

Charter Day on Feb. 2 features marine science

Donald W. Pritchard, marine scientist and professor at the Marine Sciences Research Center of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, will be the principal speaker for the College of William and Mary's 292nd Charter Day convocation at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 2, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Pritchard, one of the nation's leading oceanographers and experts on estuarine circulation, will receive an honorary doctor of science degree at the ceremonies marking the anniversary of the granting of William and Mary's royal charter by King William III and Queen Mary II of England in Feb. 1693.

Dr. Donald W. Pritchard

The theme of the 1985 Charter Day will be marine science, and Saturday's convocation will be preceded by a two-day invitational symposium on estuarine research to be held in Watermen's Hall at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science in Gloucester. About 100 scientists from the United States and abroad will hear and discuss a series of technical papers on circulation patterns in estuaries.

Also scheduled during the weekend is the annual meeting of the College's President's Council, a group of major contributors to William and Mary over the past year. The Council's black-tie reception and dinner Friday evening, Feb. 1, will feature an address by State Sen. Hunter B. Andrews of Hampton, who will discuss the future of the Chesapeake Bay. Members of the President's Council will also attend the convocation Saturday.

In 1949, Pritchard was one of the first staff members and founders of the Chesapeake Bay Institute of The Johns Hopkins University. For the next three decades, he worked there as both administrator and scientist, providing leadership that helped make the Institute one of the finest coastal oceanographic research groups in the world.

In 1949 he was selected to be associate director of the newly formed Chesapeake Bay Institute at Johns Hopkins. In 1950, he established the Department of Oceanography there and was its first and only chairman. He helped develop and establish the university's major oceanographic floating and field facilities, including Macaulay Hall, and Hopkins' largest research vessel, the 106-foot R/V Ridgely Warfield, financed by the National Science Foundation.

From 1951-1973, he served as director of the Johns Hopkins facility and was also involved in a variety of marine research projects in the Chesapeake Bay area and along the continental shelf. Many of Pritchard's principal contributions to the basic concepts of estuarine research were made in the 1950s, and his studies in the James River estuary are regarded as classics in the field.

His most important studies include his research on the kinematics and dynamics of estuaries such as those along Virginia's east coast and Eastern Shore. However, Pritchard's work is not confined to Maryland and the Chesapeake Bay area, but extends to a large number of national and international panels and studies. Over a period of more than 30 years, he has written dozens of articles in a variety of magazines and journals in his field.

Open House

An Open House for the public at the newly renovated Jefferson Hall on James-town Road at the College will take place Sunday, Jan. 20, between the hours of 1:30 and 3 p.m. It is the anniversary of the disastrous fire which almost destroyed the residence hall Jan. 20, 1983.

The event is being sponsored by the Residence Hall Council of Jefferson Hall. Special guests will be Fire Marshal Bob Bailey and the members of the Williamsburg Fire Department who worked for hours to fight the fire, and to evacuate all students without an injury.

A commemorative plaque will be dedicated at 2 p.m.

All four floors of the hall will be open. Students will be on hand to welcome the public, and refreshments will be served in the lounge, located in the basement.

TO THE STUDENTS OF THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

January 3, 1985

Zoe and I were overwhelmed by the outpouring of affection and good wishes for us at the Yule Log Ceremony in December.

I have written a number of individual students and organizations which presented beautiful gifts to us, but there is no way that we can thank each of you individually for your kindness and thoughtfulness.

I do want to express our gratitude, however, to many of you who signed and wrote notes on cards which were given to us by that other Santa Claus during the Yule Log Ceremony. They include residents of the Spanish House, residents of Hunt and Taliaferro, the angels of Barrett, the denizens of the Randolph Residences, the residents of Jefferson, the residents of Spotswood and Fauquier, the residents of Unit 7, the residents of Old Dominion, the residents of La Maison Francaise, the residents of Monroe, the residents of Bryan Complex, the residents of Ludwell, the residents of Brown Hall and the small houses, the residents of Landrum and Chandler, and the residents of the German House.

Those cards, and all your gifts, will be constant reminders to Zoe and me of the joy of our association and friendship with the students of the College of William and Mary over the years. We are deeply grateful to each one of you for the happiness you have given to us, and all that we have shared.

