

Million Dollar Bequest Received for Faculty Support

What is believed to be the largest commitment ever to The College of William and Mary by a non-alumnus has been announced by President Graves.

"A $1 million bequest provision has been made in favor of the College to establish a permanent endowment fund, the income from which shall be used for faculty support and development," said Graves. "This magnanimous bequest provision was recently written into their wills by two William and Mary parents, who prefer to remain anonymous.

"Not only is it the largest commitment of which we are aware from a non-alumnus, but one of a handful of its magnitude in the 290-year history of the College," he added.

"It is clear to us from the urging of President Graves and his staff and the declare endorsement of the Board of Visitors and Endowment Association trustees that endowment for faculty support is and will continue to be the highest priority of the college; and we are eager to add our support in the most helpful way possible," said the donors.

In a joint statement concerning their gift, the donors elaborated on their decision, "Our daughter's educational experience at William and Mary was absolutely first-rate, and we recognize the real value of her education was fostered by her professors. It is the effort of those dedicated men and women which we see as most deserving of our support."

Commencement Set for Sunday

While the rest of Williamsburg prepares for the 1983 Summit of Industrialized Nations, May 28-30, approximately 1,700 students at the College are preparing for their own kind of "summit"—the 1983 Commencement at 2 p.m., Sunday, May 15, at William and Mary Hall.

Activities are planned for students, their families and alumni of the College during the entire weekend, May 13-15. The weekend begins with initiation of 33 new members of Phi Beta Kappa at 6 p.m., Friday, in the Great Hall of the Wren Building.

Later that evening, the senior class will hold its commencement dance under a huge tent in the Sunken Gardens, the expanse behind the Wren Building. Since the dance was originally scheduled in the Campus Center, which is occupied by members of the Summit Task Force, the White House helped the College locate the tent and subsidized its rental. The tent has space for a bandstand, serving area and seating for 600.

Seniors will attend the baccalaureate service in William and Mary Hall Saturday at 9:30 a.m. Although currently undergoing a massive remodeling to accommodate the needs of 4,500 newsmen and technicians attending the Summit, the Hall will be accessible Saturday and Sunday. All construction work at the Hall will be suspended for commencement.

Speaker for the baccalaureate service is one of the leading scholars on modern Jewish thought, Steven Theodore Katz, associate professor of religion at Dartmouth College and Visiting Scholar at the Center for Jewish Studies at Harvard University. The topic of Katz' talk will be "Change and Renewal in an Uncertain World."

Katz' visit to campus will be an introduction to William and Mary, since he will be teaching here in the fall as the Walter G. Mason Visiting Professor of Religion.

ROTC cadets will receive their commissions to various military assignments at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, Saturday at 11:15 a.m. Speaker for the ceremonies is Brig. Gen. Curtis F. Hogland, Commander of the First ROTC Region, Ft. Bragg, N.C.

The Class of 1933 will celebrate its 50th reunion with a noon luncheon and a banquet, Saturday, and a memorial service in the Wren Chapel, at 11 a.m., Sunday. Members of the class will also don caps and gowns with the 1983 graduates for a tribute at Sunday's 2 p.m. ceremonies.

After a picnic luncheon in Crim Dell Meadow Saturday, seniors and their parents are invited to a reception by President and Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., in the President's House and the College Yard. From 3:30-4:30 p.m., Saturday, the William and Mary Choir will give a concert in the Wren Chapel.

Activities scheduled for Saturday evening include a black tie dinner hosted by the College's Board of Visitors for the honorary degree recipients and their families. Receiving honorary degrees this year are: Elizabeth H. Dole, Secretary of the U.S. Department of Transportation and this year's commencement speaker; Walter G. Mason, former member of the Board of Visitors and a former rector of the College; Ivor Noel Hume, antiquary and resident archaeologist for Colonial Williamsburg; and Kenneth Nebenzahl, internationally recognized expert on rare books and cartography.

Also Saturday evening, the senior class will hold a candlelight ceremony in front of the Wren Building, followed by a wine and cheese reception in the Wren Courtyard.

Sunday's activities for degree candidates begin at 1 p.m., when seniors make their annual walk from the Wren Building, past the Sunken Gardens and Crim Dell, to William and Mary Hall, led by three honorary marshalls chosen by the class.

Departments and schools will hold ceremonies and receptions throughout campus following the commencement exercises.

Marshall-Wythe School of Law will hold a degree ceremony for its graduates at that time in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, with Ingrid M. Hillinger, assistant professor of law, as speaker.

Chief Cumbee Details Access to Campus During Economic Summit

Most College facilities and buildings will function as they normally would during the Memorial Day holiday weekend, and students and faculty will have access to the campus and their offices during the Economic Summit, May 28-30, according to Richard Cumbee, director of campus police.

Cumbee announced special traffic and security plans for the College during the three-day international conference. The plans were worked out in close cooperation with White House officials and are designed to close as small an area as possible so that an estimated 4,500 members of the news media may do their jobs on a 24-hour-a-day basis.

Beginning Friday, May 27, and continuing until noon, Tuesday, May 31, special restrictions will be in effect, said Cumbee.

All traffic and parking in the vicinity of the College's dining hall, called the Commons, and in lots around William and Mary Hall will be restricted to authorized persons with security passes, since these areas form the core of the International Press Center activities on campus.

Traffic barriers will be established on Campus Drive at the Randolph Residences, allowing no through traffic beyond that point, said Cumbee. Campus Drive will also be blocked at the Monticello Avenue entrance, and at the intramural field entrances on both Dillard and Brooks Streets. Another barrier will be established at the intersection of Yates Drive and Gooch Drive, and traffic on College Terrace will be temporarily reversed from its usual one-way direction for this period.

Other campus roads will remain open, said Cumbee.

