College honors former governors, legislators

Gov. Gerald Baliles will join a group of state legislators and other government officials for the College of William and Mary's Burgesses Day, Saturday, Oct. 4.

The ceremonies this year will include a memorial tribute to honor three friends of the university: former Governors J.

Lindsay Almond Jr. and John N. Dalton, a 1953 graduate of William and Mary, and state Senator Edward E. Willey.

About 400 state officials and guests will be greeted at a 10 a.m. reception in College Yard in front of the Sir Christopher Wren Building by President Paul R. Verkuil and retired Navy Capt. William A. Armbruster '57, president of the William and Mary Society of the Alumni.

At 11 a.m. a ceremony honoring the retiring members of the General Assembly is scheduled, followed by a buffet luncheon in the Sunken Garden and a football game at Cary Field between William and Mary's Tribe and the Crimson of Harvard University. The day's schedule also will include a tribute to Harvard's 350th anniversary.

Burgesses Day is a family occasion sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, in cooperation with the Board of Visitors and the administration. The event commemorates the historic bonds between the state's lawmakers and the university, recalling the periods 1700-04 and 1747-54, when Virginia's legislature, then the House of Burgesses, made the Wren Building its temporary headquarters.

President sets committee for master plan

A 14-member steering committee has been appointed by President Paul R. Verkuil to work with a consulting firm hired recently to develop a new campus master plan.

The committee, chaired jointly by Charles Lombardo, director of operations, and John Nagle, dean of the School of Education, has been charged with monitoring the progress of the plan during its year-long development and serving as liaison with individuals and groups on campus.

