

Beer-drinking age increase will require new rules

What will the General Assembly's mandate to raise the beer-drinking age to 21 mean for the student body of William and Mary?

Officials are studying the matter but have not had time yet to think about new rules and regulations. The action by the Virginia legislature this week is bringing the Commonwealth into compliance with a new federal law that withholds highway funds from states that don't have such a law. Under this formula, Virginia would stand to lose $15 million one fiscal year and $30 million in subsequent years.

W. Samuel Sadler, Dean of Student Affairs, says that a careful study will be made of the impact of the legislation. The program will be phased in gradually, with the higher beer-drinking age going to 20 on July 1, 1986, and reaching 21 the following year, so the Virginia colleges have plenty of time to formulate new regulations for campuses.

Kenneth E. Smith, Jr., associate dean of students, will chair a committee to be composed of students, Residence Life assistants, and representatives of sororities and fraternities, and they will work out details for future rules.

Louis Henkin is Cutler Lecturer next week

Louis Henkin, a nationally recognized authority on international law and diplomacy, will deliver the 1984-85 Cutler Lecture at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary. Henkin, who is University Professor at Columbia University, will speak on "The Constitution as Compact and Conscience: Individual Rights Abroad and at Our Gates," at 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 27, in room 127 of the law school. The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Henkin has been the Harlan Fiske Stone Professor of Constitutional Law and the Hamilton Fish Professor of International Law and Diplomacy at various times since joining the faculty of Columbia. He is currently co-director of the Columbia University Center for the Study of Human Rights, a member of Columbia's War and Peace Institute, and a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Cutler Lectures, which have been presented annually since their revival in 1981, feature distinguished speakers who are authorities on the Constitution of the United States. The series was established in 1927 by James Gould Cutler of Rochester, N.Y., and originally ran from 1927 to 1944.

Moot Court competition on

In the wake of its participation in the National Mock Trial Competition last week, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary is hosting another legal contest, the Fourteenth Annual Marshall-Wythe Moot Court Competition, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 22 and 23.

The public is invited to attend any or all of the tournament. There is no admission charge. The first round will be held at 7 p.m., Friday, and the second round at 8:30 p.m.

Two morning rounds are scheduled for Saturday at 9 and 10:30 a.m. Quarter-finals begin at 1 p.m., semifinals at 2:30 p.m., and finals at 4:30 p.m.

This year, a team of three third-year students at the law school will compete on their home turf with teams from the University of Virginia, Washington and Lee University, St. John's University, Brooklyn Law School, George Mason University, Illinois Institute of Technology's Chicago-Kent College of Law, Southwestern University School of Law in Los Angeles, Samford University in Birmingham, Ala., and New York Law School.

Three third year law students, Jamie Shapiro, Briarcliff, NY; Mark Towery, Herndon, VA; and Mike Sterling, Williamsburg, will represent the host school

In the past, Marshall-Wythe teams have done very well at these tournaments, capturing first place in 1972, 1981, 1982 and 1984.

A distinguished panel of judges including members of the Supreme Court of Virginia, the Federal District Court and Circuit Court will judge each round. Rounds on Saturday will be critiqued by members of the Virginia Trial Lawyers Association.

The tournament program involves presidential immunity to injunctions and the constitutionality of nonacquiescence in judicial decisions by the President of the United States.

Capital proposals on Board's agenda

The William and Mary Board of Visitors will hold a regular meeting here this weekend, and, among other items on the agenda, will take a tentative look at the preliminary capital outlay requests for the 1986-88 biennium. Rector Anne Dobie Peebles says no conclusive action will be taken now, since the budgetary process is a long one before the capital requests go to the 1986 General Assembly in Richmond.

Number one on the "want" list of new buildings is a 30,000 square foot structure to house the department of music. The present facilities, in Ewell Hall, have been evaluated and deemed "unacceptable" by the National Academy for the Society of Music. The building would cost an estimated $3,104,700 and would be located by the former "Common Glory" parking lot. Site work would add an additional $70,000.

Another priority is renovation and expansion of Hugh Jones Hall for the Computer Center, School of Education, Mathematics and Computer Science departments. This work would cost an estimated $395,000.

A third request would be for an additional 1500 square feet for Psychological Services, to add three additional offices, a conference room and therapy room, at a cost of $137,500.

A new intramural/recreational sports center costing $3,944,100 is suggested for the new campus where most of the students live. This would permit the old Blow Gym to be remodeled in later years for other usage.

