James N. McCord, associate professor of history, was at the historic sailing of the "Godspeed" from the Thames River, London, last week. The tiny ship is recreating the 1607 journey to Jamestown. McCord, researching in England, represented the College at the ceremonies.

McCord sees 'Godspeed' depart from London pier

It was history coming alive for James N. McCord, associate professor of history at the College, when he represented William and Mary at several activities associated with the sendoff of the "Godspeed" on its 6,000-mile recreation of the 1607 voyage to Virginia from England.

McCord, who has been in London this semester on sabbatical leave doing research for a book, attended the special evening program April 29 at Hatfield House in suburban London. The home, one of the many palaces of King Henry VIII is now owned by the Queen Mother. It features a Great Hall where the banquet was held.

The next morning, April 30, McCord joined other Virginians in watching the departure of the "Godspeed" from the Isle of Dogs, across the River Thames from the Royal Naval College at Green-

Commissions go to ROTC students

Not many R.O.T.C. graduates have the opportunity to receive their Army commissions from their dad, but that's what will happen Saturday, May 11, when Michael K. Powell is commissioned a second lieutenant. His father, Maj. Gen. Colin Powell, senior military adviser to the Secretary of Defense, will be the speaker, and will also administer the oath of office to eight senior women and 10 senior men entering Army service.

The commissioning ceremony is scheduled for 11:15 a.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, and the public is invited.

Col. Edward N. Voke, commander of Area IV of the First ROTC Region, will present a certificate of achievement to the William and Mary R.O.T.C. unit as one of the 15 best in the nation.

Acting President George R. Healy and Maj. Gen. Powell will present commissions, and Melvin R. Schiavelli, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, will announce Distinguished Military Graduates.

Lt. Col. R. Robert Goodhart, professor of military science, will give opening remarks and will introduce the guest speaker.

Judge Walter W. Stout III, '64, of Richmond, will be named to the Roster of Distinguished Graduates of the R.O.T.C. unit at the College, with President emeritus Davis Y. Paschall presiding.

wich. He saw Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, arrive and board the "Godspeed" to greet the 14 crew members and give the Virginia vessel a royal sendoff. Also on hand, among other Virginia dignitaries, were Governor and Mrs. Charles Robb and State Sen. Hunter B. Andrews '42. The Prince, remembering his visit to Jamestown Festival Park in 1957, asked Senator Andrews what happened to the replicas of the three tiny ships which carried English colonists to Virginia. Andrews told him they rotted, and the Prince is said to have remarked, "You didn't build them well."

McCord joined over 150 Virginians who went to London for the event. Among them were William and Mary Board of Visitors member Jeanne S. Kinamon.

"I was delighted to have been included in these 'Godspeed' programs," said McCord. "I've been in London for the past several months and have been reading about the 'Godspeed.' It was good to see the ship and to be part of the sendoff festivities."

Contributions for student aid continue to pour in to College

College employees are still giving enthusiastically to a fund which definitely demonstrates faculty and staff's concern with the level of student financial aid at William and Mary.

In the program begun April 16, 172 individuals have contributed $22,939 to the effort, in figures released Monday by Dr. Vinson H. Sutlive, Jr., chairman of the advisory committee on University Advancement.

He announced that his office at 120

Washington Hall will continue to receive contributions, with no cutoff date. Checks can be sent in at any time, and pledges can be made through payroll deduction.

Dr. Sutlive voiced his pleasure at the level of participation, and said he hopes that additional gifts will be made. With current amounts, at least 22 more graduate and undergraduate students will be able to receive financial aid for the academic year beginning Aug. 29, 1985.

Search begins for director

A search committee to find a men's athletic director for the College is at work, and acting President George R. Healy has expressed the hope that the new director will be on the job no later than Sept. 1.

Lawrence L. Wiseman, associate professor of biology and chairman of the athletic policy advisory committee, is chairman of the committee which includes five alumni, the dean of admissions and a student.

