A Word To The Graduates

I am honored by the Senior Class's invitation to speak on this special occasion. I fear, however, that some of my students are now putting ME to a cruel test: trying to say something worth saying in five minutes! However, I want to bid you goodbye with essentially one parting thought.

Imagine that you have just returned to the College after twenty years. You will be entering middle age and, I'm afraid, you will be corrupt. Since you know your own weaknesses, you may find what I'm about to say hard to believe. But tonight you may be closer to moral integrity than you ever will be again. Corruption runs faster than death. Like your teachers and your parents before you, you will be tempted to do dishonest things — or at least selfish things — to hold your job, or to maintain a very nice life style. Your children's dental bills alone will probably corrupt you. I know, because I've been through it.

American society won't be of much help to you, either. We are living at a time that places an inordinate emphasis on the aspiring ego, on gratifying the self and — as the pop-therapists say — on "fulfilling our perceived needs." Of course, our personal gratifications are always insatiable. It would be easy for you to capitulate; give up the moral battle; do what others are doing; to play the game; to look out for number one. You will, however, do so at the price of a loss of your own precious freedom and your own self-esteem.

I suggest to you that your prime responsibility in the next few years will not be anything so grandiose as changing your world. Rather, it will be to shape and to train your life so that you may be true to some ideals that transcend your limited and parochial self. Your identity as a person will be shaped by your loyalties and your daily habits. Your character will be revealed by what you love and what you do. The shaping of your character will require what a liberal education should have given you: the capacity to be subversive — that is, to question the values and ways of your own class, your own society, and, if necessary, your nation. But most of all your education should have taught you to be subversive toward your own easy conscience. The educated person is one who can, and should, say "no." The shaping of a true self requires renunciation, non-conformity, the sacrifice of self to ideals larger than the self.

I wish you a future full of wonder and joy. But most of all I wish you a future that resists the temptations of corruption.

God's speed.

Paradis Wins Lucker Award

Chris Paradis '84 from Framingham, MA, has been awarded the Laurie Lucker Blount Award given annually to a graduating woman with high academic achievement, who has excelled as an athlete, demonstrated sportsmanship and team spirit, and who has provided service to both campus and the community.

Paradis has been a four-year starter on the field hockey and lacrosse teams, captaining both this past year. She was elected to the 1983-85 VIL all-tournament teams in hockey and lacrosse. A business management major, she maintained a 3.7 grade-point average. She is a member of the Business Honor Society and Mortar Board and was house manager for Gamma Phi Beta sorority and president of the Athletes' Advisory Council.

The award honors the memory of Laurie Lucker Blount '78 who died of

Consider Public Service Careers, Chairman Volcker Urges 1984 Graduates

Reporters from the Wall Street Journal and Fortune Magazine joined the usual gathering of local press for commencement exercises Sunday in William and Mary Hall.

They were there because of the main speaker, Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve System. If Volcker was going to make an important pronouncement affecting the nation's economy, they didn't want to miss it.

There wasn't any startling pronouncement, but Volcker got a warm reception from his audience of 1500 graduates and over 10,000 family members and friends. Volcker told the graduates that economic stability and growth will not come without effort.

He traced for his audience an economic pattern of the past 20 years. "By roughly the mid-1960's the notion began to spread that we'd finally learned how to maintain steady growth and low unemployment and stability . . . but in the process I think we fell prey to a human failing. Once we assumed that as a society we had the answers to economic growth and stability, we forgot we still had to work at it . . . by the late 1970's the economic vision of sustained growth and stability had turned sour. By the time you went to college, the inflation rate was running at one percent or more per month. We had higher levels of employment at the same time productivity growth had practically ceased; the average worker saw the value of his salary check declining." A lot has changed since then, said Volcker, noting that productivity is rising again and there is a greater sense of restraint on costs.

"I'm not going to provide any guarantees to go along with that happy vision of more stability and growth. Lack of discipline in our federal budget policies is plainly one hazard. Inflation and its aftermath have left us well publicized problems in the international economic order as well as domestically. There are still temptations to try to fool ourselves into thinking that inflation and excessive money creations are an easy way out, a substitute for productivity and work. But I think we also know those dangers and with intelligence and courage we should be able to deal with them realistically. Those still fresh memories of the disappointing 1970's and of recession should spur us on. And I suspect you leave college with a more realistic appreciation of what is necessary and better prepared than your counterparts a decade ago.

