Brown To Be Speaker For 1984 Charter Day Convocation

J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., will be the principal speaker for the 291st Charter Day convocation at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 4, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Brown 49, will receive an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree at the ceremonies marking the anniversary of the granting of William and Mary's royal charter by King William III and Queen Mary II of England in February 1693.

The theme of the 1984 Charter Day program will be a continuation of the year-long celebration of the fine arts, which began with the dedication in October 1983 of the new Muscarelle Museum of Art.

To mark the occasion, Charter Day this year coincides with a major opening of a new exhibit. Immediately following the Saturday morning ceremony, invited guests and members of the College community will attend a reception at the Museum to mark the opening of "Late Twentieth Century Art From the Sydney and Frances Lewis Foundation." The exhibit will be open through April 14.

evening, Feb. 3, and will also attend the convocation Saturday morning.

A native of Providence, R.I., Brown has been the director of the National Gallery since 1969. He came to the Gallery in 1961 as assistant to the director, becoming assistant director in 1964 and deputy director in 1968.

Brown received both his undergraduate and master's of business administration degrees from Harvard. He also received a master's degree from the Institute of Fine Arts of New York University, and has studied with Bernard Berenson in Florence, Italy, at the Ecole du Louvre, Paris, and the Rijksbureau voor Kunsthistorische Documentatie, The Netherlands.

He serves as chairman of the Commission of Fine Arts, Washington, D.C., and is a trustee of numerous institutions, among them the American Federation of the Arts, the Corning Museum of Glass, the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the National Geographic

Revised Holiday Schedule

To: The College Community Date: December 7, 1983
From: Lawrence W. Broomall
Vice President for Business Affairs
Subject: Revised Christmas Holiday Schedule

In the September 20, 1983 William and Mary News we published a schedule for the Christmas holiday. We indicated that, if Governor Robb declared any additional holiday, it would be placed at the beginning of our published schedule. Very recently, the governor has awarded an additional half-day for Christmas, and, as a result, our schedule will be altered, but NOT according to the originally announced plan.

Due largely to the fact that other State agencies and offices will be closed on January 2 in recognition of the New Year's Day holiday, the decision has been made to revise the College schedule as follows:

The holiday will begin at noon on Friday, December 23, 1983, and extend through Monday, January 2, 1984. Accordingly, normal business hours will be resumed on Tuesday, January 3.

We regret any inconvenience that this revised schedule might cause, and we trust that supervisory personnel will be as flexible as possible in accommodating the needs of employees who already have made plans for the entire day on Friday, December 23.

Unfortunately, this new holiday schedule was finalized after a December 6 memorandum from Mr. Robitshek had been issued. We emphasize that the information in Mr. Robitshek's memo is no longer correct (through no fault of his) and should be completely disregarded.

It is our sincere hope that this change in schedule will not prove disruptive to the College community as a whole.

We wish for each of you a very merry Christmas and a happy, prosperous New Year.

J. Carter Brown

Also scheduled that weekend is the annual meeting of the College's President's Council. Members of the Council will attend an annual black-tie reception and dinner hosted by the College Friday

Festival Consort Seeks Musicians

The Early Music Consort of the Virginia Shakespeare Festival is seeking vocalists and instrumentalists for the ensemble. The Consort looks forward to a very active 1984 season, in support of the Shakespeare Festival, and it is presently planning a late winter Early Music concert.

Interested musicians, with qualifications in Renaissance and Medieval music, should apply as soon as possible. Call Donna Della Rocca at 253-0352, or Leslie Muchmore, at 253-4377.

Newsmakers

Two Classified Employees Win Merit Awards

Two classified employees of the College, Sylvia Colston and Maudine Styles, have been awarded employee incentive awards under the College's program to reward sustained high quality performance on the job.

Mrs. Colston, who works for the Publications Department, and Mrs. Styles, a secretary in the Women's Physical Education Department, each received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond in presentation ceremonies held Tuesday in President's Graves' office.

"Should I RUSH to do the RUSH order you just RUSHED in with, or continue with the RUSH order the man who just RUSHED by you, RUSHED in to tell me had to be a RUSH order, or is your RUSH order more pressing than the RUSH order that I am currently RUSHING to complete?"

