

College Plans For Summit

We are now less than one hundred days from the International Economic Summit that will be held here in Williamsburg, May 28-30. Many of you have no doubt followed some of the news reports on developments or learned from members of our campus committee about progress. Since it appears that the plans for use of our major facilities--William and Mary Hall, the Campus Center, and the Commons--will be accelerating and expanding, I thought it would be timely to share with you a few highlights of plans as they now stand.

This conference will be an historic one, involving seven heads of state, and attracting 4,000 members of the world media. A number of us at the College have already been involved with plans, and more will be involved as the time draws near. It will be a unique opportunity for all of us, and will no doubt present challenges, inconveniences, and disruptions of normal routines, especially later in the spring.

The broadcasting and news center for the conference will be in William and Mary Hall, and the detailed plans that are now being completed will call for extensive use of the entire building, including the main arena area, where major press briefings will be held. There will be remodeling and adaptations of many other rooms in the Hall--many of these probably serving as permanent improvements. Some of the work may be started in April, though dates are not certain. Every effort will be made to avoid disruptions of our physical education programs and staff, but no doubt some flexibility will be needed on our part.

The Commons and the Shamrock organization will probably not be affected much in the period between now and May 16, but during the Summit conference, that facility will be called upon for extensive and intensive service, at William and Mary Hall and in adjacent areas.

Some of the White House advance staff plans to utilize portions of the Campus Center, beginning in April, though again, details are not certain yet on exactly what space will be used. The eating schedules and areas will most likely not be affected.

We are reserving some dormitory rooms, but these will not be used until after Commencement; the final number and locations will be decided later. No other campus facilities are currently scheduled to be used, but, as I noted earlier, many of us will no doubt be called upon to make adjustments and contributions as we get closer to the time of this conference.

Up until now, Vice President Duane Dittman and Director of Communications Charles Holloway have been largely involved in the communications related to the Summit. We are now at the stage where particular responsibilities must be assigned.

As of March 1, Mr. Holloway will be devoting as much time as necessary to being the College's major contact with the Summit. In April and May, this may well become a full-time assignment.

Effective March 1, Vice President Lawrence Broomall has responsibility for making all final decisions and commitments regarding and affecting College facilities, resources and personnel. His decisions and commitments will, of course, be made only after consultation with appropriate Academic Affairs, Student Affairs and Business Affairs administrative officers, and only after those individuals directly affected have been informed. No commitments will be made by the College on the adaptation and use of facilities without prior communications with those who normally use such facilities. We shall do everything possible to keep disruptions to a minimum.

Outer Walls Of Jefferson To Remain

The College has reached a verbal agreement with the architectural firm of Wright, Jones & Wilkerson and insurance adjusters on reconstruction plans for Jefferson Hall.

Lawrence Broomall, vice president for business affairs, says that the reconstruction process agreed upon will involve the demolition of the rest of the interior of the building. Engineers retained by the architect "analyzed two different approaches for reconstruction, saving some of the spaces versus gutting the whole interior," says Broomall. "They found that there would be a significant savings in the second alternative, which is the one we prefer."

According to Broomall, the 1920s-vintage building features wooden beams which are notched into some of the outside walls. "To save some of the rooms that are salvagable, we would have to reconstruct those beams, which would be a specialized construction project taking considerably more time to complete," he says.

"Although the cost of the materials needed for the two methods are within a few thousand dollars of each other, the time savings would be tremendous," he adds. Estimates of the overall savings of gutting the interior are in the neighborhood of $500,000.

"What we will be doing will be structurally more sound and more timely," says Broomall. Engineers have projected that the rebuilding could conceivably be completed by July 1984, but Broomall feels that the opening date will be sometime in the fall of 1984.

Broomall says that "a very rough estimate" of the cost of the entire project, including all phases, is in the neighborhood of $4 million.

Phase one of the project, which consists of bracing the Georgian brick outside walls of the structure, will be completed by American Eastern of Tabb, Va. The company had the low bid of $67,217 out of 10 firms. Construction is expected to begin the first week in March and will take approximately 60 days to complete. The College expects to have a low bidder for phase two, which includes the completion of the reconstruction, in about a month.