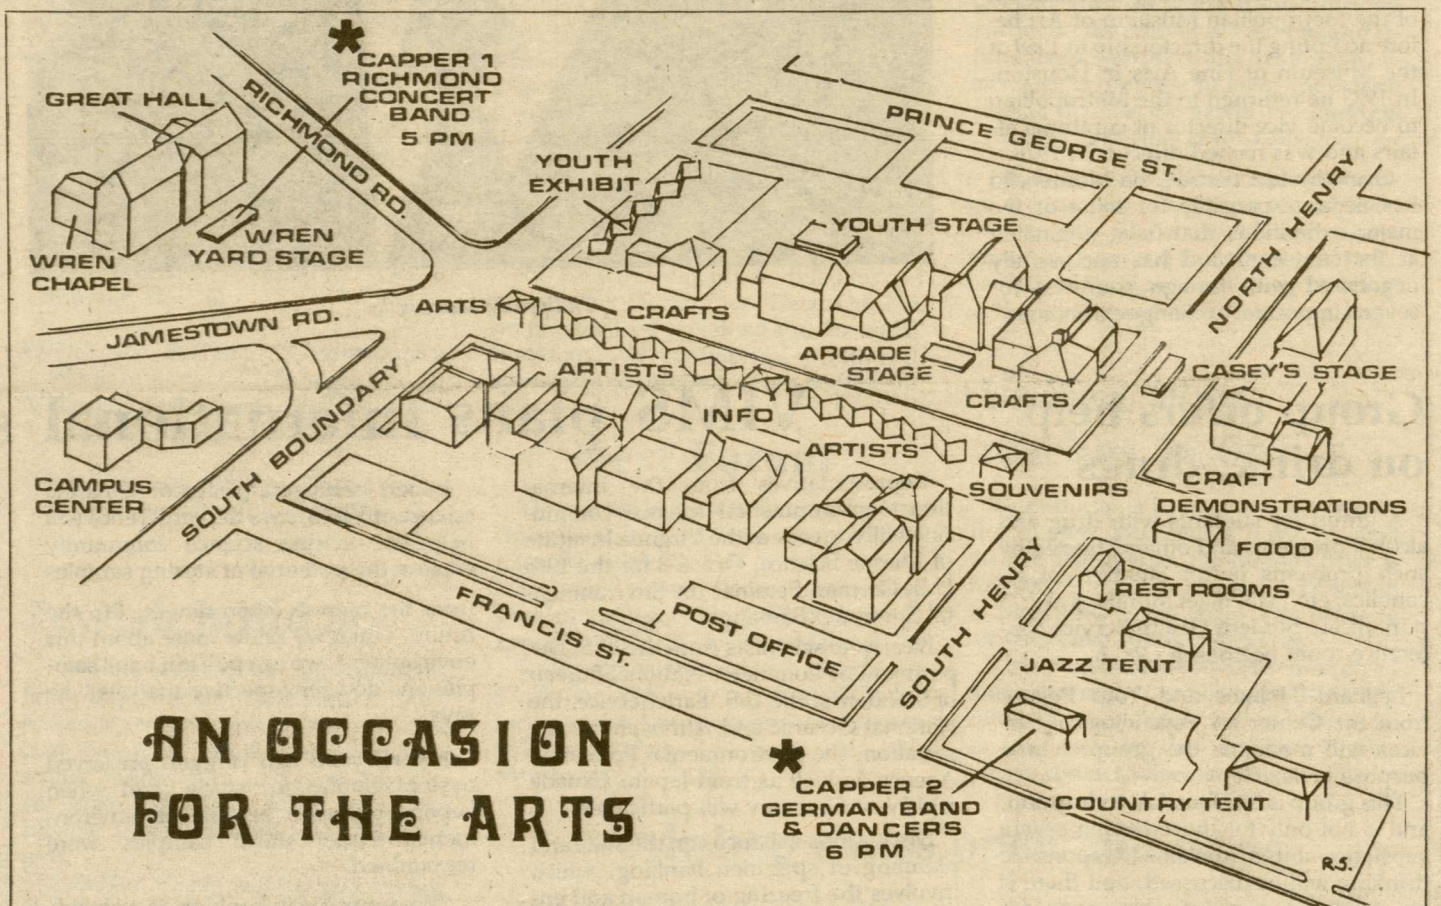

Johnson, Johnson and Roy of Ann Arbor, Mich., one of the nation's top firms specializing in campus master planning, has been engaged after an extensive review last spring involving several other bidders for the contract.

The master plan will assess the status of all properties owned by the university and will include such issues as facilities use, utility and circulation systems, signs, traffic and parking and other areas relating to the buildings and grounds.

A cadre of internal and external technical consultants, including several managers in the physical plant area and off-campus individuals with areas of special expertise, has been identified as a resource for the consulting firm's staff.

Representatives of Johnson, Johnson and Roy, who have met once on campus with the steering committee and the technical cadre, have scheduled several more meetings for dates between November and May. The committee will consult with members of the university community later in the academic year.

Other members of the steering committee are William Walker, director of university relations, who will serve as secretary, Robert Barry, associate professor of economics; Eric Bradley, professor of biology; James Yankovich, professor of education; Marvin Stanley, professor of business administration; Frederic Lederer, professor of law; Nancy Marshall, university librarian; Samuel Sadler, dean of student affairs; John Randolph, director of athletics; H. Westcott Cunningham, executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni; James Fahey '87; and Anne M. Pratt, assistant to the vice president for university advancement.

AN OCCASION FOR THE ARTS

The College is well represented in many facets of the upcoming Occasion for the Arts, Sunday, Oct. 5. The Occasion, a fall festival of visual and performing arts, is expected to draw more than 20,000 people to Williamsburg. All events are free.

College performers will include the Botetourt Chamber Singers; the William and Mary Choir; the William and Mary Improvisation Theatre; Kathy Exton, soprano; Kester Olbrych, flute; and guitar and vocalists Ryan Fletcher and Mary Eason Fletcher.

The Fife and Drum Corps of Colonial Williamsburg will formally open the festival at 11:45 a.m., marking the beginning of performances on 10 widely separated stages.

Many favorite performing groups are returning, including the James Madison University Jazz Ensemble, harpist Marion Harding, the Dukes of Gloucester Street and the Hampton Jug Band. In all, 54 performing groups with a total of over 400 participants will be appearing during the afternoon on one or more of the stages.

Two capper performances are scheduled this year: the Richmond Concert

Band, a performing group of 60 musicians, which will play at 4:30 p.m. in the Wren yard, and a German band and dancers, who will perform at 6 p.m. in the Travis House yard across South Henry Street from the post office.

