

If Santa in the red velour suit and black knee socks looks a bit familiar, it might be because he goes under the name of Tom Graves otherwise. He presided at the Green and Gold Christmas on Dec. 7, and held more than a hundred happy kids on his knee to hear Christmas wishes. The local children were guests of faculty and students, who provided gifts for all, plus games and refreshments. Here, Candy Wallace talks to Santa.

Presidential search now going into its final stages

The College is getting closer to knowing who the president-designate will be. The presidential search committee, hard at work since last May, has narrowed down a list of more than 200 candidates for the post to just three men, whose names will be presented to the Board of Visitors for consideration. The Board will then choose one to head the second-oldest college in the country.

Although the Board is holding a regularly scheduled meeting this weekend, it is not known whether the presidential decision will come then, or at a called meeting sometime before Christmas.

Meanwhile, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., who will be leaving the College next month, are being entertained extensively by individuals and by campus groups. The entire College community is invited to a reception Dec. 16 at Trinkle Hall, from 5-7 p.m. to say goodbye to the couple, who will be moving to Delaware in March. Dr. Graves will direct activities of the Winterthur Museum near Wilmington, after being on terminal leave from the College beginning Jan. 9. The Graveses plan a vacation cruise in January.

College soon will offer new computer science PhD program

The College of William and Mary will offer a Ph.D. program in computer science, beginning in 1986, according to Rolf G. Winter, dean of graduate studies of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences at the College.

The school was notified last week by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia that it had approved the new degree program.

"We appreciate the State Council's expression of confidence in our programs," said Dr. Winter. "Doctoral level work in computer science will have a profound effect throughout the institution. The presence of experts and of special facilities, plus the excitement of advanced research, will benefit everyone, from freshmen to advanced research scholars."

Paul K. Stockmeyer, chairman of the computer science department, said, "We are excited. This will mean a boost in prestige and an increase in faculty for our department. There will be additional high quality research going on, which will improve the entire computer science program at the College."

"Having a doctorate program will make it easier to recruit and retain top faculty," he added. "We are very enthusiastic and think that an enriched research environment will be attractive to both faculty and students."

About 70 individuals are currently enrolled in the computer science master's degree program at William and Mary. Stockmeyer believes that about a dozen, mostly from the Peninsula area, will apply for admittance to the doctoral program. Once the program is established, he estimates that about five or six students will enter each year.

Nationwide, less than 300 doctorates in computer science are awarded annually, and most of these graduates go into corporate positions. With an on-campus degree offered, Stockmeyer is hoping that some will choose to enter teaching.

The College will begin immediately to search for new faculty members in computer science, according to Stockmeyer. Two will be added for the 1985-86 school year, and one for the 1986-87 term.

Stockmeyer feels that area residents will benefit from the new program, especially those employed at NASA Langley Research Center in Hampton

Jefferson Hall readied

William and Mary upperclassmen now living in a Richmond Road motel will start moving into the newly renovated Jefferson Hall Dec. 8 and will continue through exams until Dec. 20. They will not, however, be permitted to sleep there until the spring semester begins in January.

The dorm, scene of a disastrous pre-dawn fire on Jan. 20, 1983, has undergone a $2.6 million reconstruction job which is winding down this month. Some work still needs to be done, but is mostly confined to small things like putting glass shower doors in bathrooms, and completing punch lists. By this week, all work in student rooms will be completed, inspected and approved.

Furniture was delivered last week and is being placed in rooms, according to Charles J. Lombardo, director of residence life. Rooms in the air-conditioned building are equipped with bunk beds, separate desks with book shelves, bureaus and chairs. Each living space has wardrobe closets, a lavatory, tack boards for posters and pictures, and connections for a private telephone line if desired. The entire structure comes with smoke alarms, a sprinkler system, fire extinguishers, and wall connections for firemen's hoses if needed, all designed to make the dorm as fireproof as possible.

