

Homecoming highlights big weekend at College

It'll be a big weekend at the College when thousands of alumni and friends return to campus for the 1984 Homecoming.

Events begin Thursday with the Order of White Jacket reception and dinner, followed by Friday's sporting events and reunions, Saturday's parade and football game, and Sunday's farewell breakfasts. In between are a lot of action, a lot of fun and reminiscing for alumni, and non-stop hospitality.

An estimated 8,000 alumni and spouses are expected to be here for one or more activities during the busy weekend. The 9:30 a.m. Homecoming parade on Saturday is anticipated to draw the largest crowds, which will watch about 65-70 units on a route which begins at the colonial Capitol on Duke of Gloucester Street, winds through Merchants Square and out Richmond Road to Cary Stadium. According to John Phillips, director of alumni affairs at the College, there will be 15 high school and intermediate school bands participating in the parade, plus the William and Mary and Lehigh University bands.

Linda Lavin, '59, star of TV's "Alice" is parade marshal, but other young ladies will share a place of honor in the parade. Miss Virginia, Susan Parker, and Miss Virginia-U.S.A., former W&M student Leah Rush, will ride in antique MG autos furnished by an MG car club of Virginia. Also appearing in the parade will be five candidates for Homecoming Queen, one each from freshman, sophomore, and junior classes, plus two from the senior class.

Floats will use as their theme, "Injuneering a T-R-I-B-E Production," since the Lehigh football team, the Homecoming opponent, is known as the "Engineers." The judging area will be located in front of Williamsburg Baptist Church on Richmond Road. Prizes will be awarded as follows: $500 for first prize for the best float, $250 first prize for best high school band, and $100 for best intermediate school band. Parade units will proceed to the parade site by way of Lafayette Street to Waller Street by 8 a.m.

Winners of cash awards will be announced at halftime of the football game. Also on tap for halftime ceremonies are crowning of the Homecoming Queen, and music by the Alumni Band, which has been newly revamped.

At Friday evening's black-tie dinner given by the Society of the Alumni, Alumni Medallions will be awarded Linda Lavin and Jack Garrett, '40, for their service to the College, community and nation. Garrett, a retired navy captain, is now vice-president for investments, trust department, at the Bank of Lancaster in Kilmarnock.

The Olde Guard, composed of class members from 1908-1934, is being joined this year by a new group, the Young Guard, composed of alumni of classes from the 1980s, and chaired by Sue Newman, '83. They are planning an after-game social at the Alumni House and a dance in Trinkle Hall Saturday evening. A Big Band dance is also on tap at the Hospitality House Saturday night for alumni.

Washington Program plans form

Students who would like a behind-the-scenes look at the political process will get that chance at the first session of the revived 1984-85 Washington Program, scheduled Nov. 12-14 at the Brookings Institute in the nation's capital.

"Campaign '84: Money, Technology and the Democratic Process" is the topic for the November program, which will feature a session with New York Times columnist James Reston.

Other speakers for the three-day program include Bill White, campaign director for Sen. John Glenn's bid for the 1984 presidential nomination. White, along with other members of Sen. Glenn's campaign and office staff, will present a session on campaigning, money and the media.

Michael Malbun, author of "Money and Politics," called the definitive book on campaign financing, will speak on that topic to students. Malbun is a fellow with the American Enterprise Institute.

"Radio and Its Electoral Process" is the topic for a talk by Julius Dusha, director of the Washington Journalism Center.

Direct mail and marketing in campaigns will be the focus of a session with Richard Viguerie, owner of a computerized direct mail and marketing firm in Falls Church, Va.

Approximately 20 students will be chosen for each session.

Applications and faculty recommendations for the program must be returned to the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs, Room 203, James Blair Hall, by 5 p.m., Monday, Nov. 5. Applications are available at the following locations: Campus Center desks; government department office; area coordinators; Swem Library desk; Office of the Dean of Student Affairs.

Other seminars scheduled for the Washington Program in the coming months are "Focus on the Arts," Feb. 4-6; and "Nuclear Disarmament and Arms Control," March 25-27.

U.S. Senator John Warner, senior senator from Virginia, was a surprise lecturer at professor Alan Ward's government class Monday. The senator is stumping the state in a reelection bid Nov. 6.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., Roanoke architect Rick Ekstrom, and College Rector Anne Dobie Peebles participated in the dedication last Friday of the renovated Trinkle Hall. The building was recently renovated at a cost of $1.46 million, after serving the College since 1914.