Newsmakers

Robert Scholnick, professor of English and Director of the American Studies Program, presented a paper, "The Scientific Sublime: The Response to Evolutionary Thought of Some Mid-nineteenth Century American Writers," at the Conference of the Southeastern American Studies Association, Charleston, April 7-9

On February 25, Scholnick spoke to American Studies faculty and students at the University of Richmond on "Taste and Taboo: Poe in Gilded Age America."

John H. Fleming, a 1982 graduate of the College, presented a paper entitled "Nuclear Disarmament and the Insanity Defense: What Happened to Political Responsiveness?" at the recent meeting of the Eastern Psychological Association, held in Philadelphia. Kelly G. Shaver, professor of psychology, was a co-author on the paper.

Fleming will be continuing his work in social psychology, entering the graduate program in Psychology at Princeton University in the fall. Shaver also presented a paper at the meeting, with his contribution entitled "Superphysical Causality: A Neglected Attributional Category," and co-authored by Frances G. Slocumb of Christopher Newport College and Donelson R. Forsyth of Virginia Commonwealth University.

Cirila Djordjevic, professor of chemistry, recently attended XVIth Rare Earth Research Conference in Tallahassee, Florida, and presented the paper: "Proton and ¹³C NMR Studies of Some Yttrium and Lanthanum Complexes in Aqueous Solutions," by C. Djordjevic, L. G. Gonshor, M. D. Schiavelli, and L. S. Angevine-Malley.

Douglas Prillaman, professor of education, is co-author with John Abbott, of a new book entitled "Educational Diagnosis and Prescriptive Teaching," which has been selected by the Library of Special Education of Macmillan Publishing Company as their featured book of the month. The publisher is Pitman Learning, Inc., Belmont, Ca.

The diagnostic-prescriptive model outlined in the book stresses "humanistic approaches and individual responsibility. It emphasizes observation in a variety of settings, of children who are viewed by their teachers as needing intervention in areas of learning and/or behavior, and an extensive period of experimental (diagnostic) teaching. Once each child's learning and behavioral functioning and potential are determined, remedial instructional procedures are prescribed on an individual basis."

Alan E. Fuchs, professor of philosophy, gave two papers at Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, MI., April 28 and 29, as part of the Hillsdale Visiting Philosopher Series. The papers were entitled: "Mill's Theory of Rights" and "The Rise and Fall of Absolute Rights." Fuchs also conducted two seminars while at the college. The Philosophy Department at Hillsdale is chaired by Patricia Kenig Curd, a 1972 graduate of William and Mary.

Sylvia Scholnick, lecturer in religion, presented a paper entitled "A Case of Wrongful Deprivation: Job's Lawsuit Against God," at the March 17-19 meeting in Atlanta of the Southeastern Region American Academy of Religion/Society for Biblical Literature.

Barbara DeMille Writes Portrait of a Student

Barbara DeMille, assistant professor of English, presents the college student of 1983 as an interesting collage of hopes, fears, anxieties and merriment in a "Perspectives" essay in the April 24 issue of the New York Times. The following excerpts are taken from her student portrait entitled "College Student '83: Wary Commitment."

"In the 1980's college students take their fun seriously, as they do almost everything else. A student sits in my office. He's troubled, not because he doesn't like school, but because he likes school too much. 'It's my mother's dream,' he says 'that I become a C.P.A. My best courses are philosophy. Philosophy majors have about as good a chance of getting a job once they get out of here as furnace repairmen do in Pago Pago. Accounting is boring. But my folks are putting out a lot of money, and I can't go home and tell them I want to switch my major to something useless.'

"Aristotle and Plato are frowning at me, but I can't argue with his marketplace assessment of the situation..."

"There's anger and confusion these days in the hearts of graduating seniors. College is expensive; they have loans to repay. They want to succeed, but they're not at all that certain they want to pay more...The competition is so keen in pre-medical and pre-dental biology that students refuse to give each other class notes; they also been known to steal each other's notebooks.

"An English major confesses to using Masterplots, synopses of literary works - but only 'in extreme circumstances, such as having three 500-page novels to read in three weeks.' Another says, 'Between my full-time job as second cook and going to school, I'm putting in 60 hours a week. I do my serious sleeping on Sunday mornings.'

"A senior tells me euphorically he's been accepted by an excellent law school, only to come back a month later to report, in an offhand way that tries to mask his disappointment that he can't afford to go. 'Government backed loans are drying up,' he says with a frown. 'All that's left now are bank loans at high interest. And the interest's not deferred until after graduation, like Government loans.'

"Time, money, grade point averages lurk like closet monsters for these youth, threatening to snatch away chances they know they need to become what they are capable of being.

Students of the '80's are willing to study hard, but not as willing to ask probing questions in class...Gone are the late 60's and the intense questioning of the 'relevance of course materials to social and political reality...But all is not worry and sweat...Keg parties are cheap and popular. Students fall in love, make love, live together. I don't think there's any more sexual activity on campuses than there was in my generation, but it's more open. More honest."

DeMille concludes with an account of a reading by poet Stephen Spender. "Few of them know who Stephen Spender is or the poetic tradition he represents. He explains the Spanish Civil War to them, World War II, the bombing of London. He reads his poetry, ending with 'Auden's Funeral,' written at the death of W.H. Auden.

"The applause as he finishes, is building momentum toward a standing ovation. It would be given, but standing ovations are so common these days to the point of meaninglessness. In the 1980's when college students give their allegiance, they give it seriously and they are wary of that giving. Spender, who seems so old to them as to be past present-day existence, wins this allegiance.

"Perhaps it's his innocence that still hopes to believe, which is very much like their own."

Elderhostel Program Plans For Over 60's June 5 & 12

If the College were in the hotel business, it would be the envy of its competition. For the past several years, the Elderhostel Program, a national organization for men and women 60 years of age and older who wish to visit campuses throughout the country, has been sending people to Williamsburg.

