Graves gives scroll to Archbishop

The College was represented Sept. 30 when Peninsula Orthodox Greeks dedicated their new church and welcomed the Archbishop of North and South America here for the ceremony.

A scroll from William and Mary was presented to Archbishop Iakovos by President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., at a dinner following the consecration of Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox church in Newport News.

The scroll read as follows: "The faculty, students, alumni and Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia join in a joyful salutation to His Eminence, Archbishop Iakovos, on the historic occasion of his visit to Virginia's Peninsula, to consecrate and dedicate the Church of the Saints Constantine and Helen.

"We acknowledge the presence of this venerable churchman, who for a quarter of a century has served as Shepherd of the Greek Orthodox Church in our hemisphere, and note his coming among us as an event of spiritual significance in the life of our Commonwealth, our community, and our College. This man of God inspires us all, with his beliefs in the sanctity of human life and his efforts in behalf of the brotherhood of all mankind. His example of love and forgiveness heals us; and his faith sustains us, in a world of turmoil. His message of Peace inspires good works in men of all faiths."

United Way drive begins

The 1984 Greater Williamsburg United Way campaign is starting at the College this week with a goal of $16,400 in contributions. This is a four percent increase over last year.

John R. Thelin, associate professor of the school of education, has been named chairman.

The slogan for the drive is "Town and Gown Together Meeting the Challenge for United Way." Funds raised during the campaign go to support 22 member agencies, which include Boy and Girl Scouts, the American Red Cross, S.P.C.A., Association for Retarded Citizens, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Children's Home Society, Catholic Family and Children's Service, Rita Welsh Adult Skills Program, Sexual Assault Victim Assistance, Williamsburg Task Force on Battered Women, and the James City Volunteer Rescue Squad, among others.

Thelin expressed the hope that the College would show a 100% participation from all its employees.

There are three options for donations: cash, direct billing by United Way or payroll deduction.

The new church in Newport News was begun in 1981, and was completed this year and consecrated by the Archbishop Sept. 30. A banquet followed in the Williamsburg Lodge, with Dr. Graves, Senator John W. Warner, and Rev. Peter Makris, pastor of the church, as speakers.

Miss Peebles is '84 newsmaker

Anne Dobie Peebles, the College's first female rector, has been honored by the Virginia Press Women as the 1984 Newsmaker of the Year. She was presented an award and spoke at the recognition luncheon last Saturday at the group's annual convention in Norfolk.

The 260-member organization selected Miss Peebles from several nominees because of her extensive civic and public service work blended with an active interest in Virginia politics, according to LeeNora Everett, Virginia Press Women president.

Currently serving her tenth year as senior member of the Board of Visitors at William and Mary, she heads the committee conducting the search for a new president of the College.

Being first is a definite part of her long career, beginning with her being the first female president of the State Board of Education in 1968-70, succeeding Lewis F. Powell, Jr. when he was named to the U.S. Supreme Court.

She was the first female chairman of the John Tyler Community College board and the first of the Richard Bland College Foundation. She was the first woman to receive the Thomas Jefferson Award for Public Service by the Old Dominion chapter, Public Relations Society of America.

She is a 1944 graduate of William and Mary, and taught high school history for two years before becoming assistant to her father in managing Dunnlora Farm.

Gov. Charles S. Robb will head a group of state legislators and other government officials who will participate in the College's 1984 Burgesses Day Saturday, Oct. 13. The ceremonies in the College's Sunken Garden this year will honor five living former governors of the Commonwealth for their public service. Four will attend: Albert S. Harrison, Mills E. Godwin, Jr., A. Linwood Holton, Jr., and John W. Dalton. A fifth, J. Lindsay Almond, who is ill, will be represented by his wife.

An estimated 400 state officials will be greeted at 10 a.m. at a reception in the courtyard of the Sir Christopher Wren Building, by President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., and Austin L. Roberts, III, president of the Society of the Alumni. At 11 a.m., guests will proceed into the Sunken Garden for brunch and a short program, followed by the William and Mary football game at Cary Field between the Tribe and Boston University at 1:30 p.m.