Board of Visitors meets here

At its meeting Oct. 26 and 27, the College's Board of Visitors approved the transfer of $21,021 from the Intercollegiate Athletic Reserve Fund to support six sports which had been cut from the athletic budgets last fall. Included in the total are $9,842 to support women's golf and fencing, and $11,179 to support men's fencing, swimming, rifle and lacrosse.

The action came as a result of student discussions with members of the Board's Committee on Athletic Policy, which agreed informally last spring to furnish support from the fund not to exceed one-half the operating budgets of the six sports affected, with the proviso that the additional one-half of the budgets must be raised externally through efforts of those most interested in the particular sports.

In reporting to the full Board Saturday, Jerry Jebo, chairman of the Athletic Policy Committee, said that the six affected sports "may continue to raise funds year by year, sport by sport until July 1986; however, monies must be in hand by June 30, 1985. As agreed earlier, an endowed income equal to the need would insure the continuance of the sports after 1987."

In other action, the Board approved $10,975 from unrestricted private funds to cover the anticipated net deficit in the operating budget of the 1984 Virginia Shakespeare Festival. The Board also approved a proposed budget of $160,600 for the 1985 Festival.

The Board also received the financial reports for the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, the College of William and Mary, and the Virginia Associated Research Campus for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1984. This is the last year that VARC will have a separate budget, having become a fiscal part of the College under the title of CEBAF, the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility.

With the endorsement of the Academic Affairs Committee, the Board approved enrollment projection figures for the next and five subsequent biennia, through 1996. The recommended projections, which all colleges and universities are required to submit to the State Council of Higher Education in Virginia and the Department of Planning and Budget, assume a stable continuing undergraduate population at William and Mary, with modest growth estimated in graduate and professional programs.

The Board established the Irvin and Sarah Reid Scholarship Fund from a bequest of $10,000 by the late Joseph Nachman of Newport News. The income from the bequest, and the principal, if needed, will be used to assist a needy and deserving student attending the College.

From a bequest of $14,037 from the late Marjorie Moon, William and Mary class of 1932, of Stockton, Calif., the Board established the Marjorie Moon Memorial Library Fund, the income from which will be used to support Swem Library.

Samuel A. Mohr, a 1984 graduate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, was named by the Board to receive the 1984-85 J.D. Carneal, Jr., Tax Scholarship. The scholarship, in the amount of $1,100 this year, is named for the late J.D. Carneal, Jr., of Richmond, and provides funds each year to a student in the master of law and taxation program.

On Friday, the Board passed a resolution that the designation, The Campus Center, be extended to the building previously known as Trinkle Hall; and the new dining room retain the name The Colony Room.

Public Notices

The Office of Career Planning is sponsoring two career speakers, and students are invited to attend. Sessions are at 4 p.m. in Morton 341.

On Thursday, Nov. 1, James F. Almand will focus on careers in government and law. A graduate of the College, he is an attorney and a member of the Virginia House of Delegates.

Will A. Molineux will speak about careers in journalism on Thursday, Nov. 8. He is an alumnus of the College and serves as editor of the editorial page for the Times-Herald.

All students, faculty and staff are invited to participate in the Badminton Club, which meets Monday evenings, from 7-9 p.m. in Adair Gym. No previous experience is necessary. Instruction will be given, as well as free play. Call extension 4015 for more information.

A workshop on Embedded Network Computer Systems was held at the College Oct. 18-19, sponsored jointly by the College's department of computer science and NASA Langley Research Center. Edwin C. Fondriat of NASA Langley was the conference host. The agenda included operating systems, system architecture, reliability and fault-tolerance, and distributed debugging. The conference was attended by representatives of Georgia Institute of Technology, Ohio State, Universities of Illinois, Iowa, and South Florida, SUNY-Stonybrook, and Arvin/Calspan, APT and TRW.

A study skills workshop has been scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 31, 7-8 p.m. in Morton 39 to help students with preparation for tests. It is open to all.

The biology department will present a seminar on Friday, Nov. 2, at 4 p.m. in Millington 117. Dr. David West, professor of biology at VPI, will speak on "Pupal Color Dimorphism in Swallowtail Butterflies." Refreshments will be served at 3:30 p.m. in the Biology Library.

The Physics Colloquium topic for Friday, Nov. 2, is "Do Energetic (1 MeV/amu) Atomic Collisions Exhibit Anisotropy?" Speaking will be M.G. Menendez, University of Georgia. Coffee will be served at 3:30 p.m., and the talk will begin at 4 p.m. in Small 109.

