IEAHC meets challenge of Mellon Foundation

The Institute of Early American History and Culture, founded in 1943 to foster study, research and publication related to early American history up to 1815, has met the terms of $300,000 challenge grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. To do this the Institute raised $200,000 in endowment money to match a $100,000 endowment gift from the Mellon Foundation.

According to Thad Tate, director of the Institute, the challenge was met through a three-year national campaign to stimulate individuals, foundations and the Institute's 700-member Associates group to make new and additional contributions to the organization's permanent endowment fund.

"It has been rewarding to find that the work of the Institute generates such widespread interest," Tate said. This important addition to our endowment fund will help make it possible for our ongoing book publishing, research and conference activities to proceed in an environment of general economic well-being."

Sponsored by the College and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the Institute develops and organizes regional and national conferences and symposia, administers fellowship and internship programs and maintains a book publishing endeavor honored by numerous national awards including the Pulitzer Prize. The Institute also publishes the William and Mary Quarterly, a historical journal of national and international influence.

Next Bloodmobile set tomorrow at Lodge ballroom

The Colonial Williamsburg hospitality and courtesy committee will sponsor a bloodmobile, Thursday, July 24, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., in the North Ballroom of the Williamsburg Lodge.

Although appointments are not required, donors are encouraged to make one by calling 229-1000, ext. 2976.

The Mellon Foundation, which also donated $200,000 to start the Institute's endowment in 1978, defines its aims, in part, as aiding and promoting "such religious, charitable, scientific, literary and educational purposes as may be in the furtherance of the public welfare or tend to promote the well-doing or well-being of mankind." The two Mellon Foundation grants plus the matching funds raised in the campaign bring the Institute's endowment to the $500,000 mark.

Handicapped children are focus of College/CDR Seminar

A national faculty of leaders in the field of early intervention for handicapped and at-risk children, will conduct a five-day seminar, July 28 through Aug. 1, co-sponsored by the School of Education at the College of William and Mary and Child Development Resources.

Approximately 200 participants from across the country have registered for the seminar, the first to be held in Williamsburg by the sponsors.

Faculty members will include Toni W. Linder, chairperson of educational psychology, School of Education, University of Denver; Craig Ramey, director of research, Frank Porter Graham Center, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Sonya Prestridge, technical assistance coordinator, Technical Assistance Development Systems, UNC; Carl J. Dunst, director, family, infant and preschool program, Western Carolina Center, Morganton, N.C.; G. Gordon Williamson, director, pediatric rehabilitation department, John F. Kennedy Medical Center, Edison, N.J.; and Lisbeth J. Vincent, department of rehabilitative psychology and special education, University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Virginia K. Laycock, associate dean School of Education, said the seminar program will be organized with two main tracks, one dealing with administration and leadership, the other with early intervention itself. It will be of special interest to students in the College's master's degree program in special education. At the doctoral and certificate of graduate study levels the College also offers an emphasis in special education administration.

Stressing the interdisciplinary nature of the seminar, Dean Laycock said that the sessions will also draw an audience from the medical profession, social workers and school psychologists as well as students of early childhood education.

Although this is the first seminar the College has sponsored with CDR, students in the School of Education maintain a cooperative relationship with CDR through internships and practicums

Celebrating its 20th birthday this year, CDR has become a recognized leader in its field and its programs have been used as models in other states to broaden the network of assistance to children and their families. Headquartered in Lightfoot, just outside of Williamsburg, CDR, a non-profit organization, is currently providing technical assistance to state-level education and mental health facilities on the implementation of early intervention and working with the "Bright Beginnings" program in the Williamsburg-James City County for preschool children and infants at risk.

Provost to head search committee

A four-member search committee has been appointed by President Paul Verkuil to search for a new vice president for administration and finance.

Andrew B. Fogarty, who joined the William and Mary administration as vice president last Jan., was recently chosen by Gov. Gerald Baliles to become chief of staff in his administration, effective Aug. 1. Fogarty had served in several capacities in the administration of Gov. Charles Robb, most recently as secretary of transportation and public safety.

The search committee, chaired by Provost Melvyn D. Schiavelli, also will include Henry T. Tucker, chairman of the finance committee of the Board of Visitors; Roy Pearson, professor and director of business research in the School of Business Administration; and Charles Lombardo, director of operations.

The committee will seek candidates with extensive experience in higher education administrative operations and financial affairs, as well as knowledge of state budgeting procedures, according to Schiavelli. Applications close Aug. 15.