The College has been the first location to be booked to capacity within a couple of days of the opening of registration. This year was no exception. The College will host a capacity group of 80 visitors during the two weeks of the program. Forty will arrive June 5 for a week of instruction and 40 will come June 12 for the second session.

While the attraction of the locale obviously attracts Elderhostlers to the area, the emphasis of the William and Mary program is academic. A daily schedule of classes is planned each week. Faculty at previous sessions have reported that their "students" have been enthusiastic and that attendance was excellent although Elderhostlers are not bound to attend class sessions. One faculty member said that the Elderhostlers were among the best students he had ever had in class.

Tom Marshall, harpsichordist, will teach a class on the music of Colonial Williamsburg at both sessions and will take his class to the Palace, the Wren Chapel and the Music Teacher's and Cabinet Maker's shops in Colonial Williamsburg. He is also planning to take a harpsichord to the Botetourt Complex on campus where visitors will be housed, for an evening concert.

During the first week William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law emeritus, will lecture on "Great Books of the Common Law." Robert Hannay of the School of Education faculty will lecture on the topic "American Public Schools: Have They Done Their Job?"

Instructors during the second session

Nell Jones would like to hear from faculty members who have a short "program" they would be willing to contribute to the program. She suggests an interesting experiment, a reading, an instrumental or vocal rendition, any type of presentation that would last approximately half an hour. The audience would be about 40 persons.

will include Joseph Healy, associate dean for extramural programs, who will take as his topic "The Bible Tells Me So: Bible Faith and Historic Truth." Gerald Johnson, professor of geology, will give a geological history of the Chesapeake Bay and is expected to include one or two field trips in his course.

Extracurricular activities will include a demonstration of dance, arranged by Dorothy Poucher, administrator of dance, and the Company of Colonial Players on June 7 and 14. Dennis and Jean Cogle of Williamsburg will direct a sing-along on June 16. George Bass and Roger Ries of the education faculty will demonstrate computer-assisted instruction.

The programs Elderhostel visits are being directed by Linda Collins Reilly, associate vice president for academic affairs and professor of classical studies. Nell Jones, her administrative assistant, and Kenneth E. Smith, Jr. associate dean of students, are coordinating the programs for the two sessions.

Gwynne Wells and Annette Grieg will serve as student resident assistants.

David Hopkinson, assistant professor, School of Education, recently attended the Fourth Annual Conference Series of The Women's Project in Family Therapy - Mothers and Sons, Fathers and Daughters held in New York City, April 29-30. The conference focused on the relational issues between mothers and sons, fathers and daughters from a family system perspective.

Mary Ann Sagaria, assistant professor of education, presented a paper co-authored with Sabato Sagaria of Hampton Institute at the American Research Association meeting in Montreal, Canada, April 9-14. The paper was entitled "How Illustrations Influence Learning When Conveying Stereotypic Material." She also served as program vice-chair and chaired a session on Higher Education Governance. On April 25 Sagaria delivered the keynote address for activities celebrating ten years of women's activity at Old Dominion University.

William F. Swindler, John Marshall Professor of Law Emeritus, read a paper, "Prohibition -- a Dubious Constitutional Experiment," at a two-day symposium on "Prohibition 50 Years Later: Implications for Law, Alcohol and Order." The Symposium was sponsored by the Eleutherian Mills Historical Library in Wilmington, De.

Survey Ranks College High In Certified Chemistry Grads

The College is ranked 12th in the nation for number of American Chemical Society Certified bachelor's graduates according to a 1983 study released by Chemical and Engineering News. The College has been the leading producer of ACS-certified B.S. graduates in Virginia for the last six years.

The C&EN study shows William and Mary ranked just below the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, the nation's largest producers of chemistry graduates at the baccalaureate level. In 1981-82 UNC graduated 37, William and Mary, 36.

Certified graduates are those who have completed the curriculum specified by the Committee on Professional Training and are eligible for full membership in the American Chemical Society. Non-certified graduates may become associate members of ACS upon graduation and full members after three years of professional experience or a higher degree in a chemical science.

Rutgers University is listed in the C&EN study as having the most certified graduates in 1981-82. Others in the top 12 include the University of California, San Diego; University of Pittsburgh; University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign; University of Texas; University of California at Berkeley; University of Washington; University of Michigan, Ann Arbor; and Indiana University. Massachusetts Institute of Technology, MIT, was listed with 38 graduates, just two more than William and Mary.

"We are delighted to learn that our department ranked as a leading producer of American Chemical Society Certified Bachelor's graduates last year," said Melvyn D. Schiavelli, chairman of the chemistry department. "Certainly our inclusion in this list stems from our department's commitment to a curriculum which emphasizes undergraduate research participation.

"It seems that these opportunities for our undergraduates, fostered in large part by our Master's program, are also a hallmark of the degree program of many of the schools on the list."

Festival Guild

There will be a meeting of the Virginia Shakespeare Festival Guild on Wednesday, May 11 at 6 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Main project of the evening will be labelling of 1983 Festival brochures for mailing. Those interested in volunteering their help to the Festival are invited to attend.

For further information, call Cathy Hawkins at 253-2230 between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

'Godspell' Coming

Howard Scammon, professor of theatre and speech emeritus, who will be director for "Godspell" which will be presented in October at the Williamsburg Regional Library Theatre, Eastern State Hospital and St. Martin's Church, would like to put in a bid for actors before students leave for the summer.

"Godspell," auditions will be held September 5 and 6. The show will be produced by the Covenant Players.

Assn. Puts Parkers on Notice

In the interest of good neighborliness, the Merchants Square Association has sent a gentle reminder to the College community that more attention is going to be given to parking regulations in the Merchants Square lots.

In a letter to President Graves, Donald G. Ackley, chairman of the Association's parking committee says that his organization is unhappy with the present restricted facilities for parking and is taking an active role in efforts to improve the situation.