You have our love and very best wishes for the new year and all the years ahead.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Graves, Jr.
President

THE NEW PRESIDENT MEETS THE GOVERNOR

Dr. Paul R. Verkuil, left, president-elect of the College of William and Mary, went to Richmond during his visit here last week, and was introduced to Governor Charles S. Robb at the Capitol. Dr. Verkuil also met some of the General Assembly members whom he'll be seeing again after moving to Williamsburg in late May.

Dr. Dale Hoak named Fellow of Royal Historical Society

In London on Dec. 17, 1984, Dale E. Hoak, professor of history, was elected a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society. Election to a fellowship in the Society is made in recognition of a scholar's contribution to historical studies.

Following the publication of a book and several articles on the Tudor privy council, Professor Hoak began a new, long-term study of the court and royal household during the mid-Tudor period, 1540-1560, the tumultuous years of the Reformation and Counter Reformation. The first fruits of this research, conducted in British archives, was published in 1982 by Cambridge University Press in a volume of essays by leading Tudor specialists. In a review of the book in the Times Literary Supplement, Dr. Christopher Haigh of Oxford University termed Hoak's paper the best among those by the eighteen American and Canadian scholars.

In a paper to be published by Oxford University Press later this year, Hoak reveals for the first time the nature of the rebellion propelling Mary I to the English throne. The paper was recently selected for presentation at an N.E.H.-funded international conference of Tudor historians at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C.

Hoak's most recent paper, dealing with royal finance under King Edward VI (1547-1553), was based on his discovery in London in 1981 of the only known surviving copy of King Edward's privy purse expense accounts. The paper, which challenges some widely held assumptions about the nature of Tudor government (including some of the author's previously published ones), is slated to appear in a forthcoming issue of the Journal of British Studies. Extracts from the accounts themselves will appear in an appendix to Hoak's book, The Reign of Edward VI, scheduled to be published next year by Longmans.

Professor Hoak is also the author of several articles on the subjects of witch hunting in Europe, 1400-1700, and German Renaissance art. His paper on the Swabian illustrator Hans Baldung Grien (1485-1545) has been selected for presentation next spring in Los Angeles at the annual conference of the Renaissance Society of America.

For his work in Tudor history Professor Hoak was also elected a Visiting Research Fellow of Clare Hall, University of Cambridge, in 1981. He is a member of the American Historical Association, the North American Conference on British Studies, the Sixteenth Century Studies Conference, the Renaissance Society of America, and a co-founder, at William and Mary, of the Mid-Atlantic Renaissance-Reformation seminar.

Newsmakers

The current issue (October 1984) of the quarterly journal, American Studies International (Vol. XXII, No. 2, pp. 79-121) contains an article, "Huck Finn's First Century: A Bibliographical Survey," by Carl Dolmetsch, department of English, in observance of the centennial of Mark Twain's masterpiece, Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, first published in London in December 1884 and in New York in February 1885. The article by Professor Dolmetsch surveys the accumulated scholarship and criticism devoted to "American fiction's most discussed work" during the past 100 years from the novel's early reviews, to the latest interpretations. In it, Prof. Dolmetsch discusses some 850 editions of the novel in 65 languages, charting the trends in editing of the work, and 13 book-length studies plus over 500 articles and parts of books on Huck Finn.

Preparation of this article involved more than a year's reading and bibliographical sleuthing. "Almost everyone who teaches this novel," Dolmetsch observes, "develops a pet theory about it, or a distinctive interpretation of some particular aspect or passage, and the more ambitious pedagogues seek a wider audience than the classroom provides." Hence, he found that "the number of journal articles (about Huck Finn) has increased by almost geometric ratios during each of the last four decades." Yet, despite all the ink-spilling of the critics and scholars, "the work remains inviolable and open--as do all genuine classics."

Robert J. Huggett, associate professor of marine science, has been elected to a three-year term on the Editorial Board of the "Journal of Environmental Toxicology and Chemistry." The journal is devoted to the fate, transport and effects of environmental perturbations systems, including humans.