The color scheme for Jefferson Hall utilizes pleasant earth colors: beige and burnt orange walls, brown woodwork, with garnet carpeting in public areas. Each floor has a kitchen so students may prepare meals on six surface cooking units, or in four wall ovens. Chairs and tables provide dining space. Each floor has a lounge, hall telephones, and there is a basement laundry room with five washers and five dryers for student use.

Students who presently live in the Commonwealth Inn will occupy most of the 88 double rooms and 10 singles. Those who live on the second and third floors of the motel will move to the second and third floors of Jefferson. Those on the first floor of the motel will transfer to the basement of the rebuilt dorm. Approximately 50 newly-admitted freshmen at the College will move in January to rooms on the first floor of Jefferson. Mixing freshmen and upperclassmen is an "experiment," said Lombardo, but he feels that there are "all sorts of support systems" for the new students, and they will benefit from the role models of the upperclassmen.

Students in the new dorm plan an unofficial "opening" ceremony for the hall, with a yellow ribbon across the front door, and one bottle of champagne. They are excited about the move, and have shown a high degree of cooperation, Lombardo said.

The Jefferson dorm rooms are getting new furniture in preparation for students living there next semester.

Newsmakers

Joanne R. Braxton, assistant professor of English, has been invited to deliver several lectures. The first was on Nov. 30, at the City University of New York, when she spoke on "Critical Issues for Black Feminist Scholarship." On Dec. 5 and 6, she is appearing in the Penn Seminar Series at the University of Pennsylvania. Her topic is "Charlotte Fortem Grimke and the Search For a Public Voice," the story of a well-educated, well-to-do Philadelphia black woman who was both poet and diarist in the nineteenth century. Prof. Braxton's lectures are sponsored by the programs in Afro-American Studies and Women's Studies at the University.

Edward K. McCormick, director of student financial aid, was in Minneapolis, Minn., for the Nov. 14-15 meeting of the National Council of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (NASFAA). He is one of 10 nationally elected members of the council that serves as the board of directors of NASFAA. With 3,300 member institutions, NASFAA is the largest Washington-based higher education association. NASFAA provides advice and counsel to a large number of other associations, legislative bodies, and government agencies.

R. Robert Goodhart, professor of Military Science, spoke on "The Role of Teaching Effectiveness and Faculty Involvement in Retaining Students in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps" at the annual East Coast Conference of Professor of Military Science that was held in Atlanta, Georgia, in early November.

Anne Moore Pratt, assistant to the vice president for University Advancement and secretary to the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, has just completed her doctoral program and been awarded the Doctor of Education degree at William and Mary. Her thesis was entitled "Making Routine Curriculum Changes at the College of William and Mary in Virginia: Are Faculty Influenced by Trends in Students' Pursuits?"

Jefferson Awards nominations sought

The Thomas Jefferson Awards Committee for the 1984 academic year will soon be meeting to choose this year's recipients of the annual Jefferson Award and the Jefferson Teaching Award.

The Jefferson Award is open to anyone currently employed by the College. It is given to a person who has demonstrated a deep devotion and outstanding service to the College and who "exemplifies the principles of Thomas Jefferson through his life, his character, and his influence on the College."

The Jefferson Teaching Award was established to recognize a younger teacher on the faculty "who by his concern as a teacher, his character, and his influence has demonstrated the stimulation and inspiration of learning for the betterment of the individual and his society as exemplified in the life of Thomas Jefferson."

Written nominations should be sent to Linda Collins Reilly at Brafferton 1 by Dec. 21.

FORUM SCHEDULED

The Forum of Williamsburg will meet Tuesday, Dec. 11, at the Campus Center, Sit 'n Bull room. The topic will be "Holiday Entertaining -- Hints for Busy People." The speaker is Christina O'Shea, owner of Christina's Kitchen at the Village Shops at Kingsmill. Cost is $7, and reservations and payment must be made in advance. Please call Julie Leverenz or Margaret Ward at 253-4286.

