

Charter Day observed in ceremonies Feb. 2

The 1985 Charter Day audience heard marine scientist Donald W. Pritchard say that the Chesapeake Bay is on an "inescapable march toward death" and he doubts the process can be stopped.

"It took some 10,000 years from the time of its birth for the Bay to grow to its maximum size," he noted. "It will likely take a time period of the same order for the Bay to shrink and to ultimately die. Our society can speed up or slow down the process, and can make the Bay more or less useful as well as more or less esthetically satisfying during its remaining lifetime, which after all is a long time compared to the historical survival of any particularly societal structure."

Dr. Pritchard, professor at the Marine Sciences Research Center of the State University of New York at Stony Brook and former director of the Johns Hopkins Bay Institute from 1951 to 1973, cautioned Bay states to move now to slow down the sedimentation rate into the waters.

The shrinking of the Bay began imperceptibly about 3,000 years ago, he went on, and farming practices when colonization of the New World began have speeded up the sedimentation rate.

He recognized the accomplishments of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science and its predecessor, the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory, and also credited the Hopkins Bay Institute and the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory for research and the exchange of information among the agencies. He feels that duplication of efforts is not a factor, and that the most important goal of marine science "is the early application of research results to the need of society." The secondary goal, he said, is to circulate findings by marine scientists "in terms usable by the natural resource managers."

Dr. Pritchard was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree by the College.

Charter Day commemorated the 292nd anniversary of the signing of the royal charter on Feb. 8, 1693, by King William III and Queen Mary II of England, establishing the College, second oldest institution of higher learning in the nation.

Dr. Donald W. Pritchard was awarded an honorary degree and was the speaker Feb. 2 for the 292nd commemoration of the granting of the royal charter to establish the College of William and Mary in Virginia. He is congratulated by Prof. Wayne Kernodle, left, and Rector Anne Dobie Peebles.

Faculty members honored by Thomas Jefferson awards

The Thomas Jefferson Award for 1985 honored Robert E. Welsh, professor of physics, a member of the faculty since 1963. Rector Anne Dobie Peebles said, "He has combined the teaching of physics at all levels with a vigorous and productive research career, while, at the same time, serving on innumerable committees of this University. The course for which he is perhaps best known — beginning physics — has been taught to thousands of students with a style, dedication and enthusiasm that are the envy of all teachers. His research activities in experimental physics have carried him and the name of William and Mary to particle accelerator laboratories throughout the world. He is an author of some 45 scientific publications, which have made him an outstanding member of the world-wide physics community. . . . Thomas Jefferson would have felt respect and appreciation for the career of this man. . . . His commitment to excellence in his own work, but also his generosity of thought and humanity of spirit, are legion. He has done much, unsung, for his fellow human beings. On Charter Day 1985, we at the College honor him with the Thomas Jefferson son Award with respect, admiration and love."

The Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award for 1985 went to Assistant Professor Joel Schwartz. Rector Anne Dobie Peebles noted that he came to the department of government in 1981, and "his courses in political philosophy and the history of political thought have attracted a growing and enthusiastic following of students. He has also helped to structure and to develop the College Honors program, and he has led well-received seminars for faculty in that program. Joel is remarkable for the breadth of his teaching and scholarly interests. . . . Students give him the highest possible marks in evaluating his courses. Many come to his office for the help which he gives so generously. They praise his fascination with the subject he teaches, his enthusiasm, his gift for clarity, and especially the fact that he cares about each student. . . . Joel is the rare person who teaches well at every level. . . . Joel is also a promising scholar and a hard-working contributor to faculty governance, but today the College honors him for his ability in the classroom with the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award."

Joel D. Schwartz, assistant professor of government, left, won the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award last week, and Robert E. Welsh, professor of physics, the Thomas Jefferson Award. The annual honors are made possible by the Robert Earl McConnell Foundation, so the College can honor leadership, influence, service and professionalism among the faculty. The awards are made on Charter Day.