Burgesses Day is a family occasion sponsored by William and Mary's Society of the Alumni in association with the College's Board of Visitors and the administration. The event commemorates the historic bonds between the state's lawmakers and the college, recalling the periods from 1700-1704 and 1747-1754 when the Virginia legislature, then the House of Burgesses, made the College's Wren Building its temporary headquarters.

At the game, there will be music by the

William and Mary Choir and a special halftime program dedicated to the former governors.

Homecoming has its deadlines

Homecoming '84 is still more than a month away, but extensive plans are moving forward with deadlines to be met.

All organizations wishing to enter units in the Homecoming parade on Saturday, Nov. 3, should contact the alumni office at 229-1693 or 253-4302 to obtain parade rules and an entry form. All entries must be approved in advance by the Society of the Alumni and must be submitted by Oct. 30. The finished unit must match the idea submitted on the entry form, according to John W. Phillips, director of alumni affairs.

Starting time of the parade is 9:30 a.m. The parade will begin on Duke of Gloucester Street by the Capitol and will end at Cary Stadium.

Campus organizations desiring to have events listed on the master Homecoming schedule should send — no later than Oct. 5 — a listing of their name, place and time of event. Also, Phillips says, announcements of events may be posted in the registration tent during Homecoming weekend. These notices should be no larger than 8½ by 11 inches and should be turned in at the Alumni House by Oct. 26.

Further information is available at the Alumni House.

Scott Donaldson is honored here

Scott Donaldson, who has taught at the College of William and Mary since 1966, has been named the first Louise G.T. Cooley Professor of English, an endowed professorship established by Dr. Denton A. Cooley; of heart transplant fame in Houston.

The endowment was created by Dr. Cooley to honor his wife, the former Louise Goldsborough Thomas, and her achievements in the liberal arts while studying at the College. Mrs. Cooley received her B.S. degree in psychology in 1945, and during her undergraduate years was active in Pi Beta Phi, the German and French clubs, the Backdrop Club, and YWCA work.

Following graduation from William and Mary, she attended the John Hopkins School of Nursing and received her R.N. degree in 1948. In recent years, she has served as an officer of the Houston alumni chapter of the College. The Cooleys are the parents of five children.

A former newspaperman, Donaldson has established a national reputation as scholar and author. He came to William and Mary with his A.B. degree from Yale and master's and doctorate from Minnesota. His decade as a reporter, editor and publisher on newspapers in and around his native Minneapolis served him well when he turned to a career in literary scholarship and, particularly, in biography.

He has written three widely-acclaimed biographies, "Poet in America: Winfield Townley Scott," 1972; "By Force of Will: The Life and Art of Ernest Hemingway," 1977; and "Fool For Love: F. Scott Fitzgerald," 1983; and is now at work on Cheever's biography, which will probably be published in 1987. Donaldson has also written "The Suburban Myth," 1969; co-authored "American Literature: 19th and Early 20th Centuries," 1978; edited a critical edition of Jack Kerouac's "On The Road," 1979; and "Critical Essays on F. Scott Fitzgerald's 'The Great Gatsby,'" 1984; contributed to several other books; and published dozens of articles, notes and reviews in leading journals, including American Literature and the Sewanee Review.

PEEBLES TO SPEAK

Anne Dobie Peebles, rector of the Board of Visitors of the College, will be the speaker Oct. 11 for the Town and Gown luncheon in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Her subject is "The Role of the Board of Visitors."

Reservations for the luncheon can be made with the Office of University Communications at 253-4600, or 253-4226.

Barksdale Fund gets big boost

Anna H. Sollenberger of Waynesboro, Pa., a 1932 graduate of the College of William and Mary who died in January of this year, has bequeathed $250,000 to the College to honor the lifelong influence of her William and Mary mentor and coach, Martha Barksdale.

Miss Sollenberger's bequest will go to the Martha Elizabeth Barksdale Fund, which was established by the College's Board of Visitors in 1976 and founded through the generosity of alumni and friends of Miss Barksdale during her 45 years of service to William and Mary. Income from the Barksdale Fund provides scholarships for women athletes attending the College.