The Oct. 1984 issue of "Explorations in Economic History" contains an article by Will Hausman, associate professor of economics, entitled "Market Power in the London Coal Trade: The Limitation of the Vend, 1770-1845."

College Women's Club compiles mementoes

The College Women's Club is preparing a scrapbook of letters and other reminiscences about President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., and Zoe Graves. They request that college or town friends send personal recollections of the Graves era in the form of letters, verses, clippings or snapshots. These will be assembled in a special scrapbook to be presented to the Graveses later. Contributors should remember to write on one side of paper only, and be sure to include their full names.

As an additional part of campus appreciation activities being planned for the Graveses Sunday, Dec. 16, from 5-7 p.m., the Women's Club will also have available a letter box in Trinkle Hall for the convenience of those who have not yet sent their letters.

Deadline for submitting material is Friday, Dec. 21. Send via campus mail to John Parkany, School of Business Administration, or to Mr. Parkany, Box 347, Williamsburg, Va., 23187. For additional

Minority program set at VIMS

A grant from the Exxon Education Foundation in the amount of $38,000, over a three-year period, to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science of the College will be used to finance a minority internship program in marine science to be held at VIMS beginning in the summer of 1985. Four undergraduate students from Hampton University and other institutions of higher learning will attend the program. The students will assist in research being carried out by VIMS faculty.

There are relatively few minority students going into the field of marine science today, said Dr. Frank O. Perkins, dean/director of VIMS, and it is hoped that the introduction to marine science through the program will encourage students to consider marine science as a career. The intent of the program is four-fold: 1) to educate minority students to the academic requirements for research in marine science; 2) to expose them to the field of marine science as a potentially viable career field; 3) to give undergraduates an opportunity to do hands-on research at a professional level under the guidance of a research scientist

APPALACHIAN MUSIC

John McCutcheon, one of America's foremost folk musicians, will present a concert of Appalachian music at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Dec. 7, at the Williamsburg Regional Library.

McCutcheon, who plays fiddle, banjo, autoharp, guitar and Jew's harp, is best known for popularizing the hammer dulcimer.

The contest is sponsored by the Friends of the Appalachian Music (F.O.A.M.). Admission is $5.00 at the door.

R.A. INFORMATION

Students who would like information regarding head resident positions for the 1985-86 academic year should attend the interest session at 3 p.m. on Dec. 10, in DuPont basement. Previous RA experience required. For questions, call the Office of Residence Life at extensions 4314 or 4150.

and thereby add to or augment their technical skills; and 4) to assist minority institutions in improving the quality of preparation of their students for graduate work and/or careers in marine science.

Fellows Program to be repeated

The Governor's Fellows Program, highly successful for the past three years, will be repeated next summer.

Fellows chosen for 1985 will spend the summer working with members of the Governor's Cabinet or personal staff. In addition to work experience, the Fellows will attend weekly seminars, taught by Cabinet members and other governmental experts, and will take part in activities intended to give them a fuller understanding of government issues and processes.

The program is open to undergraduate seniors and graduate students, and applications are due by Feb. 1, 1985. Applicants must submit a letter of application, a resume, transcripts, and information regarding work experience, activities, awards and recognitions to A. E. Dick Howard, Governor's Fellows Program, Office of the Governor, Richmond, VA 23219. More information is available from the College's deans, Office of Career Planning, and Office of Placement.

Three William and Mary students were selected as Governor's Fellows in both 1983 and 1984.

SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN

Two undergraduate mathematics majors at the College of William and Mary have been awarded scholarships of $1,000 each.

Elizabeth Ann Tinsley, a junior from Springfield, and Laurie Ann Cogswell, a senior from Arlington, were winners of the annual Fred Hill scholarships, which recognize excellence at the undergraduate level in the College math curriculum. Both plan to teach high school math after graduation.

Public Advices

Mark Whitney, landscape superintendent, has announced that grounds crews will be giving away greens for Christmas decorations. Interested students, faculty and staff may pick up the greens between 1 and 3 p.m., Dec. 5, 6, 12 and 13, next to the Campus Police Office.