All four Verkuils visit campus

President-elect Paul R. Verkuil brought his family to William and Mary last weekend, to take a look at the home they will occupy in early summer, to look around the campus, and to be looked at by the press.

Dr. Verkuil had two press conferences in the President's House last Friday, one for the electronic media, the other for the print media. Both were widely attended by area reporters who snapped many pictures, asked a host of questions and generally seemed to be well-pleased at William and Mary's choice of a new president.

The Verkuils also attended the President's Council dinner last Friday night, and Charter Day festivities last Saturday.

Daughter Tara, a freshman at Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, was looking around William and Mary to see if she wants to transfer here next year. Six-year-old Gibson, a live-wire little boy, was equipped with a tri-cornered hat and a big curiosity about all that was going on during the weekend. The Verkuils flew up from Tulane University, where he is dean of the law school.

Among other things, Dr. Verkuil said at his press conferences that he hopes to be able to teach a class at William and Mary's Law School, if the law faculty will let him; he wants to be president of a college "that emphasizes academics"; he hopes for a "coalition management" team at the College that organizes people in effective ways to aid the College; that a plan for increasing faculty salaries should be made; that he is very interested in attracting minority faculty and students to the campus; and that he believes his age (45) will be an advantage to William and Mary.

Senator speaks

Senator Hunter B. Andrews of Hampton, an alumnus of the College, was speaker last Friday night when the President's Council met for a dinner at the Williamsburg Conference Center.

Carrying out the theme of marine science emphasized for the Charter Day weekend, he praised the contributions the College has made to marine science through the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

"The College of William and Mary is singularly fortunate to have VIMS as a part of this College," he noted.

"It is important to remember that the stewardship of the Chesapeake Bay is in all our hands — scientists, academicians, legislators, governors, sportsmen, watermen, homeowners, industrialists and citizens. With proper understanding and appropriate resolve, the Bay need not die, but can live a long, fruitful life as it provides livelihood and inspiration for our children and our grandchildren."

Sen. Andrews is a chief supporter of the state's ongoing Chesapeake Bay cleanup program and was instrumental in helping to get legislative money for the cleanup last year. He said that the effort would continue, and that VIMS will receive favorable treatment from the General Assembly.

Newsmakers

He and the financial aid directors from Virginia Commonwealth University and Randolph Macon College met in Richmond, Jan. 22, with staff from the department concerning the Virginia Teaching Scholarship/Loan Program.

J.C. Coppes, a graduate student in biology, and Eric L. Bradley, associate professor of biology, have co-authored an article. "Serum ACTH and Adrenal Histology in Reproductively Inhibited Male Prairie Deermice," appears in Volume 78A of Comparative Biochemistry and Physiology.

Volume 31 of Biology of Reproduction includes an article written by J. M. Pittman, a graduate student in biology, and Eric L. Bradley, associate professor of biology. The article is entitled "Hypothyroidism in Reproductively Inhibited Prairie Deermice from Laboratory Populations."

Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology, served as a Visiting Scholar at Eastern Montana College in Billings, Mont., Nov. 12-13, 1984, where he delivered a public lecture on "The Philippines: A Nation in Ferment" and gave six other lectures on various subjects before classes in government, sociology, ethnic minorities, education and anthropology. Besides giving a radio interview, he was also prominently featured in the Sunday Magazine of the Billings Gazette. Dr. Zamora recently served as an external examiner for the Ph.D. degree in anthropology for Utkal University, Bhubaneswar, Orissa, India, and was invited to be an examiner for the department of anthropology at Karnatak University, India. On Nov. 24, he was the principal speaker of the Philippine-American Community of Tidewater (PACT) 13th anniversary attended by some 400 Philippine-Americans and their guests.

Indians nix conference tie

Citing still unresolved differences in athletic policy, George R. Healy, provost and acting president of the College of William and Mary, has announced that the College is withdrawing its application for charter membership in the Colonial League. The nascent football league, which has been in planning stages for two years, presently includes Bucknell, Colgate and Lehigh Universities, the College of the Holy Cross, and Lafayette College.