Currently, the Barksdale fund consists of approximately $25,000, and produces income of about $1,500 for women athletes at the college. That income is used for the Barksdale Scholar-Athlete Award, given annually to a rising senior who demonstrates leadership, high scholastic achievement and outstanding athletic ability.

Miss Sollenberger's bequest will make possible the establishment of two or three more partial grants-in-aid to women scholar-athletes at the College, according to Mildred B. West, director of women's athletics.

"Anna Sollenberger's generous gift to the Martha Barksdale fund is yet another indication of Miss Barksdale's strong and lasting influence on her students," says Mrs. West. Miss Barksdale, associate professor of physical education for women and a member of the first class of women to graduate from William and Mary in 1921, was a prime motivator in the establishment of the College's intercollegiate sports program for women.

In 1920, Miss Barksdale was one of the first women to play basketball as a student. After her graduation she immediately joined the coaching staff and by 1925 had helped start women's intercollegiate competition in basketball, hockey and tennis.

A natural athlete, Miss Barksdale played as many sports as she taught at William and Mary. She served as acting chairman of the Women's Physical Education Department in 1944 and again in 1965. A physical educator who was well ahead of her time in ideas and methods, she devoted her entire professional career to William and Mary and established herself beyond the borders of Virginia as a leader in her profession.

In 1929, Anna Sollenberger enrolled at William and Mary, where her interest turned to athletics. Under Miss Barksdale's able guidance, Anna lettered in three sports: field hockey; tennis and basketball. She was a member of the varsity basketball and field hockey teams all four years at William and Mary, graduating with a bachelor's degree in physical education.

Although Miss Sollenberger trained as a laboratory technician and worked for a short time at Waynesboro Hospital and for her physician brother, she found her life's career in 1943 when she joined the Red Cross. She first worked in the organization's hospital recreation program, then became executive secretary for the Waynesboro chapter and organized the area's blood donor program. Prior to her retirement in 1969, Miss Sollenberger was a case worker in the disaster relief program of the national organization.

"Throughout her lifetime of service to others, Anna Sollenberger never forgot the woman who helped her at William and Mary," says Mrs. West. "The spirit and love for sport and this College that these women shared — their tremendous generosity — make it possible for William and Mary to continue to offer the outstanding women's athletic program for which it is known."

Sheila Cunneen

Award goes to Sheila Cunneen

Since 1977-78, the Women's Athletic Association has recognized the legacy of William and Mary's premiere female athlete, Martha Elizabeth Barksdale, by awarding a scholarship in her honor. The Martha Barksdale Scholarship is presented to the rising senior considered the most outstanding senior scholar-athlete.

Sheila Cunneen, the 1984-85 recipient of the Barksdale Scholarship, is a student who has put equal effort and enthusiasm into each of her endeavors. She is a four-year starter and current co-captain of the field hockey team. The five-foot-two-inch midfielder from Cinnaminson, N.J., holds a 3.8 grade point average. She is a member of both freshman honor societies, Omicron Delta Kappa and Mortar Board, and has participated in the Honors Program as a sophomore and in the English Honors Program for the past two years.

In addition to her athletic and academic accomplishment, Sheila has been consistently involved in the community. For two years, she coached youth soccer teams in the area. Since her sophomore year, she has been a student director of the NCAA's Volunteers for Youth program, as well as a member of the Catholic Student Association and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

For the last two years, she has also worked as an assistant to Frances Bobbe, women's sports information director.

Exhibit opens

Early modern artists will be spotlighted when the Muscarelle Museum of Art opens its next exhibition, "Into the Melting Pot: The Immigration of American Modernism," on Monday, Oct. 8, in the Sheridan Gallery.

The exhibition is comprised of 55 oil paintings, drawings and watercolors by 12 artists who came to this country before 1920. Included are works by such notables as Joseph Stella, Max Weber and even a painting by renowned photographer Edward Steichen.

Percy North, assistant professor of fine arts at George Mason University, selected the objects in the exhibition and wrote the catalog. She will give a gallery talk next Monday at 4:30 p.m. in the Sheridan Gallery. A reception at 5:30 p.m. will follow, and the public is invited.

FORUM SETS SPEAKER

Mary Sue Terry, a Democratic member of the General Assembly, will be the speaker Oct. 9 at the Forum of Williamsburg. Her subject will be the "Status of the Political Woman in Virginia, 1984."