"In the meantime, however, we must continue doing what we can to relieve the pressure on the spaces we have by eliminating wherever possible the use of those spaces by unauthorized cars," says Ackley.

"In large measure, I'm sorry to say, the offenders are members of our own Association. Many others are employees of the Foundation. But no small number are members of the College community," he continues.

"It is certainly not our intention to deny parking facilities to any customer patronizing the businesses on the Square. Our concern is instead with the use of both the customer and the employee lots by anyone -- whether from the College, the Foundation, or our own ranks -- who denies space to customers by using the lots when not engaged in shopping on the Square."

Ackley says that over the next few weeks, the Association will be working with Colonial Williamsburg on a number of fronts to improve the enforcement of existing parking regulations by the City Police.

"We hope that the College can join with us in working toward a solution to what we believe is our mutual problem," concludes Ackley.

Adeline "Ling" Ngo Graduates With PBK Honors

Adeline "Ling" Ngo began studying anthropology at the College by accident and found it was a perfect niche for her. She will graduate next week with a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology as well as a Phi Beta Kappa key.

Ling was signed up for an English course in Evening College several years ago and the course was cancelled because of low enrollment. Casting around for another option she decided to try anthropology even though, she recalls, she had only a foggy notion of what anthropology was. It proved to be a discipline she could readily relate to.

"I am immersed in three cultures," she says, explaining that half of her life was spent in the Philippines in a Chinese community. Born in Manila of Chinese parents, Lynn had many Philippino friends. Now the mother of three, a housewife and successful business woman, she has many American ties too.

Ling and her husband Reggie established the Universal Travel Agency at the Village Shops, Kingsmill, an endeavor which they combine with two other careers. Mr. Ngo is a textile engineer for the Badische Company, Ling is secretary to the principal at Walsingham Academy.

The travel business seems a natural for Ling who has an abundant supply of energy, a zest for life and an inquiring mind. This summer she plans to go with a tour group to China and has arranged to

A Gift of Prints

The gift of a wildflower print collection, published in 1928 by the National Geographic Societies under the title "Wildflowers of North America," has been donated to the College by Mrs. Betty Lewis Constantine of Virginia Beach.

An attractive group of display cases have been mounted in the main lobby of Millington Hall to house the prints which will be rotated on a seasonal basis. The cases were made in the biology department shop by Bob Bower and spotlighting has been arranged to give further emphasis to the exhibit. Museum handling has been observed to insure that the prints remain light-safe while on display. Each print has been matted. The prints have been notated by Donna Ware, curator of the herbarium and will be stored in the herbarium when not on display.

Mrs. Constantine is pictured above with President Graves and Martin Mathes, professor of biology and director of the Wildflower Refuge Project.

The collection, says Mathes, is a valuable complement to the presentation of wildflowers in their natural state in the Wildflower Refuge. The collection highlights a variety of aspects of Virginia wildflowers and exhibits will feature early or late bloomers, as well as flowers grouped by color and location.

Currently on display are "Favorites from Williamsburg."

Child Care Center to Open

Williamsburg Community Child Care, a local nonprofit organization, intends to open a child care center on campus this summer. The center, located in a college house with adjoining playground, will offer a year-round full-day program for children aged two through five; some part-time slots may also be available. Members of the College community will be given priority at the time of admission.

see the excavated terracotta figures at Xi'an. The group will make stops in Peking, Shanghai and Hongkong. That might sound like a full summer's travel but Ling will tell you that she'll be just back from a trip to Acapulco with her husband when she embarks for China.

Last summer she was a student in the Summer Field School for Archaeology which the College conducts on St. Eustatius Island, one of the Dutch Windward Islands. "I was digging alongside a lot of young people but I kept up. I enjoyed it. It was a wonderful learning experience."

Ling says she is going to continue to study until she is stopped by the infirmities of old age. She enjoys probing the historical aspects of different cultures and she would also like to do some writing. "So many things have come into place," says Ling as she talks excitedly about her College work. There is so much good in every culture." She says she would like to one day see a blending of some of these positive aspects into a "super culture." The world is too small feels Ling for too much negativism or inactivity. She wants to see people working to effect improvements.

Ling won't admit to any hard work in her studies. She says she was pleasantly surprised by her election to Phi Beta Kappa. But she does admit to a few anxious days waiting to see if her writing sample was strong enough for admission to Barbara DeMille's creative writing course.

Because of Professor DeMille's experience teaching in China, she and Ling found much to talk about. And Professor DeMille, says Ling, was very understanding when unusual idioms from her oriental heritage crept into her writing. She says she was also helped greatly by the guidance and encouragement of Mario Zamora, professor of anthropology.

Ling attended Adamson University in the Philippines and studied chemistry for two years and was also a student at the College of Textile Science in Philadelphia when she first came to the United States, so had many core courses completed when she enrolled in William and Mary.

The nuns at Walsingham Academy have been very supportive of Ling and her goal. They arranged schedules so Ling could take courses during the day and recently a huge banner went up in the school hall proclaiming the affection of the staff for Ling and their congratulations on her election to Phi Beta Kappa. When a school photographer came by to take her picture, Ling said she thought it was a routine assignment for the yearbook. She was amazed to see her portrait on the banner.

The whole family will be on hand to help Ling celebrate her academic honors. Andrews is a graduate student in microbiology at Old Dominion University; Bernard is a junior at the University of Virginia and Catherine will graduate from UVA this year with a degree in international relations and economics.

Seafood Program Planned for Bankers

"Financing Virginia's Seafood Industry" is the title and theme of the third such seminar in four years aimed at acquainting bankers with the needs of the commercial fishing industry. Scheduled for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., May 10 at the Holiday Inn 1776 in Williamsburg, the invitational seminar will be keynoted by First District Congressman Herbert H. Bateman.