The issues which separated the institutions, Healy said, were essentially those concerning spring football practice, post-season play, and athletic grants-in-aid.

"This outcome is very disappointing to me personally," Healy said, "but it is clear that there is insufficient present support for William and Mary's membership under conditions which other members of the League believe are essential, and it is unreasonable to expect either William and Mary or the other institutions to delay their necessary actions in the hope that further discussions might resolve the differences."

The decision leaves William and Mary in its present independent status. The Colonial League plans to start regular scheduling of games among its members in the fall of 1986.

Publick Advices

The 27th annual Seminar for Historical Administration will take place in Williamsburg, June 16-July 14, 1985. The seminar, generously supported by the National Museum Act, assists professionals working in historical agencies to improve their management skills.

Students are selected on a competitive basis for this tuition-free training program. Applications and supporting materials must be received by March 22, 1985. For a brochure and application form write: William J. Tramosch, Director of Interpretive Education and Special Program Officer, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, Drawer C, Williamsburg, VA 23187.

British foreign policy is subject of Harrison lectures

A series of three public lectures by this year's James Pinckney Harrison Professor of History is scheduled for this month by Dr. Kenneth Bourne, professor of international history at the University of London (London School of Economics and Political Science).

The first was presented this past Monday on "The Education of Harry Temple: The Making of a Statesman."

On Feb. 11 and Feb. 18 he will speak on "The Immoral One: Cupid Among the Whigs" and "Policy and Principle: The Foreign Office." The public is invited to attend the lectures at 8 p.m., 220 Morton Hall.

Because he likes a little mystery, Professor Bourne says that he wants the lectures "to be a surprise. I hope they will be as amusing as they are instructive."

Professor Bourne, a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, was elected last summer to membership in the British Academy — THE honor for a British historian. He holds a B.A. from the Universities of Exeter and London and Ph.D. from the University of London.

His first book was the prize-winning "Britain and the Balance of Power in North America, 1815-1908," and his most recent publications include "The Letters of the Third Viscount Palmerston to Laurence and Elizabeth Sullivan, 1804-1863" (1979) and "Palmerston: The Early Years, 1784-1841" (1982).

In addition to carrying out his teaching duties at the University of London and the London School of Economics, Professor Bourne has held several visiting lectureships and professorships in the U.S. In fact, he observes that he probably holds something of a record and is "regarded as an absentee" by his colleagues.

He goes on to observe that he is "getting a bit old for it. I've acquired too many books to be parted from them so long." He would prefer "jaunting around for rather short periods of time." Being away from his wife for such a long time makes him "feel regretful."

The separation was not meant to be so long. "The very day before I flew out, my wife threw herself headfirst down the stairs to prevent me from leaving." Although he laughs about the interpretation of her motive, he assures the seriousness of the facts. Mrs. Bourne dislocated her shoulder and broke her upper arm in at least eight places! As a result, she spent three weeks in the hospital and has under-

Financial aid seminar

The Office of Student Financial Aid will conduct two seminars for students interested in receiving additional information about financial aid as well as those who desire assistance in completing the necessary forms. The seminars will be held Wednesday, Feb. 13, in the Campus Center Little Theatre, at 3 and 7:30 p.m.

Elizabeth Acosta-Lewis, assistant director of financial aid, and Edward K. McCormick, director of financial aid, will be available to answer questions, render assistance and meet the applicants.

Financial Aid application packets have been available in the Office of Student Financial Aid, 208 James Blair Hall, since Dec. 7. Students who have not already picked up an application packet may obtain one at the seminars.

All applications must be filed by April 15.

BLOODMOBILE VISIT

The Intersorority Council of the College and the Knights of Columbus will co-sponsor a bloodmobile, Monday, Feb. 11, 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., in the Parish Center of St. Bede's Catholic Church, on College Terrace.

gone regular treatments during the past eight months.

