

Modern dance company performs here this week

The Paul Taylor Dance Company will bring modern dance to the stage of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall to open the 1984-85 Concert Series at the College of William and Mary, Thursday and Friday, Oct. 25 and 26.

Admission to each of the 8:15 p.m. performances is $5. Season tickets to the series are still available at $13 for College employees for all five of the season's offerings. Call 253-4557 for ticket information.

Called "one of the most exciting, innovative and delightful dance companies in the entire world" by the New York Times, the Paul Taylor Dance Company has been hailed by critics all over the world as being the best thing to happen to modern dance in a quarter century. The 1984-85 season marks the 30th anniversary of the company, which has performed in over 300 cities in this country and has made 29 overseas tours to 53 nations.

Paul Taylor, called by Time magazine "the J.R.R. Tolkien" of dance choreography, has created 80 dances for his company. Two works that premiered last season, "Equinox," and "... Byzantium," were designed by William and Mary alumnus William Ivey Long, '69, who won the 1982 Tony Award for the popular Broadway musical, "Nine."

The company's Thursday night performance will include the Virginia premiere of two dances "Equinox," performed to Brahms's Quintet in F major, Op. 88; and "Airs," a 1978 work with music from Handel's Concerti Grossi, Op. 3. Also on the program is "Runes," a 1975 work with music by Gerald Busby.

Friday's performance will also feature two works never performed in the state, "Diggity," a 1975 work with music by Donald York, and 1981's "Arden Court," danced to William Boyce's Symphonies No. 1, 3, 5, 7 and 8, as arranged by Constant Lambert. The Company will also present "Dust," a 1980 work.

The Paul Taylor Dance Company will be performing at William and Mary Thursday and Friday evenings as part of the 1984-85 Concert Series. The company is judged to be one of the best modern dance groups in the world.

Judaic studies fund gets boost

With the help of two prominent Tidewater families, the College has moved even closer to making its Judaic Studies program a reality.

David Furman, chairman of the board of Farm Fresh Supermarkets, Inc., has made a major commitment toward the program, half of which will be used to establish and permanently endow a lecture series in Judaica in memory of his late wife, Rosalie R. Furman, and half of which will help endow the Judaic Studies professorship itself.

Franklin O. Blechman, a Newport News attorney and senior partner in the law firm of Jones, Blechman, Woltz and Kelly, P.C., and his wife have made a recent gift for library acquisitions in Judaica for the College's Earl Gregg Swem Library. A portion of the gift will be used to purchase initial materials, and the remainder will be used to establish the Marie and Franklin O. Blechman Endowment Fund, with income to provide for annual acquisitions in the field of Judaica.

Both the lecture series and the library endowment are vital components of the new Judaic Studies program, according to Melvyn D. Schiavelli, dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

United Way totals are climbing

Close to 70 per cent of the 1984 United Way goal for the College has been achieved, according to John R. Thelin, campaign chairman. Up until Tuesday noon, around $11,200 had been donated or pledged by faculty, staff and employees of the College toward a $16,400 goal. Students have collected another $580.

"The response to date has been nothing short of tremendous," said Schiavelli. "As we begin to near our goal of $600,000, which is the minimum required to establish a professorship in Judaic Studies, we have looked to other areas of support so necessary for the development of a first-rate program in Judaica. We recognize that the enhancement of our library holdings and the establishment of endowed lectures and symposia will attract scholars of national and international reputation and will complement our program offerings."

The effort to establish a Judaic Studies program at William and Mary began in 1981 with the drive to permanently endow a professorship in Judaic Studies through private gifts and grants. A major commitment in the fall of 1983 from Sophia and Nathan S. Gumenick of Richmond, whose names the professorship will bear, along with substantial gifts by more than 200 individuals, foundations and corporations from throughout the country as well as the world, have brought the total for the professorship to nearly $450,000 of its $600,000 goal.

The endowment will qualify for matching funds under the Commonwealth of Virginia's Eminent Scholars program.

The campaign will end Oct. 31, and Thelin urges all those who have not yet made a commitment to United Way to get those pledge cards back before the end of the month.

University Advancement was the first College division to complete 100 per cent participation in United Way giving.

HOMECOMING's COMING

Muscarelle Museum's Phase II to be launched at Nov. 2 event

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the expansion of the Muscarelle Museum of Art will take place outside the museum Friday, Nov. 2, at 3:30 p.m., as part of Homecoming weekend.

The Rector of the College, Miss Anne Dobie Peebles, and President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., will head a brief program that will pay tribute to the donors whose contributions are making possible the construction of Phase II of the museum, greatly enhancing the exhibition, teaching and storage space. Funding of the entire museum has been carried out with private funds.

