The Earl Gregg Swem Library at the College of William and Mary has obtained, at auction with private funds, a Thomas Jefferson letter to James Madison, which refers to the early years of the Marshall-Wythe school at the College.

The acquisition of this letter, says Librarian John Haskell, is important because it provides a unique contemporary view of the early days of the law school. The letter will be added to the Jefferson collection in Swem Library's Manuscripts and Rare Books Department.

PBK Graduate wins CPA Award

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate in biology who decided to change career directions has done equally well in his second career field.

John Kevin King, a 1978 graduate in biology, will receive an Elijah Watts Sells certificate Sept. 20 from the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants as runner up to William and Mary's Lauri Bell, highest scorer in this spring's four-part examination.

King, who lives in Charleston, W. Va., was not available for comment. A member of a medical family, he started his education toward continuing that tradition, but decided it wasn't for him. He returned to William and Mary in 1983 and studied accounting for two years.

The first- and second-place ratings achieved by William and Mary students gives the College a top rating in the competition. The third-place winner was from Penn State.

The awards, made to the students who gain the three highest scores in the CPA exam, were originated in 1923 by the American Council of CPAs. A total of 126 awards are made nationwide. This year 67,269 candidates took all or part of the CPA exam.

Lecture by Bachrach set for Sept. 24

Members of the College and the Williamsburg communities are invited to an illustrated lecture on "The World of King William and Queen Mary," at 4 p.m., Sept. 24 in Morton Hall, room 220.

A. G. H. Bachrach of the University of Leiden in Holland will discuss the accession of William and Mary to the English throne in the Glorious Revolution of 1688-1689. His remarks and accompanying illustrations will give a historical introduction to the English and Dutch worlds that shaped those events

Written July 26, 1780, from Richmond, it is one of the earliest Jefferson letters in the College's manuscript collection. The first chair of law in the United States was established by Jefferson in December 1779, when he reorganized the College into a university. Jefferson was then governor of Virginia and a member of the Board of Visitors of the College. George Wythe, signer of the Declaration of Independence, became the first Professor of Law and Police; John Marshall was one of his early students.

Governor Jefferson writes: "Our new institution at the college has had a success which has gained it universal applause. Wythe's school is numerous. They hold weekly courts and assemblies in the capitol. The professors join in it; and the young men dispute with elegance, method and learning. This single school by throwing from time to time new hands well principled and well informed into the legislature will be of infinite value."

Over the years, many law graduates have served in public office. George Wythe had approximately 40 students in his classes in the spring of 1780, including Marshall, whose law notes are in Swem Library. "Contemporary references to the embryonic law school remain scarce," says Haskell. "Jefferson's attitude in 1780 shows his hoped-for dream for the College."

Johnson helps at whale dig

Gerry Johnson, professor of geology, is currently serving as consultant on a site in Hampton where giant whale bones, believed to be several million years old, have been uncovered at the city landfill.

Johnson is an old hand at "whaling." In 1971 he helped dig up ancient whale bones from the Dellinger's pit near Langley Air Force Base. In 1976 he was again called on for his expertise in the field to identify whale bones unearthed along South Henry Street in Williamsburg by a C&P Telephone Company crew.

Working with George Burbanck, professor of geology at Hampton University who is heading the dig, Johnson says he is looking forward to working on the dig as a cooperative effort with Hampton University in which students from both universities will participate.

Johnson says he believes the bones are that of a baleen whale which may be even bigger than the original estimate of 40 feet. Bones that were first thought to be part of the skull have now been identified as vertebrae which will mean a recalculation of the mammal's length.

Faculty members wishing to rent academic regalia to wear at the inaugural ceremonies Oct. 20, are asked to contact the Registrar's office, James Blair 116, ext. 4245, no later than Sept. 25.

and ultimately produced the Age of Enlightenment.

In addition Professor Bachrach will discuss the plans for the tricentennial celebrations of the accession of William and Mary which will take place in Europe during 1988-89. He will also discuss the founding of the College in 1699. The College will celebrate its own 300th anniversary in 1993.

An informal reception hosted by President Verkuil will follow the lecture.

President and Mrs. Paul R. Verkuil and Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Hickman pose with President Charles R. Longworth of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation on the steps of the President's House during the presentation of the Prentis Award. This year the award was made to the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and accepted on behalf of the Foundation by Mr. Longworth.

CW wins 1985 Prentis Award

The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation has been presented the 1985 Prentis Award by the College for its contributions to the community.