Dave Derrick, instructor of physical education and assistant track coach, was a lecturer at the North Carolina Track Athletic Congress Clinic held at North Carolina State University Dec. 21-22. His topics were "Cues on Shot Putting" and "Coaching the High School Discus Thrower."

Roger W. Smith, professor of government, presented a paper on the politics of genocide at the American Political Science Association convention in Washington in September. The essay entitled "Human Destructiveness and Politics: The Twentieth Century as an Age of Genocide," will be published by Greenwood Press in early 1985 in a volume on The Age of Genocide, edited by Dobkowski and Wallimann. A review of John Walton's Reluctant Rebels: Comparative Studies in Revolution and Underdevelopment appeared in the October 1984, issue of Perspective. An article on the Berkeley Rebellion and its place within contemporary American politics and education appeared in the Commentary section of the Daily Press on Nov. 18, 1984.

Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology, attended the annual meeting of the American Anthropological Association held in Denver, Colorado, Nov. 14-18, 1984, where he organized and presided over a symposium on "The Anthropology of War and Peace: Conflict, Diplomacy, and the Global System" and organized and presided over informal sessions dealing with third world anthropology and current research in Philippine anthropology. The peace symposium was sponsored by the Association for Anthropological Diplomacy and the Association of Third World Anthropologists, both founded by Dr. Zamora. During the meeting, he organized a dinner program to honor three outstanding anthropologists from the U.S. and the Philippines: he conferred the Thomas Jefferson Award in International Anthropology on Dr. Cora Du Bois, professor emerita of anthropology from Harvard, the Distinguished Service Award on Dr. George Spindler, professor emeritus of Stanford, and Dr. Alfredo V. Lagmay of the Philippines. He read a paper in the peace symposium entitled "Culture and Diplomacy: The United States Peace Corps in the Philippines." Along with Professor Mary Ann Medlin, assistant professor of anthropology, he exhibited copies of the international journal Studies in Third World Societies, co-edited by Vinson H. Sutlive, Jr., and Nathan Altshuler, both of the department of anthropology.

Robert C. Palmer, assistant professor in the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, has been awarded the Herbert Baxter Adams prize for an American author's first substantial book on European history. The honor was given for Professor Palmer's book, "The County Courts of Medieval England, 1150-1350," at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association in Chicago, Dec. 28. Professor Palmer is Adler Fellow in the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at the College.

Robert J. Orth, associate professor of marine science, has recently co-authored a paper entitled "The Effects of Oil on Seagrass Ecosystems" which appeared in the book Restoration of Habitats Impacted by Oil Spills; a Butterworth Publication.

John F. Lavach, professor of education, delivered a lecture entitled "Human Growth and Development Revisited" at the Celebration of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Averett College, held Dec. 2-8 in Danville, Virginia.

Senior Lorac Celva Hintz chaired the national convention of Alpha Phi Omega, Dec. 28-30, in Washington, D.C. Ms. Hintz, a California native, has the distinction of being the first woman to chair the biennial convention since the national service fraternity became coed in 1976. She is also the first representative of a Virginia School to serve in this capacity.

William L. Bynum, professor of computer science, has published, "Nothing but Interruptions: A Breakpoint Debugger for the Aple Ile," in the Dec. 1984 issue of "InCider Magazine."

Sylvia Scholnick presented an invited paper, "Poetry in the Courtroom: Job 38-41," at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Religion/Society of Biblical Literature in Chicago during December.

Public Notices

Students moved back into Jefferson Hall last week. The building houses 185 students in 88 double rooms and in 10 singles. A ramp for handicapped students enables them to live in rooms on the ground level.

The reconstructed residence hall contains the "state of the art" for fire protection, according to Charles J. Lombardo, director of residence hall life. Floors are concrete covered with vinyl or carpeting, and stairs are of fireproof steel. A sprinkler system is present throughout the building and fire extinguishers are recessed into hallways.

Landon Arts Productions is holding auditions for local actors in the Williamsburg area interested in participating in "Tonight at Nine O'Clock." The series of eight original play readings will be presented Monday nights, Jan. 21 through March 11, at 9 p.m. at the Greene Leaf Cafe. For more information, call 565-1779, Monday through Friday, 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity will sponsor a bloodmobile visit, Monday, Jan. 21, 1 to 6 p.m. in Trinkle Hall.

