

IEAHC Gets DeWitt Wallace Grant To Publish Manuscript

The Institute of Early American History and Culture, co-sponsored by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, has received a grant of $45,000 from the DeWitt Wallace Fund to facilitate publications of a three-volume book manuscript written in the eighteenth-century and never before put into print.

The work is Dr. Alexander Hamilton's "History of the Ancient and Honorable Tuesday Club," a mock-heroic narrative about the goings-on over a ten-year period in the 1740's and '50s of an upper-class men's club in Annapolis, Md.

The Institute expects to publish the "History" as a three-volume set in 1985.

The co-publisher will be the University of North Carolina Press.

The DeWitt Wallace Fund is named for Mr. Wallace, founder of Reader's Digest magazine, who died in 1981.

The "History of the Tuesday Club," is essentially a work of comic fiction, but it has a basis in fact. The Edinburgh-educated Hamilton founded the Tuesday Club shortly after he came to America in 1739 and married into the prominent Dulany family. In his often ribald history, which

Poussaint Speaks Thursday in CC

Dr. Alvin Poussaint, associate professor of psychiatry and associate dean for Student Affairs at Harvard Medical School will speak at 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 17, in the Campus Center Ballroom.

Dr. Poussaint is the third speaker in the current series marking Black History Month, which is sponsored jointly by the Black Student Organization and the Office of Minority Affairs.

Dr. Alvin Poussaint

Congressman Louis Stokes of Ohio will be the last speaker in the series. He is scheduled to visit the College Feb. 24. Earlier, Pulitzer Prize Winning Poet Gwendolyn Brooks and Gen. Julius W. Becton, Jr., stationed at Fort Monroe, were campus speakers on the cultural series. No topic has been announced for Dr. Poussaint's talk.

Dr. Poussaint has made the many issues that affect Black Americans his life's work, including violence in society, the fallacy of IQ testing, interracial relations, affirmative action, white racism, Black roadblocks to Black unity, Black Americans' self image, family relations, and delivery of health care.

In addition to his duties at Harvard, Dr. Poussaint is on the staff of the Children's Hospital in Boston where he is a member of the Family Support Center staff and is active in research.

He is a best-selling author of "Why Blacks Kill Blacks," 1972, and with Dr. James P. Comer, "Black Child Care," 1975. He has written dozens of articles for lay and professional publications. He has served as consultant to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Congressional Black Caucus.

Born in Harlem, Dr. Poussaint attended Columbia University and received his M.D. from Cornell University in 1960. He took postgraduate training at UCLA Neuropsychiatric Institute, where he served as Chief Resident in Psychiatry in 1964-65.

From 1965-67 he was Southern Field Director of the Medical Committee for

$1,500 Grant Offers Summer Study In Israel

A $1,500 scholarship for a four to six-week study and travel visit to Israel during the summer of 1983 is now available to all full-time undergraduate and graduate students at the College.

This scholarship opportunity is being made possible through the generosity of Nathan P. Jacobs of New York City.

Deadline for applications is March 4.

The scholarship is intended to afford a unique opportunity for a student with special interests in the past and present religious, cultural, and political life of Israel, to pursue first-hand study in Israel.

Depending on the individual student's itinerary, the scholarship should in most cases provide most all of the expenses incurred in a four to six-week stay, up to the $1,500 stipend. The exact time of the visit, places of residence, and other matters are left to the scholarship recipient. The College, however, will assist the student in plans and arrangements as much as possible.

Students applying for the scholarship should have a commendable academic record and, most importantly, a clear and persuasive reason for wishing to visit and study in Israel. Preference will be given to applicants who have not previously visited Israel.

Harpichordists To Play Tonight

Harpichordists James Darling and Thomas Marshall, will give a program tonight at 8 p.m. in the Wren Chapel.

Both musicians are members of the music faculty of the College. Darling is also choirmaster and organist at Bruton Parish Church. Marshall is choirmaster and organist at the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church.