Given annually to honor outstanding individuals and institutions that best exemplify high standards of business practice, community service and strong support of William and Mary.

In presenting the award to Charles R. Longworth, president of the Foundation, President Verkuil said Colonial Williamsburg's presence in the community has "determined the course of the town's modern history and the quality of its life. As an educational institution, it has enriched the cultural and historical life of the nation for over half a century. As a corporate entity, it has brought prosperity to the entire community and provided jobs for thousands of our William and Mary students throughout the years, myself among them." President Verkuil, like many students, earned

Faculty/staff drive nets $28,000

Results of the first-time effort, the faculty-staff campaign for student financial aid, held April-June, are so encouraging that planners want to make the drive an annual event. The 1985 campaign raised $28,000 in gifts and pledges, according to Vinson H. Sutlive, anthropology department chairman and chairman of the campaign committee.

Sutlive estimates that 25 to 30 students can be helped with tuition bills this year, based on average assistance of $500 to $1,000 per student, per year. The 1985 drive was begun, says Sutlive "out of a need to maintain the diversity of students, and out of a commitment to a quality education."

Approximately six months went into planning the first campaign by a 15-member committee. The group is already gearing up for the 1986 fund drive, and will hold its first meeting later this fall.

Airport site sold

President Verkuil executed an agreement of sale Sept. 10 on behalf of the College for the land known as the airport property to the City of Williamsburg at a price of $1,267,000. The transfer of title is subject to final approval by appropriate Commonwealth authorities and ratification by the Board of Visitors.

Funds from the sale will be placed in the Board of Visitors' endowment of the College, the income of which will be utilized annually by the Board for appropriate College purposes.

TO THE COLLEGE COMMUNITY:

Early this morning, a female student in the Dillard Complex was awakened by the presence of an assailant in her room. Entry was gained by the removal of a screen from her window. The student fought off her assailant and, while reporting being sexually assaulted, was not raped. She received scrapes and bruises for which medical attention was provided but fortunately there was no other apparent physical injury to her.

The Campus Police urge that anyone who might have information about this matter contact them at once. The assailant is reported to be a black male of medium height and medium build. No further details are available at this time.

In sharing news of this very regrettable incident with you, let me also encourage students to take reasonable precautions to insure their own safety and security and that of their fellow students. Keep your room doors locked, fasten screens securely, use window restraints where those have been provided, pull your shades down at night insofar as the weather permits, don't prop outside doors open when they have been secured, check the latches on bathroom and public area screens, don't walk, jog or bike alone after dark, and report suspicious persons to the Campus Police immediately. Organize an escort service in your residence hall if you do not already have one and/or participate in the Collegewide ESCORT program. Volunteers are needed now for ESCORT, which begins its service on Sunday at 7 p.m. If you wish to help, call ext. 4235. You might also find it informative to sit in on one of the safety awareness programs currently being presented by the Campus Police.

By following these suggestions, we can all help provide an extra measure of security on campus.

Dean of Student Affairs

Caution needed to maintain campus record

On campus students have a one-in-sixty chance of being the victim of theft, and their chances of being involved in a violent crime are one fourth of one percent. Statistics show that for a comparable population in Virginia, there is less crime on campus than in the average county in Virginia and six times less than the average city in Virginia.

All this is not to say students should not be careful and do things to insure that the statistics stay in their favor, says Campus Police Chief Richard Cumbee. "For the victim," he asserts, "it is no consolation to know that the risk on campus is no greater than it is at home. If they suffer a loss or sustain an injury they suffer physically and mentally."

Keeping valuables under lock and key is one of the first things Cumbee suggests students do to protect themselves from theft. He also suggests that bicycles be securely locked when left unattended, even if only for a short time. Bicycles are the most frequently stolen items at William and Mary.

At orientation sessions for freshmen and their parents recently Cumbee advised new students on campus to make friends not only with other students but also with members of the administration and faculty: "They will be valuable contacts that will serve them well, not only now, but way beyond the four years that they are here," he said. "They will be helpful not only with safety advice, but with any problem a student may encounter."

He also emphasized that the chances of assault are lessened when there is more than one person in the area. "If there was one rule that I would like students to remember," says Cumbee, "it would be this: 'Stay close to other people when you are jogging or even going to class; don't be a loner.'"

For times when a student is alone and needs assistance, the College has installed emergency phones in every academic building. Help is available by dialing 333. Cumbee also hopes students will take advantage of ESCORT, or when it is not in operation, students can dial 333 for a similar service.