The Student Association is sponsoring a ski trip at Camelback in Pennsylvania the weekend of Jan. 25-27. This package includes transportation, two nights lodging, two days lift tickets, two all-you-can-eat breakfasts and pool privileges.

Total cost is $145. A $35 deposit for reservations is due in the Student Affairs Office by Dec. 8.

The College's Board of Visitors will be meeting Dec. 6 - 8 in a regularly-scheduled session. Committees on student affairs, audit, buildings and grounds, academic affairs, and honorary degrees will convene Thursday evening, Dec. 6, and committees on university advancement, personnel policy, legislative relations, athletic policy, and financial affairs will gather Friday. A further meeting of the Board is scheduled on Saturday.

Donald B. Wenger will defend his doctoral dissertation in History in the Blue Room of the Wren Building from 3-5 p.m. on Thursday, December 13. Members of the faculty are welcome to attend. The title of his dissertation is "Russian-American Relations in Northeast Asia during the Nineteenth Century."

Stephen Siciliano, candidate for a Ph.D. in history, will defend his dissertation, "Major General William Farrar Smith: Critic of Defeat and Engineer of Victory," Monday, Dec. 10 in the Blue Room of the Wren Building at 2 p.m.

The American-Scandinavian Foundation is seeking qualified students for three special training programs, lasting two weeks to 18 months.

Agriculture majors can join in the daily work of a family farm by participating in Farming in Denmark or Sweden. Horticulture in Denmark or Finland allows horticulture majors to work in greenhouses, nurseries, city parks and botanical gardens. Forestry majors, eligible for Forestry Training in Sweden, work with a team from the Swedish National Forest Service in forest reserves of central and northern Sweden.

For complete information and an application form, write to: Exchange Division, The American-Scandinavian Foundation, 127 East 73d St., New York, NY 10021. Be sure to specify the exact field in which you are interested. Deadline for completed applications is Dec. 15.

Two graduate students in the School of Education at the College are recipients of fellowships of $1,100 each. Marsha V. Krotseng, a doctoral candidate from Newport News, and Claude H. Marshall, Jr., a master's degree candidate from Newport News, were honored for service to the College and the School of Education while maintaining academic excellence in their coursework.

George Jack, Jr., '84, an MFA candidate at the University of Louisville, is performing the leading male role in the world premiere in English of "Trojan Women," Dec. 6-9, at the Louisville Playhouse. The play is Tadashi Suzuki's adaptation of the Greek tragedy.

Jack has also appeared in the Belknap Theatre and Playhouse productions of German and French plays, and as a member of the University's Repertory Company, he performs several times a week in colleges, schools, and for organizations throughout Kentucky.

Anne Leslie's writings are well-read by many persons

There are a lot of publications issued on campus, and one of the best-read is a weekly newsletter on career opportunities and continuing education. It's called "Futures," it's eight years old, and it always has a student editor.

This year it is put together by Ann Leslie Tuttle, a senior history major from Irvington, Va. Harriet Reid, director of the Office of Career Planning says, "She does an excellent job gathering and writing the news in a professional manner. She has all the earmarks of a good journalist."

Ann Leslie began her work in July by writing a welcome issue for incoming freshmen and transfer students to acquaint them with the services offered by the Office of Career Planning and Career Placement. Subsequent issues have focused on topics such as the "Venture" program, the new computer system for career choices at the Career Planning library, review of pre-law handbooks, and summer internships available.

"Of all the things I'm doing this semester, putting together 'Futures' is the most fun," she says. "Although it's a lot of work, it's a new challenge each week."

She is involved in all aspects of the newsletter's production, from writing and editing to proofreading and printing. She chose a new masthead for the newsletter this semester to give "Futures" a different, more businesslike look. Each week she receives notices and items from Career Planning and Career Placement, which she sorts and writes up, adding to them information she has gleaned on her own.