Commenting on life in Williamsburg, Professor Bourne notes, "I have usually managed to pick my climate more successfully. Hitherto I always managed to avoid being in the wrong state for either the winter or the summer."

He virtually refuses to compare American students with British students. He more willingly compares the two university systems. The most fundamental difference," he states, "is that American universities are designed for the benefit of the students; the English, for the benefit of the professors."

Regarding his current research interests, Professor Bourne points toward office shelves covered with stacks of photocopied documents. These represent only part of the 420-volume British Documents of Foreign Affairs that he and a colleague are editing. Besides acting as co-general editor for this project, he is responsible for selecting the documents to be included in 15 of the volumes. He notes that the project was supposed to be finished by 1986, but "I reckon it will see me through retirement."

Meanwhile, he is also writing the second volume of his biography of Palmerston, is editing an English Cabinet minister's diary for the Royal Historical Society, is contemplating how to refuse a commission to write a history of a large English business firm, is composing two conference papers, and planning his holiday in Italy.

When he leaves Williamsburg, Professor Bourne will return to the classroom in London. He notes that he will be "rather sad to leave here if the provisions of Miss Armistead's will are not already known."

Stringed instrument lessons offered

Where will the next generation of fine orchestral musicians come from? School systems are rarely equipped to teach stringed instruments, but a local musician is trying to remedy the situation.

Rebecca Siegel, a cellist with 35 years teaching experience, will be giving instruction in Beginning Stringed Instruments — violin, viola, cello, and bass — in a class offered through William and Mary's Office of Special Programs. The course has been developed especially for youngsters, aged 9-13, and will start on Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Mrs. Siegel stresses that no previous knowledge of music is necessary to participate. "I intend to make the course fun for the kids," she said, "while aiming for a small chamber ensemble by the end of 12 weeks."

To register or receive more information, call the Office of Special Programs at 253-4084, ext. 4047.

Dr. Thad W. Tate, director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, accepts a $500 check from Mrs. Patricia LaLand, president emerita of the Williamsburg Scottish Festival, given to create a fund for books, manuscripts, and other materials for research on contributions of Scots to the heritage of Virginia. The Festival has given donations for the past three years to this fund.

Career Day set for Saturday

William and Mary seniors are very special people to alumni of the College, who extend a big helping hand into the world of careers.

This Saturday, Feb. 9, 63 prominent alumni will be back on campus to participate in the Career Exploration Day, sponsored by the Office of Career Planning and Placement, in cooperation with The Society of the Alumni. The program will take place in Morton Hall, with each section being held three times. There will be 21 panel presentations on various career fields, presented by alumni who have made their marks in these fields.

Alumni sponsor senior workshops

The Society of the Alumni, in cooperation with the Senior Class, is sponsoring the fifth annual "Life After DOG Street" (LADS) program — practical workshops for seniors and other interested students. The program will be held February 12, 13 and 14 at the Alumni House with two sessions each evening, at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The LADS program was initiated by a member of the Society's Board of Directors and is planned by Program Director Diane Hagemann '75, and the Senior Class LADS Committee co-chaired by Chris Walker and Cheryl Sutterfield.

Women's recital set at Ash Lawn

Offered in conjunction with the Virginia Women's Cultural History Project, a recital-lecture on songs and arias written and sung by Virginia women will be presented at Ash Lawn on Sunday, March 3, at 3 p.m.

The Virginia Women's Project has generated new research on the musical activities of Virginia's women during the past three centuries. In the 18th century, women, notably Martha Washington, primarily collected music. During the 19th century, women became more involved in performing, and the Civil War era brought black singers into the limelight. Finally, women began to make their names as composers during the late 19th century.

With the increased emphasis on the study of women in music the accomplishments of many heretofore little-known musicians has come to light. Of this group, the works of the following will be represented in the recital:

Annabel Buchanan (1888-1980) composer, teacher, founder of White Top Festival in Marion, Va.