Mrs. Terry is a member of the General Assembly.

The meeting will begin at noon, in the Sit 'n Bull Room at the Campus Center. Advance registration and payment for the luncheon are necessary. Call Julie Leverenz or Margaret Ward at 253-4286.

The menu is fried chicken and buttermilk pie, and the cost is $7.

Plan taxes better

If you make $20,000 or more a year, you're probably working for Uncle Sam all day Monday and Tuesday. Only by Wednesday do you start working for yourself and your family.

Learning how to legally defer taxes and deduct expenses on personal income tax forms is the subject of a continuing education class offered by William and Mary's Office of Special Programs. The class, "Personal Tax Planning," begins Tuesday, Oct. 16, at William and Mary, with another section scheduled to start on Thursday, Oct. 18, in Newport News. The fee is $65, or $90 for couples.

The instructor, Delmar Gillette, conducts tax planning seminars and is a principal in a local consulting firm. He has also served as a tax consultant for H&R Block.

To register, call the Office of Special Programs at 253-4084 or 253-4047.

WHAT IS IT?

What it is is a 12-foot sculpture called "Lawn Peacock" in brilliant hues. It will be erected in front of the Muscarelle Museum of Art Thursday, so if you're in the neighborhood, drop by to see it set into place. It's on loan for a year from the artist, Phyllis Mark.

Colorful peacock settles on lawn

A spectacular 12-foot painted aluminum sculpture will be erected Thursday, Oct. 4, in front of the Muscarelle Museum of Art. Named the "Lawn Peacock," the colorful piece is on loan for a year from the artist, Phyllis Mark, of New York City. She will be here to supervise the positioning of the sculpture.

Miss Mark's works have been exhibited in major museums and galleries throughout the country, and they are included in museum and corporate collections. She says she likes to do "outdoor sculpture to interact with the environment, to create a running dialogue with nature. When the wind shifts, it moves; on a calm day it rests; sleet or rain reflect in its surface. The dialogue is continuous, sometimes dramatic, sometimes minuscule — but always a change with time."

The artist was born in New York City and still lives there. She has studied at Ohio State University and the New School. Her pieces have been exhibited at such diverse sites as Lincoln Center and Roosevelt Island in New York; the Desert Botanical Garden in Phoenix; Nabisco headquarters and the garden of the Morris Museum in New Jersey; and a federal building in Washington, D.C.

An Arts Magazine critic described her work as "undulating, organic forms within circles and ovals," sculpture that allows "for the exploration of the physical properties of matter, space, voids, light, shadow, and transparencies."

"Lawn Peacock" has a price tag of $28,000.

"It's an incredible piece," says Glenn Lowry, director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art. "It rotates in the wind and it's just a lot of fun."

BULK MAIL DISCUSSED

On Thursday, at 10:30 a.m. in the Campus Center, rooms A&B, Harry Loutsenslagen of the Regional Post Office in Richmond will discuss the latest changes and requirements in preparing and processing bulk mail. If new changes such as labeling and sorting requirements are not adhered to, bulk mailings will be returned for correction.

Those departments that utilize bulk mailings are encouraged to have a representative attend, says Hal Holcomb, acting director of university services and auxiliary enterprises.

OPEN HOUSE HOURS

President Thomas A. Graves Jr. will hold an open house for students Tuesday, Oct. 9, in his office from 4-5 p.m.

Official Memorandum

TREASURER'S OFFICE TO CLOSE

The Treasurer's Office will be closed on Friday, Oct. 12 and Monday, Oct. 15. The closing is a result of a necessary renovation to the office. Due to the nature of the renovation, public access to the office will be prohibited.

We are sorry for any inconvenience this may cause, but the changes will certainly be beneficial to all.

Normal office hours will be resumed on Tuesday, Oct. 16.