Alumni are James E. Ukrop, president of Ukrop's Supermarkets of Richmond and a member of the Board of Visitors; Joseph R. Koons, president of J. Koons Pontiac and GMC, Inc., Great Falls, Va., also a member of the Board of Visitors;

G. Elliott Schaubach, vice president of Todd Electric of Norfolk and a former president of the Athletic Educational Foundation; James J. Porach, principal of Petersburg High School and a trustee of the AEF; and Joseph W. Montgomery, senior vice president of Wheat First Securities in Williamsburg and a trustee of the AEF.

The committee also includes G. Gary Ripple, dean of admissions at the College, and a student whose name will be announced later.

The new athletic director will replace W. James Copeland, who has been named athletic director at the University of Utah, effective July 1.

Membership program set up at Muscarelle Museum

Today's art museums maintain a core of supporters through membership programs, so people who live in areas served by museums are made familiar with and enjoy the many exhibits and activities that go on in the museums.

To meet this interest, the Muscarelle Museum of Art at the College of William and Mary has inaugurated an annual membership program, called the Muscarelle Museum of Art Associates. Membership is open to any interested person, says Muriel Christison, interim director.

Although the Muscarelle Museum is an integral part of the College, it has been funded almost entirely through private contributions. From 1980 these funds have supplemented income from a modest endowment and from a basic annual allocation from the College. The Museum depends upon gifts and grants to support its program of acquisition, publication, exhibition and education, and now annual memberships will help support its public service activities.

Mrs. Christison notes that, "One of the principal advantages of membership in the Associates is that it insures a direct line of information about the Museum's programs and exhibitions and collections. It automatically results in a roster of names of people who are interested, and who will receive Museum newsletters that come out from time to time and individual mailings that announce events. It's a pleasant and beneficial association to establish between the community and the Museum."

She says that Muscarelle Museum Associates will be invited to special openings, to participate in trips to other regional museums, and will be offered the opportunity to attend short courses on subjects related to the collections or to important exhibitions. Also in the

F.O.A.M. EVENTS

Friends of Appalachian Music (F.O.A.M.) invites anyone interested in playing or listening to traditional music to join them at 7:30 p.m., Wednesdays, at the Wesley Foundation. The group specializes in music played on fiddle, guitar, banjo, dulcimer and mandolin and is comprised of students, faculty, staff and members of the local community.

Last January the group began sponsoring monthly dances featuring circle, square and contra dances taught and called by members of F.O.A.M. The next dance will be 8-10 p.m., Friday, June 7 at the Williamsburg United Methodist Church. New and experienced dancers are welcome. Admission is $3 per couple, or $2 for singles.

Additional information is available from Dr. Steve Clement, ext. 4204, or Rick and Karen Berquist, 229-4082 (after 3 p.m.).

Pastore memorial to be dedicated

Joseph Girard Pastore of Reston won't be graduating with his senior class on May 12. When degrees are awarded, he will not be there, but his name is much in the minds of his classmates.

He died of a rare blood disease last fall. When the seniors took on a class project to contribute a large amount of money for Swem Library, they voted to make it a memorial to him. They have pledged to raise, over the next three years, a total of $50,000, the largest sum ever attempted by a senior class.

Now some of the classmates who knew him best, who lived in the Spanish House with him, have collected money to leave a lasting memento of Pastore on campus.

plans for the future are fall and spring lecture-luncheons, with speakers of national prominence who will talk on subjects of broad interest.

Mrs. Christison envisions a couple of day trips this year to Washington, D.C., where members will get a special tour of "Treasure Houses of Britain" and "Sculpture of India: 3000 B.C.-1300 A.D.," at the National Gallery. A trip is also scheduled to the Virginia Museum to see the new wing and its feature exhibition of glass of Rene Liliqne in Jan.