Her favorite part of the newsletter is the section from the editor's desk, which gives her the opportunity "to be creative."

"In that section I try to tie the whole issue together so that when it comes out it has a focus," she says.

Ann Leslie got the job as editor of "Futures" after she had worked as a library assistant in the Career Planning library, experience that familiarized her with the sorts of opportunities the office can point out. She feels that working on "Futures" has developed her interests of writing and editing, two possible career avenues. "I'm now interested in writing for newspapers or magazines," she states.

Anne Leslie Tuttle

Another future option is graduate study in history, she says. She is currently doing an independent study in history on southern women.

When not attending to her studies or to "Futures," Ann Leslie involves herself in Delta Gamma sorority, Phi Alpha Theta history honor society, and the Society of Collegiate Journalists. In her spare time she enjoys traveling, reading, and needlepointing.

Bibliophiles sponsor contest

The Williamsburg Bibliophiles, an organization of collectors and students of the art of the book which was founded in 1980, announces its second annual book collecting competition.

Through this competition, the Williamsburg Bibliophiles hope to promote and encourage the collecting of books, not only for their cultural value but also for their aesthetic value as judged by the quality of the printing, binding, typography and design. The contest is open to all students currently enrolled at William and Mary. The first prize is $100. Second prize is $75. Each contestant will submit a formal bibliography and statement describing how and why the collection was assembled. After preliminary judging, finalists will be asked to make a portion of their collection available for final judging.

Similar contests are regularly held at other universities. At Boston University, which has had a competition since 1966, collections submitted have dealt with subjects ranging from 19th-century books about Hawaii to railroad timetables.

In 1984 Christine Jones of Alexandria, Va., was awarded first prize for her collection of books about ballet. Richard E. Powell, from Falls Church and currently a senior at William and Mary, and Herbert Kaylor, a graduate student from Lorton, tied for second place last year with their collections on Latin America and moral philosophy. Selected titles from these collections were exhibited in the Zollinger Museum at Swem Library last April.

This year the competition will be administered by Fraser Neiman, professor emeritus of the English department; Linda Collins Reilly, associate provost; and Sharon Thelin, director of the William and Mary Shared Experience internship program, recently established by the Office of Career Planning.

Copies of the rules for entry are now available from Mr. Neiman or Mrs. Martha Smith in room 102 of Tucker Hall.

The deadline for entering the competition is Feb. 18, 1985.

College hosts Yule Log Ceremony

The public is being invited to help the College welcome the holiday season at the traditional Yule Log Ceremony, at 6 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 15, in the Wren courtyard.

As in past years, the festivities begin with a round of carols led by the William and Mary Choir, under the direction of Frank T. Lendrim, professor of music.

W. Samuel Sadler, dean of student affairs, will read the Christmas story from the Bible, and Dr. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., will read his traditional Christmas story for the last time before his departure in January.

The traditions of the Yule Log will be recounted by Karin Hillenbrand, president of Omicron Delta Kappa leadership fraternity. Participants will be given sprigs of holly and invited to touch their sprigs to the log for good luck as it is carried through the courtyard by students. After the log is lit in the fireplace of the Great Hall in the Wren Building, the public is invited to toss the sprigs into the fire, reviving the superstition that the cares of the past year will go up in flames.

Refreshments will be served by members of Mortar Board and ODK on the portico.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

The College Career Planning Office will offer employees of the College and VIMS an opportunity to use the DISCOVER abilities and learn more about career opportunities during the week of Jan. 7, 1985. For an information/application packet contact: AASCU, Office of International Programs, One Dupont Circle, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20036; (202) 273-7070. Completed applications must be submitted by Feb. 3, 1985.

Senior voice recital scheduled Dec. 8

Kristen R. Miller, a senior government concentrator, will give her senior voice recital at 8 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 8, at the Williamsburg Regional Library. Joy Dibble, a junior business concentrator, will be accompanist.