E. Kenneth Greene
Treasurer

Public Advices

The frequent activation of smoke alarms in dorms has been a source of concern by College officials, who are continuing their efforts to diminish the number of times the Fire Department has to respond. David H. Charlton, assistant vice president for business affairs, points out that smoke detectors operate on the principle of diffused light to register diffusion, whether caused by steam from showers, dust, insects or smoke. "We are encouraged that the number of alarms in recent weeks has been steadily reduced," he says. "Student services, student residence hall staff, maintenance personnel, planning and construction personnel, faculty and students are working jointly to achieve improvements in technology, environmental improvements, and to heighten student awareness of the need for behavioral and life-style adjustments to reduce alarms."

In past weeks, there have been an average of 10-12 responses per week by the Williamsburg Fire Department, when dorm smoke detectors sounded due to shower steam, popcorn poppers, hair dryers, hotplates, etc. in student rooms. The detectors are doing what they are supposed to do when they react to heat sources, Charlton pointed out, but additional efforts are being made to avoid unnecessary response from the fire trucks.

One of the fall's finest entertainments is scheduled for Sunday, when the annual Occasion For The Arts takes place. There will be bands, individual musicians, dancers, barbershop singing groups, a huge, arts and crafts show, a beer tent, and all kinds of fun, beginning at 10 a.m. and running till the evening. Site of most of the activity is Merchants Square, with individual events in the Campus Center, Wren Building and Wren Yard. Everything is free, and food and beverages will be available. Y'all come.

The William and Mary Review is now accepting submissions of poetry, short fiction and visual art. Deadline for submission is Nov. 10. Submissions should be made to the Campus Center desk or to the Review office in Trinkle Hall. Persons submitting visual art should contact the Review office. Messages should be left at Trinkle Hall information desk.

Hunger is curable. The Ecumenical Youth Organization is doing something about it Oct. 26-27 with a World Hunger Lock-In. The public can help by sponsoring a youth for $5 (matching what the youth has already donated) or whatever can be given. Every bit helps the starving. Contact Kim Kalman for more information at 229-9855.

The Office of University Communications is assembling an updated Speaker's Bureau brochure, and many faculty members have already responded to the request form that was sent out to determine who would like to be listed. The cut-off date for returning the form is Monday, Oct. 8. Those who haven't returned their form, didn't get one, lost it or just plain forgot about it and would like to be included, please either call Rebecca Clark on ext. 4331 or return the form by the deadline.

A program on the water birds of Virginia will be presented on Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the Watermen's Hall auditorium on the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, Gloucester Point, campus.

The program is one in the "Oceanography for Landlubbers" series, presented free the first Wednesday in each month. For further information, contact Mary Sparrow, 642-7172.

A physics colloquium, jointly sponsored with Hampton University, will be held Friday, Oct. 5, at 4 p.m. in Small 109. Speaker is Ernest Coleman, senior scientist and head of central laboratory research, Office of High Energy and Nuclear Physics, U.S. Department of Energy, Washington, D.C. His subject is "Recent Progress in High Energy Physics."

A representative of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company of North Carolina will present information on careers in their organization on Nov. 8. MBAs and interested undergrads should sign up at the Placement Office or third floor Chancellors Hall.

The American Red Cross, in conjunction with SAE, will be sponsoring a Bloodmobile on Oct. 8. All members of the College and the Williamsburg community are invited to stop by Trinkle Hall between 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. to give blood.

Dr. Vinson Sutlive of the department of anthropology will discuss his recent travels to Borneo on Thursday, Oct. 4, at 7:30 p.m. His lecture, "Money, Mercedes and Megawatts," will be held in the Africa Room, room 112, Washington Hall. The public is invited. Refreshments will be served.

Shaun McLane, third-year diver for William and Mary, placed fifth on the one-meter board at the U.S. Diving Championships at Santa Clara, Calif., in late August. He also placed 13th on the three-meter. His performance qualified him for both the Indoor Championships next spring on three-meter and for the next three Nationals on one-meter.

Newsmakers

Funds for the third year of the continuing NSF grant "Transition Metal Peroxo Complexes" under the direction of Cirila Djordjevic have this year been awarded with amendment and total $86,628, expiring Nov. 30, 1985. This grant has so far partially supported five students. Two undergraduate honors theses and two master's theses describing research related to this project have been completed last year. Six undergraduate students are working on related research this year.