If interest warrants, she continues, there may be some overnight journeys to places such as the Winterthur Museum and Longwood Gardens in Delaware, or to New York, Boston, or the Savannah-Charleston area. Somewhere in the future could be art tours abroad.

Persons who join the Associates will be invited to a special reception planned for June 20 to meet the Muscarelle Museum's new director, Mark M. Johnson, and to view an exhibition of post-Impressionist paintings from the Alex Hillman Family Foundation collection.

There are several categories of annual members, according to Mrs. Christison. Contributions range from $5,000 from patrons; $1,500 from corporations; $500 from sponsors; to $25 from families, $15 from senior citizens, and $10 from students. Memberships are for a full calendar year. Interested persons may telephone the Museum at 253-4003 for more information, or write the Museum, at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185, for a descriptive folder.

Five new members join IEAHC Council

The Council of the Institute of Early American History and Culture met in Williamsburg May 2-4 and elected five people to three-year terms on the Council.

The new members are: Edward C. Carter II, librarian of the American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia; J.H. Elliott, the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton University; Ralph L. Ketcham, professor of history, Syracuse University, N.Y.; John M. Murrin, professor of history, Princeton University; and Alison G. Olson, professor of history, University of Maryland, College Park.

These five historians join the 11 other members of the Council that governs the activities of the Institute, which is located in Swem Library. The Institute publishes the William and Mary Quarterly, as well as select books on American history before 1815.

On the day before Commencement, Saturday, May 11, they will gather at 11 a.m. and dedicate two park benches and three cherry trees to his memory. Bill Bennett, Springfield, a close friend, says, "We wanted to leave a lasting tribute to him, and this spot is sort of secluded, on Millington hill near Rogers Hall. It's a place that overlooks the campus yet is not of the campus, a place for reflective thought."

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pastore of Reston will be present for the dedication to their son, and most of the Spanish House residents and other close friends of Pastore's also be there. A brass plaque will memorialize the spot.

Barry Fratkin

Campus Spotlight

The thing that has impressed Barry Fratkin most during his 24 years of working at William and Mary is quality — the quality of people connected with the College, the quality of coaches and students, and the athletic program itself. He is leaving all this July 1 for a position in executive sales with PCA International, but not without some looks backward.

He began his association with the College's athletic program as a sophomore, when he became the sports information director. Somehow, he put in about 40 hours a week on the job, while completing requirements for a degree in sociology in 1964, and after graduation, he stayed on. He had gotten into sports writing on a fluke. At Douglas Freeman High School in Richmond, his older brother was a varsity basketball player, and Barry was a seventh grader. The coach asked Barry if he'd like a good seat at all the basketball games, and Barry said yes. "Keep statistics," the coach told him. So Barry did and progressed from there. He was editor of the high school yearbook, then worked on the "Flat Hat" at William and Mary, ending as sports editor his freshman year. From that he went into a paid position with the school as sports information director.

Twelve years ago he became William and Mary's athletic fund raiser. Since that time, the Athletic Educational Foundation (A.E.F.) has increased its annual giving from $67,000 in 1972 to an expected $750,000 this fiscal year.

Barry will finish out the fiscal year before he leaves for the career change. "It's busy here for the next two months, and I want to stay until the end. We have the best campaign going this year."

He's seen a lot of changes in sports coverage since he began at the College. When he started, he had to telephone the sports scores to five newspapers on Saturdays — now the emphasis is on electronic media, and scores go out almost instantaneously on a teleprinter.

One thing that hasn't changed, however, is the high quality of the program at William and Mary, he says. It distresses him to hear some pessimists downgrade college athletics, because "William and Mary runs a showcase of athletics, with quality and integrity predominant," he says. "Some people just don't understand the value of inter-collegiate athletics, but when you have students like Mike Kelso and Keith Cieplicki representing William and Mary so well, you feel good about our athletic program."

Barry admires quality program at College

Fund-raising is not a complicated job, Barry says. "First you have to have a good idea, organize it, and execute. There are only so many ways to ask people for money. William and Mary people give because they know the program needs support, and the students supported are all high quality."

