broadcasts from a Varanasi, Delhi, Rampur and Riwa from 1974-82 and participated in the Wisconsin Conference on South Asia in Madison last year.

Miner's dissertation "Hindustani Instrumental Music in Early Modern Period: A Study of the Sitar and Sarod in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries," is in preparation for publication. She has received Rockefeller and Fulbright awards for study.

Her accompanist will be Subhash Karmarkar, a pupil of India's foremost tabla player, Padmashri Ustad Ahmed-Jah Tirkwa, respected as the father of a generation of tabla players.

Karmarkar has accompanied well-known artists and musicians including Ravi Shankar. He won the President of India award in 1955 for his playing.

An engineer by profession, Karmarkar teaches music in his spare time. In December he performed in New York at the invitation of Columbia Pictures at the opening of the movie "Gandhi."

"The Merry Widow"

David Pruitt (left) and Dirk Brown (right) listen to Janice Taylor during a rehearsal of "The Merry Widow" which will be performed Wednesday through Saturday, nightly at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Admission is $4. The Opera Company is offering a two for one bonus for first nighters and has also extended an invitation to Jefferson Hall students to attend the final dress rehearsal this evening. There will be an audience discussion following the performance Wednesday evening.

Gwendolyn Brooks to Read Thursday Evening in Ballroom

Renowned black poet Gwendolyn Brooks will read from her work at a program sponsored by the Black Student Association and the Office of Minority Affairs at 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 27, in the Campus Center Ballroom.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge. A reception will be held in rooms A & B of the Campus Center, following the program.

Winner of the 1950 Pulitzer Prize for her collection of poetry entitled "Annie Allen," Miss Brooks has been called "a milestone in Black culture and heritage."

Earlier this year she was characterized as "a revolutionary black poet disguised as a soft-spoken grandmotherly type," when she spoke in Raleigh at the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women. She travels three-quarters of the year giving readings and holding workshops. In 1979 she turned down the Albert Schweitzer Chair at Cornell University because she enjoys traveling from campus to campus.

Her home is in Chicago where she lives quietly with her husband of more than 40 years, writer Henry Blakely. She has two children.

One reviewer wrote that Miss Brooks' themes are almost always black, and in them is a commitment to genetic ties so deeply rooted that more than a few people — black and white — consider her radical. She began writing poems when she was seven years old. At 14, she was getting some of them published.

Miss Brooks, a native of Kansas, says she grew up in Chicago hoping to publish just one book. She has written a great deal, traveled, and won many literary prizes. She has received over 40 honorary degrees.

Aulos Ensemble Concert Feb. 4

The Aulos Ensemble, a group of young Juilliard laureates, will present a concert at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Feb. 4, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall as part of the current William and Mary Concert Series schedule.

Admission is $4 for members of the College community. Tickets will be available at the Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall box office the evening of the performance. Advance reservations should be made at the office of the director of the series, Ken Smith, at the Campus Center, ext. 4236.

The program will include Quintetto in F, Op. 11, No. 3, and Quintet in D, Op. 11, No. 6 by Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782); Sonata in C for flute, oboe, obbligato harpsichord and cello by Johann Christoph Friederich Bach (1732-1795); and Trio Sonata in G, BWV 1039 by Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750).

The ensemble will also perform Sonata in C, K.296 by Mozart; and Trio No. 91 in D by Haydn.

Fleming

1955 and now going into its 7th printing. This textbook is used in approximately 800 colleges across the country. Fleming is also the author of "Understanding Music: Style, Structure and History," which he co-authored with Abraham Veinus. He also has written "Art, Music and Ideas," published in 1970. At present, he is preparing the manuscript for a new book entitled "Baroque Concerts for the Arts."

After a career as a concert pianist during the 1930s and 1940s in Europe and America, Fleming decided to diversify his interests and begin studying art. "It was a matter of intellectual growth. The crass commercialism of the music world is very repellent. It was a matter of keeping my self respect," he said.

As a professor at Syracuse University during and after World War II, Fleming found his art and music classes jammed with war veterans.

"Artwork is always meant to be understood by an audience. We need to understand what motivated people to build and decorate the way they did."

He adds, "The idea of art as complete self-expression is complete falsehood. The art has to reach some audience. You don't have to like everything. Fortunately, we have a choice."

The combining of art, music and history has led Fleming to describe his career as "compleat humanities," paraphrasing an advertisement of the 18th century in which Handel's oratorios were billed as "compleat entertainment."

"We have to revel in the riches that are available to us. The world is full of riches. We have to regret that we do not have longer lifetimes to see it all."