Also participating in the short program will be Lee Ann Bush, president of the student body; Carlton S. Abbott, the architect; and Miles L. Chappell, professor of fine arts.

There will be a reception in the museum at 4 p.m., following the ceremonies.

The Muscarelle Museum of Art opened in October, 1983, and by March of this year had accumulated enough money to begin planning construction of a $1.3 million addition. The two-storied, 11,000-square-foot area will include five new galleries and will triple the exhibiton space of the existing structure.

Among generous donors for Phase II are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Muscarelle; Mrs. Jeanne S. Kinnamon and her late husband, Gilbert; Lucille and Alexander Quattlebaum; Linda and D. Kent Watkins; Sheila and James S. Ellis; Fred and Lucy Spigel Herman; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Hennage; the Kresge Foundation; Philip Morris, Inc., and other friends of the College.

Actual construction is scheduled to begin early in 1985.

von Baeyer is scheduled speaker at Order of White Jacket dinner

Dr. Hans von Baeyer, a specialist in theoretical nuclear and particle physics, will be the featured speaker Thursday, Nov. 1, for the annual meeting of the William and Mary's Order of the White Jacket (OWJ). The dinner meeting will take place in Trinkle Hall at the College at 7:30 p.m.

The OWJ is a loosely-knit, fun-loving organization of alumni of the College who helped pay for their education by waiting on tables. The group always convenes in Williamsburg during Homecoming Weekend. This year, it plans to induct as a new member the television star of "Alice," Linda Lavin. Miss Lavin, a graduate of the class of 1959, is having her 25th class reunion that weekend, and will be parade marshal on Nov. 3 for the Homecoming Parade.

Halloween party

The Campus Police and the James City County Police departments are co-hosting the first annual McGruff crime dog's Halloween party on Oct. 31, from 5-8 p.m. in Trinkle Hall. There will be traditional party games, treats and refreshments.

Attendance is free, but is limited to children 12 and under. A parent or guardian must accompany children attending the party.

Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. Judging is at 7 p.m.

Von Baeyer, professor of physics at the College, will talk about the CEBAF, the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility, which is starting at Newport News, to be utilized by a consortium of colleges.

He is the author of many published articles on physics, and recently wrote a book entitled "Rainbows, Snowflakes and Quarks," published by McGraw-Hill.

An accomplished speaker, he has appeared often before professional groups and at colloquia

Publick Advices

Dr. Jan de Weydenthal will speak on "The Polish Dilemma: Between East and West," at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 1, in Morton 220.

Dr. de Weydenthal was formerly a faculty member in government at the College of William and Mary and also taught at the University of South Carolina. He was a research fellow at the Hoover Institute in California and has published several books on the Polish Communist Party and other topics in Eastern European affairs. He is currently a senior policy analyst for Radio Free Europe in Munich, Germany.

There will be a reception following the talk hosted by Pi Sigma Alpha, the Government Honors Society.

A biology department seminar has been scheduled for Friday, Oct. 26, at 4 p.m. in Millington 117. The subject is "Centipetal Hemocyanin: An Exciting New Molecule with Important Implications for Animal Phylogeny," given by Dr. Charlotte P. Magnus in collaboration with J.L. Scott and R.E. Van Holde, department of biochemistry and biophysics at Oregon State University. Those interested are invited to attend.

The mathematics department colloquium on Friday, Oct. 26, will feature a presentation by Carl M. Harris, department of systems engineering at the University of Virginia. His topic is "The Mathematics, Statistics and Application of Mixtures of Exponential Distributions." Coffee is at 2:30 p.m., and the talk starts at 3 p.m. in Jones 301.

The classic film, "Dr. Strangelove: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb," starring Peter Sellers and George C. Scott, will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. on Nov. 1 in Millington Auditorium. It is sponsored by the Nuclear Disarmament Study Group, and admission is $1.

VIMS to host big conference

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science will be host to the National Marine Education Association Conference in 1985 on the campus of William and Mary.

The conference will bring together members from all 50 states, Canada, New Zealand, Great Britain and Egypt. Its membership is composed of teachers, aquarium, museum and zoo educators; college and university personnel; representatives from marine research facilities; and private industry and government agencies; as well as all other persons interested in the world of water.

The goals of the association are to make educators more aware of the marine environment and their involvement in it. It provides a forum for the exchange of educational materials, ideas and resources; effective representation of marine education interests throughout the nation; and an opportunity for educators to take an active role in communication with their colleagues.