This year, he expects that 3,000 donors will participate in the A.E.F. drive, up from around 2,200 last year. There are about 150 contributors who give over $1,000 a year, but the average gift, Barry says, is about $300.

For years, his office was a two-person operation, just himself and a secretary, Jean Beall. Now he has Karen Arwe as associate director. Barry has always taken a personal interest in the donors because of the direct contact.

His family consists of his wife, Winnie Goodman Fratkin, '69, who teaches at Bruton Heights school, Bryan, 14, and Amy, 11. Bryan, a fine swimmer, is one of four young Americans invited to participate in swimming events at the Macabiah Games in Israel this summer. Amy has been president of her class this year at Berkeley School. They will be moving to Richmond this summer, a "going home" experience since both Barry and Winnie are Richmonders and still have family there.

Barry has no regrets about his 24-year association with the College. He feels personally that now is the time for a career change, but warns that he will continue to be seen at William and Mary athletic events, and is still going to be a fund raiser for the A.E.F., but on a volunteer basis.

"William and Mary is still my alma mater, and these are still my teams," he grins. "Nothing can change that."

An EEO/AA employer.

The Board of Visitors has presented each retiree with a resolution:

William B. Spong, Jr.

WILLIAM B. SPONG, JR.
MARSHALL-WYTHE
SCHOOL OF LAW

Dean and Dudley Warner Woodbridge Professor of Law since 1976, William B. Spong, Jr., came to William and Mary after a career of special distinction in the service of Virginia's people. His achievement as dean has been to give life to a dream, cherished by many through years of adversity, that the study of law at William and Mary would one day achieve a measure of the greatness envisioned by its founders.

Few areas of the Law School have been left untouched by his unrelenting commitment to excellence. His leadership is reflected in a magnificent new law building, a chapter of Order of the Coif, a two-fold increase in the law library collection and the creation of a Bill of Rights Institute.

Perhaps his most significant contribution to the Law School he loves and has led is that legal education at William and Mary reflects an equal commitment to intellectual excellence and moral values. Dean Spong's own career embodies the union of an able mind and high principles. The Law School he has built expresses the essence of the man.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of William B. Spong, Jr.; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his ten years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for William B. Spong, Jr., from Dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and Dudley Warner Woodbridge Professor of Law to Dudley Warner Woodbridge Professor of Law, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to William B. Spong, Jr., with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

RAYMOND W. SOUTHWORTH
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS

Raymond W. Southworth, having completed 19 years of service on the faculty of Yale University, joined the faculty of the College in 1966 as a Professor of Mathematics and as the first Director of the Computer Center. He holds the degree of Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Worcester Polytechnic Institute and the degrees of Master and Doctor of Engineering from Yale University. He has coauthored a book on numerical methods and has published numerous research papers in the field of chemical engineering.

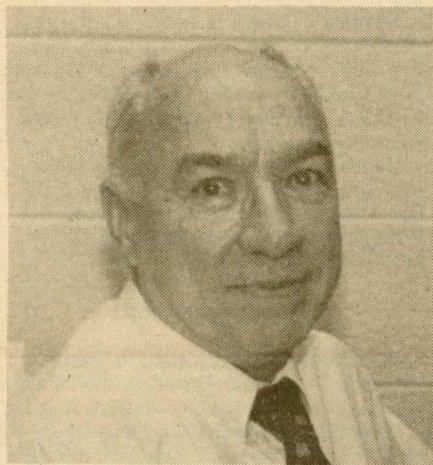

As the first Director of the Computer Center, he provided the leadership and pioneering efforts required to establish a truly regional center for computing in the Peninsula area, serving not only the College, but also Norfolk State University, Christopher Newport College and Old Dominion University. He carefully guided the growth of the Computer Center through those critical years. Almost a decade later when the need arose for our neighboring institutions to develop their own on-campus computing facilities, he was actively involved in nurturing their development.