The intent of the program is to provide timely and relevant information to members of the banking industry concerning the seafood industry in Virginia. According to program coordinator Ron Grulich, marine economist at Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS), this year's seminar will address such topics as: "Joint Fishing Ventures for the Mid-Atlantic Region," and the Virginia Banker's Association, in cooperation with the Virginia Marine Products Commission, the Mid-Atlantic Fisheries Development Foundation and the Gulf and South Atlantic Fisheries Development Foundation.

"Fishing Vessel Documentation - An Analytical Approach," "New Seafoods for the 80's," "Financing Fishing Boats," "State of the Fisheries in Virginia," "Breach of Warranty Coverage - How Safe Is It?" and "Financing the Seafood Industry" (panel discussion). Speakers and panel members have been selected to represent both the banking community and Virginia's seafood industry, Grulich said.

The seminar is being co-sponsored by the Virginia Sea Grant Program at VIMS,

ABC's Bergman to Speak May 16

Jules Bergman, ABC-TV Science Editor, the first full-time TV science editor in the country, will be the next speaker on the "Our Future in the Cosmos" series, sponsored jointly by the College and NASA Langley Research Center.

Bergman will speak on "Accomplishments of Science to the Year 2000," at 8 p.m., May 16, in the Hampton Coliseum. Free tickets are available by phoning William and Mary's Office of Special Programs in Newport News, 877-9231, ext. 60, 63 or 64. After May 10 tickets will be available only at the Coliseum Box Office.

Carson Barnes, director of the Office of Special Programs and series coordinator, has announced that Dr. Isaac Assimov will be the speaker on Oct. 13 to conclude the 1983 series.

Bergman has covered all manned flights in the U.S. space program and frequently participated in the astronauts' rigorous training programs and flight simulations. He covered the historic U.S.-Soviet joint Apollo-Soyez Test Program and the fall of the American Skylab, as well as pilot training for the recent Space Shuttle 3.

A pilot himself, Bergman also covered the first flights of almost every new U.S. military and commercial aircraft as well as major airline disasters around the world. Among other events, he covered the recall of Ford's Pinto automobile, the Three Mile Island and nuclear power controversy, the perils of asbestos, new development in cancer research, the swine flu controversy, heart transplants, "legionnaires disease," and the Shah's New York cancer operation.

In recent years Bergman has also reported on solar, wind and nuclear energy as well as the oil crisis, economical cars, mass transit and sports injuries.

Following his presentation there will be a question and answer session.

Return Address on Outgoing Mail

You are reminded that all official mail sent to the Campus Post Office should carry a return address of some kind. This can be either an individual's name or the name of the pertinent department.

Such action hopefully reduces the number of instances in which College postage is used for non-business, personal mail.

In this connection, please note that a return address of "College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia" is not sufficient.

Gift to Museum

This drawing by the 19th century French artist Gustave Dore (1832-1883) was given to the Muscarelle Museum of Art by the Fine Arts Society at the College of William and Mary. The drawing is the first work of art purchased specifically for the Museum. Funds for the purchase of the drawing were generated through donations made to the Fine Arts Society at the Beaux Arts Ball. The drawing is done in charcoal heightened with touches of white chalk. It has been pricked indicating that the design was probably transferred to a painting.

Self Study Committee

On 1 February 1983 President Graves announced the next College Self-Study, to be conducted in 1983-84. At that time Hans C. von Baeyer was named Director of the Self-Study and Chairman of its Steering Committee, Jack D. Edwards was selected as Editor of the Self-Study Report and Linda Collins Reilly as liaison with the College Administration. The full Steering Committee has now been named and will begin work immediately. Its members are:

Jack D. Edwards (Editor), Professor of Government
 David A. Evans, Associate Professor of Marine Science
 Dr. Robert J. Faulconer (Board of Visitors)
 William T. Geary, Associate Professor of Business Administration
 Peter J. Gordon (Student)
 Charlotte P. Mangum, Professor of Biology
 John R. Pagan, Associate Professor of Law
 Richard H. Palmer, Professor of Theater and Speech
 Linda C. Reilly (Administrative Liaison), Associate Professor of Classical Studies and Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs
 Vinson H. Sutlive, Jr., Professor of Anthropology
 John R. Thelin, Associate Professor of Education
 Hans C. von Baeyer (Chairman), Professor of Physics and Director of the Virginia Associated Research Campus

Because a self-study necessarily involves every segment of the College community, the Steering Committee invites comments and suggestions on any aspect of its task.

"Scotty" Cunningham Named New Society of the Alumni VP

H. Westcott Cunningham, former Dean of Admissions at the College and Christopher Newport College's first president, has been named Executive Vice President of the Society of the Alumni.

Announcement of the appointment was made Friday by Austin L. Roberts, III, president of the Society.

Cunningham, who will be on the job tomorrow at Alumni House, says his appointment is like a "private homecoming" to be returning to Williamsburg and the College. He says he is looking forward to an interesting time in his new position.

Cunningham said he expects to maintain his residence in Gloucester but will probably also add a Williamsburg address.

"It would be most difficult to find a person more qualified for the position," said Roberts, "Scotty Cunningham's roots are deep in William and Mary and in Virginia."

President Graves said, "I am delighted with Scotty Cunningham's election as the new Executive Vice President of the Alumni Society. Scotty Cunningham has served both the College and the Society superbly in the past, and both the College and the Society are tremendously fortunate to be having Scotty come forth now to the Society in this important position."

Cunningham graduated from the College in 1943. During his student days he participated in football and track, was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Theta Delta Chi fraternities, student body president, and listed in Who's Who in American Colleges.

Further education was interrupted by World War II. Cunningham joined the U.S. Navy and served as commanding officer of a PT boat in the Southwest Pacific. His decorations, by both the Philippines and the United States, include five combat stars.