Their program will include Concerto grosso in D minor by Vivaldi; Suite in A minor by Couperin; Concerto a due organi by Luccinetti; Sonata in A major and Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue in D minor by J.S. Bach; Suite in C minor by Handel; and Grand Duet Sonata in C by Mozart.

Registrar Opens Office Discussion

On Thursday, 24 February, all of the staff from the Registrar's Office will be in Millington Auditorium from 3 until 5 p.m. to discuss with students any matters relating to our responsibilities. If you have any questions, suggestions, or complaints about registration, grade reporting, validation, drop/add, determining residency for tuition purposes, concentration or minor declaration procedures, transcript preparation, or any of the other things we do, please come to the meeting and let us know. We hope many of you will come to Millington Auditorium on Thursday and share your concerns with us.

Maidment Authors "A Guide To Saying More With Less"

by Lisa Heuvel '74

"There isn't much we really own. But what we do own is vital. We own the interval between life and death. And we own our own feelings."

With those few words taken from his new book, Straight Talk, Robert Maidment says a lot. And that is exactly the point of this William and Mary professor and educational consultant. Straight Talk: A Guide to Saying More With Less is his tribute to "Being authentic and being ourselves," as Maidment puts it, in thinking, talking, listening and writing.

Studying the nuances of message giving and receiving has led Maidment to one outstanding truth--that it's how a message is received that counts, not how it's sent. A specialist in organizational development and educational management, Maidment has delivered that message to business professionals as well as teachers and professors--and he says it applies to everyone.

"We are at any given time thinking, feeling individuals, in a roughly 50-50 balance," remarks Maidment, a low-key individual himself whose office door carries the message "Sic bicutus disintegrat" (Latin for "That's how the cookie crumbles."). "People have become fairly adroit at picking up thoughts, but not feelings -- they pick up the words, but not the intended messages."

Straight Talk, which was released January 28, is intended by Maidment to help people in all walks of life to communicate their real feelings, and he shows no hesitation to shoot from the hip in providing examples of how people bruise one another verbally, whether it's intentional or not. He writes of caustic comments such as, "Hey Harry, I really like your new jacket. Too bad they didn't have your size."

While Maidment disclaims "The law of the equivalent zap" as an original, it is his description of what everyone but a saint would feel if he was Harry. As Maidment puts it, "The law of the equivalent zap suggests that sooner or later, revenge will be ours. The temptation to render comeuppance to the zapper often seems irresistible. However inviting it might be to destroy the zapper, the best defense is to accept and ignore. This behavior defuses the zapper."

The genial University of Virginia alum also says, "Most of us talk too much," and he doesn't exclude professors from the list. In the typical college classroom, he notes the law of two-thirds applies: "Two-thirds of the time someone is talking. Two-thirds of the time that someone is the instructor. And two-thirds of what the instructor says is irrelevant."

Straight Talk, Maidment's fourth book, is based on a communications primer of the same title published by the National Association of Secondary School Principals. His previous book, a little gem called Robert's Rules of Disorder: A Guide to Mismanagement, is now in its third printing.

Whether it's in the home, office or wherever, Maidment believes people can learn to be what they say they are, and truly communicate. "Whatever the interaction," he writes, "We're far safer when we do things with others. Not to them. Not for them. Not despite them. Not beyond them. But with them."

New Book Presented Altshuler At Reception In His Honor

Faculty of the department of anthropology and friends gathered at a reception Friday evening, Feb. 4, to recognize the contributions of a former department chairman, Nathan Altshuler.

Highlight of the festivities, held in the Harley Room of Washington Hall, was the presentation to Altshuler of a copy of a new book entitled "Field work -- The Human Experience" -- latest in a series of books entitled a "Library of Anthropology."

The new volume is dedicated to Altshuler "Professor of Anthropology and Founder of the Department of Anthropology, The College of William and Mary in Virginia" for his significant contributions to American Anthropology.