A Challenge

We would like to challenge members of the administration and faculty to display their commitment to the spirit of William and Mary's liberal arts tradition.

The Student Association and the Athletic Educational Foundation are co-sponsoring a phone-a-thon to raise $40,000 for the non-revenue sports program. Last spring many of us worked together for the first time in an effort to save six of William and Mary's varsity sports. Our success encouraged everyone who believes that a diverse athletic program is an important complement to this school's academic atmosphere.

Now funds are needed to preserve these programs and insure their potential for success. The money can be raised only with the assistance of concerned individuals and campus organizations. We are looking for over 100 volunteers who are willing to donate less than three hours each on any one night between Feb. 4 and Feb. 28. Our hours, 6:30-9 p.m., Monday through Thursday, should be convenient for just about everyone.

A little time from a few interested people is all that is needed to keep our varsity sports program open to serious student-athletes. For more information, readers should contact the Student Association at ext.4350.

Sincerely,
Lee Anne Bush

SEMINAR IS OFFERED

The Office of Career Planning has developed a three-session seminar, "Choosing-Changing Majors," to help students make a more satisfying choice of academic major. Topics include assessing academic and career interests, career options for liberal arts majors, and job exploration techniques such as informational interviewing and internships.

Session I will be held 3-5 p.m., Jan. 21, 28 and Feb. 4. Session II will be held 7:30-9 p.m., Jan. 24, 31 and Feb. 7.

To register or obtain more information, call the Office of Career Planning, ext. 4427.

A surprised Patience (Beth Clancy) listens as Bunthorne (Brad Staubes) declares his undying love in the upcoming production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience," to be presented by the Sinfonicron Opera Company, Jan. 24-27, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Call 253-4272 for tickets.

Sinfonicron to perform Gilbert and Sullivan

The student-run Sinfonicron Opera Company at the College of William and Mary will present "Patience," Gilbert and Sullivan's uproarious operetta satirizing 19th-century British aestheticism, in three performances Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 24, 25 and 26, at 8:15 p.m., in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Admission is $5 for the public, $4 for students, faculty and staff. Tickets are available, beginning Jan. 15, at the PBK box office, or by calling 253-4272.

Because its theme is so closely related to the aesthetic movement of the later 1800s, "Patience" is perhaps the most dated of Gilbert and Sullivan's works, according to Lydia Bailey, a senior from Carrollton, and producer for the operetta. But today's audiences will have little trouble understanding and enjoying the play, she adds, because the satire centers on the excesses that accompany artistic movements and cultural fads, both of which still affect today's society.

Director of the production is Zoe Trollope, a senior from West Chester, Pa. Orchestra director is Eric Peterson, a senior from McLean, and vocal director is Laura Ingram, a senior from Nashville, Tenn.

Taking the title role in "Patience" is Elizabeth Clancy, a junior from Reston. Other principal cast members include Brad Staubes, a senior from McLean, as Bunthorne; Mark Aldrich, a freshman from McLean, as Grosvenor; and Elizabeth Moliter, a junior from Falls Church, as Angela.

Also in the cast are Barbara Pedersen, a freshman from Broomall, Pa., as Lady Saphir; Joanne Coppola, a senior from Danville, as Lady Ella; Carol Moore, a freshman from Richmond, as Lady Jane; Kelvin Reid, a freshman from Esmont, as Major Murgatroid; Coy Short, a freshman from Springfield, Col., as Calvary; and as The Duke, Teunis Overwater, a sophomore from The Netherlands.

Sinfonicron was established in the fall of 1965 by members of the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the men's musical honorary fraternity, and Delta Omicron, the women's organization, to combine student talent and resources for the production of light opera. The organization is the only company of its kind and has been recognized by the national level of Phi Mu Alpha.

DR. HOPKINS DIES

Dr. Sewell H. Hopkins, 78, of Gloucester, died Nov. 15, 1984. He was a native of Gloucester who grew up on a daffodil farm operated by his family along the North River. He graduated from The College of William and Mary in 1928 and held degrees from Johns Hopkins University and the University of Illinois.