Other capital projects to be reviewed by the Board this weekend include: enclosing bicycle parking space at the Law School to provide Placement and Seminar Rooms at $358,000; conversion of a seminar room at Rogers Hall for use as a laboratory, $81,000; construction of a 15,000 square foot dormitory at the Law School, providing 75 rooms, at an approximate cost of $1,300,000; renovation of Tyler Hall for use as an International House of Studies, at $1,250,000; major repair and maintenance to mechanical systems at the College, including electrical, heating, and air-conditioning; making the Campus Center, Hugh Jones and Ewell Halls accessible to the handicapped, about $165,000; upgrading the campus telecommunication system network, Phase I, $300,000; construction of intramural playing fields behind the Commons, $165,000; and pre-planning for multilevel parking decks near the power plant, $18,000; plus pre-planning the renovation of Blow Gym for alternate use, $30,000. Other pre-planning or suggested renovations are on the list of 23 proposed capital projects, which would cost an estimated $12.7 million should they be approved and funded by the General Assembly.

Choir plans spring tour

The William and Mary Choir will begin its spring tour on March 17, traveling from Virginia to Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland for appearances.

The 77-member choir is under the direction of Frank T. Lendrim, professor of music. Concerts will also feature the Men of the Choir and the Botetourt Chamber singers. The repertoire includes sacred works, classical motets, English and German folk songs, and "Mass in G Minor" by Ralph Vaughan-Williams.

The itinerary is as follows: March 17, Hampton Baptist Church, 40 Kingsway Mall, 7 p.m.; March 21, Christian Community Presbyterian Church, Bowie, Md.; March 22, First Presbyterian Church, Strasburg, Pa.; March 24, Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, N.Y.; and First Presbyterian Church, Sag Harbor, N.Y.; March 25, Vienna Presbyterian Church, Vienna, Va.

MUSIC FOR TUESDAY

Good grief! Last week's News carried a bad error on page one, mystifying readers who may not know exactly which date the Quintet of the Americas is presenting a concert at Phi Beta Kappa Hall. It's Tuesday, Feb. 26 at 8:15 p.m. If you show up on Wednesday, as the News advised in one story, you will miss all the music. Get your tickets at the box office, or call ahead for reservations to extension 4557, and be there Tuesday. You don't want to miss hearing the Quintet perform Steven Mackey's "Quintet in Two Parts." Professor Mackey is a member of the College music department.

Emily Clark

Emily A. Clark plans recital

Emily A. Clark, a music education senior from Richmond, will present a voice recital Saturday, Feb. 23, in the Williamsburg Regional Library Theatre at 3 p.m. The public is invited without charge.

She is a member of Delta Omicron honorary music fraternity, Kappa Delta sorority, the William and Mary Choir, the Botetourt Chamber Singers, and serves as senior warden of the Canterbury Association.

At the college she has won the Gladys I. Clark and the Carl A. Fehr Scholarships.

After graduation, she plans to be a music teacher, specializing in choral music.

Newsmakers

Three graduate students from the American Studies Program, Ann Smart, William Pittman, and John Broadwater, presented papers at the Society for Historical Archaeology conference in Boston, January 9-13: Ann Morgan Smart and George L. Miller "Eighteenth Century Ceramic Classification: The Merchants"; William E. Pittman and S. Kathleen Pepper, "Wine Bottle Morphology of the Peyton Randolph Planting Beds"; John Broadwater, "Sport Divers and Nautical Archaeology."; John Broadwater, "Virginia's Underwater Archaeology Program: Projects and People." Broadwater also chaired a session on "Nineteenth and Twentieth Century Sites and Surveys" and was elected to the Board of Directors of the Advisory Council on Underwater Archaeology.

Dr. Ismail H. Abdalla, assistant professor of history, was invited to participate in a panel on "Humanities in the Third World" in the Southern Humanities Conference held at Atlanta, January 31-February 2. The contribution made by the panel to the general understanding of the subject was a welcome departure from the untested theory that the humanities has always been exclusively Western. Dr. Abdalla read a paper on the sociological philosophy and the humanistic thinking of the 14th century North African historian Ibn Khaldun.

Last month Dr. Abdalla and Dr. Sarah Hughes of the Hampton University organized a two-day session as a follow-up to their 1984 summer workshop on "Teaching Ideas about Africa in World History" designed for high school teachers in Virginia and neighboring states. Teachers and superintendents who participated in the summer workshop came back to Hampton to relate their own experience regarding how successfully they had integrated into world history courses what they had learned during the summer.