GREEN AND GOLD CHRISTMAS

The third annual Green and Gold Christmas will be held Saturday, Dec. 1, from noon until 4 p.m. at William and Mary Hall. This program allows student volunteers to provide Christmas for an underprivileged child from the community. As a student sponsor investing four hours of your time and a few dollars, you will join your child for an afternoon of games, crafts and a visit with Santa Claus. Sign up at the Campus Center Information Desk before October 31. Make Christmas special — share it with a child.

Sorority shenanigans are part of Derby Day

Fun and games to raise money for the Williamsburg-James City County Red Cross chapter are coming up Saturday, Oct. 27, when Sigma Chi fraternity and ten campus sororities observe Derby Day from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. on the large intramural field.

The project is an effort to show appreciation for the outstanding job by the Red Cross in responding to student needs following the Jefferson Hall fire on Jan. 20, 1983. The local chapter pitched in with clothing and funds for the burned-out students at that time. Before the fire, money raised at Derby Day went to national philanthropy.

This year the goal of Derby Day participants is $2,500.

The public is invited to attend the Derby Day festivities.

Chinese scholars visit

Three representatives from Nanjing University in the People's Republic of China will arrive at the College Thursday, Nov. 1, for a three-day visit.

The group will be on a 25-day tour of 11 American colleges and universities at the invitation of the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE) and a consortium of 30 universities which sponsor a Chinese language and area studies program through a special joint agreement with Nanjing University.

The first Nanjing University-CIEE Cooperative Program was offered during the fall semester of 1982. This year, 22 participants from 17 American universities and Canada are studying the language, history and culture of China at Nanjing University.

Visiting William and Mary will be the University's vice president, Yan Xiangwan; and Mrs. Shang Zhen and Mrs. Huang Chenfeng, both members of the Office of Foreign Affairs. Mrs. Zhen has worked with the international students section of the office, and was from 1981-84 the director of short-term language and area studies programs at the university. Now she makes arrangements for the growing number of foreign dignitaries who visit Nanjing University each year. Mrs. Chenfeng, a 1977 graduate of Nanjing in English, works in the international exchange section of the foreign affairs office. She will serve as interpreter.

Edward P. Crapol, professor of history at William and Mary, will coordinate the group's visit here.

AN INVITATION

You are cordially invited to attend the ceremony commemorating the official opening of the renovated Campus Center and Trinkle Hall on Friday, the twenty-sixth of October, nineteen hundred and eighty-four at four-thirty in the backyard of the Campus Center

Reception following in the Atrium Lounge

Faculty music recital set for November 4

A faculty music recital will be given by Christine Anderson Williams, pianist, on Sunday, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m. in the Williamsburg Regional Library's arts center theater. The public is invited.

The program will consist of "Partita no. 4 in D major" by J.S. Bach; "Three Piano Pieces, Op. 11," Arnold Schoenberg; "Six Studies," Edgar Warren Williams; and "Sonata no. 2 in B-flat minor," Op. 35, Frederic Chopin.

Ms. Williams holds a B.A. degree with distinction in music from Duke University, and a master's degree in music from the Manhattan School of Music. Her teachers were Loren Withers, Artur Balsam and William Masselos.

A frequent performer in Williamsburg, she has also played solo recitals in New York, Atlanta, and Princeton, as well as performing with orchestras in Florida and California. She has accompanied numerous vocal and instrumental recitals. She is piano instructor at the College.

Writer-in-residence Amy Clampitt to give reading Oct 30

"It's very puzzling," sighs Amy Clampitt, folding her expressive hands. She speaks of her recent burst onto the national literary scene with a kind of impatience, as if she'd really rather not think about it at all. She certainly doesn't talk about it.

But the literati and the popular press are talking and writing about her. An article in last week's issue of New York Magazine devoted several pages to the poet and this year's writer-in-residence at the College of William and Mary.

Amy Clampitt will give a reading of her works at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 30, in the moot court room of Tucker Hall. The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Although Miss Clampitt remains mystified by the media attention she has been getting for her first book, "The Kingfisher," published in 1983 as part of the prestigious Knopf Poetry Series, those who have read the work understand why she is being linked with some of the finest American contemporary poets. Already a best-seller in the poetry category, "The Kingfisher" has been called "one of the most brilliant debuts in recent American literary history" by The National Magazine.

She has been writing poetry off and on most of her life, but Miss Clampitt has not always thought of herself as a poet. Raised on a 125-acre farm in Iowa, she majored in English at Grinnell College, hoping to move to the East Coast and get a job in publishing. She subsequently moved to New York, and over the years worked as a secretary at Oxford University Press and a reference librarian at the Audubon Society, but her main interest was writing novels. None of them, however, got published.