Although he admitted that a career in public service "isn't everyone's cup of tea," Volcker urged graduates to take the pleading of "a graying, balding itinerant civil servant," and choose public service as a career so the "well of talent and effectiveness in government" will not be depleted over the years.

Volcker received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from the College. Also honored with degrees were Lawrence A. Cremin, Doctor of Humane Letters; R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., Doctor of Laws; and William Zimmer, III, Doctor of Humane Letters.

The Lord Botetourt Medal to the member of the graduating class who receives the highest academic standing went to Julia Marie Horman, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate with a double concentration in German and Computer Science. Two other students with 4.0 GPA, David Mark McCauley and Amy Sue McDiffett, were also recognized for their accomplishments.

The Frederic Carr Memorial Cup winner was William Cooper Scott, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate with a double concentration in history and government.

Student recipients of the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award were Susan Elizabeth Wise and Jon Douglas Klein. The third award went to Dick Rastetter who has maintained a close relationship with the College for a number of years. His ties, said President Graves, have been especially strong with residents of the Spanish House and with Hispanic students.

Valedictory remarks were made by Paul C. Kuhnel, who received honors in American Studies.

Among those recognized from the platform during the ceremonies were members of the 50th reunion class who attended the commencement exercises.

Observance of Independence Day

Independence Day, July 4, is a legal holiday for permanent classified employees. Since this date falls on Wednesday and classes will be in session on that day, normal services must be maintained. The responsibility for maintaining the services rests with the department head.

A leave slip should be submitted to the Personnel Office for any permanent classified employee who takes the holiday. Permanent classified employees who are required to work on this holiday are urged to take compensatory leave earned as soon thereafter as possible in order to avoid excessive leave accumulation. Compensatory leave not taken within one year from the date earned will lapse. Hourly employees who work on this holiday will be paid at their regular rate.

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science will observe this same holiday schedule and procedure.

Phonathon Raises $75,000; Volunteers Get Rewards

Getting rewarded for yakking on the phone is not the way it usually works — there are usually parents or roommates around to glare or look at their watches.

But when it comes to raising money through phonathons, student volunteers are encouraged to make as many calls as they can — to be "phone hogs."

Free hamburgers and ice cream were the reward for 100 volunteers, mostly students, who raised over $75,000 in April for the William and Mary Fund.

Goal for the Fund this year is $950,000 by June 30. The Fund already has $800,000 in cash and over $110,000 in pledges toward that goal, according to Jacquelin Crebbs, director of annual support.

Ms. Crebbs said that to help raise money for the Fund this year, she decided to make the job more fun by having refreshments and prizes donated for the participants in each evening's calling. To encourage competition among the callers, the first student who received a pledge each night won a prize, as did the students who raised the most dollars, and those who enlisted the most donors.

"This year for the first time, we invited back groups of student callers who had been successful phonathon volunteers in the past," says Ms. Crebbs. The most successful caller for the 12 phonathons was Molly Harris, a sophomore from Waynesboro. Miss Harris obtained pledges totaling $4,030 in two nights of calling.

John Massey, owner of Massey's Camera Shop, is a member of the Friends of the College Advisory Council, and coordinated efforts with his committee to gain over $800 worth of prizes and gifts for the student callers, according to Ms. Crebbs.

Joining Massey in efforts to involve the business community in the fund-raising activities were J.B. Hickman and Sheila J. Ellis. Hickman and Mrs. Ellis are chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, of the Friends of the College Advisory Council.

The $75,497 in pledges came from 1,107 alumni and friends who were called to renew their annual gifts to the College. The callers also recorded 574 pledges of unspecified amounts. Only 62 who were called did not make a pledge, says Ms. Crebbs.

The Annual Fund is the product of a merger among three College fund-raising entities, she says. This year, the fund-raising activities of the Parent's Fund, the Friends of the College, and the William and Mary Fund (for alumni) have been combined into one effort supporting the College's current operations.

The money in the Annual Fund is used to support College activities and services that are funded inadequately, or not at all, by the state, says Ms. Crebbs. Such activities include scholarships, faculty and student research, extracurricular life of students, faculty support, the library, and student services such as maintenance of the college computer system.

"The students were extremely excited and grateful that the business community was supporting and recognizing the success of their work for William and Mary."

Volunteers for the phonathon take a lighthearted timeout with Director of Annual Support Ms. Jacquelin Crebbs, second from left. The students were busy phoning during the month of April with more than $75,000 pledged.