Edited by Robert Lawless of the University of Florida, Vinson H. Sutlive Jr., and Mario D. Zamora of William and Mary, the new book includes a mix of contributions by American and Third World anthropologists and concentrates on the experiences of investigators "studying the inner workings of society by entering into the life of its members."

"Fieldwork" was published by Gordon and Breach Science Publishers and Patricia Steel of the New York office came to Williamsburg to present the book to Altshuler Friday evening.

Contributors include Victor A. Liguori, associate professor of anthropology and associate scientist at VIMS, who writes about his research with the Guinea men in "Come Ahead, If You Dare," and Charles Wagley of Florida, a recent visiting professor of anthropology on campus, who writes about field work in Guatemala.

Sutlive has contributed a chapter entitled "The Conversion of a Missionary," about his work in Borneo among the Iban, and Zamora has authored "Initial Encounter, Choice, and Change in Field Research."

Other contributions and their topics include the following: David J. Banks, SUNY Buffalo, "Front Structure to History in Malaya"; Enya P. Flores-Meiser, Ball State University, "Field Experience in Three Societies"; Daniel T. Hughes, Ohio State University, "Contrasting Experiences in Fieldwork"; R. S. Khare, University of Virginia, "Between Being Near and Distant: Reflections on Initial Approaches and Experiences of an Indian Anthropologist"; Allan F. Burns, University of Florida, "Feds and Locals: Stages of Fieldwork in Applied Anthropology"; Patricia Snyder Weibust, University of Connecticut, "Filipinos Were My Teachers" and Charles F. Keyes, "The Observer Observed: Changing Identities of Ethnographers in a Northeastern Thai Village."

Altshuler, who joined the faculty of the College in 1960, has done field work himself in many parts of the world. In 1949 he made a study of the Eskimo and Cree acculturation along the Great Whale River Hudson Bay. He spent 1951-52 at the University of Arizona doing field work as a part of a study of diffuse social sanctions of the Papago and Hopi Indians.

Since coming to William and Mary he has done field study of mental hospital and health programs of several nations in

Senior Marine Scientist Feted at Retirement Party

Jay D. Andrews, Senior Marine Scientist at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) of the College of William and Mary, was honored on the occasion of his retirement with a luncheon Friday, January 27, 1983 in the Byrd Hall Conference Room by faculty, staff and friends.

Andrews, nationally and internationally known for his research on oyster diseases, has worked at VIMS for 36 years, starting at its early beginning as the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory in Yorktown, in 1946. The first twenty-five years included studies of setting of oysters in the James River seed area and testing other areas for spat-fall in search of additional seed oyster sources. Among his accomplishments are 90 research papers, published in national and international scientific journals.

Andrews is an honorary member of the National Shellfisheries Association which he served as president and editor of the journal for several years. He has been on several editorial boards of national journals and reviewed many scientific papers for other scientific publications.

Dr. Frank O. Perkins, Dean/Director of

VIMS presented the scientist with an inscribed plaque in recognition of his years of dedication to VIMS and the Commonwealth, and gifts from the staff.

Andrews retirement plans include: gardening, reading, birdwatching, and working on his timberland in Gloucester.

The Career Speaker Series will sponsor two seminars in the coming week.

"Careers in the Insurance Industry" will be held Thursday, Feb. 17, at 4 p.m. in Morton 341. Geoffrey Beitner, of the New York Life Insurance Company, will highlight opportunities available in the insurance industry, and two agents will relate their personal sales experiences.

The second seminar, "Careers in Radiation Oncology", will be presented by Judy Turner on Tuesday, Feb. 22, at 7 p.m. in Morton 36. Oncology is the study and treatment of malignant diseases. Ms. Turner, who is the administrative director for the Radiation Oncology Center at Norfolk General Hospital, will outline the many facets of oncology.

For further information on these and other career seminars, contact the Office of Career Planning at X4427.