Beginning at 10 a.m., the work of 60 artists will go on exhibit on prefabricated panels arranged in a zigzag pattern in the middle of Duke of Gloucester Street in Merchants Square.

This year's juror is Sally Lamb-Bowring, a working artist who has exhibited throughout Virginia, including the Anderson Gallery and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

On the sidewalks of Merchants Square will be located 25 craftsmen who will be exhibiting work in clay, jewelry, fiber, brass and wood. There will also be demonstrations of wheat weaving and scherenschnitte. Lou Musgrove will sketch portraits of spectators.

On the corner of North Boundary and Duke of Gloucester streets, local youngsters' paintings will be displayed on a separate zigzag of panels, and around the corner in the parking lot behind Scribner's Bookstore, youth groups and soloists will present performances of music and dance.

New this year will be an arts umbrella tent, where information, flyers and schedules of activities may be obtained on the various activities of area arts organizations.

Food and beverages will be available from a stand in Merchants Square. Two beer gardens, the Jazz Tent and the Country Tent, will provide food and entertainment including the Hampton Lions Jug Band, Morning Flight, Chesapeake Bay Bearcats, Gold Rush Band, Two Steppin Panhandlers and the Dukes of Gloucester Street.

Greetings Oct. 1

On Rosh Hashanah, Mrs. Verkuil and I wish all Jewish students, faculty and staff a Happy New Year.

Paul R. Verkuil
President

Director of Metropolitan to lecture Oct. 22

Philippe de Montebello, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, will be on campus Oct. 22 for a lecture-luncheon in the Campus Center ballroom, sponsored by the Muscarelle Museum of Art.

Luncheon will be served at noon. De Montebello will speak at 1 p.m. Advance reservations are required. Fee for the luncheon is $12. Luncheon reservations will be accepted until Oct. 17 in order of receipt up to the capacity of 250. Reservations may be made by calling the Muscarelle Museum at ext. 4650.

The lecture is free to Muscarelle Museum Associates and College students. Non-members will be charged a $3 lecture fee. Those who wish to attend only the lecture will be admitted at 12:45 p.m. but must also have pre-registered by calling the museum at ext. 4650.

De Montebello will take as his topic "The Creation of an Exhibition: The Trials and Triumphs."

Born in Paris, de Montebello left France with his family in 1950 to settle in New York City. He has a bachelor's degree in art history from Harvard and a master's degree from New York University's Institute of Fine Arts.

He began his museum career in 1963 in the European paintings department of the Metropolitan Museum of Art before accepting the directorship in 1969 of the Museum of Fine Arts in Houston. In 1973 he returned to the Metropolitan to become vice director of curatorial affairs and was named director in 1978.

Over the last decade, de Montebello has been responsible for most of the major exhibitions that have originated at that museum and has successfully negotiated with foreign countries for several important exchange exhibitions.

Group offers help on drink, drugs

A group for students with drug and alcohol problems and others affected by such problems (adult children of alcoholics, etc.) will meet Mondays at 7:15 p.m. in the Student Health Service conference room beginning Oct. 6.

Leonard Holmes and Tom Pollack from the Center for Psychological Services will moderate the group, whose purpose is flexible.

This group is NOT an AA-style group, and is not only for those having severe substance-abuse problems. Responsible drinking will be discussed, and there is no assumed goal of abstinence for everyone. Confidentiality will be strictly maintained.

It is possible that different support groups will form from this initial gathering (possibly including a student AA chapter, ACOA chapter, etc.)

Please contact Leonard or Tom at ext. 4231 for more information.

VIMS plans International seminar

Representatives from the international environmental science community will convene at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, Oct. 6-8 for the 10th U.S.-German Seminar on Environmental Specimen Banking.

Nearly 40 scientists from the U.S. Department of Commerce National Bureau of Standards, the U.S. Park Service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association, the Environmental Protection Agency as well as from Japan, Canada and West Germany will participate.