After completing his tenure as Director of the Computing Center in 1981, he became more deeply involved in the activities of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, continuing to teach his well-respected course in numerical analysis and developing a keen interest in techniques for effectively teaching calculus.

He has given numerous talks on topics in numerical methods and computer science and has served as a National Speaker for the Association for Computing Machinery. He has been active at professional meetings and most recently has presented an invited talk at a national meeting of the Society for Computer Simulation.

He has been a highly valued and respected colleague. His integrity and personal dedication will be missed by students and faculty alike.

Raymond W. Southworth

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of Raymond W. Southworth; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his 19 years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Raymond W. Southworth from Professor of Mathematics to Professor of Mathematics, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Southworth with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

WILLIAM J. MADDOCKS
BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

William J. Maddocks, Captain, U.S. Navy, Retired, after a distinguished career in the service of his country, first became affiliated with the School of Business Administration, College of William and Mary, as a part-time adjunct professor in September 1970 and the following year joined the School of Business Administration faculty as a full-time member.

During his tenure at the College of William and Mary he advanced through the academic ranks from Assistant Professor to Professor, conducting research and teaching in his specialty areas of Production, Operations Management, Procurement, and Management Information Systems, earning the respect and confidence of colleagues and students alike.

Professor Maddocks contributed significantly of his time and skills to the development of specialty programs in his field for area business concerns, thus advancing recognition for and the reputation of the School of Business Administration during his years as a faculty member. He diligently served on numerous committees of both school and university, bringing his experienced judgment to the many problems and opportunities facing both school and university.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of Professor Maddocks; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his 14 years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Professor Maddocks from Professor of Business Administration to Professor of Business Administration, Emeritus.

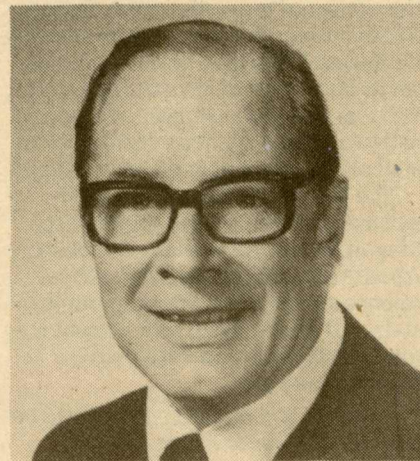

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Maddocks with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

F. DONALD TRUESDELL
DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

F. Donald Truesdell joined the William and Mary faculty in 1960 after seven years of teaching at the University of Washington at Pullman, Wash. He received his bachelor's and two master's degrees from the University of Michigan, and his doctorate from the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester.

At William and Mary he has taught a variety of music courses, and he has always had great interest and concern for the musical life of the College and community. For thirteen years, 1960-73, he was the Chairman of the Music Department. During that time he was in charge of the Collegium Musicum Concert Series.

Of particular importance in his teaching career has been the piano: this interest has taken many forms such as giving numerous piano recitals, teaching piano and the whole subject of piano pedagogy, composing and performing original music for the piano, and for several years at William and Mary sponsoring a summer piano workshop for piano teachers. He also has strong interest in American Music and furthering its cause. Paralleling this interest in American Music has been his devotion to Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the professional musical fraternity, which has a chapter at William and Mary. For many years he was the faculty sponsor of this fraternity, which involved attending weekly meetings, going to local and national meetings and conventions, and being much interested in and supportive of the local chapter's musical activities. For many years Dr. Truesdell also has been a member of the Music Teachers National Association and has held offices at the regional and national level in that organization.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of F. Donald Truesdell; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his 25 years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Professor F. Donald Truesdell from Professor of Music to Professor of Music, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor F. Donald Truesdell with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

Willard A. Van Engel

WILLARD A. VAN ENGEL
SCHOOL OF MARINE SCIENCE

Willard A. Van Engel, the last of a trio of estuarine biologists first employed by the School of Marine Science (then the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory) in the mid- to late-1940s, has completed nearly 40 years of service to the Commonwealth.