The Forum of Williamsburg has announced its program for November. Polly Longworth, author of several books, including "Austin and Mabel: The Amherst Affair," published by Farrar, Straus, and Giroux in 1983, will speak on "Writing and Publishing" on Nov. 13. The menu will consist of pineapple juice, lasagna with garlic bread, and a chocolate cookie bar, and the cost is $7. Advance payment and registration are required. Call Julie Leverenz or Margaret Ward at 253-4286 for information and reservations.

Lt. (jg) Jerry Cronin, fisheries specialist with the U.S. Coast Guard at Yorktown, will be the guest lecturer for the "Oceanography for Landlubbers" program to be presented on Wednesday, Nov. 7, in Watermen's Hall Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on the Gloucester Point campus.

Students should take precautions, warns Dean Samuel Sadler, because of a rash of thefts and personal attacks recently. He asks that individuals not go out alone at night unless they travel with a friend or two; otherwise, they should call ESCORT, extension 4423. Keep dorm window screens latched and doors locked, he says, and lock up bicycles when not in use.

"Notify the police at once if you observe any suspicious activity, or if you or someone you know becomes a victim in an incident," he says.

Sea Grant College designation is newest honor for VIMS

Ceremonies were held last Thursday at Gloucester Point to officially confer Sea Grant College designation upon the Virginia Institute of Marine Science of the College.

Dr. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., President of the College, presided. Dr. Ned A. Ostenso, Director of the National Sea Grant College program presented a plaque commemorating the designation, and emphasized the importance of the Sea Grant partnership between the universities, the federal government and industry to marine research and resource development. During almost 20 years of the Sea Grant experiment, the commitment of schools such as William and Mary has provided a national resource critical to keeping the United States in the forefront of marine research, according to Dr. Ostenso.

The plaque was accepted on behalf of the Board of Visitors of the College by Mrs. Caroline T. Egelhoff of Williamsburg. She stressed the importance of the Sea Grant program to the College and VIMS, and noted a number of new programs at the College were initiated with Sea Grant support. These include the environmental law courses, shared jointly by law students and marine science graduate students; the masters' program in secondary school training, with emphasis on marine science, offered by the School of Education and the School of Marine Science; and the small business assistance program for marine industries offered by the Graduate School of Business Administration and the Institute.

Dr. Frank O. Perkins, Dean/Director of VIMS, discussed the growth of Sea Grant in Virginia by highlighting research on clam culture, soft crab shedding and offshore fisheries development, which makes substantial contributions to Virginia's economy.

The first Sea Grant program in Virginia began in 1968 at VIMS with programs in shellfish culture and advisory activities. Since then the program has grown to a multi-university project administered by the Virginia Graduate Marine Science Consortium, including William and Mary, the University of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and Old Dominion University.

Dr. A.Z. Freeman, a collector of Japanese swords, will speak on the subject Thursday at the Town and Gown luncheon.

MOCK TRIAL SCHEDULED

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary will stage a demonstration court martial trial on Thursday, Nov. 1, 7-10 p.m. in the Moot Court Room of the law school. The mock trial is open to the public, but is limited to 100 observers due to seating restrictions.

Participants will include attorneys from Fort Eustis, along with representatives of the military science departments at William and Mary and Christopher Newport College.

The case being tried will involve an enlisted man who has been charged with assault and absence without leave.

For further information, call 253-4304.

OPEN HOUSE HOURS

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., will hold an open house for students on Monday, Nov. 5, from 4-5 p.m. No appointment is necessary.

From top are Stephen Kagey, Nancy Lowery, David Burke, Tim Gribben, Andrew McRoberts and Brooke Newell, all in the Covenant Players' new production.

Covenant Players open Nov. 1 with "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown"

The Covenant Players are presenting eight performances of the popular play, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown." Proceeds will go to fight world hunger.

The players, a joint drama ministry of Catholic and Episcopal students at the College, will present the first four performances at the Williamsburg Regional Library Theatre. Showtime is 8 p.m. for Nov. 1, 2, and 3, with a matinee scheduled for 2 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 4. Subsequent performances will be held at the Campus Center Little Theatre at 8 p.m. on Nov. 8, 9 and 10, and a matinee at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11.

The production is under the direction of Howard Scammon, professor emeritus of theatre and speech. Scammon is currently teaching acting classes at the Virginia School for the Performing Arts in Newport News. He has previously directed the Covenant Players in 1983 in "Godspell," and in 1979 in "St. Joan" and "Godspell," and "God's Favorite."