Discussions will focus on the state and planning of specimen banking, which involves the freezing of human and environmental samples for later research. Rolf Zeisler, a conference participant and a chemist with the NBS inorganic and analytical research division, says the conference is being held at VIMS because of the increased interest in specimen banking there. It is anticipated that VIMS will assist the NBS by obtaining and analyzing marine environment samples.

Robert J. Huggett, professor of marine science at VIMS, says the conference will help the marine science community explore the potential of storing samples from the marine environment. "In the future, when we know more about this environment, we can pull out bank samples and do a retrospective analysis," he says.

Several years ago Huggett preserved oyster samples for study, and when kepone pollution became an environmental issue, those samples were reexamined.

"Environmental banking is valuable for determining pollutants present in the environment at a given place and time," says Stephen A. Wise, manager of the NBS specimen banking program. From a frozen specimen (samples are frozen at liquid nitrogen temperatures of -150 degrees C.), such as a liver donated from an autopsy, scientists can analyze the

'God's Children' coming next in Second Season

"God's Children," an experimental production on rural black America, will be presented at 8:15 p.m., Oct. 16, 17 and 18 and at 2 p.m., Oct. 19 in the Studio Theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

There is no admission charge.

Richard Palmer, professor of theatre and speech, is directing the production. Juniors Kelvin Reid and Audrea Topps are providing original music and choreography for the show.

"God's Children," says Palmer, is a "built piece." The script, he explains, is being created from improvisations by cast members that are being taped and assembled.

Within a church setting, Palmer is using the device of testimonials to depict samples of black lifestyles in rural America in the late '40s and early '50s. "Things don't change a lot," says Palmer who expects audiences to view the show as contemporary. For cast members, adds Palmer, it has been an interesting educational experience since most come from urban or suburban areas rather than rural ones.

Part of the story of "God's Children," will be told through a collection of 400 slides from the Smithsonian Institution, part of a 40,000-slide collection commissioned as a WPA project during the New Deal era of the '30s.

Palmer will use the intimacy of the Studio Theatre to present experimental staging for "God's Children." Actors will perform on the set as well as from the audience.

organ tissue and construct a picture of the chemicals the person had been exposed to until the time of death.

Several thousand mussels from the Narragansett Bay area of Rhode Island have been banked. Because mussels collect impurities in the water, they are considered good indicators of marine pollution. NOAA is examining marine pollution in fish, mussels and sediment samples and is working with the NBS to collect and bank the samples.

Although most environmental banking over the past five years has focused on marine and human samples, NBS can also store other types of specimens that are accumulators of environmental impurities, such as milk and grain, which absorb food contaminants, and moss and lichens, which absorb air pollutants.

The NBS and the EPA have been involved in environmental specimen banking for more than 10 years and hold conferences every 18 months.

Physics colloquia scheduled for October

The physics department has scheduled five colloquia for the month of October. All will be held at 4 p.m. in Small 109. Coffee will be available in the conference room at 3:30 p.m.

On Friday, Oct. 3, Leslie Blatt from Ohio State University will speak on "Higher-Harmonic Giant Resonances and Other Radiative Capture Exotica."

Jim Griffin of the University of Maryland will speak Friday, Oct. 17 on "Dispersion in the Nuclear Many Body System."

A special Wednesday colloquium on Oct. 22 will feature Tom Ludlam of the Brookhaven National Laboratory. His topic will be "The Brookhaven Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider."

"Chernobyl and Its Effect on Nuclear Power" will be discussed on Friday, Oct. 24 by Tom Williamson of the University of Virginia School of Reactor Engineering.

On Friday, Oct. 31, the colloquium will feature Yoram Alhassid, Yale University, speaking on "Statistical Properties of Hot Rotating Nuclei."

CEBAF lecture

Steven Whisnant of the University of South Carolina, will speak on "Elastic and inelastic pion scattering below 100NeV" at 11:30 a.m., Friday, Oct. 3 in room 53 at CEBAF.

Assistant to the Provost for Off-Campus Program Development

Applications for the position of assistant to the provost for off-campus program development are being invited from within the university community. The primary duties of the position involve the development of resources supporting our off-campus programs. The successful applicant will possess a terminal degree in his or her discipline as well as be experienced in the conduct and operation of academic programs outside the boundaries of the United States.