Monies Raised For Jefferson Fund

Theta Delta Chi raised approximately $1,000 for the Jefferson Hall Fire Fund over the weekend and set a new Guinness Book of World Records entry for over 50 hours of continuous Foosball.

Alumna Responds

Carol Titmus '61, a former resident of Jefferson Hall sent a check for the Jefferson Hall fund and the following letter expressing her feelings about the fire:

"I was saddened to learn of the fire at Jefferson Hall, especially since it was my residence for the first two years I attended William and Mary. Due to its smaller size, a special spirit of togetherness and fellowship existed among those of us who lived there. This greatly helped in making the transition from home to dormitory life.

"Material possessions, while of little significance in regard to the more important aspects of life, nevertheless, often provide a small link between home and college. Also books and other items necessary for academic work are very expensive to replace. For this reason, I would like for the enclosed check ($1,000 from the Titmus Foundation, Inc.) to be used to help the students replace items that were lost in the fire.

"I would like to extend my congratulations to all college personnel, students and firefighters responsible for the safe evacuation of the students and the compassionate and efficient manner in which the subsequent events were handled."

Mark Romness and Matt Dowdy began playing at 11 a.m., Friday, and didn't stop until 1 p.m., Sunday. They eclipsed the old record of 42 hours and 38 minutes set in Ireland, according to Daily Press reporter Bob Evans, an alumnus, who covered the event.

The fraternity men told Evans that the search for a new record to break resulted in a long-term Foosballing because "this one had the least amount of time required." The second quickest route to a record was 48 hours of water polo. After that, said Romness, "You'd look like a prune."

The Jefferson Jog-A-Thon in William and Mary Hall, sponsored by the W&M Physical Education Majors Club and co-presidents Karen Dudley and Wayne McMasters, and secretary-treasurer John Mitrovic, will contribute approximately $1,200 if all pledges are honored.

The efforts by the students are aimed at offsetting the $48,000 spent by the Williamsburg-James City County Chapter of the American Red Cross helping students who lost possessions in the Jefferson Hall fire. The amount spent by the Red Cross is ten times more than the organization had budgeted for such an emergency.

Blanket Loan

The Student Health Center would like to have back any blankets loaned out during the Jefferson Hall fire which are no longer in use.

Reilly Wins Spot in Ryan Finals

Don Reilly, a sophomore, will represent the Southeastern region of the United States as a finalist for the prestigious Irene Ryan Acting Award which will be awarded at the Kennedy Center, the weekend of April 16.

In the opinion of the judges, Reilly was selected because they felt he stands a good chance of winning in Washington. Reilly was one of three William and Mary students selected to compete in the regional round held at Virginia Tech in Blacksburg in January.

Don Reilly

The theatre department entered its production of "Tartuffe," staged in November, in the American College Theatre Festival which also sponsors the Irene Ryan competition. The judges came to see the play and while they did not select "Tartuffe," they did ask three members of the cast, Reilly, Alex Iden, a sophomore from Berryville, Va., and Janet Rollins, a junior from Hampton, N.J. to enter the Ryan competition.

Richard Palmer, artistic director of the William and Mary Theatre, noted that the nomination of three actors from one school was a tribute to the high quality of their performances. Usually, said Palmer, judges select only one actor from a production.

Reilly earned a spot in the nationals by competing against 50 actors from 10 Southeastern states and was awarded a $750 acting scholarship and expenses to the finals in Washington, D.C.

In April he will compete against 12 other regional winners. Two will be selected for $2,500 scholarships. Recipients of the national Irene Ryan Acting Scholarships, according to Palmer, are typically much sought after by graduate acting programs throughout the country.

At the regional competition the original field of 50 was narrowed to 12 finalists for the final judging.

While he savors his victory in the regionals, Reilly is particularly pleased that the judges liked his interpretation of Hamlet, and felt that someday he could indeed play the role as a professional. "To any actor, that means a lot," says Reilly.