In August, Cirila Djordjevic attended the XXIIIrd International Conference on Coordination Chemistry, held in Boulder, Colo., where she presented two papers (one with her students at William and Mary, and one with Professor E. Sinn from University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.)

C. Djordjevic, M. Lee, N. Vuletic, and S. A. Craig, "New Vanadium and Molybdenum Peroxo Complexes with Polycarboxylic and Amino Acids," Abstract XXIII ICC (1984) 31.

C. Djordjevic and E. Sinn, "Monomeric, dimeric and polymeric peroxo vanadates," Abstract XXIII ICC (1984) 249.

Chonghan Kim, professor of government, is one of the three editors of a volume, Korean Reunification: New Perspectives and Approaches, published by Kyungnam University Press in Seoul, Korea. This book grew out of the symposium on the problems of Korean reunification held in Washington, D.C., in January 1982 under the auspices of the College of William and Mary. Kim contributed the introductory chapter and a chapter on "Korean Reunification: UN Perspectives." He was invited last June to participate in a conference on the problems of Korean reunification held in Kyungjoo, Korea, sponsored by the Advisory Council for Peaceful Unification Policy of the Korean Government. For his service to the Korean community in the Virginia Peninsula area, as well as for his contributions toward the promotion of better understanding between Korea and the United States, Kim received a Korean Presidential award in a recent ceremony held at the Korean Embassy in Washington, D.C.

The composition, "Summer Ayre," by Steven Mackey, assistant professor of music, was performed Sept. 21 at a faculty recital at Boston University. A performance of his composition, "Quintet in Two Parts," took place Sept. 22 at the First Congregational Church in Cambridge, Mass., by the Brookline Woodwind Quintet.

Joel Suben, assistant professor of music, was resident composer in August at the Charles Ives Center for American Music at New Milford, Conn., where his composition, "The Birth of Euphrosyne," was performed by the Pittsburgh New Music Ensemble Aug. 16. An article about his composition appeared in the April 1984 issue of Chamber Music magazine. On Aug. 17 his composition, "Sonatina," was performed by Robert Pollock at Christopher Newport College, and on Sept. 5, "Sonatina" was performed by Pollock at the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts in Sweet Briar, where Suben was invited to give a talk about his music.

Associate Professor Bruce McConachie, department of theatre and speech, was invited to present two papers at a recent American Theatre Association convention. He spoke on "Legitimizing an American Middle-Class Social Order: The 1850s Melodramas of Dion Boucicault" and "The Politics of 'Paddy' on the Midcentury American Stage."

Victoria A. Woodbury, lecturer in the Department of Modern Languages, has written two reviews, "Russian 19th-Century Verse: Selected Poems by Pushkin, Baratynsky, Tiutchev, Koltsov, Lermontov, Tolstoy, Fet, Nekrasov," appearing in Modern Language Journal, and Mussa Jalil's "Selected Poems," appearing in World Literature Today.

Joseph G. Loesch, professor of marine science, has received a grant of $11,900 from the National Marine Fisheries Service for assessing the possible existence of racial stocks of anadromous Alosa species in major Virginia tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay. Joseph Desfrosse, a VIMS graduate student, will make the assessment from a multivariate analysis of meristic characters under the supervision of Dr. Loesch.

Associate Professor Randolph A. Coleman, department of chemistry, will travel to Florida to participate in an experiment associated with the NASA Space Shuttle mission scheduled for Oct. 5.

He will be a member of the analytical team responsible for ground-based verification of instrument measurements made by the shuttle crew as the shuttle passes over the southeastern U.S. As such, he will have the opportunity to determine vertical profiles of selected hydrocarbons in the troposphere by measuring their concentrations from 40,000 feet to 1,000 feet at 1,000-foot intervals.

This work is an outgrowth of work Coleman carried out for the last two summers as a NASA/ASEE Faculty Fellow at Langley Research Center in Hampton. During that time, he developed an analytical procedure that allows very general but precise hydrocarbon measurements to be made at parts-per-billion concentrations.

Herbert M. Austin, associate professor of marine science, testified before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries HR 6065 - Coastal States Fisheries Bill - in Washington, D.C., on Sept. 5, at the request of Rep. Herbert Bateman who is sponsor of the bill.