Dr. Coles Lectures On "Role Of Family And Community"

A crowd of over 1,000 came to the Hampton Coliseum last Monday, May 7, to hear Dr. Robert Coles speak as part of William and Mary and NASA's "Our Future in the Cosmos" free public lecture series. Dr. Coles, a Harvard University child psychiatrist and Pulitzer-prize winning author, lectured on "Education—the Role of Family and Community."

The entire program had a William and Mary flavor. Coles was introduced by Dr. Ed Brickell, Superintendent of the Virginia Beach Public Schools and former Rector of William and Mary. Dr. James Lawrence of NASA gave the official welcome. Lawrence taught physics at the College from 1960-67. Dr. John Nagle, Dean of the School of Education, moderated the question and answer period and delivered the closing remarks.

The "Our Future in the Cosmos" free lecture series has been offered as a public service by William and Mary and NASA since 1974. Two fall lectures are planned, also on the theme of education.

News Schedule

The William and Mary News will be published Tuesday, May 15, but following that issue will be on a summer schedule, returning to a weekly schedule with the beginning of classes in the fall. The first issue on the summer schedule will be June 19.

IRS Gives Teachers Break On Travel

Teachers who travel to maintain or enhance their educational skills may be able to deduct the costs as education expenses on their federal income tax returns, according to the IRS.

The expenses qualify only if a major part of the activities during travel directly maintains or improves skills required in their work, says the IRS.

For example, a French language teacher is granted sabbatical leave to tour France to improve her knowledge of the French language. The itinerary includes visiting French schools and families and attending movies, plays, and lectures in the French language. These travel costs are deductible as educational expenses, according to the IRS.

On the other hand, English or mathematics teachers could not deduct the expenses of a similar trip to France because it would not maintain or improve required skills.

Educational expenses that may be deductible while traveling include meals and lodging, tuition, books, laboratory fees, and similar items.

For more information, order the free IRS Publication 508, Educational Expenses, by writing to IRS, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, Virginia 23260, or by calling IRS toll-free, 1-800-424-1040.

Observance of Memorial Day

The administrative offices, the plant department (except for those employees required to maintain essential services), and the mail room of the College of William and Mary will be closed on Monday, May 28, 1984. The Campus Police Department will maintain regular hours.

The names of permanent classified employees who are required to work on Monday, May 28, 1984, should be reported in writing to the Personnel Office in order that they may be credited with compensatory leave. Permanent classified employees who are required to work on May 28, 1984 should take compensatory leave earned as soon thereafter as possible in order to avoid excessive leave accumulation. Hourly employees who work on this day will be paid at their regular hourly rates.

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science will observe this same holiday schedule and procedure.

Institute Of Early American History Elects Council Members

The Institute of Early American History and Culture has re-elected James L. Axtell, professor of history to a second year term as a member of its Council.

At sessions of the annual meeting held in Williamsburg May 10-12, the Council named four new members to a three-year term on the Council and re-elected Joyce O. Appleby, University of California, Los Angeles, to the chair.

New Council members, all Early American scholars, are Alden T. Vaughan, Columbia University; Linda K. Kerber, University of Iowa; Kenneth E. Silverman, New York University; and Sheldon

Meyer, Oxford University Press, New York. New secretary of the Council is Louis Leonard Tucker, Massachusetts Historical Society.

The Institute Council also includes Noble R. Cunningham, Jr., University of Missouri-Columbia; Edwin S. Gaustad, University of California, Riverside; Benjamin W. Labaree, Williams College-Mystic Seaport Program in American Maritime Studies; Lillian B. Miller, The Charles Willson Peale Papers, National Portrait Gallery; Patricia Bonomi, New York University; John P. Demos, Brandeis University; Henry Glassie, University of Pennsylvania; David D. Hall, Boston University; and Dennis A. O'Toole, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., of the College of William and Mary and Charles R. Longworth of Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, are ex-officio members of the Council.

The Institute is co-sponsored by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

VIMS Newsmakers

John D. Boon, associate professor of marine science of VIMS' geological oceanography department, has been invited to join the editorial board of Estuaries, the Journal of the Estuarine Research Federation.

The editorial board is primarily responsible for ensuring the high quality of the Journal by securing peer reviews of manuscripts submitted for publication, recommending acceptance, rejection or revision as deemed necessary.