He returned to William and Mary for graduate work in 1946 and became assistant to the Dean of students with admission responsibilities. He also instructed English classes. War, once again, changed his plans and he reentered the Navy in 1951. He was stationed in Washington, D.C. as the Navy's official briefer in the Office of the Secretary. He remained in the U.S. Naval Reserve and just recently retired as a Captain.

In 1953, he was named Dean of Admissions and Student Aid, a position he held until 1960. At that time he took over the reins of the fledgling Christopher Newport College. He had various titles, including Director and Provost. He was finally named President, the College's first.

In the decade of the 60's, Scotty Cunningham played an important part in nearly every community endeavor in Newport News and on the Peninsula. He served on innumerable boards and committees, and was the United Way Campaign chairman in 1963.

He left Christopher Newport College in 1979 to become Head Master of the prestigious Pingry School in Elizabeth, New Jersey, a school he himself attended as a youngster. He became president of Pingry in 1978, and led a $14 million fund raising drive to relocate a portion of the school.

In 1973 he was awarded the William and Mary Alumni Medallion. In 1975 he received the Distinguished Service Medallion from Christopher Newport College.

In 1980 he retired to his beloved Virginia and located in Gloucester with his wife, nee Cecil Cary Waddell. They have two children, Ann Westcott and Todd Waddell.

While sailing, fishing, reviewing books, and relaxing was easy to take for awhile, his love of education soon took over. He was elected to the Alumni Board of William and Mary and was quick to accept the position to which he has just been appointed. This past June Christopher Newport College honored him by bestowing an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree.

Toro to Use Mowers in Ad

When members of Kappa Sigma fraternity entered their precision lawnmower drill team in the Gross National Parade in Washington last month, they were loaned mowers by the Toro company and given hats. Toro took pictures of the team in action for use in their advertising campaign.

An adjunct to Washington's Cherry Blossom Festival, GNP included such entries as the Georgetown Dental School Drill Team and a burly man with a red beard, sequined gown and wild wig who was the parade queen.

The $3 entry fee for the parade was contributed to a fund to renovate a YMCA which has served Washington's black community for more than a century.

Careers in Publishing

Stacey Puls, a 1981 alumna, called to indicate that the publisher for whom she works, Pocket Books, a Division of Simon Shuster, has three positions that they would like to fill immediately. One position is as an Editorial Assistant at a salary between $10,000 and $11,000. Candidates should be able to type and should apply to the Personnel Dept., 1230 Avenues of Americas, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10020, phone 212-245-6400, ext. 1318. The selected individual will be working for Patricia MacDonald. However, application procedures should be started with the Personnel Dept.

There are two openings working as a liaison between editorial and production; one as an editorial assistant and one as an assistant managing editor. Applications for these positions should be submitted to Darlene Delillo, 212-246-2121, ext. 146.

Stacey stressed that applications should be submitted immediately and we will be glad to serve as a contact for additional information. Her number at Pocket Books is 212-246-2121, ext. 146.

Board of Visitors Cite Retirees for Skills and Service

Jay P. Andrews

Jay D. Andrews has been an outstanding research biologist and faculty member at the School of Marine Science and its early predecessor, the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory, for 37 years. Andrews' extensive knowledge of invertebrate animal populations in estuarine waters soon developed into a world-recognized expertise in oyster reproduction and diseases. This expertise, available to all of the hundreds of graduate students that have progressed through the School's portals, is thoroughly documented in scores of reports, journal articles, and contributions to published books. His basic contributions to oyster biology, now a fixed part of scientific knowledge, and general understanding of life in and around Virginia waters have enriched all past and present faculty and students at the School of Marine Science. His publications will continue to influence biologists in the future.

The School of Marine Science will continue to seek Andrews' sage advice and counsel on oyster reproduction and diseases.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of Jay D. Andrews; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his thirty-seven years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Dr. Andrews from Professor of Marine Science to Professor of Marine Science, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Andrews with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

John W. Sykes

John W. Sykes became a member of the faculty of the School of Education in 1963 after having served as a teacher and administrator in Virginia public schools for almost two decades. He holds degrees from New York State College and University of Virginia. During World War-II he served with the United States Navy.

During his tenure at the College, Sykes has been an instructor in both undergraduate and graduate courses, coordinator of elementary student teaching, director of placement and coordinator of internship experiences for graduate students in administration and supervision. More than half of his period of service has been devoted to his role as director of placement, a service which has expanded to include school districts outside the Commonwealth of Virginia. He has remained active in professional organizations, including regional accreditation agencies, and has provided consulting assistance to elementary and secondary schools. His work has also included involvement in assessment of teacher preparation programs in several colleges and universities and the Virginia Board of Education.

Sykes was responsible for developing and initially directing the first federally financed project for the preparation of elementary school personnel to be sponsored by the School of Education. From this project several participants have emerged to assume major leadership positions in local school districts. He has been associated with numerous other campus activities and has participated in faculty governance responsibilities within the School of Education and the College in general.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of John W. Sykes; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his twenty years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Mr. Sykes from Associate Professor of Education to Associate Professor of Education, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Sykes with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

Appointments Announced

The following faculty appointments have been approved by the Board of Visitors:

Gene R. Nichol, full time, Visiting Associate Professor of Law, effective Aug. 16. This is a temporary restricted appointment. Nichol is currently associate professor of law at West Virginia University. He received his law degree from the University of Texas in 1976 and for two years was an associate with the law firm of Ely, Guess and Rudd.

David Shipley has been appointed full-time Visiting Professor of Law, effective Aug. 16 for a temporary, restricted appointment.

Shipley has been associate professor of law at the University of South Carolina since 1981. He received his law degree in 1975 from the University of Chicago and was associated with Tillinghast, Collins and Graham from 1975 to 1977.

Edmund P. Edmonds has been appointed law librarian and associate professor of law effective July 1.