Registration is required for bicycles on campus; there is no fee, but there is a $5 fine for non-registration. Because so many bicycles on campus are so similar, the registration number is often the only unique characteristic. Cumbee also suggests students have an accurate inventory of serial numbers of other valuables including stereo equipment, calculators, electric typewriters and other electronic equipment. "We can't work with just scratch marks," says Cumbee. "They are not enough to identify an item for the national police computer in Washington, D.C."

One of the things the police department will be doing this semester is holding informational sessions in residence halls on "date rape," a phenomenon of growing concern. Cumbee wants students to know what constitutes date rape and the penalties and implications for men in a social setting.

No one likes to take advice from the police, admits Cumbee, "but we do have a role in helping students develop independence, accept responsibility and know what their rights are and where they end. We also want to help them to avoid problems and assist them in handling emergencies."

"Our basic philosophy is to try to keep students out of trouble by letting them know what rules and regulations are in effect, but when they do get into trouble, to give them the best professional advice to handle it."

Cumbee suggests that students should take responsibility not only for the security of themselves and their room, but also for others and their dormitory and class spaces. The best precautions are to report suspicious activity, to not prop open doors, to report safety problems like defective locks and lights, and to secure windows in first-floor lounges and shower rooms.

Cumbee would also like the College community to know and appreciate the high caliber of his staff. An officer on campus has to deal with an above average population in a community that has been taught to question everything. "Things have to be done reasonably and with explanations," he says. "When we hire officers, we are looking for people with a tolerance for widely diversified, sometimes international viewpoints."

Campus officers receive the same training as policemen throughout the state, and then some. Campus police officers have received 400 hours of specialized classroom training beyond the basic training they receive at the police academy. The areas of special training include crisis intervention for such emergencies as suicides, although there has not been a suicide of an enrolled student at the college since the late '60s.

Cumbee is proud of the accomplishments of the campus force: crime prevention programs and materials originated within the department have been adopted at many other colleges and universities; the department has maintained the highest or second highest crime solution rate among Virginia's colleges and universities since 1976; over 15 percent of current members have received collegewide employee recognition awards.

Over 25 percent of campus officers are certified police instructors; and department training sessions have been attended by police from many departments from as far away as New York.

John Barkshire, chairman of the Board of Mercantile House Holdings of London and also chairman of London International Financial Futures Exchange (LIFFE) will visit the College on September 24 and 25.

Mr. Barkshire will address an MBA colloquium on the subject of "Internationalization of Finance" at 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, September 24 in room 201 in Chancellors and at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, September 25 a senior course "International Banking" in room 302 of Chancellors Hall and at 11:00 a.m. an MBA class "Corporate Financial Policy" in room 318 in Chancellors. The College community is cordially invited to the MBA colloquium.

Mr. Barkshire heads Mercantile House Holdings of London which is London's largest merchant bank (investment bank). He is the founder and the present chairman of London International Financial Futures Exchange. Mercantile House Holdings is active in the United States through several subsidiaries including Oppenheimer & Co. of New York.

Mrs. Verkuil hosts fall tea

Mrs. Paul R. Verkuil will entertain members of the College Women's Club at the club's annual fall tea from 4-6 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 24 at the President's House.

There will be a short business meeting to outline program plans for the rest of the year, including a mini-series on federal tax reform and an evening of colonial entertainment.

The social period will provide an opportunity for members to sign up for the interest groups sponsored by the club and to meet new members of the College community, including Mrs. Verkuil.

Membership in the College Women's Club is open to all women connected with William and Mary through either their own or their husband's employment. Eligible women who have not been contacted are invited to attend the tea and join at that time. Women who cannot attend the tea may call Donna Stanford at 229-0385 for membership information.

Seafood feast at VIMS

The Faculty Club will begin its social year with a party on the grounds of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science at Gloucester Point on Friday, Sept. 27. Festivities will start at 6 p.m. Various seafoods will be featured. The club expects to offer an abundance of fried fish, oysters and crabs. Also included will be such complements as hush puppies, cole slaw and chips. All the usual beverages will be available. Call Marty Mathes at ext. 4240 or John Oakley at ext. 4296 for further information.

Students plan tours for Parents Weekend

Students will use lanterns and candles to conduct nighttime tours of the old campus and the Sir Christopher Wren Building for family and friends visiting during Parents Weekend Sept. 27-29.