The $750,000 gift to fund the Kenan professorship is the largest gift from a nationally prominent foundation that the college has ever received. The grant, from the William R. Kenan, Jr. Charitable Trust of New York City, was made in September 1981 to the Endowment Association of the College.

Kenan was a prominent North Carolina chemist, engineer, industrialist executive and philanthropist who died in 1965. For some 40 years, he was president of Flagler Systems Company. The Kenan Charitable Trust established by his will has traditionally aided education, primarily through the establishment of Kenan endowed professorships.

Blaze Destroys Dormitory Built for First Co-eds

On what will probably be remembered as the coldest night of the year, Jefferson Hall was totally destroyed by a fire that left 185 students stranded in sub-freezing temperatures.

An electrical malfunction behind or in a refrigerator located in a first floor kitchen of the building was pinpointed by the State Fire Marshal's office as the cause of the blaze.

Opening in 1921 as a women's dormitory for the co-ed population that the College had first admitted a few years earlier. On March 15, 1918 by an Act of the General Assembly, William and Mary became the first coeducational college in Virginia. It was named in honor of Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States and an alumnus.

An estimated $3 million in damage ravaged the Georgian structure, the eastern link of residence halls along Jamestown Road and Old Campus Drive and includes Landrum, Chandler and Barret Halls. The building was insured for $5 million.

About 70 firefighters from Williamsburg, James City and York counties, Newport News and the James City-Bruton volunteer squad and Camp Peary fought the fire before it was brought under control Friday morning.

The alarm to the Fire Department was set off at 1:13 a.m. by third floor sensors, although Andy Kahl, a student living on the third floor alerted the dorm by pulling the fire alarm when his resident advisor Mark Rozzi, saw smoke coming from a wall vent.

After the initial evacuation, the Jefferson Hall RA's went back with master keys to make sure everyone had evacuated the building. When the Williamsburg Fire Department arrived, they used these master keys to make another sweep of the building. About 2 a.m., Alec Murphy, a freshman, dressed in shorts, stumbled onto the second-story balcony to the surprise of firefighters who thought everyone was out of the building. Firemen rescued him with a ladder.

Firefighters worked inside the building until the first floor - saturated by water from the buildings sprinkler system - buckled and a crack appeared in the wall. The firefighters were then ordered out of the building.

About 9 a.m., the firefighters began to get the upper hand. By that time, the east end of the building, with the exception of the roof, had been spared fire damage, but there was severe smoke and water damage.

The building continued to smolder for much of the day and small fires reappeared at several points during the afternoon, but they were quickly extinguished.

Actions Initiated to Restore Building

According to Lawrence W. Broomall, Jr., vice president for business affairs, all discussions between College officials and members of the legislative and executive branch in Richmond have centered on replacing Jefferson Hall, or restoring it to its original state, to house the same number of students that previously lived there. Broomall said that he had received promises from several officials to help expedite that goal. He said various state government officials had been extremely responsive to the College's needs and that he had talked with a number of legislators who appeared to have sympathy for the College's predicament, particularly for the students and their families.

Broomall said the College has already initiated inspections of other campus buildings, looking for similar kinds of equipment and similar conditions which may exist.

As soon as the College gets official clearance from the office of the State Fire Marshall, a structural engineering firm will be called in to inspect the remaining structure and give an estimate of what can be used and what must be discarded. "We hope within two weeks to have a final report on the structure so that we can make commitments with architects and begin the state procedure for reconstruction. Until we have the engineering firm's final report, we really don't have any sense of what the cost of replacement will be or the extent of the damage," he said.

In housing the students, Broomall said the College must make two considerations: First, it must meet the needs of the students displaced from Jefferson Hall for the rest of the academic year. Next, the College must seek replacement of the building in order to continue to meet the Board of Visitors' objective of housing at least 80 percent of undergraduate students.

Assistance Sought To Replenish Red Cross Funds

(A message prepared Monday for distribution to the local media)

The College of William and Mary extends its sincere thanks to the whole Williamsburg community for an overwhelming expression of help in the wake of the Jefferson Hall fire Jan. 20.

Since the large amounts of clothing contributed now more than meet the immediate needs of the students, the College suggests that further contributions take the form of donations to one of two funds.

Those wishing to help the local chapter of the Red Cross replenish its financial resources, which were severely strained by the fire, should contact: The American Red Cross, Williamsburg-James City County Chapter, 109 Cary Street, telephone 253-0228.

Those wishing to contribute directly to the immediate financial relief of students displaced by the fire should contact the office of the Dean of Students, W. Samuel Sadler, James Blair Hall, telephone 253-4387 or 253-4495.