Thursday Play

A New York company of the original production of "Children of a Lesser God," will give one performance of the award winning play at 8:15 p.m., Thursday, March 3, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Tickets are $10 for the public, and $8 for faculty, staff and students. Call ext. 4299 for reservations.

Budgets and cost control procedures are being developed to insure full reimbursement of all College expenses.

Mr. Broomall is the only one who has the authority to sign contracts on behalf of the College.

The College and its staff will be actively involved in the support of and essential to the success of this important meeting here in Williamsburg. World attention will be focused here for a few days late in May. We will need patience, flexibility, and a real sense of service in the next several weeks, but I am sure it will be well worth this special effort. We appreciate your cooperation and support

Education Secretary Casteen Will Discuss Faculty Concerns

"Faculty Concerns in Times of Tight Money," will be the topic of a talk by John T. Casteen, III, Secretary of Education for Virginia, at an opening meeting of the College's chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

Casteen will speak at 7:30 p.m., Monday, March 14 in rooms 234 A&B of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

An English professor and scholar who has had experience as a college administrator, Casteen was named to his post with the Robb administration last year. He is an adjunct professor of English at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond and has been a member of the University of Virginia faculty since 1975. From 1970-75 he was a member of the English faculty at the University of California-Berkeley. Casteen was Dean of Admissions at UVA from 1975-82.

Casteen is the author of several published works of fiction, Virginia history and medieval studies and he has also written on several aspects of education and public policy. His educational topics have included "Reforming the School-

College Curriculum," "Function of Postsecondary Education for Individuals and Society," and "Math, Science Problems Have Political Answers."

Speaker Chosen for Gandhi Lecture

The president of the opposition Liberal Party in the Philippines and that country's foremost international lawyer will deliver the third Mahatma Gandhi Freedom Lecture at the College of William and Mary, March 18.

Currently a visiting Fellow at Yale University's College of Law, Senator Jovito R. Salonga, who heads his country's major opposition party, will speak at 8 p.m. in room 119 of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

The Mahatma Gandhi Freedom Lecture is co-sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the Association for Anthropological Diplomacy, the International Law Society, the Office of Extramural Programs, the Asia and Africa Society, the Wesley Foundation and the Department of Anthropology at William and Mary.

Senator Salonga was selected to make the annual address, said Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology, "because by personal example, he has given meaning and substance to 'freedom.' He was under house arrest and detained several times by the Marcos regime because of his defense of civil liberties." Zamora was one of the initial planners of the lecture series.

Senator Salonga finished law at the University of the Philippines and received his LL.M. degree from Harvard. Harvard Law Professor Manley O. Hudson recommended him for a fellowship at Yale Law School where Salonga obtained his J.S.D. degree in 1949. He was later appointed Dean of Law, Far Eastern University, Manila.

Honors Program Offers Broader Approach

"In some sense, departmentalization of knowledge is completely wrong. Take the atom bomb. Is that a problem of physics, of sociology, of history, or psychology? In one way or another, it involves all of these.

"That does not mean that you discard universities or divisions of academic disciplines. It does mean that every now and then it is valid to transcend these borders and interact with scholars from a variety of backgrounds."

With these words, Hans von Baeyer of the physics department summarizes the intellectual intent of the College's Honors Program, an intensive interdisciplinary four-credit course begun in the fall of 1982.

About 100 specially selected students are enrolled in small seminars taught by some of the College's most popular faculty members from eight academic departments. Faculty members cross their narrow departmental boundaries to explore with their students a variety of academe's best works.

Both students and professors express enthusiasm about the program, which, according to a brochure, focuses on "the reading and discussion of ancient and modern classics, or 'great books' and their application to contemporary issues concerning man, nature and society."

The Honors Program is aimed primarily at sophomores, but includes upperclassmen and academically excellent freshmen as well. The Honors and Experimental Program Committee, which created and developed the program, felt that sophomores especially needed some bridge between the broad general coursework of freshman year and the specialized departmental work of junior and senior years.