The sign was on the door of the typesetting room at the Publications Office on the third floor of James Blair Hall. It got dog-eared by people brushing past it. It failed to stem the flow of "Rushes," most of whom didn't slow down long enough to read it.

Typesetter Sylvia Colston is resigned to the pressures of her job and fortunately maintains the spark of good humor that is needed to fulfill her pressure packed job.

"Everyone needs everything yesterday," says Sylvia. "I think they imagine there is a magic slot in the side of the typesetting machine. You just put the work in, push a button and out comes the work in a flash."

The "work" Sylvia refers to includes catalogues and posters, the weekly editions of the William and Mary News, name cards, invitations, annual reports, innumerable newsletters, programs for the Concert Series, lectures, student and faculty recitals, promotional materials for fundraising, informational pamphlets on overseas study programs and manuscripts of faculty research - to name a few.

Sylvia has probably read more about the College of William and Mary than anyone else on campus. She wishes sometimes that her clients had been as careful about reading the copy as she is when she typesets it. Her pet peeve is the lingering editor who decides to change the copy after it has been set because he didn't read it well the first time around.

Whether a small job requiring just a few words on a poster or a large assignment that will take hours at the keyboard, Sylvia regards it as all in a day's work.

Sylvia Colston joined the college staff a little over 10 years ago as secretary to Ross Weeks, Jr., who was then director of the public relations office. Her boss now is S. Dean Olson, University Editor and Director of the Publications Office.

Today she is classified as phototypesetting specialist. When the College first went into the typesetting business, Sylvia began the service using an IBM Magnetic Tape Selectric Typewriter. Later the College acquired a Mergenthaler Linocomp and Sylvia became the College's first "Cold Type Compositor."

When the College was given its present system, an AKI Ultra Bank Computer Memory Typesetting unit, Sylvia had to quickly learn a typesetting process that was light years ahead of the one she had been using without interrupting the flow of "work" into the publications office. Sylvia has trained several operators and currently works with Mrs. Marilyn Carlin, a part-time typesetter. The AKI system was donated by Teagle and Little Printers of Norfolk.

As well as a convenience to faculty, staff and students, having a typesetting facility on campus saves the College thousands of dollars each year which would have to be expended to get the material typeset at a commercial printing house. The ability to prepare material for the printer "camera ready" is both an artistic and monetary plus for the College. Sylvia works with graphic designers June Skalak and Maggie Schlotter as part of the publication department's production team.

Sylvia has three daughters Tonya, 6; Erica, 3; and Anicio, 12. Her husband

Johnnie is employed by Anheuser Busch. The Colstons live in Newport News.

Sylvia worked for two years in the Archaeology Department of Colonial Williamsburg before coming to the College. A native of King and Queen County, she has worked for the Bell Telephone Laboratories Company in New Jersey, the C&P Telephone Company in Richmond and was also employed as a secretary with the Chubb and Son Insurance Company of New Jersey.

When she began as an hourly employee in 1954, Mrs. Maudine Styles had a basement office in Jefferson Hall which she shared with two other teachers and a student helper.

Times have changed. Today she is a department secretary for Women's Physical Education and she has seen her working environment change tremendously.

In 1954 the Women's Physical Education department had two offices in the basement of Jefferson Hall and one on the main floor of the building. Some classes were held in Blow gymnasium. Women used the gymnasium in Jefferson but for swimming shared the facilities of the pool in Blow with the men. Back then the department, says Maudine, had five members and there were about 1600 students enrolled in the College.

In 1963 Adair gymnasium, named for Cornelia Storrs-Adair, a student 1921-23, was opened as the women's physical education center. The facility included classrooms, dance studios and a competitive size swimming pool.

Maudine says she misses the opportunities to visit with students that she had in Jefferson but is happy that her office was not there during last year's fire. Now the administrative offices of the department are a compact unit not designed to be part of the traffic pattern.

"I guess you can say we've come a long way baby," says Maudine who is also known as 'Dine, a contraction designed by a former department chair who thought Maudine was a little long for effective telephone communications. There are three secretaries in the department now, reflecting the expansion of physical education and athletics for women. The department was recently kept busy with plans for the highly successful Wightman Cup tennis tournament which was held for the first time in William and Mary Hall. Maudine recalls that the recent multinational Summit meeting was also an exciting time to be working on campus.