Hamlet is a big risk in an audition, but Reilly felt he could make it work for him. He talked with Jerry Bledsoe of the theatre and speech faculty who directed him in "Tartuffe"; and when he got no objections to his choice, he decided to go with his hunch.

"I'm finally able to relax for the first time since I came to school," said Reilly after the competition. "I came to school a year early and I have put a lot of pressure on myself to try and become a better actor."

Reilly's first role with the William and Mary theatre was as Hotspur in "Henry IV". Later that year he played the title role in "The Elephant Man."

As a member of the Virginia Shakespeare Festival Company last summer he performed in all three plays presented. He was especially noted for his role as "Richard III," and as Bertram in "All's Well That Ends Well."

Maps On Exhibit In Swem Library

The Swem Library exhibit in the Edward Zollinger Museum includes the library's own "Frenchman's Map" and related maps of Rochambeau's campaigns in Virginia.

Together they offer some impression of the extraordinary artistry of French military cartography, and at the same time help to solve the puzzles associated with the Frenchman's Map.

The exhibit will remain until March 16. The gallery is open daily, Monday thru Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m., and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

Alan Simpson, formerly Donnelly Professor of History at the University of Chicago, and a trustee of Colonial Williamsburg, lectured on "The Mysteries of the Frenchman's Map" at the College on Wednesday, Feb. 2, under the auspices of the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

He identified six puzzles connected with the Frenchman's map and offered answers to five, viz. When was it done? Why was it done? Who were its authors? Only the sixth puzzle -- the fate of the map after the French left Williamsburg -- remains wholly enigmatic. His answers to these questions revealed a wealth of new information about the College's map.

Simpson is responsible for the choice of maps included in the exhibit and their organization.

The printed introduction to the exhibit acknowledges Simpson's expertise and also acknowledges the following loans: Princeton University Library, three Berthier maps; Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, Capitaine's map and two photostats; Bruton Parish Church, Capitaine's campsite map of Williamsburg; the Newport News Historical Society, Blaskowitz facsimile of Newport; and the National Park Service, a photograph of the map of the Siege of Yorktown.

Faculty Club Plans Party In Washington Hall

The Faculty Club will hold its fourth social event of the year on Friday, Feb. 25, in the Anthropology Display Area in the basement of Washington Hall.

Persons attending will have the opportunity to visit the African Room with its many artifacts.

Fee for membership this year is $14, which entitles the holder to reduced rates at all parties. Members are charged $4 per person per party while non-members are charged $7. Non-drinking non-members are charged $6 per person while non-drinking members are charged only $3.

The Faculty Club is open to all members of the faculty and administration of the College. Individuals who join the club on Feb. 25 at the door or who pay their membership before Feb. 25 will be admitted to this party along with a spouse or one guest (one guest only) at no extra charge. Membership fees may be paid to Roy Pearson,

New Marsh Fund Will Help Students In Emergencies

Three alumni of the College have honored their mother Mrs. Edith Marsh, with the establishment of the Edith Rohlfs Marsh Endowment Fund.

Income from the fund will be used at the discretion of the Office of Student Financial Aid on behalf of students in emergency situations.

Mary Ruth Payne '75 and Meredith Marsh Rivers '72, along with their husbands, Philip S. Payne '73 and John R. Rivers, started the fund with gifts totaling $2,500. The fund currently stands at $5,290.

Announcement of the Fund and presentation to Mrs. Marsh of the Resolution from the Endowment Association, was made at a reception in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, Monday afternoon, Jan. 31, marking Mrs. Marsh's retirement from the College.

Mrs. Marsh joined the College staff on May 17, 1967 in the office of the School of Continuing Studies and later moved to the Office of Student Financial Aid where she has established a reputation for warm friendship and assistance to students.

"Her long and faithful service has been an inspiration to the entire College community," noted the Endowment Association. Trustees extended "very best wishes and congratulations to Mrs. Marsh on her retirement and expressed their sincere appreciation for her dedicated service to the College and its students.