"The excitement of the program, the academic challenge, the interaction with other good students, can help sustain the momentum established freshman year," says Terry Meyers, associate dean of the faculty of arts and sciences. "Freshman year is a year of wondering, of worrying about whether everything will fit together. This course is a way of saying 'Yes.'"

"The Honors Program can be a terrific experience for students that can be widely applicable to their educations," says Alan Fuchs, professor of philosophy and a faculty member in the program. "I hope that students, because most of their academic experiences are narrow and directed, can see the program as an opportunity to approach a text from a variety of viewpoints."

The real success of the Honors Program can be perceived in the attitudes of the students enrolled in it. "Because this is a seminar class, I found this to be an exciting way to learn how to discuss a work," says Margaret Berry, a sophomore heading toward a major in government.

Alan Meese, a freshman, agrees. "This is a good way to have a general discussion of some great works," he says. As one of a number of academically excellent freshmen who were specially invited to enroll in the program, Meese says he had no illusions about the academic challenges involved.

"I expected a lot of reading," he says. "When I first got the brochure, I realized that this is not light stuff. You don't just skim it."

"Yeah, how can you skim Marx?" jokes Miss Berry.

In addition to the weekly readings, students in some sections are required to write opinion papers on the works they have read and come to class prepared to discuss them. Both Miss Berry and Meese say they wouldn't have it any other way.

"This course teaches you speaking and writing skills, thinking and reading skills," Miss Berry says. "You have to learn to express yourself orally and in writing."

Expressing their own thoughts and opinions is an exercise students get far too little of, says von Baeyer. "There's an art to putting things together, referring to an authority yet expressing your own conclusions without being self-indulgent or narcissistic," he says. "We all learned more about asserting our opinions without having to hide behind some authority."

Since all eight seminars cover the same material at approximately the same time, faculty and students have a chance to gather for weekly Wednesday night forums, which expand or reinforce ideas and works covered in class. The weekly format ranges from a concert by musicians from Georgetown, to a lecture on Nietzsche by a visiting scholar, to a Truffaut film.

Despite the hard work, the broad range of subject matter and the time required for the Honors Program, Miss Berry says the course is worth it. "This class relates to all my other classes," she says. "I think it is the epitome of a liberal arts education."

"This course teaches more about society and man in general and the whole human condition than any of my other courses," adds Meese. "I think the kind of people who ask big questions rather than those who are in school specifically for a certain kind of job are the ones who will enjoy this course the most. It can be helpful, however, to anybody."

A versatile scholar, Margaret Berry is enrolled in the Honors Program, is teaching photography at the Craft Shop in the Campus Center and is taking quilting lessons from another instructor at the Craft Shop.

Journalists Plan National Meeting March 10-12, Helen Thomas to be Keynote Speaker

The Society of Collegiate Journalists, the nation's oldest collegiate journalism honorary organization, will hold its 1983 biennial national convention on campus March 10-12.

According to Wilford Kale '66, adviser to the William and Mary SCJ chapter and convention director, representatives from about 49 SCJ chapters from as far west as Kansas and Iowa are expected for the three-day program of seminars, workshops and speeches.

Approximately 300 students have made reservations for the convention, which will hold all its meetings in the Campus Center.

Helen Thomas, senior White House reporter for the United Press International, will be the convention's keynote speaker at 7:30 p.m. March 10 in the Campus-Center Ballroom. Members of the college community are invited to attend.

Miss Thomas, was "Journalist-in-Residence" on campus last year and was the recipient of the 1982 "William and Mary Heritage Award for Excellence in Journalism."

The guest speaker on March 11 at the evening program will be Hugh Haynie '50, editorial cartoonist of the Louisville (Ky) Courier-Journal. The program is also scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Ballroom; it is also open to the college community. The other programs of the convention are open only to the registrants.

There are five workshop forms scheduled for the convention with 70 minute sessions slated for March 10 afternoon, two morning sessions and an afternoon session March 11 and a morning session March 12.