Gary C. DeFotis, associate professor of chemistry, delivered an invited seminar on some of his recent work to the chemistry department of Georgetown University, February 7. "Some Recent Examples of Unusual Magnetic Model System."

Stewart Ware, professor of biology, was co-author of two recent articles on forest ecology. "Edaphic Factors and Vegetation in the Piedmont Lowland of Southeastern Pennsylvania" appeared in Castanea 49: (4): 147-156, with Paul Kasmer and John Kasmer (University of Vermont) as co-authors.

"The Vegetation of the Balsam Mountains of Southwest Virginia: A Phytosociological Study" appeared in Bulletin of the Torrey Botanical Club 111 (3) 287-300, with R. D. Rheinhardt, M. A. '81, as co-author.

Scientists from the Virginia Institute of Marine Science participated in the National Symposium on the Soft-Shelled Crab Fishery at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Biloxi, Miss. Feb. 12 and 13.

William DuPaul, Associate Professor of Marine Science and Head, Marine Advisory Services, chaired a session and presented lectures both days relating to Sea Grant's commitment to the soft crab industry and the Virginia Sea Grant College Program.

Mike Oesterling, Marine Scientist, Marine Advisory Services, reported on state activities and Willard Van Engel, Professor of Marine Science and Head, Crustaceology Department, was speaker for an open forum.

Norma R. Chandler, Director of Purchases and Stores, is to serve on an advisory committee as a liaison for the purpose of helping the Department of General Services/Division of Purchases and Supply to better serve all state agencies and institutions. The agencies she will represent are as follows: The College of William and Mary, Christopher Newport College, Norfolk State, Old Dominion University and Virginia State. The advisory committee is to be made up of nine other purchasing officers serving as liaison for agencies near their area to cover the entire state purchasing network. The meetings are to be held in April and October in Richmond.

Victoria A. Woodbury, lecturer of Russian in the Department of Modern Languages and Literature, chaired a literary section on Russian poetry at the Annual Convention of the Association of Teachers of Slavic and East European Languages, Dec. 27-29, 1984, in Washington, D.C. She has also published two reviews on editions of Soviet poetry — Fishbein's Zbirka bez nasvy, and Valentin Ustinov's Oklikanie Zvezd — in World Literature Today.

Gilbert McArthur, associate professor of history, recently delivered a paper during a six-day international conference on eighteenth-century Russia. McArthur's paper, "Nikolai Novikov and Catherine II: Some Observations," was part of a panel on freemasonry in eighteenth-century Russia chaired by Professor Marc Raeff of Columbia University. The conference, held at Indiana University, Bloomington, was partially funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, and was organized by the Study Group on Eighteenth Century Russia, the major organization for specialists in this field. The conference, brought together scholars from universities in the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, and Israel as well as recent emigres from the Soviet Union. McArthur's paper, based partly on research undertaken in the National Library of Finland, challenges traditional assumptions regarding Catherine as an "enlightened absolutist" by examining her government's harassment of masonic book publishers. The paper is scheduled to be published in 1986.

Ira Gissen

Hillel group to examine anti-Semitism in lecture series here

The Hillel Student Union at the College of William and Mary is sponsoring a series of public lectures on "The Myth and Reality of Anti-Semitism in America," with the first to be presented Thursday, Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre at Swem Library.

The speaker will be Ira Gissen of Richmond, director of the North Carolina and Virginia region of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. His subject is "The Changing Face of Anti-Semitism in America." The public is invited at no charge.

Gissen began his career in 1953 as assistant director of the Mayor's Commission on Group Relations in Newark, N.J., then joined the Community Affairs department of the American Jewish Committee as assistant director for Chicago and Milwaukee. Over the next eight years, he became area director for AJC for Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Louisville, and then AJC's director of education for the New York metropolitan area.

He has also served in the federal government's civil rights program, in HUD, and has appeared as expert witness before Congressional committees, federal regulatory agencies and federal court. He has written widely on community relations, minorities and public education and has lectured at many universities.

Other speakers in the Hillel series are scheduled for March 17, at 7:30 p.m. at Temple Beth El on Jamestown Road, featuring Rabbi Wiel of Newport News on "The Reality of Anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union," and March 31 at 11:45 a.m. at Temple Beth El, when Rabbi Steven Lindemann of Newport News speaks on "Our Media Image: Reflections on Distortion." A bagel brunch will follow.

Jack Isaacs of Reston is president of Hillel.