Mrs. Marsh spent her childhood in the company of six older brothers and a younger sister on a farm near Akron, Mich. After graduation as salutatorian of her high school class, she went to business college in Bay City, Mich. and later became an executive secretary for the Dow Chemical Company in Midland, Mich. She moved to Williamsburg in 1964.

"The fund," said her boss, E. Leon Looney, director of the student financial aid office, "will simply be an extension of her generosity to William and Mary students. She is a most loving and caring individual and went out of her way to serve students. A lot of what she did, only she knows. She's a tremendous lady."

President Graves and Leon Looney look over Resolution establishing new fund with Mrs. Marsh.

Employees Receive Awards For Outstanding Service to College

Three housekeeping awards were announced recently, one for the months of December and January, and one for the first semester.

Mrs. Ethel B. Williams, who has worked for the College for more than 10 years, has been awarded the first semester housekeeping award which includes a citation and a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Mrs. Martha Christian received the housekeeping award for December and have five children, Felicia Baker, Joy Jackson, Patrice Baker and Cedrick Baker and two grandchildren, Willie Jackson and Fenica Baker. Mrs. Williams' mother, Mrs. Bernice Ferguson, and her stepfather, John Ferguson, live in Toano and she has one brother, Nathaniel Baker, living in Williamsburg.

Mrs. Williams says she gets along well with her supervisor, Raymond Wallace, and finds the College "a friendly place to ing employee, a very constant worker who is always on the job on time. Her attendance record was so good, in fact, she had to take time off recently so she wouldn't lose accumulated leave.

Mrs. Martha Christian has worked for the College for two and one-half years and was formerly employed at the Charles City High School.

Miss Sarah Tyler won the award for January. Both were presented framed citations.

Mrs. Williams said she was very surprised to win the semester award. She said she had some prior knowledge of her award for November but this time she was told only that she was to report to the business office in James Blair.

A member of Chickahominy Baptist Church, Mrs. Williams is a Pastor's Aide, a member of the Elks Club of Williamsburg and the Blossomette Savings Club of Toano. She likes to garden, cans a lot of vegetables in the summer and loves to cook. She says she doesn't have any particular dish she likes to cook but she enjoys preparing food for her family and for dinners held by the church, the Elks or the Blossomettes.

Mrs. Williams' husband, Junius Williams, is employed by the Williamsburg Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Williams work," Mrs. Williams works in Swem Library. Before joining the College staff, she worked for six and one-half years at Eastern State Hospital.

Miss Sarah E. Tyler, who is assigned to Dupont Hall, has been a College employee for 13 years. A lifetime resident of Toano, she is a member of Chickahominy Baptist Church. She has five sisters and four brothers living in the area and one sister in Maryland.

Miss Tyler says she enjoys her work and has high praise for the way the RAs in Dupont, Chris and Cindy, work with the students.

One of her hobbies is crocheting. With instructions from two co-workers, Virginia Dobie and Bernice Holmes, both on the housekeeping staff, she has made several decorative pillows for herself and friends.

Her supervisor, Mrs. Lucille Cowles, describes her as a very quiet but hard-work-

At top, Sharon J. Seid, library assistant, receives congratulations from President Graves and a U.S. Savings Bond for exceptional service to the College. Looking on is her supervisor, Meryl Kimball, serials librarian, who recommended Seid for the award because of the work hours she voluntarily contributed, over and above regular office hours, to see that library records got into the computer. Below, Cornelius James Carey receives a U.S. Savings Bond for his contributions as a member of the Buildings and Grounds crew working under Roy Williams, at left.

Richard Pearson Lecture on Japan Slated for Feb. 25 in Harley Room

Richard Pearson, Visiting Professor of Anthropology at Yale, will speak on "How Japan protects Ancient Culture: The Business of Cultural Resources," at 3 p.m., Friday, Feb. 25 in the Harley Room of Washington Hall.

Earlier that day he will speak on "Japan, Korea, and China: Distinctive in Origins, Sharing in Civilization," at the History 206 class session at 10 a.m. in Morton 341.