In 1978, the creative dam burst when Howard Moss, poetry editor of The New Yorker, read her submitted poem, "The Sun Underfoot Among the Sundews," and decided to publish it. Since then, her career has snowballed, her poems appearing frequently in The New Yorker, and in The Atlantic and The New Republic.

"Poetry goes through phases and fashions," says Miss Clampitt. "That's one reason I got published, I think." During the 1970s, she explains, most poetry being published was extremely spare and minimal. "I never did know how to write minimal poetry," she says. "I tend to write very elaborate, decorated things." Yet what emerges from Miss Clampitt's writing is poetry in language that critic Frederick Turner calls "rich and gorgeous but also philosophically acute, witty and clear."

Clarity is also a central theme in Miss Clampitt's poetry class for nine talented students at William and Mary. "I encourage them to be as explicit as they can, not to put things in to confuse the reader. I'm interested in clarity rather than cleverness, although I'm as quick to appreciate cleverness as anyone."

Miss Clampitt says she learned of the invitation to be writer-in-residence when she arrived at William and Mary last March to participate in the 1984 Writers' Festival. "I found everyone so charming, the students are so nice, the physical surroundings so lovely, that I was tempted but I just couldn't think about it at the time," she says, indicating her surprise at the idea. "Later, I concluded that there wasn't anything to prevent me. I really felt I'd been swept off my feet."

She personally chose the students for the course on the basis of work they submitted. During the class, which meets Wednesday evenings, participants read and discuss poetry by authors Miss Clampitt has assigned, spending the last part of the evening reading and discussing each other's work.

"One of the things I told them was that even the best poets have written bad poetry. We've all done it, so no one should feel bad about it," she says.

After that initial reassurance, Miss Clampitt set the tone for the course. "We pay close attention to everything and do not idly praise anything," she says. She encourages students to make suggestions about each other's work, since "that can sometimes be more fruitful than a one-hour conference with the instructor."

Although her own work is extraordinary by any standards, Miss Clampitt says she does not have a formula for writing poetry. "Generally, a poem is a type of first-hand experience for which the writer has found a form," she points out. "Our discussion centers on how to give the poem this form if it hasn't quite found it."

Recital planned

Robert and Marlene Ford will present a trombone and horn recital on Monday, Oct. 29, at 8 p.m. in Ewell 100.

Ford is currently trombonist with the Virginia Opera Association, the Virginia Symphony and the Virginia Beach Pops and is an adjunct professor of low brass at Old Dominion University. Marlene Ford performs with the Eastern Virginia Brass Quintet, the Prelude Woodwind Quintet, the Virginia Beach Pops and the Peninsula Symphony.

The program will consist of a variety of musical literature, including the twentieth-century works "Fantasy for Trombone and Orchestra," Paul Creston, "Villanelle," Paul Dukas, and "Five Pieces for Trombone and Piano," Ernst Krenek, as well as the classical work "Adagio and Allegro" for alto trombone and horn, Michael Haydn.

Also performing in the recital is Janis-Rozina Peri, soprano and ODU faculty member. She will sing "Nocturnes," a cycle of five songs for soprano, horn and piano by Arnold Cooke.

Accompanying the Fords will be Michael Manning, George Stone and Mary Wick.

There is no admission charge for this recital.

Robert Ford, trombonist, will perform in a free concert Oct. 29 in Ewell 100.

SEARCH FOR DIRECTOR

The College of William and Mary invites nominations and applications for the position of Director of the Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art. The museum is two years old with a growing art collection and close association with academic programs in art. The Director will oversee construction of a fully funded addition and will direct exhibition, acquisition and public relations programs. Fund-raising ability necessary. Some teaching is desirable in museology or area of speciality. Salary commensurate with professional training, qualifications and experience. Position available early 1985. Deadline for applications Dec. 7. Applications, including a resume, and three letters of reference should be sent to Prof. Alan J. Ward, Chairman, Muscarelle Museum Director Search Committee, c/o Department of Government, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

ATTENTION: ALUMNI

Effective January 1, 1985, all placement files for alumni will remain active in the Office of Placement in Morton Hall for two years. At the end of these two years they will be transferred to the Swem Library Archives, where they will remain for three years. Any file that has not been used within five years after graduation will be destroyed unless the Office of Placement is requested to do otherwise.