Dr. Hopkins was a biologist at the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory (now the Virginia Institute of Marine Science of The College of William and Mary) during the mid-1940s, working on blue crab parasites. In 1946, he accepted a position at Texas A&M University, where he retired as professor of biology in 1974. He directed a large research program in Louisiana on causes of oyster mortalities which was funded by oil companies through the Texas A&M Research Foundation. From this multi-million dollar study in Louisiana came the first conclusive studies of oyster diseases in North America. Hopkins was trained as a parasitologist at Illinois University, and this was his special interest in a wide field of marine studies.

Louisiana researchers, under Hopkins' guidance, discovered a new disease of oysters, Dermocystidium marinum, which also occurs in the Chesapeake Bay. This discovery had great impact on studies of invertebrate diseases and resulted in a close research association with Gloucester Point biologists.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY/ AFFIRMATIVE ACTION POLICY STATEMENT

It is the policy of the College of William and Mary to assure equal employment opportunity for all faculty members and employees of the College and for all applicants for employment with the College.

This policy specifically prohibits employment discrimination on the basis of race, sex, color, national origin, political affiliation, religion, age or handicap.

Deans, directors and other management principals will take positive affirmative measures as directed by the Secretary of Administration and Finance of the Commonwealth. Such measures shall emphasize the recruitment of qualified blacks, other racial minorities, women, handicapped and older persons to serve at all levels of employment with the College.

This policy does not permit or require the lowering of bona fide job requirements, performance standards, or qualifications to give preference to any faculty member or employee or applicant for such employment.

Allegations of violations of this policy should be brought to the attention of the College's Office of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action Programs. No Dean, director or other management principal shall take retaliatory actions against persons making such allegations.

Any faculty member or employee found to be in violation of this policy shall be subject to appropriate disciplinary action.

Provost and Acting President

SCATS Freeze

Due to extensive work involving the SCATS network, the Department of Telecommunications has placed a freeze on requests for SCATS lines effective January 1, 1985 - April 30, 1985. Since all requests for new telephone lines include SCATS, unless otherwise indicated, this action has direct impact on departments submitting new telephone requests.

This action does not mean that new telephone orders cannot be placed, but only that SCATS service will not be included. SCATS may be installed after April 30 to the new telephone line, but it will be expensive. If SCATS is desired, the request for new service should be submitted after April 30, 1985.

W&M Athletic Hall of Fame to honor eight alumni

The College will induct eight alumni into the Athletic Hall of Fame on January 26, at halftime during the men's varsity basketball game against the University of Richmond.

Among those being honored are Greg Giordano, '71, one of William and Mary's most heralded wrestlers and three-time Southern Conference champion in the 152-pound class; Dr. John J. Reid, '33, three-year letterman in track and basketball conference champion and record holder in the high jump; Dr. Stewart Sell, '56, captain of the swimming team for three years and one of the top point men during his career; James F. Wallace, '30, deceased, captain of the 1930 baseball team, who led the Indians to state and conference titles.

Also, Dr. Ronald A. Barnes, '52, three-year letterman on the powerful '50, '51, and '52 tennis teams, and All-American; Robert Hardage, '58, won three letters in football and baseball; Mary Jane Miller, '40, letter winner in hockey, basketball and lacrosse, and longtime coach of field hockey and lacrosse; George Pearce, '66, two-time All-Conference and Associated Press All-American in football and Southern Conference Player of the Year in 1965, plus All-Conference in baseball.

The alumni honorees will be feted before the game with a dinner in the Person Room at William and Mary Hall.

Playwright Fellowship offered by V. C. A.

The Virginia Commission for the Arts has announced that the Shenandoah Playwrights Retreat and the Virginia Stage Company will jointly administer a Virginia Playwrights Fellowship. The first will be awarded in June 1985.

In addition to a $1000 cash award, the winner will attend the Shenandoah Valley Playwrights Retreat to develop and refine a work-in-progress. The resulting play will be given a workshop production by the Virginia Stage Company during its 1985-86 season.