TIME MANAGEMENT

On October 22-23, a workshop entitled "Time Management" will be conducted for employees of the College and Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Felicia Monk from Personnel Development Services will conduct the workshop.

This workshop is designed to give individuals an understanding of time management that will enable them to exert better control over their time and improve their productivity. Goal setting, differentiating between activities and results, delegation, identifying time patterns, and developing individual time management plans highlight this session.

Class will run from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. each day in the Sit 'n Bull Room of the Campus Center. There is no charge for this workshop. To register, contact Charla Cordle or Renee Berry at X4214. Early registration is encouraged as space is limited.

INTRAMURAL ENTRIES DUE

Entries close Thursday for the intramural indoor soccer tournament. Football entries are due by Oct. 18. For further information call ext. 4498.

Bet on Bettie for best tickets

She was the first female to receive certification in the International Association of Auditorium Managers, an organization of 1200 persons around the world. Bettie Adams, assistant director of William and Mary Hall, and box-office manager there, is also a member of the National Association of Female Executives. She handles finances for the Hall and settles all shows there with promoters and road managers. In other words, she waits up til 2 a.m. to get the hall's share of entertainment profits.

She's been in the ticket business for 31 years now and has moved enough tickets to build a mountain. She began in 1953 as secretary to the athletic coaches at the University of Richmond. One of her duties was to manage ticket sales at sports events. When her husband was transferred to Williamsburg, she became ticket manager and secretary to the W&M athletic director, then H. Lester Hooker, Jr. After William and Mary Hall was built and put into service, Hooker and Adams moved there to run the huge facility and sell tickets. He is director and she is assistant director.

Campus Spotlight

The first event in the new building, she recalls, was the 1970 basketball game between W&M and U.N.C. The big doors of the building had not been put on, there was no heat, it was December and it was 20 degrees outdoors. The temperature on the court was only in the high 30s, and at half time the Tarheel players climbed in the team bus to get warm. Everybody survived, however, and the completed structure has been used ever since for sporting events, conventions, shows, circuses, concerts, films, dances, tennis matches, commencements, registration, lectures and dining functions. It has been a valuable addition to campus life and a boon to groups hunting for an efficient meeting place. In 1983 the entire building was taken over for the Summit of Industrialized Nations.

Bettie Adams is still selling tickets in a corner of the big arena. She and her staff dispense great quantities of season tickets for basketball and football, as well as individual tickets for other events. The Hall can hold up to 10,718 seated spectators, or 12,500 at concerts — which means a lot of tickets to keep track of.

One of the lucrative aspects of the Hall is the fact that promoters regularly book rock stars into the arena. These concerts mean a $1770 minimum rental fee, or 10 percent of the gross, whichever is greater. The College itself does not promote rock concerts. Promoters contact the artists, then rent the Hall on available dates. College events are charged lower fees, according to Mrs. Adams.

The Latter-day Saint Student Association (LDSSA) will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Morton 144. All are invited.

All the athletic tickets are printed in Arkansas (low bidder on the job) and are then sorted here. People often want the same seats year after year for football and basketball, so Mrs. Adams keeps charts on each season ticket-holder. Tickets are audited and stored in racks in a vault. Tickets mean money, so they are carefully guarded.

Rock concerts, with hordes of youngsters in and around W&M Hall, aren't the hassle now that they used to be when the staff and building were new, says Bettie, although parking can still pose problems. The first entertainment booked was Sly and the Family Stone in 1971, and she learned "everything I needed to know about concerts" that evening. She hires additional help in the box office and on the parking lots the days of concerts, and extra security forces are brought in to help crowd control. Cleanup after a concert is "monumental," she says, but if the Hall is needed next day for another event, night crews do the job.

She's a positive person, quick to laugh, looks on the bright side, adores her two daughters, 22 and 28, likes dancing and antiques, and is a mother hen about W&M Hall. She's been a College employee since 1968 and thoroughly enjoys what she does. She figures to still be selling tickets when she's old and grey, a long time off!

The News

The William and Mary News is published weekly by the Office of University Communications during the academic year, except when the College is in recess, and twice each month in June, July and August.