Both lectures will be illustrated with slides.

An archaeologist who has published on early Japanese, Chinese, and Korean cultures, Pearson was formerly Curator of Archaeology at the University of British Columbia Museum of Anthropology. He has done field work in Japan, China, Korea and the Kyukyu Island. Pearson is professor of anthropology at the University of British Columbia.

Pearson received his Ph.D. degree from Yale in 1966. He speaks several languages including Japanese, Russian, French, Chinese and Korean. He specializes in Asian and Pacific cultural history and palaeo ecology. He has received many fellowships and awards to conduct research including a John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship in 1979.

Pearson is a member of the Society for American Archaeology, Far Eastern Prehistory Association, Polynesian Society, American Anthropological Association, Association for the Advancement of Sciences and is Fellow of the Explorers Club of New York.

Pearson is making several lectures in the area and will be speaking at Old Dominion University Feb. 24.

The Smithsonian Jazz Repertory Ensemble

Jazz Ensemble Here For Sampler Series

The Smithsonian Jazz Repertory Ensemble of the Smithsonian Jazz Program will be the next attraction on the William and Mary Concert series.

One of three resident ensembles of the Division of Performing Arts, the Ensemble will present a range of jazz styles in concert at 8:15 p.m., Monday, Feb. 28 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

A limited number of individual admissions will be available. Tickets are $5 for the general public, $4 for members of the College community. For ticket information, please call 253-4299.

The works of Jelly Roll Morton, the Duke Ellington ensembles, Bix Beiderbecke, James P. Johnson, Fats Waller and such modern giants as Charlie Parker and Thelonius Monk are included in the Ensemble's retrospective programming.

The Ensemble is under the direction of reedman Bob Wilber, a former student of the great New Orleans musician Sidney Bechet and an associate of many of the most celebrated traditional and swing-era musicians such as Bobby Hackett, Benny Goodman and Eddie Condon.

The Ensemble's most recent release, "Symphony in Black," features the premiere of eight works by Duke Ellington. The Ensemble has also released two other albums, "Music of Jelly Roll Morton," released in 1979 and "The Music of James P. Johnson and Fats Waller," released in the summer of 1980.

The exhibit includes drawings and models of the DeWitt Wallace Decorative Arts Gallery and Public Hospital reconstruction by Colonial Williamsburg; the new West Wing of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts; the Roanoke Museum of Fine Arts and the College's Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art, currently under construction.

Employee Awards

A native of Charles City she has spent most of her life there. Her husband, Robert H. Christian, has worked for the Virginia Folding Box Company of Richmond for over 20 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Christian have five children: Mitchell is in the U.S. Army stationed in Germany; Kim works for Allied Pilot in West Point; Fay is a cosmetician at Miller and Rhoads in Richmond; and Connie and Monica are in their last year of high school. The Christians also have one grandchild, Talitha Williams, three and one-half years old.

Mrs. Christian likes to sew, likes to sing, and loves flowers. She says in the summer she enjoys sitting on her front porch early in the morning and admiring the flowers there. She takes pictures of her flowers and adds them to the family album right along with portraits of relatives.

Her daughter Fay also likes to sew, says Mrs. Christian, who adds, "All of my children are very talented."

Robert Christian, is well known in the area as an artist who specializes in portraits and works in a variety of mediums.

Lawrence W. Broomwall, vice president for business affairs, who attended the presentation ceremonies, said the awards were tokens of appreciation from the administration for a job well done.

The awards were presented by Irving R. Robitshek, director of personnel.

M-W Among Top Law Schools

Scott Van Alstyne of the University of Florida's Spessard Holland Law Center in Gainesville, lists the Marshall-Wythe School of Law among the top law schools in the country and suggests that law students don't need the Ivy League to get a good legal education.

In an article in the Feb. 1 issue of USA TODAY newspaper, Scott Van Alstyne says in an interview with reporter Judy Gelber, that according to his findings there is little difference between the 36 top law schools in the country that produce "superior quality" lawyers.