Mary Howe (1882-1948) composer, founder of the National Symphony

Sissieretta Jones (1868-1933) concert singer, founder of "Black Patti's Troubadours"

Dorothy Maynor (1910- ) singer, founder of Harlem School of the Arts contemporary composers - Undine Moore, Judith Allen

The two singers will be Karen Savage, presently a teacher of voice at Virginia Commonwealth University and Priscilla Little who has an M.A. from the University of Virginia. Tickets are $4.

Dr. Donald W. Pritchard, left, professor of marine science of the Marine Sciences Research Center of State University of New York, was keynote speaker for a two-day Estuarine Circulation symposium at VIMS last weekend. With him are Dr. George R. Healy, acting president of William and Mary, and Dr. Frank O. Perkins, right, dean/director of VIMS. The symposium is the first of such size to be held at VIMS since the opening of the new, spacious Watermen's Hall, and distinguished scientists from the United States and other nations were in attendance.

Cadoria will speak at W&M

Col. Sherian Grace Cadoria, Chief of the Office of Army Law Enforcement at The Pentagon and the first woman to be selected for promotion to General Officer rank as a combat support officer, will speak on her career experiences at 7 p.m., Friday, Feb. 8, in the Campus Center Ballroom at the College of William and Mary.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge. A question-and-answer session will follow Col. Cadoria's talk. The event is co-sponsored by the Department of Military Science and the Office of Student Affairs.

A graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Army War College, Col. Cadoria's assignments have been varied. She has served in company assignments at Fort McClellan, Ala. Orleans, France, and Fort Lee, Va. She has been an instructor at the U.S. Army Women's Army Corps School; personnel management officer/executive officer, Women's Army Corps Branch, Officer Personnel Directorate, U.S. Army Military Personnel Center; and a personnel staff officer, Law Enforcement Division, Human Resources Development Directorate, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in the Department of the Army.

She also served as protocol officer, Qui Nhon Support Command, U.S. Army Vietnam; administrative officer, office of the Provost Marshal, U.S. Army Vietnam; commander, Student Battalion, Training Brigade, U.S. Army Military Police School at Fort McClellan; special assistant to the U.S. Army Europe Provost Marshal and Chief, Physical Security Division, Office of the Provost Marshal, U.S. Army Europe and Seventh Army; and commander, First Region, United States Army Criminal Investigation Command. Col. Cadoria also served as social aide to the President of the United States.

Her awards include the Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters, Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters and the General Staff Identification Badge.

A native of Marksville, La., she received her B.S. degree in business education from Southern University and a master's degree in human relations (social work) from the University of Oklahoma in Norman. Col. Cadoria entered the Army with a direct commission in the Women's Army Corps in 1961 and was integrated into the Military Police Corps in 1974.

Festival planned

The College will be the scene of several events planned for Festival Williamsburg this spring.

The Festival is a first-time venture originating with local patrons of the arts. Steve Allen will be Festival host; artists include conductor Mitch Miller, harpsichordist-conductor Anthony Neman, pianist Rudolf Firkusny, the National Orchestra of New York, and the Musica Sacra of New York.

There will be eight concerts during the weekend of April 20-21. Four will take place on Saturday, April 20, at Berkeley Plantation in Charles City County, and will feature the New York Trumpet ensemble, the National Orchestra in an all-Gershwin concert, the Brandenburg Collegium in Vivaldi's "Four Seasons," the National Orchestra in Beethoven's Concerto No. 3 for piano with Firkusny as soloist, and in Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

On the following day, the Brandenburg Collegium is due to perform at 12:30 p.m., in Wren Chapel, followed by the Williamsburg Consort, directed by Edward Brewer, at 2 p.m., in the Great Hall of the Wren Building. Two additional concerts, spotlighting Israeli violinist Yuval Waldman, and the Musica Sacra of New York, performing Bach's "Magnificat" will be scheduled later in the afternoon.