Acting Law Librarian and associate professor at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law since January, 1982, Edmonds was Associate Law Librarian from 1978-82 and for four years prior to that time was head of the circulation department at the University of Toledo Law Library. He

IEAHC Advisory Council Elects New Members

The Advisory Council of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, sponsored jointly by the College of William and Mary and Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, have elected Joyce O. Appleby, historian from the University of California at Los Angeles to a second term and the chairmanship of the Council.

Meeting in Williamsburg May 5-7, the Council elected the following new members for three year terms; Patricia Bonomi, New York University; John Demos, Brandeis University; Henry Glassie, University of Pennsylvania; David Hall, Boston University; and Dennis O'Toole, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

The Institute Advisory Council consists of 19 members, most of whom are distinguished scholars in the early American field. Figures from publishing and historical administration have also frequently been elected to the Council. Since the Institute's founding, over 150 persons have served on the Council.

Continuing members including James L. Axtell, College of William and Mary; Ber-

Royce W. Chesser

Royce W. Chesser has been a full-time faculty member of the School of Education for twenty-one years. In addition, he served as a member of the Summer School faculty from 1956-62. During his entire tenure he has worked with undergraduate and graduate students providing them with careful and thorough preparation for classroom teaching and administrative leadership. In 1969 he was named Heritage Fellow, recognizing his excellence in teaching and distinguished service to the College.

Chesser has been extremely active in the field of professional education. He has served several terms as a member of the Virginia Elementary Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. In his relationship to this organization he has also served as consul-received his law degree from the University of Toledo in 1978.

Connie D. Galloway has been appointed registrar and assistant dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, with the faculty-equivalent rank of assistant professor, effective June 1. Ms. Galloway was academic counselor/instructor at Mary Baldwin College 1978-80 and Director, Adult Degree Professor, 1980 to the present. She received an undergraduate degree from Randolph Macon College and M.A. and Ed.S. degrees from the University of Virginia.

Godwin T. White, who was an instructor at Christopher Newport College, 1977-79, has been appointed assistant professor of business administration effective August 16. He received B.A. and M.B.A. degrees from the College and expects to complete a doctorate at Virginia Tech this year.

Three faculty members have been granted leaves of absence for the coming year. Scott Donaldson, professor of English, will be on leave August 16 through June 15, 1984, to teach at the University of Michigan.

Richard A. Williams, professor of law, will be on leave January 16, 1984 through June 15, 1984 to teach at McGeorge Law School.

nard Bailyn, Harvard University; Richard L. Bushman, University of Delaware, secretary; Pauline Maier, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and Larzer Ziff, The Johns Hopkins University.

Also Noble E. Cunningham, Jr., University of Missouri; Edwin S. Gaustad, University of California, Riverside; Benjamin W. Labaree, The Williams College -- Mystic Seaport Program in American Maritime Studies; Lillian B. Miller, The Charles Willson Peale Papers, National Portrait Gallery and Louis Leonard Tucker, Massachusetts Historical Society. President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., of William and Mary; Charles R. Longworth, president of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation; and George R. Kennedy of the University of North Carolina Press, serve as ex-officio members of the Council.

Founded in 1943, the Institute publishes the William and Mary Quarterly, the leading historical journal for early American studies. It also has published many major history books including this year's tant to school systems seeking accreditation, as chairman of visiting committees and as advisor and often keynote speaker at the annual meetings.

When the State of Virginia began planning for the Standards of Quality for the public schools in Virginia, Royce Chesser was among eight outstanding educators selected to serve on the Task Force to develop the procedures for the implementation of the Standards of Quality.

Chesser served as chairman of the committee that developed the first set of standards for the accreditation of elementary schools in Virginia. He served two terms as a member of the State Advisory Committee for approved programs for teacher preparation.

Throughout his tenure at the College he has been the consultant to the Region Study Group II of the State Superintendent's Advisory Council.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledge the retirement of Royce W. Chesser; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his twenty-one years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Mr. Chesser from Professor of Education to Professor of Education, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board, and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Chesser with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

Fall Tennis

The prestigious Wightman Cup, one of the top competitions in women's tennis, will be held at William and Mary Hall in October.

Each year a select team of top players from the United States and the United Kingdom are selected for the competition. Last year Chris Evert Lloyd captained the American team. Virginia Wade is expected to head the British team.

Planners are hoping that the October date on campus will be so successful that the hall will become a firm location for the matches which are held in the United States and Britain on alternate years.

Pulitzer Prize winner in American history, "The Transformation of Virginia, 1740-1790," by Rhys L. Isaac of LaTrobe University, Melbourne, Australia.

Final Oral

The final oral examination for Vnamali Raghunthan who is a candidate for a doctorate in physics, will be held Thursday, May 11 at 10 a.m., Thursday, May 12, in the conference room of William Small Physical Laboratory. His topic is "Pion Production and Absorption in Helium Isotopes."

This examination is open to the public and members of the College community.

Official Memorandum

To: The College Community
 From: George R. Healy
 Subject: TUITION AND GENERAL FEE, ROOM, BOARD, AND OTHER FEES FOR 1983-84

At the meeting of the Board of Visitors on Friday, 22 April 1983, the operating budgets of the College of William and Mary were approved. The Board of Visitors then approved the tuition and fee schedules necessary to finance the operating budgets.

As has been true in recent years, the charges necessary to finance the operating budgets have increased. This is the result of the combination of several factors including:

The legal requirements on the part of the State of Virginia to decrease the level of general fund (tax dollars) support and to increase the share of support received from students;

The need to finance a State-mandated change in the retirement system for College employees which generates a significantly higher cost for such benefits;

A modest rate of inflation.

It has been our intent to keep these increases at a minimum consistent with need, and with the obligation to comply with the Governor's mandate for personnel and General Fund reductions. While the details of the new tuition and fees can be studied on the schedules approved by the Board of Visitors, it is important to note that the total comprehensive cost of attending the College in 1983-84 will increase only 7.6% for in-State students and 12% for out-of-State students.