Benefit Rock

Four William and Mary campus rock bands will give a concert at the Pub to benefit the residents of Jefferson Hall, from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m., Saturday, Jan. 29. Admission is only $2 for all four bands. All admission and refreshment proceeds will go to help Jefferson residents, says Randy Carroll, one of the organizers. Sound for the concert will be provided by Jim Winter of Wintersound. For further information, see the ad in this coming Friday's Flat Hat, or call Alex Teitelbaum at the Wigwam office, 229-5944, or Randy Carroll at 220-2314.

President Thanks All Who Helped

The fact that all of the 185 brave students who called Jefferson their home are safe and well, for which I am profoundly grateful, is of course the most important outcome of that disastrous fire. To each of you I can only express my deep sadness at the loss of your William and Mary home and virtually all of your possessions. We shall continue to do all we can to help you rebuild your lives as members of this College community, with all the support and assistance we can muster.

To the members of the administration and staff and the scores of students who offered incalculable help to the students of Jefferson during the long and dark hours of Thursday morning, you have my respect and gratitude. And to all of the members of the faculty, administration, and staff and the hundreds of students who have spontaneously volunteered every conceivable aid to the Jefferson students in the days that have followed, your thoughtfulness and generosity, in both substance and spirit, are more gratifying than I can say. In time of crisis and need William and Mary is indeed a caring and concerned community.

To all members of the administration and staff who have been working untold hours with thoroughly professional competence to solve a myriad of problems, I think you know how proud I am of each of you.

We are moving forward with plans and actions that will lead, I am confident, to the rebuilding of Jefferson. In the meanwhile, the College, which has suffered a tragedy, is stronger now than ever, because of all of you.

Firemen Battle Blaze, Cold, Fatigue

"This was the most stubborn fire I've ever seen," Williamsburg Fire Marshal J. Robert Bailey, Jr., told Daily Press reporter David Allen on the scene.

"We couldn't stay on top of it," Bailey said. "We're used to fighting structural fires from the inside. Once the weight of the water and the fire damage brought the first floors down, all we could do was try to contain it from the outside."

Describing the frustrations of the firemen trying to get to the source of the fire amid increasing smoke inside the building, Bert Geddy, Bailey's assistant chief said "It was chop and cut, chop and cut for nearly an hour," as firemen raced with flames that traveled inside the walls and false ceilings. "It was grueling physically, exhausting work in thick smoke."

"I've been a firefighter for 20 years and this is by far the worst one that I ever fought."

Williamsburg firemen stayed at the scene of the fire throughout the day and night on Friday after the fire had been contained, to be sure no new fires started from stray embers.

It was a clear crisp night Thursday but the area around the Jefferson dorm looked like a snowy wonderland. Water on the sidewalks froze and trees had gathered icicles from the spray of the hoses. Community Reaches Out

Contributions and Donations - Jefferson Hall

I would like to emphasize that the attached listing of contributions and donations is not yet complete since contributions and offers of assistance have come into a number of offices and are being coordinated and recorded. It should also be pointed out that a number of people have contributed anonymously both to the campus fund and to the American Red Cross. The College is most grateful to all and appreciates the tremendous caring and concern represented by these contributions. The citizens of the local communities and the campus have responded generously with help in all manners.

Mrs. William M. Bangel of Williamsburg, chairman of a number of special events planned to mark the 250th anniversary of the President's House, holds the official 250th commemorative logo which was submitted by Miki Sohma, a senior, fine arts major, from Garden City, N. Y. On hand for the presentation at the President's House were President and Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr.

The logo will be used for celebration materials throughout the year. During the past five years, the Committee to Refurnish the President's House, under the leadership of White House Curator Clement E. Conger, has increased the value of furnishings in the President's House by over $1 million.

Quarterly Publishes New Haynes Manuscript

A newly discovered manuscript by Lemuel Haynes, establishing a little-known Afro-American minister as the nation's first black spokesman against slavery, is printed for the first time in the January issue of the William and Mary Quarterly, the leading journal of early American studies.

The previously unknown essay was found in the archives of Harvard University by Ruth Bogin, a historian at Pace University.

The William and Mary Quarterly is published by the Institute of Early American History and Culture at the College and is sponsored jointly by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Haynes has often been belittled or ignored by historians, according to Richard Newman, Haynes' bibliographer, because he did not speak out against slavery. "We now see that Haynes was in fact 50 years ahead of his time," Newman says. "Professor Bogin's extraordinary discovery makes it clear that Haynes was the most notable black man in America before the emergence of Frederick Douglass."