Applications, including the names of at least two references, should be received in the provost's office no later than 5 p.m., Friday, Oct. 13.

This fee allows members to participate in a comprehensive program that includes medical screening, health-risk analysis, personal goal setting, exercise programs, nutrition and weight-loss programs, high blood-pressure screening, cancer screening, stress management, smoking cessation, fitness testing, mental health seminars, CPR, glaucoma testing, a healthy back program and a monthly newsletter, "Health Beat."

Those planning to join the program must attend a membership meeting and schedule a medical screening appointment. Each meeting is scheduled for approximately 90 minutes. Details of the program will be explained and the initial assessment, a confidential health-risk appraisal and interest survey, will be administered.

Next Forum

The next Forum of Williamsburg luncheon will be held from noon to 1:15 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 14 at the Cascades Restaurant. Jayne Barnard, associate professor of law at Marshall-Wythe, will speak on "Ethical Decision-Making."

Reservations are required. Checks for $7.50 should be made payable to "Center for Executive Development" and sent to 1317 Jamestown Rd., Suite 104, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Workshop slates open auditions

Directors Workshop, a regular feature of the William and Mary Theatre's "Second Season," is inviting all members of the College community to audition Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 6 and 7 from 6 to 8 p.m., for student-directed one-act plays that will be presented Dec. 1, 2, 3 and 4 in the Studio Theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

There are roles for 16 women and 14 men. No experience is necessary and newcomers are especially encouraged to

An incentive award will be presented to the department with the highest percentage of its personnel enrolled.

Miss Mageean of Continental Health Promotion, the company contracted by the state to assist with the development and implementation of the program, is working with the physical education department, the employee relations and affirmative action office and a campuswide advisory committee to tailor the health plan to the specific needs and interests of faculty and staff at the College.

"In order to develop a unique program for the campus, a high rate of participation is vital in the initial assessment phase. William and Mary's program will be shaped by input from every member of the faculty and staff," she says.

United Way reaches $6,000

Contributions in cash and pledges to the United Way Fund have reached $6,000. The goal for the campus drive is $23,000. Chairman Lawrence Wiseman is busy getting out thank you notes to all who have subscribed so far.

One pledge of $100 has been received anonymously. If anyone recalls hastily filling out the pledge card and thinks he or she may be the nameless donor, please contact Wiseman at ext. 4212.

try out. Technical volunteers will also be welcomed. Ten plays will be presented. Each will probably run from 25-40 minutes.

Directors Workshop performances are the culmination of a semester's work by students in Louis E. Catron's direction class. Students handle all aspects of the play presented including casting, publicity, programs, props, lighting and technical effects.

Several of the plays have romantic themes; one is an Irish "ghost play."

Viewers are invited to bring a bag lunch and eat lunch while they watch the movie.

The plant sale has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Deshields Henley and Barbara Wallace. Ms. Wallace is also coordinating the bulb sales program.

Gandhi speakers win new honors

Bangladesh's Foreign Minister H. R. Choudhury has been elected the 61st president of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Ambassador Choudhury was formerly Bangladesh's ambassador to the U.S.

Choudhury has twice visited the College. He delivered a Mahatma Gandhi Freedom Lecture and was also a United Nations Day speaker. He has also entertained William and Mary students in Washington, D.C., in connection with a tour led by Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology.

Another Gandhi Lecturer/Awardee is now a member of President Corazon C. Aquino's government. Senator Jovito R. Salonga, is minister of the Presidential Commission on Good Government.

Haynie gives details on run

Jefferson cups will be presented to the top three male and female students and T-shirts to the first 70 entries in the Grayson Daughtrey/Physical Education 5K run, Saturday, Oct. 4.

Registration is $4 in advance, $5 beginning at 8 a.m. the day of the event. The race will begin at 9 a.m.

Proceeds from the run will go to the Physical Education Majors Club and Scholarship Fund.

For more details, please contact Steve Haynie, ext. 4577, Adair 113.