Maudine admits to being a "neatnick". She likes things to run along smoothly and can't stand a messy office. Her perfectionist tendencies are reflected in the citation for her award. She has been rewarded for "sustained superior performance, for quality as well as longevity." Her extraordinary dedication to the department has included coming in at 6 a.m. to make sure materials were prepared for an early morning meeting, as well as staying well past 5 p.m. to see that a task was completed, precisely and on time.

Maudine is an Alabaman. She was born near Huntsville. Her husband Robert (Bob) holds Civil Service post at Fort Eustis. The Styles have one daughter, Barbara who lives in Virginia Beach. Barbara is blind but she lives alone and is working in the special services division of the City of Virginia Beach sending out books and tapes for the blind. A former medical transcriber for Norfolk General and DePaul hospitals, she is attending classes at Tidewater Community College to qualify to work with the retarded and handicapped.

The Women's Physical Education Department is an appropriate place for Maudine to work. She says she has always been athletically active. She came from an athletic family, she explains. "We grew up on a farm. We didn't have TV so we had to find some way to work off all that energy after working on the farm." Maudine says she used to enjoy playing softball with her mother and also likes to go fishing, work in the garden with flowers and sew. Maudine's mother, Mrs. Maud Taylor, is 84 and coming to Williamsburg to share the holidays with the Styles. She makes the trip from Alabama twice a year. Maudine says her mother scoffs at old age and the idea of her living in a retirement home. "I'm not going there with all those old people," she told Maudine.

Fithian Responds To Challenge Of PBK Membership

John Fithian

The following is the response on behalf of new initiates of Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at ceremonies held Dec. 5, by initiate John Fithian, a government major from Annandale, Va.

At this year's ceremonies, 30 members of the class of 1984 were initiated and one faculty member, Alan Fuchs, professor of philosophy.

We've been labelled nerds and bookworms. We've been told that our best friend is our study lamp and that our social life must be the pits.

Yet, who are we really? And what does being a PBK member from the College of William and Mary mean?

Well, we came from TN, ND, VA, IN, CA, PA, OH, NY and MD. We've concentrated in everything from philosophy to physics. We're seeking graduate school and employment opportunities that are equally diverse. Yet we all have one thing in common - we are aggressively determined to employ our capacities, and contrary to the bookworm image, those capacities are manifested in marvelously unique ways. Each initiate gathered here tonight has his or her own way of living.

"I've watched Safon get high on his drumming. I've heard Ruhnke debate the essence of American interventionism in Latin America at 6 o'clock in the morning. I've seen Smith falling asleep at work because she stayed up all night working on The Flat Hat.

I've been knocked off the sidewalk as McCauley and Garnett sprint across campus in their drive to keep in shape. And I've heard Jarvie deliver the finest discourse on the creativity of Reggae music.

We are young men and women that have good reason to enjoy life. So then, what does PBK mean to us? Well, President Graves tells us that it is the highest honor to which an undergraduate student at William and Mary can aspire. The PBK handbook says it is recognition of intellectual understanding and not merely knowledge. Our friends tell us it's neat and our checkbooks indicate a debit of forty bucks.

As I look out at my fellow initiates and our families and friends, at Professor Fuchs who it is our honor to have counted among our number, and our other mentors who have called us here tonight, I say that Phi Beta Kappa is much more than an honor. It is a challenge. It is an earnest calling to use our drive and our learning to do something positive.

There are 234 schools in this nation that are recognizing new PBK members this year and we make up a talented and courageous generation. If we want to we can create world peace and rid ourselves of the threat of nuclear war. If we so desire, we can halt the deterioration of our precious environment and all its wonderful resources.

If we use our education to help others, we can better live in the image of our God, whether God be named Allah, Buddha, Christ or Jehovah. And yet tonight's honor is also a personal challenge to each individual here tonight. It is a challenge to work hard and achieve all these lofty goals without forgetting to live and to thrill in the living.

Do we walk between classes in such a hurry that we forget to see how beautiful our campus is? Are we too busy to notice when a friend is hurting? Are we so driven that we don't have time to read a neat book that has nothing to do with classes or grades or application and resumes? I know I've been guilty of a few of these things.