"You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" is a musical fit for all ages. It depicts the life and times of several members of the Peanuts gang, with characters stepping out of comic book frames to bring the story to life with words, song and dance. Cast members include Dave Burke, Tim Gribben, Stephen Kagey, Nancy Lowery, Andrew McRoberts and Brooke Newell. Jacqueline Boston is pianist.

Tickets for all performances are $4 for adults, $3 for students, and $2 for children under 12. Tickets may be reserved by calling the following numbers: 220-3531, 220-3672, or 229-3631, or purchased at Binns Fashion Shop in Merchants Square, or at the Campus Center's front desk.

Official Memorandum

RESTRICTION ON NEW EMPLOYMENT

In accordance with past practice, new staffing will not be authorized from December 1, 1984 through January 1, 1985.

This restriction is based on the fact that approximately one-quarter of the month of December is consumed in paid holiday-time for College employees, and it seems neither equitable nor financially reasonable for a new employee to work a maximum of three weeks (assuming a December 1 employment date) and then receive a week's holiday with full pay.

Accordingly, if a vacancy cannot be filled before December 1, then the earliest the position will be approved for staffing is Wednesday, January 2, 1985.

It should be noted that the employment restriction does not apply to employees paid on an hourly basis, since they are paid only for hours actually worked. Also, it does not apply to the internal transfer of permanent classified employees from one position to another within the College, since those employees already would be eligible for the extended holiday with pay.

Your understanding cooperation in this matter will be appreciated.

Acting Director of Planning and Budget

Don Reilly to perform one-man show

Don Reilly, the William and Mary actor who delighted audiences this past summer with his portrayal of Hamlet for the Virginia Shakespeare Festival, will perform two new one-man shows in a double bill, his own adaptation of "Henry V" and "A Twist of Lemon," an award-winning British import by Alex Renton.

Performances are scheduled at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday, Nov. 7, 8, 9 and 10, in the Studio Theatre of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on Jamestown Road. Reilly's appearance is sponsored by the Virginia Shakespeare Festival and the College of William and Mary Department of Theatre and Speech. Both the College community and the public are invited.

Admission will be $1 at the door, which will be used to pay the performance's entry fee for the American College Theatre Festival. Reilly won the 1983 Festival's Irene Ryan Acting Competition, held yearly at the Kennedy Center.

Indian musical program is campus treat

Ustad Asad Ali Khan, India's finest performer on the been, will give a concert Nov. 7 at the Muscarelle Museum of Art from 7:30 till 9:30 p.m.

Only a few musicians today possess the skill to play the been, the oldest extant classical instrument of India. Khan is a descendent of an ancient familial tradition of music-making and is its last surviving member. He plays in the North Indian style on the been, or rudra veena, an instrument with large gourd-shaped resonating chambers linked by a five-foot bridge, on top of which are frets supporting four principal strings and a few resonating strings. The instrument is held like a sitar and is ornately decorated.

Originated in ancient times, the been had evolved to its present form by the late 16th or early 17th centuries and dominated Indian instrumental music until the 1920s. Its popularity has waned, and today only a handful of Indian musicians still play the been. Khan is one of those few who preserve the dying art, having trained for fifteen years with his father at the nawabi court of Rampur.

Accompanying him at the College event will be Pandit Gopaldas on the pakhawaj, the drum traditionally played with the been. The pakhawaj has few masters today, having been superseded by the tabla as the main vehicle of rhythmic accompaniment. Opportunities to hear ensemble playing by been and pakhawaj are rare, even in India.

Their appearance here is in connection with the current Muscarelle Museum exhibition of "Kashmir and Rajasthan," a photography show by Raghubir Singh. His camera artistry is on view in the Spigel Gallery the rest of this year.

Khan and Gopaldas will give a demonstration of these two ancient instruments and will talk about their history at the Creative Arts House from 2-4 p.m. Nov. 7. This demonstration is jointly sponsored by the Creative Arts House and the religion department.

The public is invited to both performances. There is no admission charge. Creative Arts House is located in Unit 8 of the Botetourt dorm complex.

Ustad Asad Ali Khan and his Indian been, an ancient musical instrument.

Dragging sorority sisters in the mudhole at last Saturday's Derby Day was a favorite sport. Sigma Chis and sororities were raising money for the Williamsburg Red Cross.

Drive progresses

The United Way campaign at the College will end next week, and as of October 26, employees had reached only 85 percent of the $16,400 goal. So far, $13,959.56 has been contributed, according to John Thelin, chairman of the drive.

Not all College units have had a chance to return their pledge cards, so final tallies will extend beyond Oct. 31, he notes.