It is the firm intention of the administration and the faculty of the College to maintain the high standard and integrity of the programs of the College, and in no way do the approved operating budgets sacrifice these objectives. Our commitment to maintain the highest quality of education at the lowest possible cost has been successfully achieved, we believe, for 1983-84.

Virginia students, living on campus, could pay as much as $4,626 for the 1983-84 academic year, an increase of $328 or 7.6 percent. That includes $778 for tuition, $998 for various mandatory fees, an average of $1,450 for on-campus housing and $1,400 for on-campus meals. Out-of-state students could pay $7,540, up $808 or 12 percent over last year. That includes $3,452 for tuition, $1,238 for fees, an average of $1,450 for on-campus housing and $1,400 for on-campus meals. The student athletic fee jumped 14.5 percent from $322 to $369. According to budget planners, the additional tuition charges and fees will raise an estimated $245,000 in revenues for the College.

Placement Office Notices

JOB SEARCH INFORMATION FOR GRADUATING STUDENTS

Graduating students who are still job searching are encouraged to come by the Placement Office in Morton Hall 140 and authorize the placing of their resumes in a notebook which is made available for employers' review. Since the normal interview season has passed, it is helpful to have information readily available for employers who are seeking candidates. This will also permit the placement staff to communicate directly with individuals when they become aware of a position that may be of interest to them.

Those who are seeking a career position are reminded to check the Current Jobs notebook in the Career Library on a regular basis. Individual job announcements are being received regularly. In addition, the Placement Office receives placement notes from other colleges and has the following job listings:

- ARTSearch
- National Arts Jobbank
- Career Opportunity Update
- US Office of Personnel Management
- City of Newport News, VA
- City of Hampton, VA
- City of Richmond, VA
- Job Scope
- YMCA

Burroughs Opening

The Systems Products Group of Burroughs Corporation in Tredyffrin, Pa., 20 miles northwest of Philadelphia, has some openings for systems programmers.

Traditionally Burroughs has hired MS computer science graduates into these positions. This year they would like to include physics majors and chemical engineers who have an above average exposure to a computer.

Students need only forward their resumes to the attention of Jack M. Bilson, Jr., Manager, Professional Employment Eastern Division, P.O. Box 210, Paoli, Pa. 19301, to be considered.

Students who want full-time summer employment are reminded that the Office of Placement receives such information on a regular basis. Interested persons are encouraged to review the Summer Job notebook in the Career Library, Morton Hall 140.

Pat LaLand Joins Staff As Project Administrator

Patricia O. LaLand has been named Administrator of the President's House Project.

Her duties include coordinating and publicizing events for the 250th anniversary of the President's House, maintaining and refining the collection of antiques, and managing fund-raising projects.

Mrs. LaLand has been cultural editor in the Press Bureau of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation since 1974. She joined the CW staff in 1967 as a member of the escort corps.

A graduate of the University of Washington, Mrs. LaLand began her journalistic career in college as editor of the company publication for the Seattle Gas Company although she earned a degree in special education (speech pathology) with a minor in psychology.

She taught at the elementary level in Muscogee County, Ga., originating the speech therapy program there. She also worked with the "special school" for handicapped children and planned and carried out speech programs with adults and children on a private basis as an Army wife.

In her work with Colonial Williamsburg, Mrs. LaLand was active in many facets of the public relations field. She worked with journalists, photographers, television and radio crews as liaison between the Foundation and those who came as members of the media. She worked with most of the projects involving foods, antiques, the museum itself and gardens, as well as being involved with several state visits. She set up and maintained the press room for the Yorktown Bicentennial celebration and the Reagan-Mitterand visit. She was responsible for press attendance at the annual Antiques Forum, Garden Symposium and Learning Weekends.

Mrs. LaLand has independently researched, written and frequently presented lectures on Colonial topics and has worked to promote tourism by personal appearances on radio and television interviews coast to coast, in Ireland and Australia.

As well as her active business life, Mrs. LaLand is involved with many civic projects. She is on the board of directors for the Occasion of the Arts, The Williamsburg Scottish Festival and the Virginia Shakespeare Festival and is a Vice President of the Lower James River Association, a local ecology group, and a member of the Beautification Committee of the City Planning Commission.

Mrs. LaLand is a member of the Virginia Press Women and Garden Writers of America and received a 1980 writing award from the VPW.

Ash Lawn Plans for Summer

The Ash Lawn Summer Festival, presented as part of the interpretive program of life during the time President James Monroe would have occupied the home, will include performances of three operas.

During July and August, "A Contract of Marriage," by Rossini; "The Apothecary," by Haydn; and "Love in a Garden," by Mozart, as well as an original play by the festival director, Thomas Holliday, entitled "An Evening with the Monroes," will be presented.

Holliday, who also directed the festival last year, is a music professor at the Crane School of Music in Potsdam, N.Y.

The Ash Lawn Summer Festival is partially funded by grants from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

Child Care

The organization, established by a local group of parents, teachers, and community members two years ago, now operates a small child care program in the United Methodist Church. It has stressed the value of a diverse enrollment (tuition is based on income), a strong preschool program, and parent involvement. William and Mary students have worked in the center under work-study or as part of classes in Education and Psychology; Alpha Phi Omega volunteers have also done special activities with the children.

The College's Affirmative Action Committee last year recommended that the College investigate establishing a campus child care center. At that time several staff and faculty members of WCCC conducted a survey of staff, faculty, and students to determine the need for child care. Over 170 employees responded, expressing the need for infant, preschool, and afterschool care. A petition signed by 85% of the faculty also suggested strong support for such a use of campus space. This year the Space Allocation and Faculty Housing Committees approved, for an initial year, the use of college space for a child care center. The center is self-supporting.

Anyone interested in the center's program or in preregistering a child for summer or fall should call the director, Susan Scott, at 220-0025.