There will be three major convention business sessions, with a closing awards program at 12:30 p.m. March 12.

Among the persons scheduled to speak at the workshop sessions are Ron Edmunds, Pulitzer Prize winning photographer of the Associated Press; nationally known yearbook experts Dr. J. W. Click of Ohio University; Charles Savedge of Fort Defiance, Va.; Freedom of Information Specialist, Dr. Louis Enselhurt, Ball State University, Muncie, Ind.; Marvin Garrette, managing editor, Richmond Times-Dispatch; Ron Miller, news director WWBT-TV, Richmond as well as several other Virginia journalists and broadcasters who will be named later.

The Richmond Newspapers, Inc., and The Newport News Daily Press and The Times-Herald have provided financial gifts to help support the convention, which has been organized by the William and Mary SCJ chapter with the help of the SCJ members at James Madison University.

Convention student co-ordinator is Elizabeth Hammer, currently William and Mary's representative on the National Council and a past president of the local chapter. William and Mary voting delegates this year will be senior Anne Doyle and sophomore Lisa Daniels.

President's Hours

President Graves will continue during the rest of the year to schedule open office hours in Ewell Hall for students who wish to come by and chat informally about any topic of their choice. No appointment is necessary. Each caller will be given approximately 10 minutes.

The schedule will include the following dates:

- Wednesday, March 16--4 - 5 p.m.
- Thursday, March 24--4 - 5 p.m.
- Tuesday, March 29--4 - 5 p.m.

Bread For The World Meeting

Bread for the World will hold a meeting tonight, March 1 at 6:30 p.m. in Room C of the Campus Center. Plans will be discussed for the Hunger Meal being sponsored with Shamrock Food Service.

Last year Bread for the World contributed several hundred dollars to two relief organizations, Oxfam America and the local Ecumenical Outreach Ministries from a similar hunger-meal project. Planners hope to raise the percentage of students participating this year.

Anyone interested in working on the hunger meal project is urged to attend tonight's meeting.

Reception for Senior, Graduate Women

All senior and graduate women are invited to a reception to be held at Alumni House on Wednesday, March 23, from 4 to 6 p.m., by the Williamsburg Branch of the American Association of University Women. For more information call 229-4209.

Arts and Crafts Show

The Randolph Dorm Council will sponsor an Arts and Crafts Show March 26 and 27. All those interested in submitting entries please call the Tazewell Office, ext. 165 between 3 and 10 p.m.

The show is open to all students. Categories include painting, drawing, sculpture, woodworking, fibers, batik, weaving, original crafts, silk screening, photography, and musical composition.

Landlubber Lecture

A slide-illustrated program on the processes and effects of coastal erosion will be presented by Gary Anderson, Marine Scientist, VIMS Department of Geological Oceanography, on Wednesday, March 2 from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the Byrd Hall Conference Room, VIMS campus, Gloucester Point.

The program will review the recent geological history of Chesapeake Bay as it relates to erosion and present-day use and misuse of coastal beaches.

This program is one in a continuing series of "Oceanography for Landlubbers" presented the first Wednesday in the month and is free to the public. For further information on this program and others, please contact Mary Sparrow at VIMS, ext. 298.

Chemistry Seminar

John B. Delos, associate professor of physics, will lecture on "Some Fundamental Processes of Chemistry," at the department's Friday afternoon seminar, Feb. 25 at 3 p.m. in the Guy Lecture Hall, in Rogers Hall. Coffee will be served in the conference room (203) at 2:30 p.m.

Baratin

Attention, French faculty, students, etc: La Maison Francaise's last baratin before break will take place on Thursday, March 3, 4-6 p.m. Make a note because the next one will not be until Thursday, March 17, 4-6 p.m.

"WELLNESS '83"

"Wellness '83" is coming March 20th - 26th!

Similar to last year, but now expanded to include even more seminars, films, contests, demonstrations, etc., designed to promote an awareness of healthier lifestyle alternatives.

All events are free and open to the College and Williamsburg communities.