New Advancement VP is Edward T. Allenby

Edward T. Allenby, director of university development at the University of Delaware, has been named vice president for university advancement according to an announcement by President Paul R. Verkuil.

Allenby's appointment, which is effective Aug. 15, was approved at a meeting of the College Board of Visitors executive committee Wednesday, July 9.

Allenby replaces Duane A. Dittman, who earlier this year announced his intention to retire in June 1987. He will become senior adviser in development at the time of Allenby's arrival and will work with the development staff in planning fund-raising activities for implementation over the next several years.

Dr. Verkuil said Allenby "brings exactly the type of development experience William and Mary will need as it anticipates the challenges of the future." He also noted Dittman's contributions to the university's advancement programs. "Mr. Dittman has assembled a solid staff and created a sophisticated program on which we can build as we look to William and Mary's development needs over the next decade," he said.

As director of development at the University of Delaware since 1981, Allenby has been responsible for designing and managing a $16 million capital campaign, the first in the university's history, and maintaining total gifts in excess of $12 million annually. William and Mary is in the early planning stages of a major fund-raising initiative that will

Jeanne Ito fund to aid students

Satoshi Ito, associate professor of sociology, has established the Jeanne A. Ito Memorial Fund at the College in memory of his wife. Income from this fund will provide an annual award to an undergraduate or graduate student majoring in sociology.

Recipients will be chosen by a committee appointed by the chairman of the department of sociology. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may do so by contacting the Development Office of the College.

Scholar athletes

In a recent news release, Bill Sullivan, director of sports information, announced that six William and Mary athletes had attained perfect 4.0 grade point averages in the spring semester.

The student athletes include Ken Lambiotte (football and basketball), Chris Gessner (football), Chip Brewer (golf), David Janet (wrestling), Jay Rush (track) and Joseph George (baseball).

Campus Visitors

STEP students.

Michael Binyon, bureau chief of the London Times and author of "Life in Russia" was guest speaker at the summer history program "Toward the 21st Century: Historical Perspectives on America's Relationship with Europe and the Soviet Union." With Binyon is George V. Strong, associate professor of history and program director.

Joe Flanagan TV Channel 13 reporter, took a job in acting last week, appearing as one of Prince Hal's troops in "Henry IV Part I" at the Virginia Shakespeare Festival. His solo performance won him a floral bouquet, the promise of another part in the future from Festival Director Richard Palmer and the congratulations of fellow actor Simon Brooking who plays Prince Hal. The Festival schedule continues through Aug. 16.

Three-year fellowship won by doctoral student in history

John Thomas Wren, a doctoral student in the history department, has been awarded a three-year fellowship from the Department of Education's National Graduate Fellowship Program (NGFP).

The fellowship, which pays full tuition and provides a $10,000 annual stipend, will support the research and writing of Wren's doctoral dissertation, which concerns the concept of state sovereignty in the early decades of the American republic.

According to Robert J. Scholnick, dean of graduate studies in arts and sciences, competition for NGFP fellowships is rigorous. "Last year only 80 awards were made from over 5,000 applicants, and I understand that the program was equally competitive this year," he said. "The award reflects both the significance of Mr. Wren's research and his exceptional record at William and Mary."

Wren's research, which will form the basis of his doctoral dissertation, will examine the role of state versus federal government and the evolution of that relationship from the late 18th to the late 19th centuries.