Professor Van Engel is nationally recognized for his advancements in knowledge of the biology of the blue crab, Callinectes sapidus, and in development of the catch statistics necessary for prediction of abundance in the important fishery of Chesapeake Bay. His meticulous guidance of graduate students having primary interests in crustaceology has resulted in a cadre of highly placed and successful alumni, distributed among administrative, academic and research pursuits.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Visitors acknowledges the retirement of Willard A. Van Engel; expresses its great appreciation to him for the many contributions he has made to the Faculty and the College of William and Mary; and approves, with deep gratitude for his 39 years of devoted service to the university, a change in status for Professor Van Engel from Professor of Marine Science to Professor of Marine Science, Emeritus.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be delivered to Professor Van Engel with best wishes for continuing and creative work in the years ahead.

Academy of Sciences to hold meeting

About 500 scientists from colleges, universities and industries across Virginia will gather at the College Wednesday through Friday, May 15-17, for the 63rd annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Sciences.

Among the paper topics to be presented are: the interaction of acid rain with surface rocks in Virginia; experiments with exotic atoms; a study of Norfolk's wetlands; reproduction of the copperhead snake; and the interaction of stress, adrenals and vitamin C.

"Pollution in the Chesapeake Bay" is the subject of the conference's Sydney Negus Memorial Lecture, to be given by Dr. Robert J. Huggett, associate professor in the School of Marine Science at William and Mary. Huggett will speak at 9 p.m., Thursday, May 16, in Rogers Hall on the William and Mary campus.

The Virginia Junior Academy of Science will hold its annual meeting May 14-16, also at William and Mary. About 1,000 outstanding high school science students from throughout the state will attend. They will present a total of 535 papers on their own research projects.

A total of 375 research papers will be presented to the senior academy.

W&M Magazine wins gold medal

For the second straight year, the William and Mary Magazine has been judged one of the five best collegiate magazines in the nation by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

CASE gave out five gold medals, two silver medals, and four bronze medals in the competition which bases its award on editorial, design and photographic excellence.

The judges for the College Magazine category were Daniel Okrent, editor of New England Monthly; Richard Todd, president of Houghton Mifflin's Richard Todd Books; and James R. Gaines, assistant managing editor of People Magazine. John T. Bethell, editor of Harvard Magazine, served as chairman of the competition.

The William and Mary Magazine is published by the Society of the Alumni and is mailed to all contributors to the College. Its editor is H. Westcott Cunningham '43, executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni. S. Dean Olson serves as associate editor and June Skalak is the magazine's artist. Sylvia Colston is the compositor for the magazine while Mary Ann Williamson serves as editorial assistant.

Watkins is honored by Governor

Hays T. Watkins, chairman of the board of CSX, and a member of the Board of Visitors of William and Mary, is the recipient of one of 1985's ten Governor's Awards for the Arts. He will be honored May 18 in Richmond at a presentation by author Tom Wolfe.

He was cited for the corporation's broad support of the arts, thus greatly influencing the giving patterns of corporate and individual sponsors. CSX has given more than $1 million to the arts in the last few years. Some of the organizations which have benefited from CSX's generosity include the Virginia Center for the Performing Arts, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, the Richmond

Symphony, the School of the Richmond Ballet, and the Virginia Commonwealth University Kennedy Center Terrace Concerts. Recently, CSX Corporation began an "Arts Works for Virginia" program which will involve the College of William and Mary, as well as Richmond art dealers and galleries. The program focuses on Virginia artists with the theme, "Virginia Landscapes." The collection will be displayed at CSX corporation headquarters, Richmond.

Watkins notes, "At CSX, we think it is part of our corporate responsibility to give back to the community in which we live and work. Supporting the arts is a very real way to improve the quality of life in a community."