Be watching for forthcoming details and plan to get involved for the "well" of it!

Arts and Crafts Show

The Randolph Dorm Council will sponsor an Arts and Crafts Show March 26 and 27. All those interested in submitting entries please call the Tazewell Office, ext. 4165 between 3 and 10 p.m.

Fire Photos

An exhibit of 13 color and black-and-white photographs is presently on display in the Campus Center lobby. The photos cover various scenes of the January 20 Jefferson Hall dormitory fire, and are the work of Rebecca Clark, Manager of Media Services for University Communications.

Eastern State Benefit

Panhel raised $1,000 for Eastern State Hospital in its recent raffle. Prizes were awarded during half-time of the Naval Academy basketball game. Sherry Schmulling and Monica Johnson were co-chairmen of the project.

Film Schedule Changes

Two films on the Italian Cinema Festival schedule have been changed. "Bread and Chocolate," scheduled for April 18, will now be shown on March 14. Fellini's "8½," scheduled for March 14, will be shown April 18.

Films are shown, without charge, each Monday at 2 and 7 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library. The schedule for March includes "The Seduction of Mimi," March 21; and "Till Marriage Do Us Part," March 28.

Films scheduled in April include "C'eravamo tanto amati," April 4; "Padre Padrone," April 11 and "Viva Italia," April 25.

Truesdell Recital March 14 in PBK

F. Donald Truesdell, professor of music, will present his annual faculty piano recital Monday, March 14, 8:15 p.m., at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Truesdell has established a reputation for introducing audiences to standard piano literature along with less frequently performed works of American composers. This year, in observance of the 150th anniversary of Brahms's birth, Truesdell will feature a selected group of Intermezzi representing the four last sets of piano pieces. Truesdell will also perform one of his own compositions, Scherzo-Fantasy (1948), Hindemith's Praeludium and Fuga prima from Ludus Tonalis, Chopin's Scherzo No. 2, Op. 31, and Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

Truesdell received his doctorate from the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, where he studied with Cecile

F. Donald Truesdell

Genhart and Jose Echaniz. His work in composition included study with Ross Lee Finney and Wayne Barlow.

Speakers For Writers' Festival Include Carlos Fuentes

Michael North, department of English, reports on plans for the upcoming Writers' Festival in late March.

The Seventh Annual William and Mary Writers' Festival will be held March 22-25.

We have invited the poets Diane Ackerman, writer-in-residence at the College, who has published several books of poetry with William Morrow, and Dave Smith, a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry in 1980 and 1982.

Mr. Smith is a Virginia writer who participates as part of a special program funded by the Virginia Commission for the Arts. His first novel, Onliness, has recently been published by LSU Press.

Carlos Fuentes, the internationally acclaimed Mexican novelist, is one of several participating fiction writers. Walter Abish, who won the 1980 PEN/Faulkner Award for Fiction, and Bobbie Ann Mason, whose recent book of short stories, Shiloh, was highly acclaimed, round out the list of this year's participants.

The events of the festival will occur as follows. On Tuesday, the 22nd, Mason and Abish will discuss contemporary fiction in the afternoon and will read in the evening.

Wednesday afternoon, a representative of the New Virginia Review will lecture on small presses in coordination with the NVR book van, a special display of literary magazines and small-press publications.

Smith will conduct a poetry workshop that afternoon and read his poetry in the evening. He will also talk Thursday, on the topic "How I Became A Writer."

Carlos Fuentes will read on Thursday evening. On Friday Diane Ackerman will give her reading. A students' reading will follow, and awards will be presented to the winners of the student writing contest.

Headlines Cheer College Athletes

This weekend there was a good share of happy headlines for William and Mary athletes.

Sportswriter Charlie Denn in the Daily Press reported "W&M Records Historic Victory, Outlasts Mason," detailing the fact that the Indians Saturday night became the first team in ECAC-South history to post an unbeaten conference title.