Special Programs has job course

Just out of school and not sure how to land the job that's right for you? William and Mary's Office of Special Programs is presenting a non-credit class designed to assist individuals in formulating career goals based on their own skills, interests, and backgrounds.

The course, "Job Preparation Techniques," will begin on March 12 at William and Mary in Williamsburg, with another section starting on March 16 in Newport News. Patricia Lavach, the instructor, is a consultant and trainer for government and private sector groups, and has extensive administrative and teaching experience in the fields of business education, learning assessment, and communications skills.

Participants in the class will prepare a winning resume and cover letter, and practice job search techniques, including researching the hidden job market. Through simulated interviews, class members will learn to respond to questions which arise in actual job interview situations.

To register or receive more information, call the Office of Special Programs at 253-4084, 4047.

Fellowships are now available for undergrads and grads

The State Council of Higher Education has announced the availability of summer fellowships for minority and non-minority Virginians currently enrolled in the final semester of his/her junior year of study who are interested in pursuing graduate education and academic careers.

The Summer Program for Undergraduate Minority Virginians will be hosted by Virginia Tech. The objectives of that program are:

1. To interest qualified minority students in graduate work and academic careers, thereby encouraging their entry into graduate programs; and
2. To increase the number of minority persons possessing doctoral degrees who are employed at Virginia state-supported colleges and universities.

The Summer Program for Undergraduate Virginians will be hosted by Virginia State University. The objectives of the program are:

1. To interest qualified students in graduate work and academic careers, thereby encouraging their entry into graduate programs; and
2. To increase the number of white persons who pursue graduate education at Virginia's traditionally black institutions.

Each of the two programs will be held concurrent with the summer session of the host institution. An educational stipend of $90 per week will be paid to each participant. Funds for tuition, books, room and board, laundry and other fees directly associated with the programs will be paid by the State Council of Higher Education.

Additional information and application materials can be obtained from Dean Carroll Hardy's office. Applications must be received by the State Council of Higher Education no later than April 1. The selection of successful applicants will be announced by April 19.

Chinese physicists visit William and Mary

A delegation of two Chinese physicists from Peking University visited the College of William and Mary's physics department on Feb. 7 as part of a nationwide tour on behalf of the China-U.S. Physics Examination and Application Program (CUSPEA). Hosting their visit were three physics professors, who are pictured with the delegation, along with William and Mary physics graduate students who are studying at the College through the auspices of CUSPEA.

Seated from left are: Zhang Xueluo; secretary to the CUSPEA office in the Graduate School of Academia Sinica; Shen Keqi, Head Professor of Physics and Vice-Chairman of the University Council of Peking University, who comprise the delegation visiting William and Mary; Roy Champion, chairman of the physics department; Rolf Winter, dean of graduate studies of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and professor of physics, and Morton Eckhause, professor of physics and director of the graduate program of the physics department. Standing from left are students Zhi Wei Lu, Mengli Du, Wei Su-Huai, and Yi-Cheng Wang.

Applications for the Direct Marketing Educational Foundation's summer internship in New York are due by Feb. 21. Interns will participate in an intensive 10-week program. For more information, contact Sharon Thelin in Career Planning, Morton 140.

Publick Advices

The Chronicle of Higher Education, the leader in educational newspapers in America, printed a banner headline recently in its paper about the donation of the Goodwin Islands to the College of William and Mary. The gift, valued at $5 million, was made by the Environmental Preservation Company. The islands, located at the mouth of the York River, will be used for research purposes by VIMS and other divisions of the College.

There will be no William and Mary News printed on March 6. This date is in the middle of the College's spring break. Publication of the News will jump from Feb. 27, the next issue, to March 13, so let us have your notices to correspond with those dates.

The Gamma chapter of Pi Kappa fraternity will hold Founder's Day weekend Feb. 22 - 24, to commemorate the organization's 114th anniversary. The occasion will serve as the second annual meeting of the chapter alumni group.

Joseph Turner, a former national president, will speak at a banquet, at which some 125 persons are expected to be present. Gamma chapter, composed of 75 members, has distinguished itself on campus over the years. Among its accomplishments are the Pike Bike Marathon to benefit Muscular Dystrophy, the most successful continuous student-run charity at the College, a national Alumni Relations Award, a Robert Adger Smythe Award for being one of the ten best PiKA chapters in the country, and William and Mary's All-Points Intramural Trophy for 1983-84.