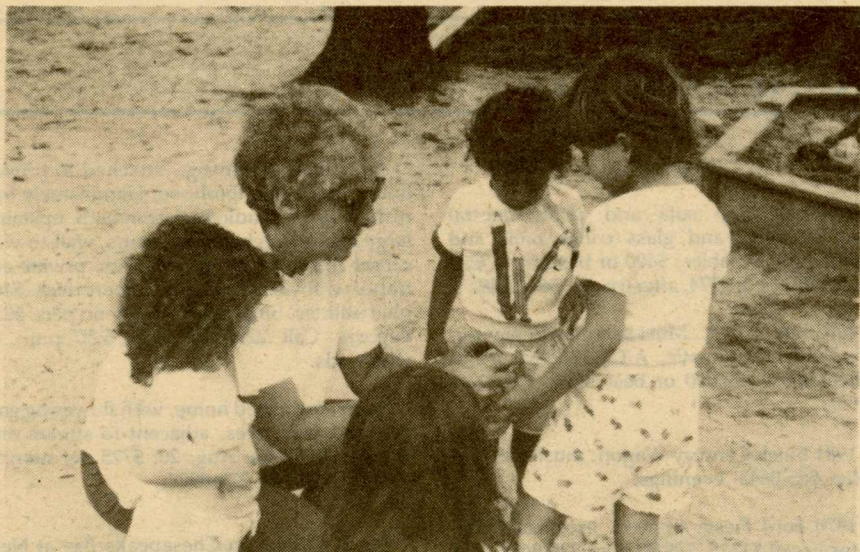

Central to his study will be the concept of sovereignty, which Wren feels was "fundamentally different with respect to the state and federal governments. The states were governments of inherent powers while the national government was one of limited powers."

As the 19th century progressed, the concept of governmental sovereignty was tested and eventually changed by the pressures of the slavery issue, the requirements of economic expansion, and changing perceptions of individual rights, adds Wren. He hopes his study will "lay the groundwork for an understanding of the subsequent turn our constitutional history took in the aftermath of the adoption of the 14th Amendment."

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Wren received his undergraduate degree from Denison University in Granville, Ohio.

In addition, he holds a law degree from the University of Virginia, a master's degree in public affairs from George Washington University and a master's degree in history from William and Mary. In pursuing his doctorate, Wren is concentrating on early American history and constitutional and legal history.

Wren has published three articles on constitutional history during the past year. He is the recipient of the Jessie Ball DuPont Fellowship, 1985, the Society of Colonial Dames Fellowship, 1984, and the Society of Cincinnati Fellowship, 1983. He practiced law in the Washington, D.C., area from 1976 to 1982.

National Academy accredits Community child care

Williamsburg Community Child Care, Inc., is among the first in the country to be accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs as meeting national standards of quality in early childhood education.

Child Care, Inc., is a nonprofit parent-governed center that serves 25 children between the ages of two and six. It was established in 1981 by a group of local parents and teachers with a set-up grant from the United Way. The center stresses parent involvement and the value of diversity in enrollment. It currently rents a house at 126 Armistead Ave. from the College and gives priority in admission to children of William and Mary staff, faculty and students.

In order to meet the Academy's standards for accreditation, the program completed a three-month self-study in which all parents and staff participated. An on-site visit by early childhood professionals and a review by a three-person national commission also was part of the accreditation process.

The National Academy of Early Childhood Programs is a division of the National Association for the Education of Young Children, the country's largest organization of early childhood professionals. The accreditation program, launched in Sept. 1985, is a first in the field. Early childhood programs nationwide can participate in a program designed not only to measure quality, but also to encourage program improvement.

Fran Dorsey, director of the program, can be reached at 220-0025 for details about the accreditation process and criteria.

GALA formed

William and Mary GALA has been formed by a group of gay and lesbian alumni of the College. The organizational meeting was held in Washington, D.C. Featured speaker was George D. Greenia who reported on the development and current events of the William and Mary Lesbian and Gay Student Union for which he is faculty adviser. Stephen H. Snell of Washington, D.C., was elected chairperson and treasurer. Harlan Powell, also of Washington, D.C., was elected coordinator.

Plans were made for future activities, which will include a barbecue in August in Washington and a cocktail reception and brunch in Williamsburg during Homecoming weekend, Nov. 15-16.

New employee association receives enthusiastic support

Over 100 attended the July 14 organizational meeting for an hourly and classified employee association on campus.

Linked administratively to the Office of Employee Relations and Affirmative Action, the new organization is open to employees at VIMS and CEBAF, as well as those on the Williamsburg campus.

Organizational planners have outlined four basic objectives for the new group: to assist in the professional development of employees; to promote the expansion of career opportunities within the university; to foster a spirit of unity and a sense of pride among workers; and to provide a way of communicating recommendations to the administration on matters that directly affect the employees.

A steering committee composed of Doris Underwood, Liz Jones, Gail McClenney, Peggy Miller, Mark Whitney, Margaret Harris and Frances Lemmons arranged the initial meeting on July 14 in the Campus Center.

Gail McClenney was appointed chairman of a constitution committee that will draft a document for presentation at the next association meeting, scheduled for August. Members of the constitution committee include Dan Savage, Lucille Cowles, Betty Kelly, Pam Owen, Glenda Page, Theresa Lemmons, Eleanor Robinson, Joyce Emerson, David Tidwell and Liz Jones.