As a member of the board, Boon's area of responsibility will be editing submitted material on tides, currents and sediment transport.

N. Bart Theberge, associate professor of marine science, participated in the Marine Recreational Fisheries Symposium held in Virginia Beach in April.

Theberge chaired a panel which addressed the subject of angler needs and in addition, served as a participant and presenter for another panel which addressed marine recreational fishing development.

The following physics paper has been published: Birth of New Folds and Competing Attractors in Elmo Bumpy Torus. Alkesh Punjabi and George Vahala, Physics Letters 101A, 331 (1984).

Gary C. DeFotis, assistant professor of chemistry, has received a $10,000 grant from the IEEE Magnetic Society, in support of his research on lower dimensional and mixed magnetic systems. Only two awards were made nationally in 1984, the other going to a faculty member at Carnegie-Mellon University.

In her brief twenty-three years, Laurie's vitality, constant concern for others, and optimism in the face of everything, including her serious illness, made her an example to follow for all who knew her.

While at the College Laurie dedicated herself to the service of her fellow students and her community, while achieving excellence both as an athlete on the varsity lacrosse and hockey teams, and as a scholar, as reflected by her election to Mortar Board and her graduation with honors. Laurie's work as a Resident Advisor and an Orientation Assistant, as well as her major role in coordinating the Free University Program, shows her commitment to other students; and as civic chairman of Chi Omega and a member of WATS, she extended her service activities to the Williamsburg community as well. Her choice for an honors project, which involved her in working with patients at Eastern State, combined Laurie's academic interests in psychology and biology and her desire to help others.

The award was established by Mortar Board and Chi Omega sorority and the plaque to the recipient bears the inscription "Life to the Fullest."

Honorary Degree Citations

R. HARVEY CHAPPELL, JR. HONORARY DOCTOR OF LAWS

"Robert Harvey Chappell, Jr., lawyer, for over three decades you have served your profession with high distinction, being recognized by election to the highest positions of leadership at the local, state and national levels. You have given unstintingly and enthusiastically of your time and talents to your alma mater, culminating in exceptional service as Rector of the College. In your community your energy and selflessness know no bounds in service to your fellow man. You personify good citizenship in all that you do and are.

"Robert Harvey Chappell, Jr.: In recognition of your manifold contributions as lawyer, alumnus and citizen in a distinguished career of leadership and service that is still unfolding, for your unselfish commitment to excellence in all that you endeavor, your alma mater is proud to honor you.

LAWRENCE A. CREMIN HONORARY DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS

"Lawrence Arthur Cremin, educator, you are renowned as a historian, scholar, author, teacher and educational administrator. For thirty five years you have played a major leadership role in American higher education. Your distinguished contributions have led to your being awarded both the Bancroft and the Pulitzer prizes. Your rare and multidisciplinary scholarly talents allow you to be equally at home in philosophy, the social sciences, politics and history, whether at Teachers College of Columbia University or out among the schools and universities of this country or abroad.

"Lawrence Arthur Cremin: In recognition of your distinguished accomplishments in many fields of education, and in gratitude for your remarkable and diverse contributions in furthering the cause of education of benefit to us all, the College of William and Mary is pleased to honor you.

PAUL A. VOLCKER HONORARY DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS

"Paul A. Volcker, banker and government official, in a career devoted to promoting and improving the public good, you are a champion of private enterprise. You have served with distinction and conviction both private and public banking, and in your national leadership role you inspire confidence and trust. As chairman of the Federal Reserve System, you personify the strength and integrity of the American people in a complex and demanding world.

"Paul A. Volcker: In recognition of your many contributions to both the private and public good, and of your capacity both to provide leadership at the highest levels of federal and financial power while still expressing concern for the interest of the individual, this university is proud to honor you.

WILLIAM L. ZIMMER, III HONORARY DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS

"William Louis Zimmer, III, businessman and lawyer, your remarkable career has provided an opportunity for you to play exceptional leadership roles in the professions of both business and the law. At the same time your keen interest in and devotion to education has led you to make a distinguished contribution to higher education both in service to your university and to higher education throughout the Commonwealth. The citizens of Virginia have benefited beyond measure from your many talents and interests and your enthusiastic willingness to share them in service and leadership.

"William Louis Zimmer III: In gratitude for your many contributions to higher education and in recognition of your exceptional service as businessman and lawyer, the College of William and Mary is pleased to honor a loyal son of the University of Virginia.