Bogin estimates that the manuscript, entitled "Liberty Further Extended," was written in 1776 when Haynes was a private in the army of the American Revolution. Apart from petitions for freedom, the earliest black statement against slavery was previously thought to be David Walker's "Appeal" published in Boston in 1829.

Bogin who is currently studying egalitarian ideology in the Revolutionary era, states that the manuscript is a significant addition to the literature of anti-slavery. Few blacks had the opportunity or the literary skills to compose theoretical statements of their views, she points out.

The child of a white mother and a black father, Haynes lived in England from 1753 to 1833, primarily in Rutland, Vermont, where he was pastor of the all-white Congregational church. Largely self-educated, he was the first black to be ordained to the ministry in this country as well as the first

Elizabeth S. George Fellowship Won Again by Scott MacLaren

For the second consecutive year, Scott F. MacLaren of Plainfield, N.J., a graduate in business, has been awarded the Elizabeth S. George Fellowship.

The scholarship, which pays tuition, is named for the wife of W. Brooks George '32, a former member of the Board of Visitors of the College and past chairman of the Board of Directors of the William and Mary Business School Sponsors, Inc.

MacLaren is planning a career in business economics in the area of planning and forecasting when he graduates in May. He currently serves as administrative coordinator for the Management Consultants Group at the Business School, a student-run consulting service.

This summer MacLaren was a productivity researcher for Busch Gardens, The Old Country, in Williamsburg.

A 1976 graduate of William and Mary with a double concentration in government and philosophy, MacLaren worked for three years in the management training program at F.W. Woolworth in Richmond before beginning graduate work. Also in 1976, he set up a house painting business with Ken Kline which he used to augment his income when he began graduate school.

MacLaren was also the recipient of a state scholarship this year and has also received the William S. Hodge, Jr., scholarship.

As an undergraduate, MacLaren was All State and All South in soccer. He was active in Circle K projects. Music is also an

Mrs. Ryland Donates Furniture To President's House Project

An important Virginia secretary-bookcase has recently been given to the project to furnish the President's House by Mary Boyd Ryland of Williamsburg.

Mrs. Ryland, a long-time friend of the College and widow of Dr. Archie Ryland, currently resides on Francis Street in the historic Philip Barraud residence, owned by Colonial Williamsburg. Mrs. Ryland is a life tenant of the house.

Dr. and Mrs. Ryland were active in community work, most notably the garden clubs, local theater, and Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Ryland is a native of Halifax County.

The secretary-bookcase will be displayed in the President's House.

The acquisitions program at the President's House has been underway for the past five years, under the leadership of Dr. Clement E. Conger, curator of the White House and of the diplomatic reception rooms at the State Department. The President's House collection now exceeds $1 million in value, and the home itself has become a popular visitation point for many distinguished guests of the College, as well as participants in the annual Williamsburg Antique Forum.

The President's House will be open to the public on April 26 during Garden Week in Williamsburg, at which time the Ryland gift may be seen.

Dr. Archie Ryland, who died in 1953, spent 29 years as a professor of modern languages at William and Mary. He arrived at the College as associate professor of French in 1923, and became a full professor in 1928. He retired from teaching in 1952 and died the following year. He was chairman of the modern languages department from 1949-52.

A native of King and Queen County, he received his undergraduate degree from the University of Richmond, which was founded by his great uncle. He received his master's and doctorate degrees from Harvard.

The secretary-bookcase has four graduated reverse serpentine or ox-bow shaped drawers over ogee feet. The broken arch pediment is centered with a wood-carved flame finial. Paneled doors are veneered mahogany. Inside of the desk are six small drawers and pigeon holes. A center door has a sunburst carved oval medallion with reeded columns on each side.

Continuing Review of Classified Position(s) Job Descriptions

Rule 5.7 of the Rules for the Administration of the Virginia Personnel Act contains a requirement that each classified position be reviewed at least annually. The procedure insures that significant changes which may occur in the duties and responsibilities of positions over a period of time are recognized, and that minimum qualifications for employment which are based on job descriptions are valid.

To facilitate the maintenance of these job descriptions in an up-to-date manner, an employment opportunity (classified or hourly) will not be advertised unless a valid job description effective not earlier than Feb. 1, 1982, is on file in the Personnel Office.

In addition to the foregoing method, each time an annual Performance Evaluation is rendered on a classified employee, a current job description with an organizational chart must be submitted to the Personnel Office with the completed Performance Evaluation. Exceptions will be made in those cases where a job description has been submitted within the last twelve months.

The procedures outlined in the preceding paragraphs are effective February 1, 1983.