Much of the initial enthusiasm for an organization for employees has come from Doris Underwood of the Office of Employee Relations and Affirmative Action. Ms. Underwood joined the College staff about a year ago. She formerly worked at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Texas, where there was an active employee association. She says that the St. Mary's association sponsored many special events including an annual oyster roast. The organization, she said, also sponsored enrichment seminars to help employees improve their employment level.

Ms. Underwood stresses that the hourly and classified employees association is not a union, neither is it intended as an alternative to the current grievance procedures for employees.

The new organization, said Ms. Underwood, may in the future network with the Virginia Governmental Employees Association, which draws its membership from employees at all levels of state and local government.

Invitation offered to sailing club

A Sailing Club, located at VIMS, is being formed by the School of Marine Science.

The club is open to all students registered at the College. Membership is also open to interested faculty and staff members of the College in order to provide a nucleus of dedicated sailors to effect continuity and continued interest in the club, from year to year and to help foster a feeling of community within the College. The club will provide recreational sailing and instruction.

The Sailing Club is the outgrowth of meetings held during the past year in which members of the VIMS community expressed interest in the formation of an association to promote instruction and sailing of small, easily handled and maintained sailboats, such as 13-foot fiberglass Lasers or Sunfish. These types of boats are easily launched and sailed by one or two persons, easily righted if tipped over, generally unsinkable, easily stored on land and inexpensive to acquire and maintain.

Those interested in participating in the club are asked to contact Carol Furman, Susan Barrick, Jon Lucy, Paul Gerdes or Kevin Kiley at VIMS. Beginners will be welcomed.

CEBAF schedules two seminars

Two programs are scheduled in the coming weeks at CEBAF. A CEBAF Seminar will feature Peter Dunn from MIT who will speak on "Focal Plane Detectors in the HE1 Spectrometers at Saclay," at 10:30 a.m., Thursday, July 24 in CEBAF, Room 53.

Gerard van der Steenhoven of NIKHEF will speak on the "Effect of the Nuclear Medium on the Electron-Proton Coupling," Monday, Aug. 11 at 11 a.m. in CEBAF, Room 53. This talk is part of the CEBAF Summer Study Series.

Both of these technical presentations are intended for a scientific audience. The Summer Study series includes general discussions and presentations every Monday, Wednesday and Friday during the summer months featuring guest speakers from the CEBAF 1986 Summer Study Group.

Contact Ramona Rickman, CEBAF, 875-7800, for more information.

Writing workshop set Aug. 5-6

The Office of Employee Relations and Affirmative Action will present a two-morning workshop on "Punctuation and Grammar," 8 a.m.-12:30 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 5-6, in the Sit-n-Bull Room of the Campus Center.

The workshop is open to any classified or hourly employee who must process memos, reports, or correspondence. Facilitators will be Marsha O. Hubbard, a writing specialist with WEP Services, and Elizabeth W. Jones, training/employment manager.

Registration forms are available from the Office of Employee Relations and Affirmative Action.

New book out by J. Hone

Such diverse critics as The Boston Globe newspaper and the Rolling Stone magazine have praised the work of Joseph Hone, writer-in-residence at the College during 1983-84, whose new book titled Africa of the Heart has just been published.

As a travel writer for the British Broadcasting Company, Hone had planned to write the story of a 2,500-mile, three-month trek across Africa from the Indian Ocean to the Atlantic, in the steps of H. M. Stanley of Stanley and Livingstone fame. He wanted to trace colonial development and reflect the remnants of European aspirations and African tribal life.

His plans changed when he encountered the real Africa, a very different world from the one that Stanley opened up more than 100 years ago. What began as a travelogue was transformed into a bittersweet account of a beleaguered journey through a world he had not imagined existed. A chance meeting with a beautiful young woman led Hone on another journey beyond the African interior and into his own heart.

Hone is as well known for his fiction as he is for his travel books. Rolling Stone called his spy thriller The Sixth Directorate, "intelligent and superbly written." The Boston Globe described another of his spy novels, The Private Sector, as "First rate . . . enthralling."

Hone was born in 1937 and educated in Dublin. In the course of a varied career he has been an assistant film director with John Ford among others, a teacher in Egypt, a BBC radio producer and an information officer at the UN Secretariat in New York. His novels also include The Paris Trap, The Oxford Gambit, and The Valley of the Fox.