Additional information is available from the Shenandoah Valley Playwrights Retreat, c/o ShenanArts, Pennyroyal Farm, Box-167-F, Rt. 5, Staunton, VA 24401; (703) 248-1868. The deadline for submitting a work-in-progress or a previously unpublished play is April 1.

Scholarship opportunity available to students

The government department announces the 1984-85 Koenig-Nimmo Foreign Service Scholarship competition. The award is made each year to a junior or senior student and is normally used to defray tuition expenses. The award this year will be in the amount of $745.00.

The purpose of the award is to motivate outstanding students toward careers in the United States Foreign Service. The scholarship is the result of two generous contributions by alumnae of the College, Mrs. Anna Belle Koenig-Nimmo, Class of 1945, and Ms. Laurie Johnston, Class of 1974, presently a Foreign Service Officer assigned to Jordan.

Applications for the scholarship are available in the government department office, Morton Hall, room 10. The deadline for applications is Feb. 1.

New faculty are appointed, four leaves granted by Board

At its meeting Dec. 6 and 7, the Board of Visitors approved the appointment of the following individuals to fill existing vacancies at the College:

LINDA H. BECKER, full-time visiting assistant professor of business administration, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through May 1985. This is a temporary, restricted appointment. B.S., The University of Nevada; M.S., Texas Christian University; doctoral candidate (expected Dec. 1984), The Florida State University. Adjunct instructor, Florida State, 1984 to present.

JEFF I. CLEVELAND II, part-time adjunct assistant professor of computer science, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985. This is a temporary, restricted appointment. B.S., Texas A&I University; M.S., George Washington University. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 1963 to present.

JOHN GREAVES, full-time assistant professor of marine science/Virginia Institute of Marine Science, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through Dec. 1985. B.S., Leeds University; Ph.D., Liverpool University. Research assistant, 1983 to present, research chemist, 1979-83, Mount Sinai Medical Center.

LINDA A. HUNT, part-time adjunct instructor of computer science, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985. This is a temporary, restricted appointment. B.A., M.S., College of William and Mary. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 1981 to present.

DAVID JOHNSON, full-time instructor of philosophy, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985. This is a temporary, restricted appointment. B.A., University of Nebraska. Instructor, Somerset County College, 1984 to present; instructor, Ohio State University, 1982-83; visiting instructor, Wesleyan University, 1981-82; instructor, University of Connecticut at Storrs, 1980-81.

E. RANDOLPH TURNER, part-time lecturer in anthropology, effective Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985. This is a temporary, restricted appointment. Associate professor, Old Dominion University, 1979 to present; assistant professor, Fort Lewis College, 1977-79; assistant professor, Augusta College, 1976-77.

The following faculty members were granted leaves of absence by the Board of Visitors:

FRANZ L. GROSS, professor of physics (Dec. 1, 1984 through May 15, 1985), to accept the position as associate director of research at the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility.

MARGARET K. SCHAEFFER, associate professor of mathematics (Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985), half-time leave without pay, in order to pursue research interests.

PATRICIA WINTER, lecturer in fine arts (Jan. 1, 1985 through May 15, 1985), to pursue her art work.

The Board also accepted the resignation of DAVID H. CHARLTON, director of auxiliary enterprises and university services, effective Feb. 1, 1985.

College studies child care needs

In September President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., initiated a study to provide the College administration a comprehensive assessment of the need and support for infant/child care programs. As part of the study members of the faculty and staff of the College will receive a survey, which requests responses to seven areas. The surveys should be returned by Jan. 21 through the campus mail.

A study group met during the fall and has gathered information on infant/child care programs affiliated with other colleges and universities as well as those programs available locally. The study group includes Ann Reed, David Finifter, Deborah Ventis, Carolyn Helfrich, David Charlton and Dale Robinson.

Robinson indicated that there have been efforts over the past five years or so to determine if a College based-program is needed and supported. These efforts have usually included petitions of one sort or another. This is the first time that the College administration has initiated a study on child care for members of the College community.

Robinson notes that recent articles on child care estimate that 40 percent of the nation's two- and four-year colleges and universities have child care programs affiliated with or supported by those institutions. The study group also learned that there is a growing interest on the part of employers to provide such a benefit for their employees.