PiKA was founded at the University of Virginia in 1868, and is among the oldest and largest college fraternities in the United States. With a membership exceeding 120,000, the fraternity boasts over 175 chapters and colonies, and some 90 alumni associations nationwide.

Theatre professor Louis E. Catron will be the featured interview on an upcoming "Tim Morton's Tidewater" program over WHRO, Channel 15. (PBS) The tentative air date is Thursday, March 7, at 8 p.m. We'll keep you tuned in if there is any change. Catron will talk about his new book, "Writing, Producing and Selling Your Play" and about his participation in the City of Hampton's 375th birthday celebration this month. Also, Catron will speak of his associations with William and Mary graduates Glenn Close ("The Natural," "The Big Chill," "The World According to Garp"), and Karen Hall, playwright and screen writer for such programs as "M*A*S*H," "Hill Street Blues," and "Eight is Enough."

An evening of circle, square, and country dancing will be held Feb. 22, 8 - 10 p.m. at the Norge Community Center, sponsored by Friends of Appalachian Music (FOAM). Music will be by FOAM, and inexperienced dancers as well as experienced ones are invited. Admission is $2 per person, $3 per couple. More information at 229-4082.

Register with the Williamsburg-James City County chapter of the American Red Cross, 253-1228, if you wish to take a CPR-Basic Life Support Review course Feb. 21, 7 - 10 p.m., a CPR-Basic Life Support Course Feb. 22, 23 and 24, 3-9 p.m., or the CPR-RACE Course Feb. 28, 7-10 p.m. There are certain fees for materials, so telephone for more information in advance.

Students or faculty who wish a place to write this summer should consider the Shenandoah Valley Playwrights Retreat, in the Blue Ridge mountains near Staunton. Full and partial fellowships are available at the 21-acre Pennyroyal Farm. Admission is competitive, based on prior work, and applications must be received by April 15. More information is available from Retreat, Pennyroyal Farm, Box 167-F, Rt. 5, Staunton, VA. 24401.

A seminar on "Toxics Management in the Chesapeake Bay" will be held March 21 at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, Gloucester Point. It is co-sponsored by VIMS and the Virginia Water Pollution Control Association, Inc.

Among speakers scheduled for the seminar are William Cooper, Michigan State University; George Helze, University of Maryland; Elizabeth Anderson, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency; Gordon Lowegart, Allied Corporation, and Joseph Macknis, Chesapeake Bay Laboratories.

Participating from VIMS will be Dr. Frank Perkins, director, and Dr. Robert Huggett.

The seminar and lunch will be in Watermens Hall.

The Chamber Ballet Company will present a troupe hailed as the "Saturday Night Live" of the Dance World, American Ballet Comedy, for a limited engagement March 1 and 2, at Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

When the dancers of American Ballet Comedy perform, laughter swings from giggles to guffaws to outright rolling in the aisles. An uproarious blend of humor, inventive choreography and vaudeville offers an entertaining dance mix. As dancers, they are superb technicians; as actors, the troupe gives outstanding performances. Johnny Carson has hailed them as "marvelous." Although each presentation has roots in ballet and jazz techniques, the end result is always entertainment.

Tickets may be purchased now at the Chamber Ballet 220 Monticello Avenue, or at the PBK box office beginning Feb. 27.

Search is winding up

The last of four candidates for the position of director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art is being interviewed here this week, according to Alan J. Ward, chairman of the search committee.

The final four were weeded from a group of more than 30 persons who had expressed interest in the job. The new director is expected to assume the position this summer, replacing Glenn D. Lowry, who resigned in November to go to the Freer Gallery in Washington, D.C. Interim director is Muriel Christison, former director of the Krannert Art Museum at the University of Illinois.

"Agnes of God" opens this week

To the casual observer, comparing the boisterous musical "Fiddler on the Roof" with a play about an emotionally disturbed nun would seem unlikely at best.

Yet, the upcoming William and Mary Theatre production of John Pielmeier's "Agnes of God," and "Fiddler" present ideas about religious faith in much the same way. In fact, director Louis E. Catron, professor of theatre at William and Mary, says he sees "Agnes of God" as "kind of a bookend for 'Fidler.'"

Catron adds that Agnes' simple faith is a corollary to the one-on-one story of Tevye's religious idealism in "Fiddler." Says the director, "Of course, Tevye's story of faith takes 60 people to tell, and Agnes' only takes three."