We are not being recognized tonight because we are the best competitors and grade garnerers on campus, although that may be true.

We're being recognized tonight for our understanding. Let us, then, always understand the challenge to live life with all the potential we have, for in the living, we can make the world a better place to live.

On behalf of the initiates from the class of 1984, I say that we are honored, we are grateful to our parents and our professors for the education we have received and we accept the Phi Beta Kappa challenge given here tonight.

Kernodle Exchanges With Hawaii Prof

Wayne Kernodle, professor of sociology, will be on leave next semester as an exchange professor at the University of Hawaii at Hilo. Coming to William and Mary will be Joseph Monane, chairman of the department of sociology at the University of Hawaii.

Monane is currently at Harvard on a research project and will join the faculty in January. His wife, Tazuko Manone is head of the Applied Linguistics department at Hawaii and is currently on a year's research appointment at Harvard. She will not accompany her husband when he comes to Williamsburg.

For Kernodle and his wife, Ruth, chairman of the department of sociology and social work at Christopher Newport College and direction of the gerontology program there, the exchange will be a complete one. Kernodle and Manone will exchange houses, cars and courses. Both have maintained a friendship since undergraduate days at UNC.

Mrs. Kernodle is planning to do some gerontology training programs while in Hawaii with her husband. She will also be doing some work on a three generation study of living Hawaiians from different ethnic backgrounds to determine their attitudes toward mainland tourist activities and the changes these activities have brought in their lives. The Kernodles will also research the sub-culture among young people in Hawaii which has developed, independent of individual ethnic backgrounds.

Kernodle will be teaching courses in the family and an introduction to sociology as well as an evening course for residents of the community around the university on the sociology of sports and leisure.

The Kernodles expect to return home in June. They would like to include a trip to China before returning to Williamsburg but plans for that are currently incomplete.

This is the first exchange for the Kernodles. They have, however, spent time abroad on professional assignments in several countries. They were participants in a seminar in Yugoslavia on cross cultural perspectives on aging. Kernodle received a research grant to spend three months in Belgium, Denmark and the Netherlands collecting data on community mental health facilities. A leader in establishing the Elderhostel program on campus, he has also studied the British equivalent, the Saga plan, in England.

Calculating Earnings

All College employees are reminded that if check stubs are used to calculate wage earnings for 1983, the College of William and Mary/Virginia Institute of Marine Science check stub No. 3 dated December 31, 1983 should be used for this calculation. This stub includes all wages earned at the College or VIMS this calendar year. The Commonwealth of Virginia earnings statement does not have your total wages listed.

The new facility, now under construction on the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, College of William and Mary, Gloucester Point campus, has been officially named Waterman's Hall in honor of Chesapeake Bay watermen.

The ground breaking for this building was held January 6, 1983 with completion of the new building planned for August of 1984.

Stephens Takes 'Star Trek' And Comes Up With 'Star Wreck'

Lynne Stephens has turned "Star Trek The Movie," to quote another popular film title - "Every Which Way But Loose" - in the production of a lively spoof entitled "Star Wreck The Commotion Picture."

Lynne, a sophomore business major who plans to pursue a career in TV or film, has not only received enthusiastic audience response for her film, but a personal endorsement from the creator of "Star Trek," Gene Roddenberry.

The idea for "Star Wreck" came from a Christmas holiday gathering of Lynne and some friends at her home in Northern Virginia as they watched "Star Trek" on TV. Lynne recalls that pads of paper and pencils were handed around and suggestions were jotted down for a new version.

Production techniques have become increasingly sophisticated with each Star Trek movie but the first had little background music and few sound effects. These lapses made it possible for Lynne to add her own special touches - Dr. Spock with Rhatt Butler's voice, portions of Tara's Theme as background music, Miss Piggy responding in French. "Star Wreck" contains over 400 different variations over the original with contributions from 140 different artists.

"Star Wreck" is 53 minutes long compared to two hours and fifteen minutes for the original movie. The story is still intact, says Lynne, although some of the dramatic emphases have been redirected. She says she was fortunate to have had access to professional equipment for the remake.