"A great myth about law schools is that they can be ranked like a magic Associated Press top-10 football poll. Taken as a group they consistently do one thing -- all produce superior lawyers. . .placing schools in a hierarchy from best to worst is impossible even using objective criteria. .the most significant factor is the student body; even the best faculty and a large budget won't guarantee topnotch lawyers if students aren't capable."

In a study of 165 law schools, Van Alstyne compared students' college grades, standardized law school admission test scores, faculty salaries and funding for law schools.

Contacted in Florida, Van Alstyne said that while he could claim no recent kinship to William Van Alstyne of Duke University Law School who received an honorary degree from the College at Charter Day, 1979 (Since there aren't that many Van Alstynes around we probably all can claim kin to the first Van Alstyne to come to the New World from Europe.), he said he was familiar with the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and had a special tie to it.

While a member of the law faculty at the University of Nebraska, one of Van Alstyne's students in property law was William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law emeritus, who received the Thomas Jefferson Award at the Charter Day convocation that honored William Van Alstyne.

Of all the factors Van Alstyne used in his study, he says the caliber of students is one of the most important, "and you certainly have very good students at Marshall-Wythe," he added.

Despite the many similarities, Van Alstyne does list one difference in the top schools, "the image of prestige," which he says becomes "an emotional argument" in the legal community. "A lot of schools say, 'We've got to be No. 1,'" he says.

Van Alstyne says he is currently at work on a second survey article, this time tackling the issue of image and prestige.

records the pranks and literary battles of the club in satirical fashion, Hamilton was influenced by Swift, Pope, and especially Fielding among English writers.

Hamilton, who is unrelated to the famous Secretary of the Treasury under George Washington, was also the author of a travel diary about a journey from Maryland to Maine and back. Known as the "Itinerarium," this work was published by the Institute in 1948 and has been widely esteemed for its perceptiveness.

Although the "History of the Tuesday Club" has been called "the most important unpublished colonial literary manuscript in existence," and "a masterpiece," the manuscript is not well-known to scholars of American literature. Publication of the work, however, will gain for Hamilton the recognition he deserves as the finest comic writer in America before Washington Irving.

ASSISTANT TO THE DIRECTOR Position Description

Primarily serves as the fund-raising officer for the Virginia Institute of Marine Science reporting directly to the Director of the Institute with secondary responsibility in the area of Public Relations and consulting on a regular basis with the Office of Development of the College of William and Mary.

Fund-raising responsibilities include, but are not limited to, the planning and implementation of a program to meet the needs of a recently announced capital campaign and the establishment of a Comprehensive Development Program. The Assistant to the Director must provide support and advice to the Marine Science Development Council including: identification, cultivation, and solicitation of major corporate, foundation, and individual prospects.

It is anticipated that upon development of a Comprehensive Development Program, the Assistant to the Director would assume increased responsibilities and eventual supervision of a Public Relation Program.

Africa and Guyana and has traveled in Finland, Russia, Soviet Central Asia, Siberia, Outer Mongolia, Korea and Japan, collecting ethnographic materials. He has also visited South America consulting with missionaries and health officers concerning Indians of the Amazon Region.

He received the Phi Beta Kappa Award for the Advancement of Scholarship in 1963 and has been a recipient of the Alumni Faculty Research Award. In 1967 he received the Student Association Faculty Award.

Altshuler is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Michigan, 1951, and received his Ph.D. in social anthropology from Harvard in 1959. He is a Fellow of the American Anthropological Association.

Several members of the faculty and administration were on hand to toast Altshuler. E. Wayne Kernodle, professor of sociology, recalled the days when the study of anthropology was part of the department of sociology. Ludwell Johnson, professor of history, served as toastmaster and recalled another facet of Altshuler's career, his active involvement in faculty governance and his ardent and succinct contributions to faculty meeting discussions.