"Jaffee Sparks W&M's Ninth Title In Row," headlined a story about the success of the gymnasts in claiming their ninth straight state championship, outdistancing runner-up James Madison by more than 48 points. Jaffee placed first in the rings, the high bars and the all-around.

Gretchen Schmidt was the No. 1 winner for the fencers and the headline read "4 W&M Fencers Foil Field By Winning AIAW Titles," Schmidt was the No. 1 winner and teammates Jennifer Borum, Cathi Schultz and Melissa Moore also came away with individual titles. No team scores were kept.

Sorority Works To Assist Fund

Mu Upsilon Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. is presently working with the American Cancer Society. At the Alvin Poussaint lecture on February 17, the Deltas presented a display of brochures outlining the various types of cancer. In the following months, the sorority will continue to work with the Society, sponsoring workshops which will teach early detection of cancer.

The sorority is also involved in a number of other community projects. Mu Upsilon is currently donating infant "Love Seats" to the Williamsburg Community Hospital, participating in local NAACP activities and sponsoring activities for the Williamsburg Senior Citizens' Housing Project. All persons interested in these projects are welcome to join with the sorority in its endeavors.

Delta Sigma Theta is a public service organization with over 100,000 members and over 600 chapters, worldwide. The Mu Upsilon chapter is the first Black sorority established at the College. The chapter celebrated its 7th anniversary on Feb. 7.

Gandhi Speaker

He is the author of several law books used in law schools in the Philippines. He was a visiting scholar at Yale in 1981-82 and is currently engaged in the revision of his book on international law.

An active church layman, he is a Commissioner of the World Council of Churches' Commission on International Affairs and a trustee of the United Board for Christian Higher Education in Asia.

Lupus Fund Benefits From New Calendar

The popularity of "beefcake" calendars has inspired Chi Omega to come up with its own William and Mary version as a fundraiser for the Lupus Foundation.

Chi Omega members will be selling the new calendars this week. They are $1 each and interested customers may call Carolyn at 229-3615 or contact any Chi Omega member for copies.

The art work on the new calendar is the work of Carolyn Henne, a senior economics and fine arts major. Photography is by Maryanne Kondracki, a freshman pledge.

For the local chapter of Chi Omega, the Lupus fund has a special significance. Fundraising efforts are made in memory of a former member, Laurie Lucker Blount who died of the disease. The sorority also sponsors an award in her name which goes to an outstanding senior woman who has been active in varsity sports, community service and has maintained a high academic standing. The award is presented at the Spring Honors ceremony.

Honors Program Opens Wednesday Forums to Campus

The College Community is invited to attend the Wednesday Forums of the Honors Program. The schedule is listed below.

March 2 - 7:30 p.m., Eisenstein, "Stike".

March 16 - 8 p.m., a lecture by Professor Bruce Roberts, College of William and Mary, on Marx.

March 23 - 8 p.m., a lecture by Professor William McGrath, University of Rochester, on Freud and his readings.

March 30 - 8 p.m., a lecture by Professor Hugh Kenner, Johns Hopkins University, on T.S. Eliot.

All programs are presented in Millington Auditorium unless otherwise indicated.

Kathryn Shanks to Give Recital

Kathryn Kimberly Shanks, soprano, a member of the William and Mary Choir, will give a recital at 8 p.m., Wednesday, March 16 in the Wren Chapel. Shanks is a student of Frances Breeze, and a music and anthropology major.

A member of Delta Omicron, Shanks is also vice president of Delta Gamma and participated in the St. Mortiz Music Festival last summer, directed by Robert Shaw. A senior, she hopes to go to graduate school in performance following commencement.

For her recital, Shanks will sing several sacred songs from "Kleine Geistliche Konzerte," (1636); selected Chansons by Georges Bizet and the "favorite lieder of Elizabeth Schumann" which will include "Stille Sicherheit by Robert Franz; "Marienlied," by Joseph Marx; "Liberlingsplatzchen," by Mendelssohn; and "Das Lied Im Grunen," by Franz Schubert.

The final portion of her program will include works by Purcell, Benjamin Britten and Robert Birch.