Not a commercial property, "Star Wreck" is shown without an admission charge at conventions and was recently shown on campus at the Creative Arts House. It will probably be shown next semester at the Science Fiction Club Fair.

At one convention, Lynn met Gene Roddenberry's secretary who invited her to visit Paramount Studios and bring a tape of "Star Wreck" for viewing. "I spent three months trying to convince my parents to let me go," she recalls. Last summer Lynne went back for a second visit and saw some of the preparations for the filming of "Star Trek III."

Besides the thrill of meeting the actors of Star Trek, including William Shatner who plays Captain Kirk, a visit to the wardrobe department was one of the highlights of the studio visit for Lynne. The rows and rows of costumes, each tagged with the titles of the film in which they were used and the actors who wore them, provided a colorful kaleidoscopic review of years of films.

Despite her obvious creative talent, Lynne says she is opting for the business side of the film or TV industry. "Those who control the purse-strings also have something to say about the creative aspects of the industry," she adds.

Lynne's interest in television production was sparked by a summer project at the College. As a sixth grader she participated in a TV workshop, part of a program for talented and gifted children in the Williamsburg-James City County School system.

Stephens and Roddenberry

For introducing her to the excitement of Star Trek and for much of the production know-how for "Star Wreck," Lynne credits Ellen Johnson Pickels '62, an elementary school teacher in Williamsburg when Lynne lived in the area. Ellen first encountered Lynne when she was dressed as Darth Vader, handing out literature to a science fiction convention. When the credits roll on "Star Wreck," Lynn is listed as Creator/Director; Ellen as Producer/Editor. Ellen now lives in Richmond and is a media specialist at St. Mary's Hospital.

Lynne and Ellen worked all one summer on "Star Wreck," and even developed a promotional trailer for the film. Lynne put $700 of her own money into the project. The first time it was shown at a convention, the creators anxiously awaited audience reaction. So far it has been 95 percent favorable, says Lynne, "even with Trekkies." Because she has seen it so many times, Lynne doesn't watch the movie any more but the reaction of the audiences.

While in the mood for having fun with "Star Trek" Lynne also took dead aim at one of the seemingly endless record commercials on late-night TV with "The Greatest Lines of Chubby Chekov." Walter Koenig, the actor who plays "Chekov," was delighted with the take-off and even posed for a picture with the album Lynne has created.

Lynne doesn't do any advertising for her convention dates. There is a network of convention and conference planners on the East coast and the word is out that "Star Wreck" is a whimsical addition to tickle the funny bone and add a touch of lightness to a busy conference schedule.

Lynne has been approached by companies who would like to commercialize the film but she turns them all down and zealously protects the original copy of "Star Wreck." Paramount Studios is happy with "Star Wreck" as it is and delighted that it served to spark interest in "Star Trek" but would not like to see "Star Wreck" in commercial competition with the Star Trek series.

Social Studies Writing Program

English teachers won't be the only ones teaching writing in their classrooms if Mark Gulesian, professor in the School of Education, has anything to say about it.

Gulesian and a group of teachers active in the Eastern Virginia Writing Project, which he directs, have developed a new course for social studies teachers in Virginia Beach to learn how to impart better writing skills to their students.

Gulesian and company have also convinced five area school systems to lend their own teachers, trained by the Eastern Virginia Writing Project, to serve as instructors in the program. Virginia Beach social studies teachers will receive graduate credit from William and Mary for the course, taught by teacher/consultants from Virginia Beach, Newport News, Mathews County and Williamsburg/James City County schools. The semester-long course will begin in February, with weekly sessions scheduled through May.

"The concept of training teachers to instruct other teachers is a trademark of the highly successful National Writing Project, a nation-wide network of over 100 programs, one of which is the Eastern Virginia Writing Project," says Gulesian.

"We want to break down the notion that composition is the sole province of the English teacher," says Gulesian, who is also coordinator of William and Mary's certification program for secondary school English.

"Scientists, historians and mathematicians all write; they write in different ways, of course, and to meet different needs. But if writing is thinking, then the teaching of writing is teaching students how to think better in various subjects."

Gulesian developed the course with Mary Barnes and Tom Garrou, who are supervisors of Virginia Beach's English and social studies program, respectively; and Stephanie McConachie and Loretta Hannum, both teachers in Williamsburg/James City County Schools.