University Advancement is the only unit to achieve 100 percent employee participation in the effort. Other departments are as follows:

School of Business, 36 percent
School of Education, 31 percent

Marshall-Wythe School of Law, 21 percent
Student Affairs, 19 percent
Intercollegiate Athletics, 17 percent
Arts and Sciences, 16 percent

RAP SESSION SET

Robert Wachs, a W&M theatre graduate in 1961, will be back on campus Nov. 1 for a rap session with students on managing entertainers. The session is scheduled for 5 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

The public is invited.

Newsmakers

Dr. Robert J. Huggett, head of the department of chemical oceanography at VIMS, has been selected to serve on the Science Advisory Board of the Environmental Protection Agency. The board reports to the EPA Administrator, William D. Ruckelshaus. Dr. Huggett's responsibilities will lie with the Environmental Effects, Fate and Transport Committee, which provides scientific and technical advice to the administrator on issues and problems concerning environmental effects and the formation, transport and fate of pollutants in ecosystems.

Emeric Fischer, professor of law, will speak to the Williamsburg chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at a luncheon meeting Nov. 6 at the Holiday Inn East. He will discuss "Election Day and What It Means to Me," stressing that no democracy can survive if public participation in government is lacking.

Dr. Frank O. Perkins, Dean/Director of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, hosted a program given for the Women's Club of the College and their guests on Saturday, Oct. 20, at VIMS.

Dr. Perkins opened the program with a presentation on the past and present activities of the Institute. Other speakers from VIMS who addressed the Club were: Dr. Robert Byrne, Assistant Director and Head, Division of Physical Science and Ocean Engineering, who defined the research interests and goals of the departments of geological and physical oceanography; John Lucy, instructor in marine science, who presented an overview of VIMS's advisory services department's functions; and Richard Byles, VIMS graduate student, who described his turtle research as an example of student research being conducted at VIMS.

Dr. Joseph Daniel, the new Dean of Sciences of Old Dominion University, and his wife were invited guests of the Women's Club.

She is role model for ROTC

The Tennessee accent and the direct gaze are what one first notices about Capt. Amelia C. Nutt, assistant professor of military science at the College. She is the first female Army officer to be assigned to the ROTC here and is, she hopes, a role model to female ROTC students at William and Mary.

A native of Lewisburg, Tenn., she joined the Army ten years ago with a direct commission. She had graduated from college with a double major in political science and history and had worked for the F.B.I. in Washington, D.C., and for a telecommunications firm. A persistent Army recruiter convinced her that the military life was what she needed, and she agreed that it might be a "different and intriguing" adventure. The educational opportunities it offered, as well as the travel, were also appealing. "The Army has given me everything I wanted," she says now.

A military intelligence officer, she trained at Huachuca, Ariz., and has had duty in Korea, Germany, Fort Devens, Mass., and Arlington Hall, Va., where she was aide to the commanding general. But she wanted to make a direct impact on emerging officers of the Army, so she requested an ROTC assignment. She was sent to William and Mary in the summer of 1983 for a three-year tour of duty and figures it was a fortuitous assignment. After just 15 months, she finds she loves the College and its high principles and is proud as punch of its hardworking, well-motivated ROTC students.

"I see conscientious and dedicated cadets," she says. "They want to do everything they can to prepare for success as Army officers. They seek to learn. The higher the standards we set for them, the harder they work."

There are 42 female and 100 male students in the ROTC program at William and Mary this year. They have compiled an enviable record here, according to Amy Nutt, and have participated enthusiastically in university life beyond academics and military science. They are participants in all sorts of clubs, sports and campus activities. One William and Mary female cadet, Margaret Ashburn, finished 27th among 4,000 men and women cadets at Fort Bragg, N.C., last summer in advanced ROTC camp, which included ROTC students from 111 institutions.

Amy is a walking advertisement for satisfaction in a military career.

"ROTC offers a real challenge to students, teaching them valuable leadership and management skills," she points out. "The Army offers an opportunity for enormous responsibility at a young age, which often does not come as quickly in the normal business environment. It offers travel, good promotion opportunities and further education, plus appealing pay and benefits. The military life is now viewed more favorably by young people than ever before in recent years.

"Students who choose to become involved with ROTC here find they have to manage their time well — and that's a good learning experience. They know that academics here demand high performance, and the ROTC demands time, too, so they allocate their time to include both. I'm proud of the caliber of students we have at William and Mary in the ROTC, and that pride was reinforced last summer by the excellent records they compiled at camp."

Amy is married to a Department of the Army civilian, Vince Armstrong, who is employed at Fort Eustis and is also an Army Reserve officer.