Accompanist for Shanks will be Bradley Patrick Staubes, a sophomore music and theatre major currently a piano student of Mrs. Carol Rankin. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha. This year he provided the two operettas offered by the Sinfonicron Opera Company and will also be playing cello in several senior recitals this semester.

Ambassador Opens Forum at Bland

Papua New Guinea's ambassador to this country will open Richard Bland College's Fifth Annual International Forum March 2.

The Honorable Kubulan Los will be heard at 7:45 p.m. in the lecture hall of the Frank Ernst Building with a question and answer period to follow. There is no charge for the lecture. The public is invited.

Richard Milton, assistant deputy director of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, will speak March 9.

The third lecture, April 13, will feature Dr. Ashraf Ghorbal, currently ambassador from the Arab Republic of Egypt.

Sponsored by the college's government/history department, the lectures are arranged by Dr. John L. Blair. During their visits to campus, speakers also visit classrooms for discussions with students.

Movie Shades Aid Botanists

Look in on Martin Mathes' biology 201 class tomorrow and you may think everyone there is prepped for a rerun of "It Came From Outer Space" or "Creature from the Black Lagoon." Students will be wearing 3-D glasses for a special multimedia lecture Mathes has prepared.

The movie glasses are a gift from Newmarket North theatres, arranged by an alumnus, John Pierce. The screen was borrowed from the Classical Film Society and the projector was rented from New Jersey.

The idea, explains Mathes, is to give students a better view of plants than could be obtained by regular slides. The lecture, which Mathes says is in actuality a non-lecture, since he passes out material for students to read, also includes a conference call. Taking a cue from the methods used so successfully in the School of Business by William Warren, Mathes will put in a conference call to Dr. Frederick C. Stewart in Charlottesville, a scholar in residence at the University of Virginia and one of the top botanists in the world.

Mathes' special lecture which focuses on the plant kingdom and the economic uses of plants is a transition, he says, between two sections of the course, and an introduction to the second half which will be taught by Stewart Ware.

Sheryl J. Anderson '80 of Springfield, listens intently to New York producer Peter Neufeld as he reminisces about his days on campus. Anderson, winner of the Prentis Hall Award in Theatre, the Society of the Alumni's Howard Scammon Drama Prize and the Tiberius Gracchus Jones Literary Award, was a theatre major and her original full-length play "For Want of a Shoe," was produced in Phi Beta Kappa memorial Hall her senior year.

Neufeld Returns to Campus

Peter Neufeld, New York producer of such successes as "Cats," and "Evita," was on campus Saturday to talk with students and alumni about careers in theatre.

He presided at two informal sessions and before the day's schedule began he and a few earlybirds got together for an "I Remember" exchange in the office of Louis E. Catron, professor of theatre, who arranged the Neufeld visit.

Neufeld recalled the graciousness of Althea Hunt, pioneer director of the William and Mary Theatre and her inner steeliness that got things done. Even after a heart attack, her only concession to her ailment was a cot in her office for cat naps between classes and rehearsals.

She always wanted a canopy in front of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall so patrons wouldn't get wet when it rained, recalled Catron, but it was never added.

Neufeld also spoke of Roger Sherman, now retired from the theatre department, and how much he appreciated his "quiet, dry sense of humor".

Neufeld recalled the late Al Haak, whom he described as "an incredible man. . . I always thought of him as permanently 37 years old." His red cap and his agility on high beams and ladders was legend. He had a marvelous exchange policy for getting props that he needed from other departments on campus and would plumb the military surplus for marvelous equipment at give-away prices.

The group recalled his ability to provide props needed even when it meant a fox or an angelfood cake in the shape of a fish. But the German potato salad he made for strike parties struck a common chord in the group. "I think it was a way to get us all to come and work," said one student.

Neufeld acknowledges that his career as an actor during his college years was a slim one and he said he could quickly list his credits. "We're holding auditions soon for the next play," one student announced. Neufeld just laughed, shook his head and started off for the first session of the day in the Dodge Room with a stop-off to admire the set for "Fiddler on the Roof."