The recital will include works by G. F. Handel, Arnold Schoenberg and Francis Poulenc and selections from "Evita" and "Camelot."

Miller has participated in several William and Mary Theatre productions. Currently she studies under David Parks, lecturer in the Music Department.

Dibble, presently studying piano with Christine Williams, is a member of the William and Mary Choir, the Botetourt Singers and Kappa Kappa Gamma and is treasurer of the music fraternity, Delta Omicron.

Miller, who will graduate this month, plans to join her parents in South Carolina and pursue a government career. Dibble is considering a career in business or music.

BAROQUE CONCERT

The Baroque Chamber Players of the College of William and Mary will present a concert on Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 8 p.m. at Bruton Parish Church on Duke of Gloucester Street. The concert is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

The group is composed of music students under the direction of Burton N. Kester, a member of the College music faculty.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., will hold an open house for students Thursday, Dec. 6, from 4-5 p.m. in his office

Transportation is ably handled

Harold H. Bannister is "Mr. Transportation" at the College. A 21-year veteran of the U.S. Army Transportation Corps, he is responsible for all of William and Mary's bus service, pool cars, academic and field trips, and vehicles making approved SA and social trips. It's a big order!

The school has approximately 100 vehicles for its needs. These include everything from the Green Machines to dump trucks, but not the vans and limos which carry sports teams to out-of-town events. Those are owned and maintained by the athletics departments.

Pool cars are leased by the state for one-year intervals and ranking officials of the College are routinely assigned the use of a few of these. They must be driven at least 12,800 miles per year, a Commonwealth rule which sometimes is hard to meet. Additional pool cars are funneled out on a first-come basis for legitimate institutional use.

Bannister keeps a governmental hand on maintenance of all these vehicles too. He sees that required maintenance is done, mostly at the State Highway facilities shop on Ironbound Road. He oversees the outside repair agencies to see if they are performing good work, after deciding what is to be done on cars or trucks assigned to William and Mary.

The Buildings and Grounds department has more vehicles assigned to it than any other, but the biggest transportation job is hauling students, according to Bannister. There are 15 green schoolbuses which run seven days a week, nine months a year, from 7:30 a.m. til 1 a.m. weeknights, 2 a.m. on weekends. Three shifts of bus drivers take these 36-passenger buses on routes which cover the campus and all the various housing areas, as far away as Ironbound Road. Because the buses stop and go more than 200 times a day, the vehicles require new brakes every 3,000-4,000 miles. The buses can haul 2,000 students a day, and frequently travel to special events within a 300-mile radius. Bannister says he doesn't like to go any further than Washington, D.C. with the school buses because they aren't really built for comfort on long rides. His hope is to get a traveling bus for William and Mary some day - a 48-passenger coach of the type used by Greyhound - but they cost $150,000 now. The College does have a minibus, holding 20 passengers, which is equipped with more comfort. When he orders buses, he specifies adult-sized seats, for leg room, which cuts down the number of passengers from 48 to 36.

Bannister's office also handles reimbursement vouchers submitted for review and repayment by Accounts Payable.

He prides himself on the fact that the college bus system has never had a serious accident. There have been a few fender-benders, mainly other drivers running into the college buses, but nothing serious, and none, thank goodness, that seriously injured students.

The College has one of the best-developed transportation systems in the state. Much of it is due to Bannister and the expertise he gained while serving in the military. A native of Washington, D.C., he joined the Army in 1953, served in Korea and twice in Vietnam as a convoy commander, getting supplies past sharpshooters. He spent a good bit of time at Fort Eustis, home of the Transportation Corps, taught at the school there, and helped produce manuals for the Doctrine and Training Command. After he retired in 1974, he heard about the College job and applied. He thinks the position is "rewarding; I'm doing something I like to do, and I hope to streamline operations here."

THE NEWS

The William and Mary News is published weekly by the Office of University Communications during the academic year, except when the College is in recess, and twice each month in June, July and August.