"Agnes of God" will be presented this Thursday through Sunday, Feb. 21-24, at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m., Feb. 21, 22 and 23, and 2 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 24. For tickets and information, call the theatre box office at 253-4272 daily 1-6p.m.

Campus Spotlight

Art is important to June

You may not have run into June Siefert Skalak at the College, but you've certainly seen her art work all over the campus. She is William and Mary's graphics designer and does the design and layout for many publications, posters, flyers, play and concert programs, brochures, the Alumni Gazette and Magazine, and the William and Mary News.

What this means is, she is an expert in making printed material pleasing to the eye, cost-efficient, and tasteful. Various organizations and departments at the College come to her for assistance in printing needs and she chooses the type face, organizes a basic layout, adds an artist's touches, pastes up, and creates a unique look for a printed piece.

"I try to incorporate a feeling of William and Mary in the piece if possible," she says.

June grew up in Milwaukee, Wisc., got a B.F.A. degree in art education at the University of Wisconsin, and headed south to work. She has taught art in the Mathews county school system, and worked as a graphic artist at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Since 1981, she has been artistic director of the College Publications office. As such, she is constantly busy in her small office on the third floor of James Blair Hall, working with layout sheets, T-squares, light table, pen and ink, paraffin waxer, velox machine and other tools of the trade.

"I love my job," she says. "It's creative and it draws upon my past experiences — everything that makes a person individual."

She has won prizes for her work at the College, including a first place award from the Printing Agency of America in Virginia for the 1983 Cultural Calendar and the CASE Award for one of the five best alumni magazines in the country.

Art occupies a big part of her life. In her spare time she paints with watercolors and draws with pastels. Her personal goal is to some day convey environmental concerns in art, particularly as they relate to diminishing species. She's aiming for a solo art exhibit locally in the near future.

"I want to be a great artist some day," she says. "I'd like to think I could make a good living at it. Is that a goal or a dream?"

Musing about art, she notes that "those who like to pursue fine arts have to be patient with themselves. It takes a long time to get beyond the technique before you can be really good in your media. I'm constantly amazed at how much there is to know about art. There's a lot to be learned from other artists when you can share in experiences."

June has been married for two years to Lawrence Skalak, also a Wisconsin native, now in the construction business. In a little over a year of spare time labor, they built their own contemporary home at Lake Toano, overlooking the water. Although they've moved in, they are still putting finishing touches on the two-storied house with double garage and south-facing deck. June concludes that "One of the hardest things for a woman to do in construction is to learn how to drive a 16-penny nail!" She expects to decorate many of the cedar walls of their house with her artworks.

The pair has a 24-foot sailboat for ocean cruising. It sleeps four and has a galley for preparing meals. They also like backpacking the Appalachian Trail, and spent their Christmas vacation in Colorado and Utah, skiing cross-country. June has traveled extensively in southeast Asia, and hopes she will be able to see the rest of the world some day.

Hardworking and courteous, June is a perfectionist, striving for excellence. A low-key individual, she stays mostly in the background, doing what she does best — making the College of William and Mary look very good indeed in its many publications.

Student elected by Republicans

Kevin Gentry, a junior economics major and chairman of the William and Mary College Republicans, was unanimously elected chairman of the College Republican Federation of Virginia at the organization's annual convention Feb. 9 in Roanoke.

Over 350 delegates representing more than 6,000 student members from 26 Virginia colleges and universities attended the convention to elect new officers. On hand for the event were all announced statewide Republican candidates for Attorney-General and Lieutenant Governor, as well as representatives for the two gubernatorial candidates. Virginia GOP Chairman Donald Huffman spoke at the Federation's Awards Banquet.

Gentry was the 1984 College Republican "Man of the Year," and has served as William and Mary College Republican vice-chairman and chairman and as state corresponding secretary. In his capacity as William and Mary chairman, he has built the club's membership to 710 students.

As Virginia College Republican Chairman, Gentry will be one of three college Republicans to serve as voting members to the Virginia Republican Party's State Central Committee. He will also serve on the executive council as a non-voting member. Kathy Patten and Beth Loudy, also William and Mary College Republicans, were reappointed as representatives to the Eighth and First District Republican Committees, respectively. In their capacity, they serve as voting representatives of the College Republican Federation of Virginia — serving as a liaison between the college organization and its senior party counterpart.

The William and Mary club also received a first place award in Best Newsletter Competition. Their newsletter, published quarterly, has over one hundred Republican subscribers. The delegation was headed by first vice-chairman William Runnebaum. Thirty-four W&M College Republicans attended as delegates.