In case of rain, the Berkeley Plantation events will be moved to William and Mary Hall.

Tickets for concerts, at $5 each, may be purchased in advance by application after March 1 to Festival Williamsburg, Drawer E, Williamsburg.

BIBLIOPHILES INVITED

The Williamsburg Bibliophiles announces its second annual book collecting competition. All students currently enrolled at William and Mary are eligible to participate. First prize is $100; second prize is $75.

Through this competition the Williamsburg Bibliophiles hopes to promote and encourage the collecting of books for their aesthetic quality as well as their cultural value.

Applications and complete entry rules are available from Fraser Neiman, professor emeritus of English, and Ms. Martha Smith, 102 Tucker Hall. Entry deadline is Feb. 18.

Cherie enforces the law

Cherie Millard is the highest-ranked woman in William and Mary's Campus Police. She is a lieutenant, after five years of service to the College community.

How she ended up in Virginia and in police work is a fluke. She was happily residing in Norwalk, Conn., when her parents decided to retire to Mathews County. She and her husband came down for a weekend visit, fell in love with the rural area, went back to sell their house, then purchased one a mile and a half from her parents. Her dad had been in security work before his retirement, but a police career for Cherie was the farthest thing from her mind at that time.

She enrolled at Christopher Newport College, and graduated with a B.S. in biology. While at Christopher Newport College her goal of teaching in Mathews County was replaced with an unbending desire for law enforcement at William and Mary. It took eight months and a dozen applications (the last with a mouse cartoon and a poem) to convince the previous Director that she could not be dissuaded from a career in the Police Department at William and Mary. She went through the required 12 weeks of strenuous training at the Peninsula-Tidewater Academy of Criminal Justice in Hampton and graduated at the top of the class after accepting the position in the police department.

Once she quit here, determined to at least try teaching, but after ten weeks, and five classes of lively high schoolers daily, she realized it was not for her. She came back to William and Mary.

"I love what I'm doing because I love William and Mary," she says. "I wouldn't want to be anywhere else. I have a tremendous amount of respect for Chief Cumbee, and I feel all my advancement in management has come from his teaching."

As a lieutenant, her duties are split into two halves: street supervision of police personnel and administrative responsibilities that include scheduling of regular shifts, overtime, leaves, and special events.

Campus Spotlight

Thefts on campus are the most common crimes, usually committed by outsiders, she notes. That's why the campus police implore students to lock rooms upon leaving and to take precautions with gymnasium lockers holding their possessions. Gym thefts have been cut, she says, by a new ID card requirement, which has provided more control over who uses the gyms and swimming pools.

"William and Mary has a safe environment," she says. "It can't be a closed environment since it is a state school and the campus is open to everyone, but people on campus are educated about crime. We get a lot of tips from students who report incidents and strangers on campus."

The overall crime rate at the College has been cut, while the solution rate has increased, she points out. She credits this record to the "very professional officers," major emphasis on training and the work of a fulltime crime prevention officer.

The largest security responsibilities for the campus police were the 1983 Summit of Industrialized Nations here, the visit of Prince Charles of England to the campus in 1981, and the U.S. Presidential debates in 1976, she says.

Campus police have full police powers and can arrest townspeople as well as students and faculty when law violations occur on College property, according to Cherie.

She is now a single mother, with two daughters, Misty, 17, and Shelly, 14, both high school students. They still live in Mathews just down the street from Cherie's mom, a widow. Commuting to work hasn't been a big problem; only once can Cherie remember being stuck on the wrong side of the bridge across the York River and she drove to Williamsburg by way of West Point.

In Mathews she is a state certified cardiac technician with the Mathews County Rescue Squad and puts in 16 hours a week as a volunteer. Her oldest daughter is an emergency medical technician.

This week Cherie is coordinating a meeting here of the International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators, with the College of William and Mary and the Virginia Association of Campus Police as co-hosts. The study topic is "Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design," featuring discussions on how to design safety factors into structures and the surrounding environment.