The Commonwealth of Virginia has established a record management policy that a placement file will be destroyed after five years if notification to the Office of Placement, 140 Morton Hall, The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185, is not made (in written form only) prior to five years after graduation. We have found that materials used after five years usually require updating.

Placement services are still available to alumni as they are needed to establish placement files with recommendations for use in applying for career positions and graduate school admissions. In most cases there is no need for alumni to ask for placement files to be maintained beyond five years.

The deadline for written request to "keep file active" is January 1, 1985. When the request is made, please give name used when file was established or current name on file, as well as year of graduation.

The above information pertains to the Office of Placement, Morton 140. If your file was established with either the Education Placement Office or the Marshall-Wythe Law Placement Office, you may wish to contact them to see how your file will be handled.

fern culture. Dr. Mathes is a member of the American Society of Plant Physiologists and the Botanical Society of America, as well as other professional societies.

An article adapted from a new book by Dr. Hans von Baeyer has appeared in The Sciences, a magazine published by the New York Academy of Sciences. The article, "Rainbows, Whirlpools, and Clouds" is a field guide to the physics of a summer's day. His book, "Rainbows, Snowflakes and Quarks: Physics and the World Around Us," was published in August by McGraw-Hill. Dr. von Baeyer was the 1979 winner of the Science Writing Award of the American Institute of Physics.

At the recent Southeastern Medieval Association Conference held at Eastern Kentucky University, Georgia Greenia, of the Department of Modern Languages, presented a paper on "Books and Their Makers in the Spanish Middle Ages." The talk was accompanied by 60 slides illustrating book art during the medieval period in Spain.

He caters to the College's tastes

If the College or any of its organizations or individuals plans a special event with food and beverages, John Robb is the man to see. He is the senior catering manager of Shamrock Food Service, and there's almost nothing he can't do with food.

John is an expert in planning, pricing and producing everything from banquets of the very best kind to just punch and cookies for a departmental reception. He also does wedding receptions, the President's Brunch, and nice little luncheons for the Board of Visitors. All special functions in the College community, as well as some events held by local organizations, come under his aegis.

"Getting organized is the big part," says John. "To make it click, everybody has to do his part, with no weak links."

Intricate plans are made for every step of each event. He uses 90 percent student help on most large functions and has a list of 75-80 students he can call on. Training students for food service is an ongoing program for him, because there is a big personnel turnover. Students who have worked for him a couple of years assist with the training and act as head waiters for banquets.

"We try to cater to what the guests want," he says of his menus. When planning events he talks to the person in charge to get an idea of what type of meal is desired, how it is to be served, how much help is necessary and what supplies will be needed. Fall is the busiest time of the year, because of some big social events, such as Burgesses Day, the President's Brunch, various luncheons and dinners, and football weekends. Graduation in May is the biggest one day of the year, when he is in charge of a buffet lunch for 2,000 or more parents and graduates. At the time he's staging that mammoth operation, most of the departments at the College are having receptions, and all start at the same time.

He keeps equipment neatly stacked on shelves in a large storage room at the Commons. He has service for 700 persons, with 700 plates, cups, saucers, and five-piece place settings of tableware. Tablecloths and napkins are not part of his stock — he calls the linen service for those items.

Any time he caters an event, a good cleanup goes with it. "We leave things like we found them," he notes. "Part of the training in serving food is the cleanup afterward."

Keeping hot foods hot and cold foods cold when they are prepared at the Commons and hauled by truck elsewhere is not all that difficult, now that insulated containers are available. The containers, with racks inside for holding trays or platters, can hold their temperature for about two hours.

Campus Spotlight

"A lot of work goes into getting the equipment ready for a big party," he says. "The silver has to be hand-cleaned. Tables and chairs have to be set up (the buildings and grounds department does this), tablecloths and napkins arranged, place settings and beverage containers put out, serving tents and setups positioned, and the foods prepared and hauled to the site at the last moment."

A native of Dahlgren, he went to Norfolk State College for his associate degree in food management. Required to complete a semester of on-the-job training before graduating, he came to the William and Mary food service to train under Miss Becky Tinker, then director. They hit it off well, so he joined the staff in 1962 and has worked here ever since.

"I started at the bottom, washing dishes for awhile, then came on through the ranks," he declares.

To gain experience, he worked part-time at Colonial Williamsburg, helping with banquets at the Williamsburg Lodge and the Cascades, and also worked part-time at Busch Gardens to learn how to feed mobs of people.

"It's been fun and a challenge," he sums up his career. "I've watched the College grow, and a few of my students who learned catering here have since opened their own restaurants or gone into food service. That's gratifying."