Teachers not only will require more writing of their students, but they also will look closely at the entire process of putting words on paper, says Gulesian. "Writing is not just a product; we're teaching them what to do to get that product."

The social studies teachers will also get guidance on assigning writing topics, helping students choose their own topics, holding writing conferences with students before assignments are due, and evaluating the written work once it has been completed. The teachers will even learn how to use political cartoons and social studies journals in the classroom, sometimes unfamiliar material for ninth graders.

The course will also embrace a relatively new idea in high school teaching: encouraging social studies and English teachers to work together to advance specific writing skills through joint assignments and joint tests.

"It's quite a stew we have simmering here," says Gulesian. But if students are ever to overcome their writing difficulties, innovation and cooperation throughout public education are essential.

"We hope eventually to do a program with the science and math teachers," he says. Science and math writing? "Scientists and mathematicians may think differently but they had better be able to express themselves," Gulesian asserts. Otherwise, how will anyone know about the great scientific and mathematical discoveries they make?

Football Team Has Winning Season

William and Mary defeated arch rival Richmond 24-15 thus registering its first winning season since 1977.

The 6-5 Indians were 6-1 against their counterparts in the IAA Division.

"I've been told we have one of the better IAA teams in the nation by people who have seen some of the highly ranked teams play," stated head coach Jimmie Laycock.

"We did very well in our division and had one of the toughest overall schedules among IAA schools, so you're darn right I'm proud of our accomplishments this year."

The Tribe was 0-4 against IA teams but displayed its offensive muscle against all four, three of whom were among the countries very best teams, North Carolina, Virginia Tech and East Carolina.

Several team and individual records fell during the '83 season and William and Mary concluded the regular season nationally ranked in several IAA categories, including passing offense (8th, 247.5) and total offense (13th, 382.8)

Official Memorandum

To: The College Community

Date: December 6, 1983

From: Dennis K. Cogle
Assistant Vice President for Business Affairs

Subject: Telephone Information Operation

In the fall of 1982, the general information telephone number for the College (253-4000) was moved from the campus to a central telephone operation of the Commonwealth of Virginia, with that operation being located in Richmond. This action was in direct response to a study conducted by the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Commission (JLARC).

At the same time, a new extension (253-4196) was installed in the Campus Center, and inquiries regarding student locations and telephone numbers were directed to that number. It was recognized that this new system had been hastily conceived in response to the relatively short notice we were given regarding the change noted above, and that, therefore, it would be under close scrutiny for effectiveness of operation.

Within a few months, it was evident that such an arrangement was something less than desirable, and efforts were begun to get a general information operation back on the campus, to work in conjunction with the student information service.

Early in the fall of 1983 we were successful in those efforts, and now both the 4000 number and the 4196 number are operational on-campus, based in the Campus Center, with student operators under the supervision of Robert C. Knowlton, Campus Center Director. Mr. Knowlton has had previous experience in other schools with this type operation, and he is confident that it will be successful here on the campus of the College of William and Mary.

The following is a schedule for operation of the information lines:

1. Normal hours will be 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. daily
2. Exceptions to the normal schedule will be made during certain holiday periods:

Summer School

Beginning 6-4-84, open normal hours (8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. until further notice)

As an overall, basic guide, the information service will be operated during normal hours (8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.) when classes are in session. When classes are not in session and the College is open, operations will be from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, with no operation during the weekends. When the entire College is closed, as at Thanksgiving and Christmas, the information operation will be closed.

At any time that an operator is not on duty, an answering device will be activated to inform callers of the next hours of operation and to direct emergency calls to the Campus Police.

This information service should alleviate a great deal of the frustration expressed by faculty and staff personnel, as well as by outside callers who have been unable to reach offices or individuals without a great deal of calling and re-calling, often when those calls were long-distance. Little, if any, change in direct cost is anticipated; however, we expect to realize a great deal in the area of improved public relations.

As we proceed with the approach detailed above, we would welcome comments and suggestions as to how the service might be improved. We feel that we are off to a good start, but we realize, too, that there may be better ways in which we might approach the operation.

We appreciate very much your understanding cooperation in this undertaking.