The tours are a new addition to the annual three days of receptions, special classroom sessions and entertainment expected to draw from 1,300 to 1,500 parents and family members to campus.

The schedule begins Friday morning with classes open to parents all day. President and Mrs. Paul R. Verkuil will host an afternoon reception for students and their families in the Wren Yard. Evening activities include a concert by the William and Mary Choir and the College-Community Orchestra at 8:45 p.m., in Trinkle Hall, followed by the student-conducted candlelight tours.

Saturday's events include a lecture and panel series featuring William and Mary faculty and staff. Among the scheduled topics and speakers are:

"The Chesapeake Bay, Virginia's Rivers and VIMS," Frank O. Perkins, Dean/

Director, School of Marine Science and Virginia Institute of Marine Science; "The National Debt of the United States: History and Prospect," William J. Hausman, associate professor of economics;

"If Computers Ever Catch On . . .," Richard H. Prosl, associate professor and chairman, department of computer science;

"Breaking Down Barriers in the Curriculum - Honors, Interdisciplinary and Special Study Program at William and Mary," Thomas M. Finn, dean of undergraduate studies;

"Wars and Lechery, Nothing Else Holds Fashion," Robert J. Fehrenbach, professor of English; and

"Particle Physics and Creation," Robert E. Welsh, professor of physics.

Also scheduled Saturday is general session for parents in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, beginning at 11 a.m.; a lunch on the lawn next to Andrews Hall;

Funds raised for student aid program

Funds that were collected through June 30 total approximately $7,700 and are available to students now, says Sutlive. Funds pledged or given after that date are still coming in and will be available after Jan. 1986.

Some 220 faculty and staff contributed to the fund through cash donations, pledges or payroll deductions. The faculty response was particularly satisfying, with about half of all donors coming from the ranks of professors, Sutlive says.

Donors gave $7,689 in cash, $14,813 in pledges, with the balance provided in capital gifts to endowed funds. Donors had the option of giving money toward college funds other than for student financial aid. One professor pledged the amount of any royalties he would receive from a book; the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa pledged $2,500; and the William and Mary Parents Association pledged $1,000.

Edward K. McCormick, director of student financial aid, says the fund drive was significant, not for how much money it raised, but for the internal commitment to the university shown by its faculty and staff.

A 1.3 million shortfall in student aid money exists, says McCormick, but the financial aid campaign was not meant to close the gap in needed assistance. Instead, he explains, it demonstrated an invaluable willingness to support student concerns.

"We do care," says McCormick. "We are showing that this university exists for the education and enrichment of our students. We should not have to turn away students, particularly Virginia students, due to a lack of financial aid. This fund drive was one step to avoid that."

TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES CLERICAL

The College is establishing an applicant pool of individuals available for temporary clerical employment. Individuals hired on a temporary basis will work in a variety of departments on campus, and will be paid an hourly rate based on the grade level of the temporary appointment. The length of a temporary appointment will vary from one week or less to a maximum of 90 days. Applicants should have demonstrated clerical ability and strong communication and organizational skills, knowledge of book-keeping or familiarity with personal computers. Most positions will require a typing test.

Docents sought

The new aquarium in the lobby of Waterman's Hall on the campus of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science at Gloucester Point, is in need of docents.

The aquarium was established to interpret the marine environment to the public with live animal exhibits, static interpretive exhibits and special educational programs. Docents will contribute valuable services to the daily operation, special museum projects and public education programs.

Volunteers willing to help at the aquarium are asked to contact the aquarium curator, Joe Choromanski at 642-7174.

money for his education by working at the Kings Arms Tavern.

President Verkuil also praised the Foundation's sponsorship of apprenticeships in archaeology, anthropology and history and its support of the College's American Studies Program. He also cited the Foundation's support of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, which it co-sponsors with the College.

Presentation of the Prentis Award was made Sept. 10 at the annual reception for the Friends of the College at the President's House. The award is named for the Prentis family, proprietors of the Prentis Store on the Duke of Gloucester Street during the colonial period. The store was widely known for its high standards of commerce, and the Prentis family members were known for their generous service to the town and the College.

At the award ceremony, J. B. Hickman, chairman of the Friends, reported that the group raised $370,000 last year and is committed to raising $410,000 for the College during the coming year.

The Friends of the College are non-alumni, non-parent individuals, corporations and organizations who contribute to the William and Mary Annual Fund in support of the College's academic needs.