At the current time, the Williamsburg Child Care Center, Inc., occupies College facilities (Bozarth Bungalow on Armistead Avenue), but no College funds are used to support the program.

The Center operates a program for children between the ages of 2½ and 5. The Center is licensed by the state for 25 (F.T.E.) participants, although approximately 32 children attend on a full-time or part-time basis. The Center is focused on providing child care for members of the William and Mary faculty, staff and student body. Several other families are serviced by the Center. The Center uses a sliding scale for fees based on family income. The fees range from $35-55 per week. The hours of operation are from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The study group hopes that the faculty and staff will return their completed surveys.

Running is compulsive to her

While most College employees are eating lunch, Debbie Boykin is outdoors on her mid-day break, dressed in track clothes and running at least 3½ miles, sometimes 5½ miles. An acknowledged running nut, she jogs in good weather and bad, whatever the season.

Debbie is assistant director of Residence Life, and has been a College employee for five years. She is a 1976 William and Mary graduate in Health and Physical Education, with a 1982 master's degree in student personnel services. She began running for fun in 1973 and hasn't stopped.

Her husband, Jim Goggin, is also an accomplished runner in Williamsburg and writes about running for the Virginia Gazette sometimes. They met through a mutual running friend and have been married 6½ years. Their daughter, Corey, is now one year old but will probably be running along beside them when she's a bit older.

Debbie's routine each day is usually the same. At lunchtime, she heads for Blow Gym, where she has a locker, changes into her running gear and takes off in a joyous route through the town. She doesn't travel the same path every day, but varies, sometimes through the historic area, sometimes oversees the committee which plans all staff training for Resident Assistants -- a constant chore -- and she's the one who bills students for damages caused to rooms or furnishings in residence halls, sororities and fraternities.

Highly athletic, she and her husband play softball in the city leagues during the summer. Right now their time is devoted to Corey, a "real highlight" of their lives.

Campus Spotlight

Debbie says, "I guess I'm terribly compulsive about running. I pass up opportunities to go out for good lunches. I don't like cold weather much, and would sometimes like not to go out in it, but something makes me run. I know if I don't do it at lunchtime I won't have a chance after I get home and the babysitter leaves. I ran until the last month of my pregnancy, and started running again two weeks after Corey was born. Running gives you good feelings afterward."

She has run competitively off and on, mostly in lowkey races which benefit causes in which she's interested. She and her husband run together when they can.

Joanne Braxton speaks at NAIS program

Dr. Joanne M. Braxton, assistant professor of English, will be on the program of the 23rd annual conference of the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS) in Washington, at the Washington Hilton Hotel, February 28-March 2. Dr. Braxton will be involved in a session entitled "Reading and Writing Autobiography as a Tool for Self-Empowerment."

The conference will bring together more than 7,000 school heads, administrators, trustees, and teachers from over 1,000 NAIS member schools throughout the United States and 30 countries abroad.

General themes at this year's conference include gender questions in schools and curricula, special issues concerning women and minorities, financing independent education (schools, parents, and tax policies), and how state and federal governments are affecting the independence of schools.

BADMINTON CLUB BEGINS

All students, faculty, and staff are invited to participate in the Badminton Club. The Club meets Monday evenings, through spring break, in Adair Gym from 7:30-9:30 p.m. No previous experience is necessary. Instruction will be given as well as free play. Enjoy the game of badminton and get some great exercise.

out to the edge of town. She runs about 45 minutes, comes back and showers, then resumes her work, rejuvenated in spirit.

"I do it for me, and for what it does for my mind and body," she explains of her addiction to running. "It keeps my stress down; it's a time for myself, when I'm not going to be interrupted."

Back at her desk in James Blair Hall, she drinks a can of low-sodium V-8 juice, eats yogurt, a carrot, and an apple while she works. It's a light meal, but one which makes her feel healthy.

On the job, her tasks include taking care of facilities where students are housed and determining maintenance needs, furnishings and replacement requirements. She decides which areas need painting or repairing. A big project for her was ordering the furnishings for Jefferson Hall, newly reopened to students after a disastrous fire gutted the building two years ago. She also
